Congregation elections

COUNCIL

- One member of Congregation elected by Congregation from members of the faculties in the Divisions of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and of Medical Sciences, to serve until the start of MT 2027 [vice Professor Kia Nobre]

The following nominations have been received:

Professor Armin Reichold, MA Oxf, Dipl Phys Dr rer nat Dortmund, Balliol, Faculty of Physics

Nominated by:

Professor Phil Biggin, Lady Margaret Hall, Department of Biochemistry
 Professor Fabian Essler, Worcester, Department of Physics
 Professor Adrian Kelly, Balliol, Faculty of Classics
 Dr Samina Khan, St Anne's, Undergraduate Admissions and Outreach
 Dr Sandra Paoli, Balliol, Faculty of Linguistics, Philology and Phonetics
 Mr Simon Probert, Brasenose, Department of Physics

Dr Natalie Nairi Quinn, Lady Margaret Hall, Department of Economics
 Professor Ian Shipsey, St Catherine's, Department of Physics
 Dr Lisa Walker, Balliol, Faculty of Clinical Medicine
 Professor Jan Westerhoff, Lady Margaret Hall, Faculty of Theology and Religion

Candidate statement:

I am a Professor of Physics and Tutorial Fellow at Balliol College. Educated in Germany (University of Dortmund), I have worked at NIKHEF (Amsterdam), Fermilab (Chicago), DESY (Hamburg) and PTB (Braunschweig). In 1998 I started as a research officer and became a University Lecturer and Tutorial Fellow at Balliol in 2011. My research interests are neutrino- and accelerator-physics and dimensional metrology with applications across industry and science. I chair my department's innovation and enterprise committee, working to increase the societal relevance of my colleagues' research. I am experienced in college and departmental governance e.g., as elected member of the Physics Management Committee. As admission co-ordinator for Physics, I introduced quantitative contextual measures into our admissions metrics and optimised these through correlations with final examination results.

During the 2018 pension crisis I campaigned to protect pension benefits. If elected I will do my utmost to ensure that they are restored to pre-2022 levels.

I will work to persuade Council to refocus its attention on people as its first priority. This demands a remedy to the problems of ever-increasing workloads and ever-decreasing real-term salaries.

Sustainability in all facets of University's life is a topic I care about and am actively involved with in my Department, applying solar cell technology from one of our spin-out companies.

I am convinced of the merits of academic self-governance. If elected by Congregation, I will view it as my duty to strengthen Council's connection to our democratic processes.

Professor Krina T Zondervan, MSc Leiden, MSc Rotterdam, DPhil Oxf, St Edmund Hall, Faculty of Clinical Medicine/Nuffield Department of Women's and Reproductive Health

Nominated by:

Professor Baroness Kathy Willis, Principal of St Edmund Hall, Department of Biology
 Dr Jane Barlow, St Hilda's, Department of Social Policy and Intervention
 Professor Francis Barr, Trinity, Department of Biochemistry
 Professor David Clifton, Reuben, Department of Engineering Science
 Professor Sir Rory Collins, St John's, Nuffield Department of Population Health
 Professor Richard Cornall, Magdalen, Nuffield Department of Medicine
 Professor Henrike Lähnemann, St Edmund Hall, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages
 Professor Helen McShane, Harris Manchester, Nuffield Department of Medicine
 Professor Melinda Mills, Nuffield, Department of Sociology

Candidate statement:

As a student, staff member, and University/College committee member, I have long-standing experience of Oxford University life and leadership.

I arrived as an Erasmus exchange student in 1993, read for a DPhil in epidemiology, and held several fellowships to establish my career in women's health and genomic research. As Director of Graduate Studies, I gained in-depth understanding of the rewards and challenges of educating our next generation. As Head of Department, I led our staff and students through the pandemic, the after-effects of which continue. With my team, I have provided new strategic directions; built cross-departmental and -divisional collaborative opportunities; replaced long-term fixed with permanent contracts to increase job security and satisfaction; and established a leadership framework focused on greater transparency and inclusion in decision making, and career/leadership development opportunity.

I am acutely aware that the University and its faculties/departments face substantial economic and societal challenges due to the pandemic, Brexit and long-term concerns such as climate change. However, I believe that Oxford is well placed to face these challenges through innovative leadership, building on strengths and embracing change where needed. This University should be a place where people from all backgrounds come to be inspired and challenged, but also to feel supported, secure, and invested in. I care deeply about issues of inequality, and the rewards reaped by increasing diversity and providing people with working environments in which they can thrive.

It would be a privilege to serve as your representative on Council to work towards these goals.

CURATORS OF THE UNIVERSITY PARKS

- One person elected by Congregation, to serve until the start of MT 2027 [vice The Revd Dr Elizabeth Macfarlane]

The following nominations have been received:

Mrs Emmanuelle Denis, BSc Concordia, MSc McGill, DEC Dawson College, Pandemic Sciences Institute, Nuffield Department of Medicine

Nominated by:

Professor Proochista Ariana, Mansfield, Nuffield Department of Medicine

Dr Xin Hui Chan, Nuffield Department of Medicine

Mr Jo Harris, Nuffield Department of Medicine

Professor Richard Haynes, Nuffield Department of Population Health
Professor Sir Peter Horby, Brasenose, Nuffield Department of Medicine
Ms Laura Merson, Nuffield Department of Medicine
Dr Leon Peto, Nuffield Department of Population Health

Candidate statement:

I moved from Montreal to Oxford in 2005 to take up my first post with the University, in the Clinical Trials Service Unit (CTSU). At that time CTSU was based in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter and my commute to work changed from a dreary suburban car journey to a glorious walk through Mesopotamia and the University Parks. My instant affection and appreciation for the parks has deepened further in the intervening years.

The University Parks are one of the greatest treasures of our city. They beautifully complement our magnificent built environment and, most importantly, provide a freely-accessible green haven to everyone, University members, residents and visitors alike. It's a joyful experience to see individuals, teams, families and groups of friends engaging in a huge range of activities, and I'd love to play a part in maintaining them for park users now and into the future.

If I am elected to become a Curator of the University Parks I would bring to the role almost twenty years of experience as a senior University Administrator. I have practical expertise in managing multimillion-pound research budgets and working closely with academics, professional services and external collaborators. I also have experience as a Leader for the Oxford Conservation Volunteers, a voluntary organisation that undertakes a wide variety of nature conservation work in the Oxford area. Most importantly, I have a great love of nature and an eagerness to help ensure the stewardship of our precious parks.

The Revd Dr Elizabeth Macfarlane, MA DPhil Oxf, St John's, Faculty of History

Nominated by:

Professor Jeremias Adams-Prassl, Magdalen, Faculty of Law

Professor Julia Bray, St John's, Faculty of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies

Professor Philip Ross Bullock, Wadham, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages

Professor Theresa Burt de Perera, St John's, Department of Biology

Professor David Dwan, Hertford, Faculty of English

Professor Stefano Evangelista, Trinity, Faculty of English

Professor Cecile Fabre, All Souls, Faculty of Philosophy

Dr Tristan Franklins, Wolfson, Faculty of Classics

Dr Rosalind Harding, St John's, Department of Biology

The Revd Professor William Whyte, St John's, Faculty of History

Candidate statement:

I walk in Parks with my dog every day - you may well have seen me with a very bouncy spaniel - and I would be keen to serve as a curator, both to learn about the strategy for this part of the University estate, and to be a voice for those who participate in our green spaces. I am particularly keen on wildlife initiatives like the hibernaculum, and I would like to advocate for better quality (informational and aesthetic) signage and minimising of vehicular activity. I am chaplain and fellow at St John's, where I've been for twelve years, and a member of the History Faculty. I served as a pro-Proctor for three successive Junior Proctors from 2017-2020, and I now serve on the Appeals Panel, as well as undertaking occasional case reviews for the Proctors' Office.

C J Noble, MEng Sheff, Atomic and Laser Physics

Nominated by:

Dr D Blakey, Research Services
 Dr J F Goodwin, Department of Physics
 Professor D M Lucas, Balliol, Department of Physics
 Professor D C O'Brien, Balliol, Department of Engineering Science

Candidate statement:

Thank you for taking the time to consider my election as a Curator of the University Parks. I am lucky enough to find myself typing this from my office in the Beecroft Building, about as close as one can get to the Parks without being in them, and I have gained a huge appreciation of just how special the space is. A veritable oasis in the city, and one that is open to all - be they staff, student, resident or tourist. A typical walk through the Parks (and I take many) may see you encounter birdwatchers, cricketers (or quidditch players!), or those simply looking for a few moments of respite and tranquillity in their day. My interest and priority as a Curator would be in the sustainable management of the Parks to ensure their continued place in Oxford for the enjoyment of generations to come, and to help deliver the vision of the Superintendent and the Parks team to make the site more biodiverse, improve the quality of the greens, and reduce the environmental impact of management activities.

NOTICE OF NOMINATION AND CANDIDATES' STATEMENTS

Christian Bök

Thank you, Members of Convocation, for taking time to consider me for the Oxford Professorship of Poetry. I am a Fellow in the Royal Society of Canada, and (like the incumbent Alice Oswald) I have also won the Griffin Poetry Prize (earning it for my book Eunoia, which the writer Giles Brandreth has called: 'irresistible'). I am now on the verge of announcing to the world in early 2024 that, after decades of effort, I have used my skills in microbiology to create a work of 'living poetry,' entitled The Xenotext – a poem encoded into the genome of a deathless bacterium, able to survive forever in any environment. I have written a 'book' that might outlast our civilization – and if appointed to the professorship, I plan to highlight the historical resilience of poetry in the face of crises that imperil our future in times of tyranny, pandemic, and warfare, when critics often predict the death of poetry itself.

With more than thirty years of experience, addressing schools all around the world

(promoting poetry from every continent, including, among other forms: Japanese haibun, Persian ghazals, Balinese ketjacks, and Russian zaum), I expect to fulfill my duties by keeping this persistent durability of poetry in mind, discussing an inclusive, equitable selection of perspectives across time in genres both conventional and experimental. If appointed, I foresee collaborating with my peers in the college to transect boundaries between disciplines, addressing topics that might demonstrate the aptness of poetry to other fields of study (particularly in the domain of natural science, where I have learned skills required to write poems that can literally transform the behaviour of living things). I can deliver talks that invite engagement from areas outside the humanities, thereby highlighting the appeal of poetry to everyone.

I have dedicated my career to the study of ‘limit-cases’ in the history of poetry, writing lyric poems in books made from materials as varied as Lego tiles, Rubik’s cubes, QR codes, AI chats, and DNA genes – often using the tools of scientific technology to escort poetry into the 21st century. I look forward to mentoring students from all walks of life during this professorship, offering my time openly to young poets, helping them to foster their talent so that they might thrive in their careers. I have benefited from the guidance of my own mentors, including the poet Charles Bernstein (the winner of the Bollingen Prize) – and the calibre of his diplomacy has provided the model for my own engagement with my community of peers. I have come to appreciate that I have no means by which to repay my debt of gratitude for such guidance, except by extending such an equal level of generosity to others.

With your support, I look forward to continuing my innovative endeavours under the aegis of All Souls College.

You can learn more about me at my website: <https://www.umlautmachine.net/ephemera/the-oxford-professorship>

Mark Ford

In 1919 T.S. Eliot wrote of the ‘peculiar personal intimacy’, the ‘overwhelming’ sense of ‘profound kinship’ that a young writer may suddenly come to feel with a newly discovered poet. This passionate relation or connection may be experienced, Eliot explains, as both a crisis and as a decisive moment of transformation: within a matter of weeks the young writer may be ‘changed, metamorphosed almost ... from a bundle of second-hand sentiments into a person’.

My belief in the power of poetry to transform would pervade all aspects of my approach to the Oxford Professorship of Poetry. Having spent nearly four decades involved in poetry from a variety of angles – reading it, writing it, writing about it, teaching it, editing it, translating it, delivering public lectures on it, giving poetry readings, and talking on radio features and podcasts – I am acutely conscious of the best ways of communicating my enthusiasm to diverse audiences.

On learning that I had been shortlisted for this post, I at once found myself considering the sorts of lecture I would like to give: provisional titles that came to mind ranged from ‘It Is Later Than You Think: Poetry and Threat’ to ‘Langston Hughes, Derek Walcott, and the Deep South’; from ‘Queer Pastoral: Gerard Manley Hopkins and A.E. Housman’ to ‘The Smile of Accomplishment: Self-Elegies from Christina Rossetti to Sylvia Plath’. I am especially interested in elegiac traditions, having just completed a book on Thomas Hardy’s poems about his wife Emma. I am keen to expand this research and would use these lectures to address poetic commemorations of the dead by such as Elizabeth Bishop, Adrienne Rich, Denise Riley, Mick Imlah, Kei Miller, Jay Bernard, and Caleb Femi.

As a regular contributor to the London Review of Books and the New York Review of Books, I am experienced at presenting sophisticated critical arguments to a wide readership. I think of myself as at once a poet-critic in the tradition of Eliot and as a literary historian of British, American, and French poetry from 1800 to the present day. My publications include four collections of poetry, three volumes of essays (the most recent of which, This Dialogue of One: Essays on Poets from John Donne to Joan Murray, won the Poetry Foundation’s 2015 Pegasus Award for Poetry Criticism), and monographs on Raymond Roussel and Thomas Hardy. Admirers of my own poetry include Helen Vendler, Marjorie Perloff, John Ashbery, Peter Gizzi, Daljit Nagra, and Sarah Howe.

This post will also involve organizing poetry events. For these I would replicate a format I have already developed at University College London, where I teach: work by a range of poets was circulated in advance of our annual ‘Poets Poets Day’, on which fellow poets and members of the public engaged in detailed and animated discussion with our chosen writers of the poems submitted. Participants agreed that this format worked extremely well, in its fusion of the rigours of practical criticism with attention to the empirical dilemmas confronting the contemporary poet.

Don Paterson

I have worked for decades as a poet, a university professor, a commercial editor and publisher, and a musician. Each role has developed my interest and insight into the gap between what we think poetry is or should be, and the way it actually comes into being and does its work in the world. But social networks, digital platforms, new media, the structure of the market, and (stealthily, but perhaps most significantly) AI are in the process of radically changing both poetry's readership and the nature of poetry itself. Poetry's new genres are recruiting diverse audiences, but they are often independent of one another; some are forging symbiotic relationships with other branches of culture. Poetry is undergoing a period of intense cultural redefinition, and the increasingly unstable relationship between poet and reader seems to call for some urgent interrogation.

Are all these verbal arts still part of the same word-game we call 'poetry'? Do we still share a working definition of talent, skill and inventiveness, of a tradition which fosters and embodies them? Should these older values maintain their primacy, or must they adapt to the more immediate claims of identity, inclusion and social conscience? Is the poetry of lived experience compatible with a poetry of the imagination? Is still true to claim that a poet is just 'one skilled in the making of verses', and that poems 'begin in delight and end in wisdom'?

Computers fast became an indispensable tool in music, without shaking the foundations of our notions of musical creativity and value. Will poetry survive the only serious technological change it has faced since Gutenberg, namely AI? Contemporary poetry may soon discover that it is only too easily imitable: where will this leave our virtues of originality, unique authorship, authenticity? Should poets be thinking like musicians, of ways new tech and AI might help them write better poems?

The professorship would allow me to address these questions through both lecture and public event - as well as the opportunity, I confess, to explore my own current obsessions: how a newly resurgent metropolitanism may be fuelling a regional poetry of 'alternative Englishes' and of the UK's various national and ethnic identities; the shamefully neglected 'loner' women poets of the mid-20th century (rehabilitations still tend to focus on women associated with male-centred schools); the complex prosody of hip-hop and rap; Seamus Heaney's little-imitated use of deep etymologies; and new insights from the field of cognitive poetics. I've written both technical monographs and books of 'popular literary criticism', and defended the latter as an alternative home for academic research; I have some experience in making new or esoteric ideas accessible to the much-maligned 'general reader' in whom I continue to place my faith. In a time of accelerating change, the professorship would offer a rare still moment in which to take stock of the past, assess the present cultural status and 'use' of the poem, and look to where it might be headed - as well as what it may yet achieve.

AE Stallings

The principal responsibility of this post - to deliver twelve original lectures on the subject of poetry - is right up my alley. As a freelance poet, translator, critic, and commentator based in Athens, I travel and lecture on poetry, poets and their craft, and the art of translation. I have delivered the Messenger lectures at Cornell (2012), the Triennial Gilbert Murray lecture, Yale's Parry lecture (2023), and even a TEDx talk. I have recently spoken on poets such as Byron, Cavafy, Homer, and Plath, on Classical reception, and on strategies of allusion - always seeking to bring into play a practitioner's view, an appeal to broad audiences, and a light touch.

As a reviewer, I have written on modern American, English, Canadian, Greek, Irish, and Afro-Caribbean poets. As a blogger, I have addressed "sonnetude," Afro-formalism, the business of blurbs, neo-formalism and the avant-garde. I've also written expansive essays on literary shipwreck, on refugees in Aegean literature, on statues and ruin, and on poets and the Parthenon. Collaboration with the Faculties of English and Classics is certain to help me generate new themes during my tenure.

I enjoy teaching, and have served as faculty at US writers' conferences including Sewanee, Bread Loaf, West Chester, and Poetry by the Sea. For ten years I directed a workshop through the Athens Centre focused on form and generating new poems. Since 2016 I have run a weekly workshop in Athens with refugee women from Afghanistan, Iraq, Syria, Iran, Ukraine, and Congo (DRC) at the Melissa Network for Migrant Women. Our emphasis isn't only on war and the harrowing journey, but on the future, their authorship of their own stories. I would hope to collaborate productively with the University's Refugee Studies Centre.

As an American writer who has lived over twenty years in Greece, I bring a broad perspective on and knowledge of poetry that crosses borders and languages. As Oxford Professor of Poetry I would speak not only on anglophone poets, living and dead, but on translation, Classical poetry, and modern Greek poetry. Among the poets I have translated from are Lucretius, Virgil, Catullus, Horace, Hesiod, Dante, and Seferis.

I believe music is an essential element of poetry's intelligence. (Perhaps it's no coincidence many of my poems, such as <https://humanshields.bandcamp.com/track/aegean-blues> and <https://soundcloud.com/burnley-vest/song-for-the-women-poets>, have been set to music.) I am known for my interest in technique, especially in rhyme, meter, and stanza. (Of these, the most controversial tends to be rhyme, a subject I address playfully in this Presto Manifesto!) More of my thoughts on sound and pleasure in poetry can be heard in recent interviews with Front Row and The Book Club. My website is here: <https://aestallings.wixsite.com/aestallings>.

I would keep an open door to discuss student work, would run workshops with members of the Oxford community, visit schools, arrange translation seminars, and host readings from American, foreign-language, and refugee poets. I would hope that published forms of many of my lectures would take their place among the wide-ranging and often provocative writings of previous Professors of Poetry.
