Outcomes of Ethical Investment Representations Review Subcommittee review

In May 2024, Congregation raised questions concerning the University's investment policies. Council subsequently commissioned the Ethical Investment Representations Review Subcommittee (EIRRS) to review the existing restrictions on armaments-related investments and to consider whether they should be extended.

EIRRS undertook extensive consultation across the University, engaging more than 500 staff and students. 81 submissions were received by the University, with a further 86 submissions received by the Students' Union.

In July 2025, EIRRS reported to the Investment Committee, which considered the recommendations and advised Council. Council approved an update to the Investment Policy Statement.

The review confirmed that the University has no direct or indirect investment exposure to companies on the existing armaments restricted list. Council adopted the recommendation to expand the restriction list to include weapons that are illegal under Protocol V of the United Nations Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons, and other relevant international treaties to which the UK is a signatory (now or in the future).
