Index to Vol 141 (2010–11)

Notes

1 This index makes reference to the following: statutes and regulations; resolutions of Congregation; honorary degrees and degrees by diploma; degrees by resolution; appointments; awards; elections; obituaries (by college); supplements to the Gazette; major notices.

2 Appointments and awards are listed individually under the first word of their title, or the first initial letter or letters if the title does not begin with a complete word.

3 Changes to regulations are listed under the name of the divisional/faculty board concerned. For regulations concerning joint schools, see under the name of either responsible board.

4 Resolutions and statutes are listed alphabetically by subject under these headings.

5 A full list of supplements for the academic year is given at the end of the index.

Council of the University

Declaration of approval of nomination of external member of Council

No request for a ballot having been received, the proposal to appoint Ms Jayne Almond as a member of Council for four years from Michaelmas Term 2011 was deemed to have been approved on 19 August.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 8 October.

Explanatory Note

The following change provides a definition of scrutiny in the regulations concerning the Audit and Scrutiny Committee, to clarify the scope of this aspect of the committee’s work.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning the Audit and Scrutiny Committee (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, amended on 8 May 2003, 1 June 2006, 21 January 2010 and 18 March 2010, Gazette, Vol. 133, p. 1212; Vol. 136, pp. 1152–3; Vol. 140, pp. 444, 746), delete existing regulation 3.11 (2) and substitute (new text underlined):

‘(2) pursuant to regulation 3.12, call for any investigation that it considers necessary and to call any individual or call for any document or documents relevant to any such investigation that it considers necessary.’

2 Ibid., insert new regulation 3.12 as follows and renumber existing 3.12–3.134:

‘3.12. Scrutiny is the process of structured inquiry or investigation using the committee’s formal resources into failures, alleged failures, or risks of failure, of operations and of process in the University at large, as determined by the committee.’

Congregation 1 June

CORRECTIONS TO BE MADE UNDER THE SLIP RULE

Regulation 1.17 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Regulations of Congregation for the Conduct of Business in Congregation) gives the Vice-Chancellor the power, after consultation with the Registrar and the Proctors, to correct any clerical error, slip or omission in the text of a legislative proposal which has been made.

After consultation, the Vice-Chancellor has agreed to the amendment of the legislative proposal concerning the Michael Davys Professor of Neuroscience (Gazette, Vol. 140, approved by Congregation on 1 June, p. 1123, text of proposal on pp. 946–7, 6 May 2010), to delete references to regulations that should have been removed. This amendment shall be effective from the date of approval by Her Majesty in Council.

In the Schedule to the Statutes (Supplement 1 to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, pp. 133–59), after Part 70, insert the following new Part 71 (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

Part 71: Michael Davys Professor of Neuroscience

71.1 The benefaction of £1,997,000 from the Davys Family Trust for Neuroscience Fund, together with any further donations for this purpose, shall be used to establish and maintain the Michael Davys Professorship of Neuroscience.

71.2 The University shall retain all of the benefaction as permanent endowment and shall apply the net income towards the salary and expenses of the holder of the professorship, and associated overheads. If the salary of the professor is wholly or partly covered from other sources, there shall be discretion to apply the net income directly to support the professor’s research.

71.3 The administration of the benefaction, and the application of its income, shall be the responsibility of the Medical Sciences Board.

71.4 The Michael Davys Professor of Neuroscience shall undertake research in neuroscience with a special interest in mental illnesses and shall lecture and give instruction in this subject. In the event there is sufficient income, this shall be applied to an annual Michael Davys Lecture in Neuroscience on a topic of relevance to mental illness.

71.5 The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in paragraph (2) below is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council on the occurrence of a vacancy to act as an elector on this occasion;

(2) the head of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf, or, if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college on the occurrence of a vacancy to act as an elector on that occasion;

(3) a person appointed by the governing body of the college specified in paragraph (2) above;

(4), (5) two persons appointed by Council;

(6)–(9) four persons appointed by the Medical Sciences Board.

6. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.

7. Regulations 1–2 shall be deemed to Trust Regulations under the provisions of Part D of Statute XVI.

71.58. Regulations Sections 71.3–71.56 may be amended by Council.

Congregation 5 October 12 noon

1 Oration by the Vice-Chancellor

Mr Vice-Chancellor will address the House.

2 Admission of Pro-Vice-Chancellors

3 Admission of Clerks of the Market

J. Hackney, BCL MA Oxf, Emeritus Fellow of St Edmund Hall and Wadham, nominated by the Chancellor, and R.C.S. Walker, BA McGill, MA DPhil Oxf, Fellow of Magdalen, nominated by the Vice-Chancellor, will be admitted to office as Clerks of the Market for the year 2010–11.

¶ The Oration by the Vice-Chancellor and the admission of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors and Clerks of the Market will take place in Convocation House.

Congregation 12 October 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 4 October, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose the legislative proposals at 1 and 2, or in writing to the Registrar that they intend to register resolutions at 3, below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposals and resolution shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: establishment of degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy

The following Legislative Proposal establishes the new degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy. This degree is on the model of existing four-year courses that lead to master’s awards, such as the Master of Computer Science (MCompSc), and the Master of Mathematics and Philosophy (MMathPhil). A consequential change is also being made to the Congregation Regulations concerning the conduct of ceremonies and the opportunity is being taken to add to these regulations forms of presentation and admission for other degrees.

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish the degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

‘(21) Master of Biochemistry, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Sciences, Engineering, Mathematics, Physics, Mathematics and Computer Science, Mathematics and Philosophy, and Computer Science and Philosophy

Insignissime, etc., praesent vobis hos meos scholarum in facultate Artium, ut admissatur ad gradum Magistrum in Biochimcia, vel Chimia, vel Scientia Computatoria, vel Scientiae Terrenae, vel Ingeniaria, vel Mathematicae, vel Physicae, vel Mathematica et Scientia Computatoria, vel Mathematica et Philosophiae, vel Physicae et Philosophiae, vel Scientia Computatoria et Philosophiae prout in schedula a Registrario scriptum est.’

3 Ibid., in regulation 4.2 insert new paragraph (25) below:

‘(25) Doctor of Engineering

Insignissime, etc., praesent vobis hunc meum scholarem in Ingeniaria (or hunc Baccalaureum or Magistrum) ut admissatur ad gradum Doctoris in Ingeniaria.’

4 Ibid., in regulation 4.3 delete paragraph (16) and substitute:

‘(16) Master of Biochemistry, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth Sciences, Engineering, Mathematics, Physics, Mathematics and Computer Science, Mathematics and Philosophy, and Computer Science and Philosophy

Domini, ego admissit vos ad gradum Magistrum in Biochimcia, vel Chimia, vel Scientia Computatoria, vel Scientiae Terrenae, vel Ingeniaria, vel Mathematicae, vel Physicae, vel Mathematica et Scientia Computatoria, vel Mathematicae et Philosophiae, vel Physicae et Philosophiae, vel Scientia Computatoria et Philosophiae prout in schedula a Registrario scriptum est; insuper auctorité mea et totius Universitatis, do vos potestatem legendi, et relingu omnia facienda quae ad eundem gradum spectant.’

5 Ibid., in regulation 4.3 insert new paragraph (20) below and renumber existing paragraph (20) as (21):

‘(20) Doctor of Engineering

Domine or Magister (or Domini or Magistri), ego admissit vos ad gradum Doctoris in Ingeniaria.’

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved

2 Ibid., after ‘Bachelor of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science’ insert ‘or Computer Science and Philosophy’.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute V concerning Greyfriars

Explanatory Note

WHEREAS it is expedient to remove a reference to Greyfriars in Statute V, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

In section II of Statute V, concerning the Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended on 17 July 2003, Vol. 133, p. 1536), delete ‘Greyfriars’.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved

3 Voting on resolution authorising use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

Principles and process for space allocations in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

The Radcliffe Observatory Quarter (ROQ) was acquired by the University in 2003 with the intention of developing an integrated campus, capable of phased development, which offers expansion space for the collegiate University over the next twenty years. The overall principles for the development of the site are set out in the ROQ Masterplan developed over a three-year period and endorsed by Council in December 2008.

In the case of the ROQ development, all space allocations are considered in the first instance by the ROQ Project Board, a committee established in 2005 by the Planning and Resources Allocation Committee (PRAC) to provide further oversight for the project. Its members are the Proctors and Assessor, the Pro-Vice-Chancellors for Planning and Resources, Education, and Research, the Heads of Division (except Medical Sciences), the Chief Executive of Oxford University Press, Bodley’s Librarian, the Chair of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee (BESC), and the heads of Estates, Development and Planning. Allocations recommended by the ROQ Project Board are then considered through the normal space approvals process: consideration by BESC, which may authorise an allocation of up to 300 sq.m. Any allocation above that size is referred onwards to PRAC and, if the proposed site exceeds 1000 sq.m or a building is over 600 sq.m., PRAC asks Council to recommend it to Congregation.

The Blavatnik School of Government

The establishment of the Blavatnik School of Government promises to be an important milestone in the University’s centuries-long tradition of varied contribution to government and public policy around the world. A major philanthropic donation provides an opportunity to bring together the knowledge borne of this rich tradition, and new and exciting strands of thinking. The emerging vision for the School is one characterised by the following key objectives. The Blavatnik School of Government will:

(a) train future leaders through a pioneering multi-disciplinary approach which prepares them to innovate, to think globally, and to deliver public goods that aim to ensure growth, opportunity, security and social harmony;
(b) forge partnerships and collaboration between the world’s best thinkers and practitioners;
(c) inject cutting-edge academic research into policy-making;
(d) create a global network of public policy-makers who can continue to learn from one another for the future.

The School has been the prime capital project for the Social Sciences Division for some time and the conclusion of negotiations with the donor now enables this project to become a reality. It is the first major capital development project since the building of the Centre for Advanced Study in the Social Sciences in 2004 (the Manor Road building) that now houses the departments of Economics, Sociology and Politics and International Relations as well as two research centres of the Faculty of Law.

The location of the School on the ROQ site provides an important opportunity to produce a high-quality landmark building fit for the purpose of establishing the School as the first of its kind outside North America. It is a founding aim for the School to have a strong and well-grounded multi-disciplinary approach spanning all divisions of the University. The School’s presence on the ROQ site will bring it into close proximity with the Humanities Division, which will be centring its activities on the site, enabling the development of strong links with the division through the School.

The new building will house the School’s academic and support staff, provide purpose-built facilities for academic and practitioner visitors, provide teaching accommodation for a new graduate cohort to be established (120 students at maturity), as well as space and facilities for individual research centres coming under the School’s remit and for the provision of outreach/third-leg activities associated with the School’s academic aims.

Text of resolution authorising the use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

That approximately 6,300 sq.m. in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter be allocated as the site of the new Blavatnik School of Government.

Congregation 25 November

ELECTION: AUDIT AND SCRUTINY COMMITTEE

Details are in ‘Elections’ section below.

Note on procedures in Congregation

Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 160, as amended on 12 October 2004, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (0)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to (Registrar) Elections Office (email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
Notices

General Notices

Magdalen College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of Magdalen College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 11 March 2009, 29 April 2009, 17 June 2009 and 16 June 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective 11 days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least 20 members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Tuesday, 5 October. The effects of the amendments are to update the existing statutes of the college to ensure compatibility with recent changes in the Law relating to Charities, including to make amended provision for the objects of the college, and to bring the existing statutes more fully in accord with present operative practice and accounting rules.

Committee on Animal Care and Ethical Review: Annual Report 2009

Ref. No. APA/1/5

The University’s local ethical review process, set up under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act, is required to report annually to Council and, through it, to Congregation. The process became operational on 1 April 1999, and reports as follows on its eleventh year of operation.

The University is committed to the principles of local ethical review. The process, agreed by Council on the advice of the then Committee on Animal Care, has received the necessary Home Office endorsement. It is designed to provide ethical advice with respect to project licence applications; to provide support and advice on animal welfare and ethical issues; to promote the use of ethical analysis to increase awareness of animal welfare issues; and to develop initiatives leading to the widest possible application of reduction, refinement, and replacement strategies (the 3Rs). It reviews applications, amendments, and current licences, relevant management and training issues, care and accommodation standards, and promotes the uptake of the 3Rs through the provision of information, training, and a forum for discussion.

The Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act requires that research with animals is properly justified, that any alternatives are fully considered, and that any animal suffering is minimised. The University’s policy on the use of animals in scientific research requires that all those involved in animal-based research are pro-active in pursuing the 3Rs and engage fully in the ethical review process. It also commits the University to providing standards of accommodation and care that exceed, wherever possible, the minimum standards required by legislation.

The Director of Biomedical Services has continued to work with animal care staff and researchers to ensure that animal facilities are managed and maintained as efficiently and to as high a standard as possible. The Biomedical Sciences Building, which was completed in 2008–9, has helped to raise standards of animal welfare by providing better facilities for animals previously accommodated in older facilities scattered throughout the University’s Science Area.

The University’s Veterinary Surgeons are involved in the local ethical review process at all stages and are in regular contact with the Director of Biomedical Services, animal care staff, and researchers themselves, ensuring that all aspects of animal health and welfare are properly considered and any viable alternatives explored. A website and email list allow for opportunities to share resources and therefore to reduce the number of animals used. Technical and veterinary staff meet regularly to discuss training needs, opportunities for welfare enhancement, and to share experience.

The ethical review process has reviewed project licence applications, amendments, and ongoing work under licence, in addition to considering a range of more general issues. In each case, careful consideration is given to the balance of costs and benefits and the extent to which the principles of the 3Rs have been applied to proposals. The process itself is kept under review and aims to be as flexible as possible in order to ensure optimum effectiveness. The Committee on Animal Care and Ethical Review has set up a sub-committee to develop proposals for improving the effectiveness and efficiency of the process, in the light of the new project licence form introduced by the Home Office in November 2009, as part of its Better Regulation initiative.

The process requires that, in addition to the statutory training required for new applicants, those already granted licences undertake training where necessary. Refresher courses have been developed by Veterinary Services to ensure that researchers are kept informed of new developments, improvements in techniques, and emerging best practice. The department’s statutory courses have been reaccredited for a further five years, and have also achieved accreditation from the Federation of European Laboratory Animal Science Associations, the first UK courses to do so.

At the University of Oxford, animals are only used where there is no satisfactory alternative available, and where the Secretary of State has licensed the work after weighing its potential benefits against the adverse effects on the animals concerned. The University is a centre of expertise in a number of non-animal methods such as computer modelling; tissue culture; cell and molecular biology; and research with human subjects; but animal experimentation remains necessary in certain circumstances—these include the prevention and treatment of human diseases (including cancer, HIV, tuberculosis, Parkinson’s, diabetes, and heart failure); the study of host-parasite interactions (for example in malaria); where it is necessary to understand the interaction between systems (including the effects which chemical or neural changes may have on the circulation, respiration, or other functions); or where it is necessary to study behaviour or complex brain functions, for example, transplantation and musculoskeletal research. Examinations and Boards

Examinations and Boards: Changes to Regulations

1. CONTINUING EDUCATION BOARD

Proposal to introduce a Master of Studies in the History of Design: communication from the Continuing Education Board

To take effect 1 October 2011

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 598 after line 9 insert

   'History of Design Continuing Education'

2. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 628 after line 19 insert:

   'History of Design

1. Candidates must follow a course of instruction in the History of Design. The course will be taken on a part-time basis over a period of not fewer than two years and not more than three years within a maximum period of five years.

2. The examination will consist of the following parts:

   A Mandatory Course Papers

   Every candidate must submit a written assignment for each of the three mandatory course papers taught in Year 1:

   I. Techniques and Materials (Object Case Study: 2,500 words)
   II. Historical Methods (Methodology and Critical Sources Review: 3,000 words)
   III. Research Project (Extended Essay: 5,000 words)

   B Advanced Papers

   Every candidate must follow two Advanced Papers courses from the options listed in the Schedule below, and submit one written assignment of no more than 5,000 words in length for each paper. Candidates will select two Advanced Papers in Year 2 of the MSt from a list of available options.

   C Dissertation

   Every candidate must produce a dissertation of not more than 15,000 words, including appendices but excluding bibliography and endnotes, on a topic approved by the Course Director. The dissertation must be delivered not later than noon on the last Monday in September of the second year of the course to the Chairman of Examiners for the Degree of MSt in the History of Design, c/o Clerk of the Schools, High Street, Oxford.

3. Each candidate must attend a viva voce examination when required to do so by the examiners.

4. The examiners may award a distinction for excellence in the whole examination.

5. A candidate who fails a core topic or advanced paper, or whose dissertation fails to satisfy the examiners, may be permitted to retake the paper, or resubmit the dissertation, on one further occasion only, not later than one year after the initial attempt.

Schedule

Advanced Papers are available in the following areas:

- Decoration in Modern France
- The Arts and Crafts Tradition in Modern Britain
- Design in the Machine Age
- Design, Body, Environment
- Nationhood, Empire and Conflict
- Academic Writing and Contemporary Practice*
- Medieval Period or Early Modern Paper Option (shared with the proposed MSt Architectural History)
- Papers available to be shared with the existing MSc English Local History:
  - A.7 The social history of English architecture, 1870-1940
  - A.8 The English suburb, 1800-1939
  - A.4 English architecture 1500-1640

* This Advanced Paper will be assessed by means of two written assignments: a Documentation Project and a Critical Sources Review; each 1,500 words in length

Not all advanced papers will be available in any one year and the definitive list of advanced papers available in any one year will be circulated to candidates and their supervisors during the second week of Michaelmas Term.
A Postgraduate Diploma will be available only to those registered as MSt students but who for whatever reason are not continuing to complete the full MSt. To be awarded the Postgraduate Diploma in the History of Design students must successfully complete the Core papers in 2a(I–III) and the Advanced Papers in 2b.

2. HUMANITIES BOARD
(a) Special Regulations for Doctor of Philosophy in English

Subject to the approval of the Humanities Divisional Board and Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations are proposed:

With effect from 1 October 2010

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 851, after 1.12, insert: ‘For students admitted to the D.Phil. in English before 1 October 2010.’

2. Ibid., after 1.47, insert: ‘For students admitted to the D.Phil. in English from 1 October 2010:

(i) Application for confirmation of D.Phil. status, with endorsements by the candidate’s society and supervisor, shall normally be presented to the English Faculty’s Graduate Office not later than Monday of third week in the eighth term after admission to the D.Phil. programme. In exceptional cases the Graduate Studies Committee may permit the candidate to postpone submission by up to one term: candidates seeking such postponement should apply to the Committee through the Director of Graduate Studies well in advance.

(ii) Application for confirmation of D.Phil. status shall be accompanied by:

(1) a full outline of chapters (c.100 words per chapters), summarising the scope of individual chapters and their state of completion, including a timetable for completion of the work which remains to be done before submission of the thesis;

(2) a draft abstract of the thesis as a whole, of approximately 1,000 words;

(3) a sample chapter, of between 6,000 and 10,000 words;

(4) a confidential report from the supervisor which should be sent direct to the English Faculty’s Graduate Office. The English Graduate Office will send the written work and the confidential report as well as any previous reports on transfer to the interviewer appointed by the English Graduate Studies Committee on behalf of the English Faculty Board.

(iii) The interviewer shall examine the candidate orally. If the interviewer considers it necessary, a second assessor may be appointed in consultation with the Director of Graduate Studies.

(iv) The interviewer(s) shall report to the English Graduate Studies Committee in writing whether the candidate’s subject is satisfactory and whether he or she is competent to tackle it. If confirmation is not recommended the interviewer may 1) recommend reapplication after a further period of study or 2) recommend transfer to M.Litt. status.

(v) Any candidate whose first application for confirmation is refused may reapply on one (only) further occasion, normally within two terms of the first. The material required will be the same as (ii) above.

(b) Master of Philosophy in Oriental Studies (iv) Modern Middle Eastern Studies

Subject to approval on behalf of the divisional board, which is now sought, and by Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations have been made:

With effect from 1 October 2011 (for first examination in 2012)

In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 559, after 1.45, insert new line: ‘(14) History and anthropology in the Sahara.’

(c) Master of Studies in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology

Subject to approval on behalf of the divisional board, which is now sought, and by Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations have been made:

With immediate effect

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 618, II. 7–8, delete ‘(excluding references and appendices).’

2. Ibid., I. 8, after ‘M.St.,’ insert ‘The word limit excludes the bibliography, appendices consisting of a catalogue of data, any extensive text which is specifically the object of a commentary or linguistic analysis, and any translation of that text, but includes quotations and footnotes.’

(d) Master of Philosophy in General Linguistics and Comparative Philology

Subject to approval on behalf of the divisional board, which is now sought, and by Education Committee, the following changes in regulations have been made:

With immediate effect

2. Ibid., I.11, after ‘regulation 5,’ delete ‘below,’ and substitute ‘below. The word limit excludes the bibliography, appendices consisting of a catalogue of data, any extensive text which is specifically the object of a commentary or linguistic analysis, and any translation of that text, but includes quotations and footnotes.’

4. MATHEMATICAL, PHYSICAL AND LIFE SCIENCES BOARD AND BOARD OF THE FACULTY OF PHILOSOPHY

To be made if the Legislative Proposal detailed in the section Congregation 12 October above is approved.

(a) Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first examination in 2013)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 57, l. 14, insert:

'Computer Science and Philosophy
Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division and Faculty of Philosophy'

2 Ibid., p. 94, after l. 33 insert:

'Special Regulations for the Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy

A

1. The subjects of Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy shall be (a) Computer Science, (b) Philosophy.

2. All candidates must offer both (a) and (b).

3. The examination shall be under the joint supervision of the Divisional Board of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy, which shall appoint a joint supervisory committee to make regulations concerning it, subject always to the preceding clauses of this subsection.

4. The Moderators shall indicate on the pass list each candidate who has not passed this examination but has passed in one subject, and shall indicate in which subject the candidate has passed.

1. Each candidate shall offer six papers as follows:

- CS1 Functional Programming, and Design and Analysis of Algorithms;
- CS2 Imperative Programming;
- CS3 (CS and P) Discrete Mathematics;
- M1 (CS and P) Applied Mathematics;
- P1 Introduction to Philosophy;
- P2 Elements of Deductive Logic.

Papers CS1, CS2, P1 and P2 will be of three hours' duration; paper CS3(MS and P) and P3 will be of two hours' duration; paper M1(CS and P) will be of one and a quarter hours' duration.

2. The syllabus for each paper will be published by the joint supervisory committee in a handbook for candidates by the beginning of the Michaelmas Full Term in the academic year of the examination, after consultation with the Faculty of Computer Science (for papers CS1, CS2, CS3(CS and P)), the Faculty of Mathematics (for paper M1(CS and P)), and the Faculty of Philosophy (for papers P1 and P2).

3. Each of papers CS1, CS2, CS3(CS and P) and M1(CS and P) will contain questions of a straightforward character.

4. The use of calculators is generally not permitted but certain kinds may be allowed for certain papers. Specifications of which papers and which types of calculators are permitted for those exceptional papers will be announced by the Examiners in the Hilary Term preceding the examination.

5. All candidates will be assessed as to their practical ability in Computer Science under the following provisions:

(a) The Director of the Computing Laboratory, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners evidence showing the extent to which each candidate has pursued an adequate course of practical work. Only that work completed and marked by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the candidate takes the examination shall be included in these records.

(b) Candidates shall submit to the Chairman of the Moderators, Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy, c/o the Academic Administrator, Oxford University Computing Laboratory, Oxford, by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the examination is being held, their reports of practical exercises completed during their course of study. For a report on a practical exercise to be considered by the moderators, it must have been marked by a demonstrator and must be accompanied by a statement that it is the candidate's own work except where otherwise indicated.

(c) The moderators shall take the evidence (a) and the reports (b) into account in assessing a candidate's performance. Candidates whose overall performance on practical work is not satisfactory may be deemed to have failed the examination.'

(b) Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first examination in 2013)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 58, l. 9, insert:

'Computer Science and Philosophy
Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division and Faculty of Philosophy'

2 Ibid., p. 61, l. 37, insert:

'Computer Science 3rd'

3 Ibid., p. 111, after l. 38, insert: 'Special Regulations for the Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy

A

1. The subjects of the Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy shall be (a) Computer Science, (b) Philosophy.

2. All candidates must offer both (a) and (b).

3. The examination shall be under the joint supervision of the Divisional Board of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy, which shall appoint a joint supervisory committee to make regulations concerning it, subject always to the preceding clauses of this subsection.

1. Two papers shall be set in the examination, one on each of the subjects: (a) Computer Science, (b) Philosophy. Each candidate shall take both papers, provided that no candidate may take a paper on a subject previously passed in Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy or in the Preliminary Examination in Computer Science and Philosophy.
2. All questions set shall be of a straightforward nature.

3. Paper (a) Computer Science: topics shall be as prescribed for papers C51, C52, C53(C5andP) and M1 (C5andP) of the Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy.

4. Paper (b) Philosophy: topics shall be as prescribed for papers P1 and P2 of the Honour Moderations in Computer Science and Philosophy.

(c) Honour School of Computer Science and Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2013 (for first Part A examination in 2014, first Part B examination in 2015, and first Part C examination in 2016)

1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 55, l. 16, first column, insert: `Master of Computer Science and Philosophy’

2. Ibid., p. 63, l. 28, insert:

`Computer Science and Philosophy (three-year and four-year)`

3. Ibid., p. 70, l. 6, insert:

`Master of Computer Science and Philosophy (four-year course)`

4. Ibid., p. 205, after l. 46, insert on a new page:

`SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF COMPUTER SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY`

In the following, `the Course Handbook’ refers to the Computer Science and Philosophy Undergraduate Course Handbook and supplements to this published by the joint supervisory committee and also posted on the web-site at http://web.comlab.ox.ac.uk/teaching.

1. All candidates shall be examined in Computer Science and in Philosophy.

2. No candidate shall be admitted to the examination in this School unless he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination.

3. The examinations in this school shall be under the joint supervision of the Divisional Board of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy, which shall appoint a joint supervisory committee to make regulations concerning it, subject in all cases to the preceding clauses of this subsection.

4. (a) The examination in Computer Science and Philosophy shall consist of three parts (A, B, C) for the four-year course, and of two parts (A, B) for the three-year course.

(b) Parts A, B and C shall be taken at times not less than three, six, and nine terms, respectively, after passing or being exempted from the First Public Examination.

5. The Examiners shall classify and publish the combined results of the examinations in Part A and Part B, and in respect of candidates taking the four-year course shall separately classify and publish results in Part C.

6. (a) Part A shall be taken on one occasion only.

(b) In order to proceed to Part C, a candidate must achieve second class Honours or higher in Parts A and B together.

(c) A candidate on the three-year course who obtains only a Pass or fails to satisfy the Examiners in Part B may retake Part B on at most one subsequent occasion; a candidate on the four-year course who obtains only a Pass or fails to satisfy the Examiners in Part C may retake Part C on at most one subsequent occasion. A candidate on the four-year course shall take Part B on one occasion only.

7. A candidate adjudged worthy of Honours on both Parts A and B together, and on Part C may supplicate for the degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy provided that the candidate has fulfilled all the conditions for admission to a degree of the University.

8. A candidate in the final year of the four-year course, adjudged worthy of Honours in both Parts A and B together, but who does not enter Part C, or who fails to obtain Honours in Part C, is permitted to supplicate for the Honours degree of Bachelor of Arts in Computer Science and Philosophy with the classification obtained in Parts A and B together; provided that no such candidate may later enter or re-enter the Part C year or supplicate for the degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy, and provided in each case that the candidate has fulfilled all the conditions for admission to a degree of the University.

1. In Part A of the examination, candidates shall be required to offer four Computer Science subjects from Schedule A(C5andP) in the Course Handbook, to include Models of Computation.

2. The examination for Part B shall consist of subjects in Computer Science and Philosophy.

The subjects in Computer Science shall be published in three schedules, B1(C5andP), B2(C5andP) and B4(C5andP), in a supplement to the Course Handbook by the beginning of the Michaelmas Full Term in the academic year of the examination concerned. Each Computer Science subject shall be examined by a written paper or by a mini-project.

The subjects in Philosophy shall be subjects 101-120, 122, 124 and 125 from the list given in Special Regulations for All Honour Schools Including Philosophy and subject to the regulations therein. Each subject in Philosophy shall be assessed by a 3-hour written examination.

Each candidate shall offer:

(a) two, four or six Computer Science subjects, and

(b) five, four or three Philosophy subjects, respectively, subject to the following constraints:

(i) No candidate shall offer any subject from Schedule B1(C5andP) that he or she has already offered in Part A(C5andP) of the examination;

(ii) Each candidate shall offer no more than two subjects from Schedule B1(C5andP);

(iii) Each candidate shall offer no more than two subjects from Schedule B4(C5andP);

(iv) Each candidate shall offer at least two Philosophy subjects from 101, 102, 104, 108, 119, 122, 124 and 125.

3. In Part C each candidate shall offer a total of three units chosen in any combination from the lists of taught courses for: Computer Science and for Philosophy, a Computer Science project or a Philosophy thesis.

The taught subjects in Computer Science shall be published in a schedule, C(C5andP), in a supplement to the Course Handbook by the beginning of the Michaelmas Full Term in the academic year of the examination concerned. Each such subject shall be examined by a written paper or by a mini-project and shall count as a half unit.

Each taught Philosophy subject shall be one of the subjects 101-120, 122, 124 and 125 from the list given in Special Regulations for All Honour Schools Including Philosophy, and subject to the regulations therein, or Paper 180, The Rise of Modern Logic, as specified in the Regulations for the Degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. Each such subject shall be assessed by a 3-hour written examination together with an essay of at most 5,000 words, conforming to the rules given in the Course Handbook. Each such subject shall count as a full unit. No candidate shall offer any taught subject that he or she has already offered in Part B of the examination.

A Computer Science project shall be as specified for the Honour School of Computer Science, and shall count as a full unit. A Philosophy thesis shall be as specified in the Regulations for Philosophy in all Honour Schools including Philosophy (subject 199) except that the thesis shall not exceed 20,000 words, and shall count as a full unit. No candidate may offer both a Computer Science project and a Philosophy thesis.

4. The use of calculators is generally not permitted but certain kinds may be allowed for certain papers. Specifications of which papers and which types of calculators are permitted for those exceptional papers will be announced by the Examiners in the Hilary Term preceding the examination.

5. All candidates will be assessed as to their practical ability in Computer Science under the following provisions:

(a) The Director of the Computing Laboratory, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners evidence showing the extent to which each candidate has pursued an adequate course of practical work. Only that work completed and marked by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the candidate takes the examination shall be included in these records.

(b) Candidates for each part of the examination shall submit to the Chairman of the Examiners, Honour School of Computer Science and Philosophy, c/o the Academic Administrator, Oxford University Computing Laboratory, Oxford, by noon on Monday of the fifth week of the Trinity Term in which the examination is being held, their reports of practical exercises completed during their course of study. For a report on a practical exercise to be considered by the Examiners, it must have been marked by a demonstrator and must be accompanied by a statement that it is the candidate’s own work except where otherwise indicated.

(c) The Examiners shall take the evidence (a) and the report (b) into account in assessing a candidate’s performance. Candidates whose overall performance on practical work is not satisfactory may be deemed to have failed the examination or may have their overall classification reduced.

(d) Special Regulations for Philosophy in All Honour Schools Including Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2013 (for first Part B examination in 2015 and first Part C examination in 2016)

With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 903, delete ll. 3–5 and substitute:

‘(ii) Application for confirmation of D.Phil. status shall be accompanied by (a) a statement giving the title of the thesis, and summarising each component chapter in approximately 100 words per chapter, (b) an overview of the intended thesis, of approximately 1,000 words, stating how much of the thesis is complete and how much remains to be done (with an estimate of the probable date of completion), and (c) a piece of written work, which shall normally be of 20,000–30,000 words in length and intended to form part of the thesis.

(iii) The candidate’s supervisor shall provide a report on the candidate’s application upon the form provided for this purpose or in a separate communication sent directly to the Graduate Studies Administrator. The report shall comment upon the accuracy of the account and feasibility of the timetable, and upon the candidate’s progress, together with an estimate of the probable date of completion.

(iv) The documents described above under (ii) and (iii) shall be considered by two assessors, appointed by the Graduate Studies Committee, one of whom shall, wherever practicable, be one of those who acted at the time of the candidate’s transfer to D.Phil status. The assessors shall interview the candidate and submit a joint written report to the Graduate Studies Committee, normally within one month of receiving the application. The report shall include a recommendation as to whether the application should be approved. The faculty may grant the application or refer it back for resubmission. Only one resubmission for confirmation may be submitted, and no such resubmission will normally be permitted after the end of the candidate’s ninth term. With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)’

The lists below show the retiring member or members, and indicate the length of appointment, from MT 2010 unless otherwise stated.

Audit and Scrutiny Committee
Vacancy: One

Mr B.A. Sufrin From HT 2011 To MT 2013

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being a member of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation who shall not serve on Council or the Finance Committee or on any committee which in the view of Council has main line executive authority within the University, or hold any office in the University or any college which involves executive authority.

Further information on the Audit and Scrutiny Committee can be found at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/520-122c.shtml. Enquiries may be directed to the Secretary.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 25 November, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate will be received by the Elections Office, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/).

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 11 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November.

PRO-VICE-CHANCELLOR (EDUCATION)

The University is seeking to appoint a full-time Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education) to provide leadership across the University and externally in respect of Oxford’s educational provision, which is a key component of its academic mission. The Pro-Vice-Chancellor will chair the University’s Education Committee, which oversees all aspects of teaching and learning, and educational standards. The appointment will commence on 1 January 2011 or as soon as possible thereafter.

Please see the further particulars at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/fp/ for more details about the post and for full instructions before making an application. Applications, including a covering letter and full CV and naming three referees, should be received no later than Monday 18 October 2010, by Dr Gwen Booth, Personnel Officer, Senior Appointments, at professorships@admin.ox.ac.uk. If you have a query about how to apply, please contact Mrs Elaine Eastgate at professorships@admin.ox.ac.uk or telephone: Oxford (2)80189.

Applications are particularly welcome from women and black and ethnic minority candidates, who are under-represented in senior positions at Oxford.
This paper sets out the arrangements for the 2010–11 round of the recognition of distinction exercise, in which applications are invited by 31 October 2010 for the conferment of the title of professor.

1. Introduction

Following successive consultation exercises over the period since 2005, the Task Force on Academic Employment put definitive proposals to Council for future arrangements for the conferment of titles on academics and for merit pay for lecturers. Council commended these proposals to Congregation in April 2010, stating however that it would not be possible in 2010–11 to devote any funding to the new arrangements. In the absence of any opposition or amendments, the proposals were declared approved in full by the Vice-Chancellor in May 2010. The details of the new arrangements may be seen at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/2009-10/supps/1_4915.pdf.

The consequence of Congregation’s approval of these new arrangements is that in 2010–11 an exercise will be held to consider applications for the conferment of the title of professor. No applications will be accepted or considered for the conferment of the title of reader, or for merit pay for lecturers. There will also be no exercise to consider new or enhanced distinction awards for substantive professors and readers.

Individuals working in an academic capacity in the collegiate University are therefore now invited to apply for the conferment of the title of professor: applications must be received by 31 October 2010.

The duties and stipends of successful applicants will not change; nor will successful application in itself have any implications for the outcome of any future exercise for merit pay for lecturers: any such exercise will be run independently.

2. Timetable and eligibility

Individuals are now invited to submit themselves for consideration in this exercise. Applications should be submitted via the online form available at: https://secure.admin.ox.ac.uk/distinction by 31 October 2010. Applications received after this date will not be considered. Section 5(c) below details the required format for applications. All applications will then be sent forward for consideration by divisional Recognition of Distinction Committees, on behalf of the relevant divisional board. Divisional comments should be sent to Personnel Services by 31 March 2011. The central Recognition of Distinction Committee will then consider all the material and make final decisions on each application in Trinity Term 2011. Titles will be awarded retrospectively, to take effect from 1 October 2010.

Individuals who retire on or before 30 September 2010 will not be eligible to apply.

It is essential for exercises such as this to be conducted as openly as possible. Divisional boards are asked to send this circular to all eligible academic staff on their establishment, together with covering information about the composition of the divisional Recognition of Distinction Committee which will comment on the applications. If such covering information is not yet available, this circular should be sent on now with a covering note to that effect; a further circulation about the actual composition of the committee should be sent as soon as that is known.

All employees of the University and also persons not employed by the University who are making a significant and sustained contribution to it in an academic capacity are eligible to apply. Separate circulars are being sent to heads of departments and equivalent (who are asked to draw the exercise to the attention of their academic and related staff) and to colleges. Divisional boards are also asked themselves to ensure that eligible persons in their subject area who are not members of the academic staff are aware of the exercise.

3. Previous applicants

Applicants who were unsuccessful in previous rounds may of course apply again, although they should note that reconsideration by the Recognition of Distinction Committee of the same material would result in the same outcome: there is no sense in which the committee will in any year take a more lenient line than in previous years, since there was and remains no ‘quota’ of successful candidates. Applicants from previous rounds who wish to apply again must submit new applications via the online system (see section 5 below).

4. Criteria

The criteria by which applications for the conferment of the title of professor will be considered cover three areas: research, teaching and good citizenship.

The thresholds for award of the title of professor (all of which must be met) are as follows:

Research*

A research record of a high order, the quality of which is comparable in distinction with that expected of professors appointed on the grounds of research achievement at other major research universities.

* ‘Research’ is to be understood as original investigation undertaken in order to gain knowledge and understanding, including work of direct relevance to the needs of commerce and industry, as well as to the Divisional offices are asked to send personal copies of the exercise details to all eligible lecturers in their areas.

(ii) Applicants complete an online application form and attach the body of their application.

(iii) Personnel Services makes all applications available electronically to the relevant divisional offices.

(iv) Applicants arrange for references to be provided from heads of department/faculty board chairmen and heads of house, and these are received and collated by Personnel Services and passed to divisional offices.

(v) Divisional Recognition of Distinction Committees seek nominated and independent research references and make recommendations to the central Recognition of Distinction Committee.

(vi) The central Recognition of Distinction Committee receives the reports from divisional committees and makes final decisions.

(vii) Applicants are notified of the outcome of their applications by the Vice-Chancellor.

(c) Application details

Applicants are asked to complete the online application form at: https://secure.admin.ox.ac.uk/distinction with their personal details and details of their referees. Note, for security reasons this form can only be accessed from a computer connected to the University data network (i.e. whose identity ends in ‘.ox.ac.uk’); any applicants who do not have access to such a computer are asked to contact Dr David Dongworth in Personnel Services for advice (recognition.distinction@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Please complete the details as requested, noting the points detailed below.

University employee number: applicants who are University employees are asked to complete this to enable their details to be cross-checked automatically. Note that this number is printed on payslips: it is NOT the same as your University card number. Applicants who are not University employees (e.g. NHS staff, college-only staff) should leave this box blank.

Preferred title: please specify your preferred title if awarded, e.g. Professor of English Literature, Professor of Engineering Science. Applicants are asked to propose as concise a title as possible. Note that this preference will be taken into consideration by the divisional and central Recognition of Distinction Committees, but there is no guarantee that if the title of professor is awarded by the University the applicant’s preferred title will also be approved.

Academic degrees: please list in the format ‘BA Toronto, PhD Leeds’.

Continuing Education or ASUC unit: if, and only if, your primary department/unit is Continuing Education or an Academic Services and University Collections (ASUC) unit (e.g. Ashmolean Museum, Bodleian Library etc.) please select this from the drop-down list, and then also select from the lists below the academic division and department with which you are most closely associated.

If your primary department/unit is not Continuing Education or an ASUC unit, leave the selection in this box as the default ‘Not Applicable’.

Division: applicants who work in more than one division should select one division from the list here, and use the text field labelled ‘Sub-unit’ to indicate the other division.

Sub-unit: use this field if your department or unit does not feature in the drop-down list; if you work in a sub-unit within a larger department e.g. the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics in the Department of Biochemistry; or if you work in more than one department or division.

Contact address: the address of the department you selected from the drop-down list will appear here automatically. Please amend if you prefer to be contacted at an alternative address (e.g. at college).

Applicants must supply the names of referees as follows:

(i) Head of department or chairman of faculty board (who may however delegate the writing of the reference). Applicants who are not University employees should give the head of the department/chairman of the faculty board with which they are most closely associated;

(ii) Head of house (who may however delegate the writing of the reference) in all cases where applicants have a college attachment.

In addition, applicants from Continuing Education or an ASUC unit (e.g. Ashmolean Museum, Bodleian Library etc.) must also provide details of the head of that department/unit (who may however delegate the writing of the reference).

In all cases, the online form will default to the head of department/unit or faculty and... head of house selected from the drop-down lists on Page 1; if this person has delegated the writing of the reference to another person, please give the other person’s details as prompted.

The heads should assess the applicant against the criteria for teaching and ‘good citizenship’, and may also address the research criteria, providing evidence to support their judgement.

Applicants are responsible for ensuring that these referees send their references, without further request, direct to recognition.distinction@admin.ox.ac.uk, or to Dr David Dongworth in Personnel Services, by 30 November 2010.

Applicants who are based in more than one department should ensure that the heads of both departments are asked to provide references, and must provide the name of the second referee as prompted on the online application form.

Applicants should, however, NOT themselves ask their research referees to submit references (see (iii) below).

(ii) In addition, applicants must also list four research referees in order of preference, who should ideally be outside Oxford, and who would be willing to assess the applicant against the criteria for research (and may also address the teaching and/or the good citizenship criteria if they are qualified to do so), providing evidence to support their judgement.

The divisional Recognition of Distinction Committee will select at least two of these research referees to approach for their comments. In addition, the divisional committee will identify and approach at least two further independent research referees.

Finally, attach a Word file or PDF with a curriculum vitae arranged in order under the headings listed below. Applicants are encouraged to make this document as concise as possible. Applications should comprise no more than 12 sides of A4 in total, including lists of publications etc.

All of those who put themselves forward should feel free to mention any factors (domestic or otherwise, including unusually high loads of teaching and/or administration) which may have led, for instance, to academic achievements appearing more limited than they would otherwise have been.

| (1) | Any relevant information such as might normally appear in a curriculum vitae, including employment history and current post |
| (2) | Advanced study and research, including publications, grants, etc., applicants marking with an asterisk the six most significant publications |
| (3) | University lectures and classes given, including any participation in curriculum development, syllabus design etc. over the last three years or such period as may be required to demonstrate fulfilment of the criteria |
| (4) | Graduate supervision and other graduate teaching undertaken |
| (5) | University examining |
| (6) | University administration, academic leadership, contribution to the subject outside the University, any enterprise activities or links to industry or business in appropriate cases |
| (7) | Undergraduate teaching for college(s) |
| (8) | College administration |
| (9) | Future plans for research |

Click on ‘Register’ to send the form and attachment.

All applications must be received by 31 October 2010.

All data supplied by applicants will be used only for the purposes of assessing their application for a title of distinction and will be held in accordance with the principles of the Data Protection Act 1998 and the University’s Data Protection Policy.

6. The divisional Recognition of Distinction Committees

(a) It is not open to divisional boards or their committees to invite individuals who have not put themselves forward to consider doing so.

(b) Each divisional board should delegate the consideration of the applications to a single Recognition of Distinction Committee, chaired by the head of the division. Divisional committees should be broadly based, covering as far as possible the major disciplines or broad areas of study under the aegis of the particular board. Boards may, if they wish, arrange for departmental/faculty board scrutiny of applications before consideration by the divisional committee; in such cases the divisional board should provide any necessary guidance to the department/faculty board.

(c) Divisional committees (including any local departmental/faculty committees) should not contain anyone who is a member of the central Recognition of Distinction Committee. Provided suitably qualified individuals exist, each committee must have an appropriate gender balance and mix of internal and external members. If it is not possible for external members to attend the meeting(s) of the committee, external advice should be obtained by correspondence. The internal members of the divisional committees should comprise only statutory or ad bonimem (but not e.g. titular) professors.

(d) Divisional committees should obtain at least two research references for each applicant from the names supplied, and at least two further research references from individuals not nominated by the applicant and usually from outside Oxford.

(e) Divisional committees must assess all of the applicants in the light of the material they have submitted and all of the references received, including the external ones, and strictly by reference to the criteria in section 4 above. The committee must seek whatever supplementary information it may need, beyond the referees’ comments, in order to assess fairly and consistently whether the applicant meets these criteria.

(f) Divisional committees should send to Personnel Services, by 31 March 2011, the research references they have obtained and any other relevant material, together with a report for consideration by the central Recognition of Distinction Committee setting out their final recommendation in relation to each applicant. The divisional committee is expected to provide a reasoned statement which addresses explicitly in each case, including the most straightforward ones, the question whether in its opinion the individual meets each of the criteria.

(g) In their reports to the central Recognition of Distinction Committee, divisional committees are also asked to comment on the suitability of the full title (e.g. Professor of Engineering Science) proposed by the applicant and, if appropriate, to recommend an alternative title.

(h) In making their comments to the central Recognition of Distinction Committee, chairmen or secretaries of divisional committees should state expressly that these bodies have observed the following elements of the above procedure. composition of divisional committees, circulation of all information to all eligible academic staff, consideration of factors affecting academic performance, and consideration of all information against the criteria, and in particular whether they interpreted the criteria in any specific way.

(i) Divisional committees must consult between themselves in cases where an individual has asked for consideration by more than one board.

7. The central Recognition of Distinction Committee

(a) The central Recognition of Distinction Committee is a sub-committee of Council’s Personnel Committee, and has delegated authority from Council to confer the title of professor in this exercise. It is chaired by the Vice-Chancellor and is composed of the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Personnel and Equality) ex officio, five statutory or ad hominem professors covering the MPLS and Medical Sciences divisions plus one external member representing those subject areas, and five statutory or ad hominem professors covering the Humanities and Social Sciences areas plus one external member representing those subject areas. The full membership of the central committee for the 2010–11 exercise will be published in the Gazette as soon as possible.

(b) The central Recognition of Distinction Committee considers the complete dossier for each applicant, including the divisional recommendation, and makes decisions, by reference to evidence relating to the criteria, on whether the title of professor should be conferred. In doing so, it may seek any further information which it requires in order to assess the applicants fairly and consistently against the criteria, including further external references and clarification from divisional committees of any points of doubt.

(c) The Vice-Chancellor will inform applicants of the outcome individually. The names of successful applicants for the conferment of the title will be published in the Gazette.

8. Title of visiting professor

Note that divisional boards may confer the title of visiting professor on an applicant who is not a University employee if the divisional and central Recognition of Distinction Committees consider that the applicant more appropriately fits that category.

9. Feedback

(a) Unsuccessful applicants will have the opportunity to receive feedback; this will normally be from a named member of the divisional committee, but in some cases it may be more appropriate for feedback to be given by the chairman or another member of the central committee.

(b) Those who are not satisfied with the outcome after having received feedback may appeal against the decision.

10. Appeals process

(a) Appeals will be considered by an appeals committee chaired by a suitable Pro-Vice-Chancellor (functional or ceremonial), with four other members, one from each of the academic divisions. None of the members will have been involved with the case previously, either as referees or committee members.

(b) Appellants must appeal in writing to the secretary of the appeals committee within the specified deadline.

(c) The appeals committee will receive the appellant’s appeal submission and the full dossier that was presented to the central committee.

(d) The appeals committee will ask the chairmen of the divisional and central committees to respond in writing to the grounds of the appeal and to justify their previous assessment of the appellant; the chairmen may consult their committee members as required before responding. The appeals committee may seek any further information which it requires, including holding a meeting with the appellant and/or seeking written clarification from him/her.

(e) The appeals committee’s decision is final and there is no further possibility of appeal.

11. Analysis of outcomes and future procedures

The Personnel Committee will consider, and forward to Council, a report on the outcomes of each exercise. This will include an analysis of patterns of application and of success by gender, ethnicity, etc.

If significant evidence emerges of patterns of under-application by suitably qualified academics, the Personnel Committee will make proposals to Council to try to address this.

Foreword by the Chair of the Review Group

The health and safety (H&S) of its staff and students and of members of the public and others within its premises are of paramount importance to the University. The complexity of its operations and the hazardous nature of some of its activities make the highest standards of H&S leadership an imperative for the University’s Governing Body, the Council.

The Review Group, which I have had the privilege to Chair, has taken evidence extensively from a wide range of constituencies within the University in order to determine, as required by our terms of reference, whether the University is showing, at its highest level, effective leadership in the area of H&S.

From the earliest stages of the review it became apparent to us how far the University had come, over recent years, in its management and leadership of H&S. It was also notable that, even as our review progressed, further improvements were being made. For example, proposals from the Health and Safety Management Committee (HSMC) that elements of its termly reports to Council should be taken ‘above the line’ and that there should be collaborative H&S reviews of Divisions on 4-yearly rotating basis, were immediately supported by the Vice-Chancellor. Council also took the important decision to include high-level H&S risks in the University’s Strategic Risk Register.

Such improvements, at least partly stimulated by the Review process itself, clearly indicate the value of conducting such periodic H&S reviews at the whole-University level, in addition to holding similar regular reviews at divisional, departmental and unit levels, in line with the recommended best practice of the Universities and Colleges Employers’ Association (UCEA).

The Group found much to commend in the leadership and management of H&S in the University and our recommendations for improvements are intended to make an already good situation even better. Just as in all its academic endeavours Oxford aspires to lead the field, so in its approach to H&S the University should aspire to set the best possible example to the ‘Leaders of Tomorrow’, who are the students and researchers of today.

Dr Diana Walford CBE
Chair, H&S Review Group
July 2010

Foreword by the Chair of the UK Health and Safety Executive

To the best of my knowledge, Oxford University is the first to carry out an in-depth review of its leadership on health and safety using The Universities and Colleges Employers’ Association good practice guidance. I was delighted, therefore, to be invited to act as the independent member of the panel and it has been a fascinating and enlightening process to participate in over the last few months.

I have noted that the process of carrying out the review has itself stimulated some new thinking about health and safety with one of the visible results already being the raising of its profile at senior levels. As well as identifying good practice in many parts, the review has also highlighted areas which need to be addressed; some of which will require further development that will take time to implement. Consequently, a further review of this type to assess progress would be very worthwhile. My view is that this could be most meaningfully carried out in around five years’ time.

I would very much hope that Oxford University will take the opportunity to communicate the positive benefits which have been gained from this review to other Universities and Colleges. HSE’s strategy for health and safety in Great Britain in the 21st Century makes leadership a central pillar in building the right culture and I believe that others should seek to follow your example and demonstrate similar levels of leadership in health and safety.

Judith Hackitt CBE
Chair of HSE
July 2010

Executive Summary

The Review Group, using the publication Leading Health and Safety at Work, published by the Universities and Colleges Employers’ Association (UCEA) and the Universities Safety and Health Association (USHA), together with UCEA’s Health and Safety Management Code of Best Practice, has identified the following issues in relation to the University’s leadership of health and safety, which it wishes to draw to Council’s attention.

(i) The Review Group is impressed by the overall standard of H&S leadership within the University, but feels that this could be further demonstrated by raising the profile of H&S in Council and at divisional boards.

(ii) Although there is a suitable H&S Policy statement, H&S objectives are absent from the University’s strategic plan, from its strategic Risk Register and from the five-yearly divisional plans – issues that can be readily rectified.

(iii) The links between Council and the Health and Safety Management Committee (HSMC) need to be strengthened; the authority of the HSMC should be enhanced and its working relationship with the Consultative Committee on Health and Safety (CCHS) improved.

(iv) The respective roles of heads of divisions and heads of departments in the leadership and management of H&S are not well understood and need to be clarified.

(v) There is an issue of resource in relation to some divisions’ ability to deliver their oversight role; but resources directly available to the University Safety Office and to the Occupational Health Service are deemed adequate, by their respective directors, for planned service delivery.

(vi) There is a multiplicity of differing roles, job descriptions and grades for safety officers across the University and, in the absence of a Head of Profession for safety officers, no uniform way of quality-assuring their performance.

(vii) There is difficulty, stemming from the increasing use of short-term contract employment, in ensuring continuity and experience in safety-related appointments within departments; the naturally high level of turnover of personnel within the University increases the challenge of ensuring that good health and safety practice is truly embedded in a sustainable way in the organisation.

(viii) There is poor uptake of the available H&S training and no training plan designed to ensure that the training offered meets the specific requirements of each division and Academic Services and University Collections (ASUC) and the needs of all those with H&S responsibilities, including members of Council.

(ix) As yet, an effective system of central monitoring of sickness absence and work-related illness, including stress, is not in operation, but is under development; such a system is essential if Council is to have adequate assurance of the health and wellbeing of employees.
(x) The University’s research is at the cutting edge of science and a system of horizon scanning is needed to ensure new or novel risks are identified and managed proactively.

Overall the Review Group concludes that the University performs well against the benchmark University Health and Safety Management Code of Best Practice and, by implementing the recommendations in this report, should be able to achieve an even better level of performance, without undue difficulty or significant additional resource. Progress should be monitored by repeating similar reviews of the leadership of H&S at suitable intervals. Recommendations to address all the above issues are set out in Section 8.

Introduction

1.1. Background to the Review

At its meeting in February 2009, Council asked that a review be carried out of the leadership of Health and Safety (H&S) within the University. Council’s decision was taken on the basis of a recommendation from the Health and Safety Management Committee (HSMC) and also in light of recently published guidance from the Universities and Colleges Employers’ Association (UCEA), Leading Health and Safety at Work. A Health and Safety Review Group was subsequently established to conduct the review.

1.2. Terms of Reference

The Terms of Reference (ToRs) of the Review Group, set by the Registrar, were as follows:

‘To investigate, using the Universities and Colleges Employers’ Association and the Universities Safety and Health Association publication Leading Health and Safety at Work as a basis for its work, whether the University is showing, at its highest level, effective leadership in the area of health and safety; and to include, in that examination, the role and function of Council and the Health and Safety Management Committee’.

1.3. Composition of the Review Group

Membership of the Review Group comprised Dr Diana Walford CBE (Principal (Mansfield College) (Chair)), Professor Susan Cooper (MPLS), Dr Adrian Allsop (Social Sciences), Mrs Ruth Davies (Bodleian Libraries), Professor Derrick Cooke (Medical Sciences) and the External Member, Ms Judith Hackitt CBE (Chair, UK Health and Safety Executive), Mr Chris Thompson (Council Secretariat) was appointed as Secretary.

SECTION 2

2.1. The basis for the work of the Review Group

The Review Group used, as its prime sources of reference:

(a) the document Leading Health and Safety at Work, published by the UCEA and the USHA.

(b) the University Health and Safety Management Code of Best Practice, published by the UCEA.

2.2. Statement — Leading H&S at Work

Leading H&S at Work states that ‘Protecting the health and safety of employees or members of the public who may be affected by your activities is an essential part of risk management and must be led by the governing body. Failure to include health and safety as a key business risk in board decisions can have catastrophic results. Many high-profile safety cases over the years have been rooted in failures of leadership. Health and safety law places duties on organisations and employers, and senior management can be personally liable when these duties are breached. Members of the governing body have both collective and individual responsibility for health and safety. By following this guidance and the recommendations made by UCEA in its Code of Best Practice on University Health and Safety Management you will help your institution find the best ways to promote a health and safety culture and therefore meet its legal obligations.’

Leading Health and Safety at Work defines the essential principles of H&S management as:

(a) strong and active leadership from the top:

(1) visible, active commitment from the governing body;

(2) establishing effective ‘downward’ communication systems and management structures;

(3) integration of good health and safety management with business decisions;

(b) worker involvement:

(1) engaging the workforce in the promotion and achievement of safe and healthy conditions;

(2) effective ‘upward’ communication;

(3) providing high quality training;

(c) assessment and review:

(1) identifying and managing health and safety risks;

(2) accessing (and following) competent advice;

(3) monitoring, reporting and reviewing performance.

It then outlines a number of questions as being key to the assessment of performance. The Review Group utilised these elements, statement, principles and questions as the basis of its work.

2.3. Further considerations

2.3.1. The Review Group noted that its ToRs limited its investigations to the leadership of H&S within the University and that such scope precluded any investigation of operational H&S matters, unless they were of particular relevance to the leadership issue.

2.3.2. The Review Group, whilst wishing to assure itself that the current management structure for H&S was in conformity with that prescribed in the University’s H&S Policy (Annex A), was cognisant that management structures were for the University to determine and that the Group should confine itself to assessing whether these structures were operating effectively.

2.3.3. The Review Group kept constantly in mind the need to give as much weight to issues of the health of employees as to those of safety.

2.3.4. From the outset, the Review Group recognised the importance of the University setting a good H&S example to its students and researchers who are the ‘Leaders of Tomorrow’.

2.3.5. The Review Group also placed considerable emphasis on the reputational standing of the University and the risk to it of poor performance in the area of H&S.

3.1. Conduct of the review

The Review Group consulted with the senior management of the University including the Vice-Chancellor, the Registrar and Heads of Division (HoDivs) and the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (PVC) (Academic Services and University Collections (ASUC)), all of whom gave oral evidence, supplemented, in some cases, by written response to a questionnaire. At the Committee level, detailed discussions with the Chairman of the HSMC and his recently demitted predecessor took place and, at their meetings in early 2010, the views of members of the Consultative Committee for Health and Safety (CHHS) and of the HSMC were also obtained. The Directors of the University Safety Office (DUUSO) and of the Occupational Health Service (DOHIS) were interviewed and responded to a list of detailed questions and the scope of consultation was later broadened to include Heads of Department (HoDepts); the Union Unite, UNISON, the Universities and Colleges Union and the Oxford University Students’ Union (OUSU) plus, through the Gazette, individual members of Congregation.

3.1.1. The people, committees and organisations consulted by the Review Group are listed at Annex B.

3.1.2. The minutes of oral evidence and written responses can be found on the University intranet.

3.2. Issues arising from the consultation

The consultations revealed that appropriate H&S principles were being followed within the University but that H&S was not fully integrated into the University’s planning and priority-setting mechanisms. This was exemplified by the absence from the University’s Strategic Plan of any reference to an H&S strategy. In turn this meant that H&S did not feature in the five-year divisional plans. Although H&S policy was well developed within the University, there was no obvious strategic framework within which such policy development took place.

3.2.1. Whilst Council was kept generally well informed on H&S within the University, through, inter alia, the receipt of termly reports from the HSMC, annual reports from the University Safety Office (USO) and Occupational Health Service (OHS) and also discussed, as appropriate, any reported serious untoward incidents or other important H&S issues, Council’s approach to H&S appeared somewhat reactive, rather than pro-active. It was felt that the link between Council and its HSMC needed to be strengthened if the former were to be able to exhibit more visible leadership of H&S in the University.

3.2.2. In his evidence to the Review Group, the Chair of the HSMC proposed that there should be regular reviews by his Committee of H&S in divisions, on a four-yearly rotating basis. Such reviews would be conducted collaboratively with the USO. The resultant report, with commentary by his Committee, would be considered by Council at a meeting at which he would be in attendance. This would help to raise the profile of H&S within Council and help to spread good practice between divisions.

3.2.3. A number of suggestions were also received about strengthening the composition and enhancing the authority of the HSMC; see paragraph 4.2.

3.2.4. Divisions were found to have a variable approach to the leadership and management of H&S and, from the HoDivs’ oral evidence and the questionnaire responses from HoDepts it was apparent that divisional roles and responsibilities for H&S needed to be clarified and a framework adopted for the oversight of H&S at divisional level that was best suited to each division’s needs. This issue is described in greater detail in paragraphs 4.2 to 4.3.5.

3.2.5. Variability of roles and reporting lines also appeared to exist in all divisions amongst the cadre of staff with formal H&S responsibilities, the Area (ASO), Departmental (DSO) and Unit Safety Officers (UnISO), with varying job descriptions, qualifications and levels of authority existing within and between departments and divisions. It was unclear how this group of staff was performance managed and, hence, how the University leadership could satisfy itself that their H&S work was quality-assured; see paragraph 4.3.6.

3.2.6. A recurrent theme from the evidence was the relatively poor uptake of the abundant H&S training opportunities that were available. This applied to academic supervisors of graduate students and researchers, as well as to others with formally designated H&S responsibilities. A particular area of concern was over the take-up of training relating to the H&S aspects of field studies. There seemed to be no executive route (or little willingness to use existing managerial structures) to ensure that essential training was, in fact, taken up. The Review Group was of the view that the University needed to ensure that all those with executive responsibilities undertook requisite training including refresher training as deemed necessary. It was also very evident that training programmes should include obligatory face-to-face induction briefing of those in positions of responsibility for H&S, including academic supervisors, HoDepts, Units, HoDivs and Members of Council.

3.2.7. The Review Group was informed of the development of an online H&S training course ‘Leading and managing Health and Safety’, an Oxford Learning initiative aimed at middle to senior managers. The Review Group understood that this package would be rolled out over the course of the next few months and hoped it might be possible to develop it to meet the needs of HoDivs and HoDepts.

3.2.8. Overall there was a need for H&S training to move to being driven by needs analysis rather than courses available for people to choose whether or not to attend.

3.2.9. With regard to work-related illness, it was noted that, although the OHS had comprehensive and complete data on the numbers of staff and the types of illness presenting to the OHS, there was no effective and reliable university-wide system for the routine monitoring of such illness. It was, however, understood that Personnel Services hoped to introduce new software in the future that would make it easier to collect data on sickness absence and to monitor this centrally, with due regard to confidentiality. It is expected that work in this area, to be conducted in close cooperation with OHS, will commence as part of the Human Resources Information Systems programme in early 2011.

3.2.10. The issue of work-related stress was one about which there was a paucity of University-wide information, but, anecdotally, considerable concern. It was felt that heavy workloads were contributing factors to stress levels in some areas. This situation would not be helped by anticipated reductions in resources across the University. This was not an issue that had been included within risk registers and yet, unless properly recorded, monitored and reported to Council so that appropriate action could be taken, increasing overall levels of stress could result in a rise in ‘chronicity’, whereby personnel failed to return to work at all after lengthy periods of sickness. It could also lead to increasing levels of ‘presenteeism’, where members of staff who were unwell continued to work at much reduced levels of effectiveness. The latter, and the under-reporting of illness, was already an acknowledged challenge amongst academic staff.

3.2.11. It was noted that the University had recently revised its stress-management policy (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/p/staff/stress/annexx.shtml) to reflect best practice and that much guidance was available to assist managers and to support individuals who felt under stress.

4.1. Current structure of H&S leadership and management

The structure is defined in the University’s Statement of Health and Safety Policy (2009) — see Annex A, extracts of which appear in the box below, to set the context for issues which have arisen in relation to the current arrangements. The H&S committee structure is illustrated in Fig 1.
The University has established the Health and Safety Management Committee as a committee of Council with the responsibility to determine the health and safety management strategy and policies necessary for the University to discharge its legal obligations regarding health and safety. There is also a Consultative Committee for Health and Safety, which includes representatives of the recognised trades unions together with others representing a wide spectrum of interest in the University. The Consultative Committee will advise the Health and Safety Management Committee on all new health and safety policies and is expected to determine the appropriate health and safety culture for the University.

The Chairman of the Health and Safety Management Committee, who also chairs the Consultative Committee, is appointed by the Vice-Chancellor.

The Health and Safety Management Committee has appointed three specialist advisory groups to advise on ionising radiation protection, biological safety and occupational health. It has also appointed a finance sub-committee to oversee expenditure on all matters relating to the programmes of work undertaken on the grounds of safety.

Divisional heads are responsible for the oversight of departmental arrangements for health and safety within their division in order to ensure that they are functioning in accordance with the University’s policies.

Heads of departments and institutions, and unit administrators in the Humanities Division, are responsible for the health, safety, and welfare of all persons who are lawfully in the buildings under their charge and are required to bring to the notice of all employees a written statement describing the organisation and arrangements for safety within their departments, institutions or units.

Responsibility for implementing University Safety Policy rests with heads of departments and institutions or with unit safety officers in the case of the Humanities Division. In order to provide expert advice on matters of health and safety, the Council has appointed the following officers:

Director of the University Safety Office, University Occupational Physician and Director of the University Occupational Health Service.

Heads of departments must appoint suitable members of their staff as departmental safety officers to advise them and to liaise with University officers. Area safety officers are appointed in high-risk science and clinical departments in order to enhance the departmental safety officer system. Any department using ionising radiation must have a system of radiation protection management based on departmental radiation protection supervisors, whose task is to ensure compliance with statutory regulations and local rules. Departments carrying out genetic modification work must appoint a departmental biological safety officer.

4.2. Issues in relation to the H&S Committees

The University’s H&S management structure is committee-based, with the HSMC having a strategic and policy-making role, reporting to Council; and the CCHS having a more operationally-centred responsibility, reporting to the HSMC. The constitution and ToR of the two Committees are given at Annexes C and D.

4.2.1. All HoDivs are ex officio members of the HSMC, as is the PVC (Research), reflecting the importance and seniority of the Committee. The Review Group heard that attendance by some HoDivs in person was infrequent. The Group felt that regular attendance at meetings of the HSMC by HoDivs personally was important, rather than that attendance should be delegated, but that if such delegation occurred it should be within a formal structure of delegated authority to a specific individual, as was the case in the Social Sciences Division. It should not be an ad hoc arrangement.

4.2.2. The Chair of the HSMC, conventionally a Head of House, is also Chair of the CCHS. This arrangement provides a stable link between the two committees as well as a measure of external neutrality, as Heads of House are outside the University’s line-management structure. Although there was a suggestion that the authority of the Chair of the HSMC might be enhanced if the post-holder had executive authority over the DUSO, in practice the working arrangements were excellent and the Review Group felt it entirely appropriate for the Chairmanship of the HSMC to rest, as it has done in recent years, with a Head of House.

4.2.3. In their responses to consultation, the CCHS itself and Unite and UNISON all made the point that the two committees should work more closely together and that, if the two committees were not to be amalgamated, at the very least there should be one joint meeting a year between the two committees, so that the CCHS could be more closely involved in the early stages of policy formulation. The Review Group saw merit in that suggestion and understood the Chair of HSMC/CCHS was very receptive to the idea.

4.2.4. Various suggestions were made as to ways in which the HSMC’s authority and influence might be enhanced. This was felt to be necessary because of the difficulty of securing implementation of agreed safety policies and procedures throughout all parts of the University. Suggestions for enhancing its authority included the appointment of a second PVC as another ex officio member to the Committee and the addition of an elected member of Council (i.e. not an officer of the University) to its membership. In the former case, given that one PVC was already an ex officio member, and another – the PVC (Planning and Resources) – was a member as the person appointed by Council, this was not thought to confer any particular advantage. However, the Review Group considered that the authority of the HSMC could be augmented by the inclusion of an elected member of Council within its composition; such inclusion would also enhance the continuity of policy development and policy making between the two bodies.

4.2.5. One suggestion the Review Group received was that an external member of Council might be appointed as the Council’s H&S ‘Champion’ and that such an appointment could improve the overall visibility of H&S within Council meetings. The Review Group gave this proposal careful consideration but came to the conclusion that it could be counter-productive by leading to an “it’s not my responsibility” response to H&S within Council, whereas, legally, the Council collectively, and each of its members individually, are statutorily responsible for H&S within the University.

4.2.6. Overall, the idea for enhancing the HSMC’s authority that most commended itself to the Review Group was the proposal from the Chair of the HSMC that there should be collaborative (with the USO) H&S reviews of Divisions, by his Committee, on a four-yearly rotating basis. The resultant report, with commentary by his Committee, would be considered by Council at a meeting at which he would be in attendance. This would help to raise the profile of H&S within Council and help to spread good practice between divisions.

4.2.7. The Review Group was delighted with the enthusiastic support that this proposal had received from the Vice-Chancellor.

4.3. Issues in relation to Divisions

In the light of the University’s H&S policy, the Review Group interpreted the oversight role of the HoDiv to be one of assurance that systems and resources (including staff) were in place to implement the H&S policy, whilst that of the HoDept or Unit Safety Officer was to ensure operational implementation of H&S policies and procedures. However, from the evidence received from both HoDivs and HoDepts, it became apparent that there were some issues of concern in relation to this split of responsibilities.

4.3.1. Humanities. In the Humanities Division, where there are Faculties rather than departments, the responsibility of the HoDiv for H&S, supported by the Divisional Secretary as DSO, was well understood and executed. It did, however, place a considerable burden on the Divisional Office and the HoDiv felt that there was an argument for the Chairs of Faculty Boards to take more responsibility for H&S. Neither the HoDiv nor the Divisional Secretary had received any briefing on their H&S responsibilities. Professor Shuttleworth also confirmed that it was her intention that reports from twice-yearly meetings of the divisional H&S committee should now be seen by the Divisional Board and that H&S should appear on the Divisional Risk Register. The Division received a high level of support from the USO, but was concerned that safety incident reports went direct to the USO and felt that the Division should receive notification of such incidents (suitably anonymised if necessary) at the same time.

4.3.2. Social Sciences. In the Social Sciences Division, the HoDiv had formally delegated his H&S responsibilities to his deputy HoDiv. The latter attended the HSMC and reported back to the HoDiv after each meeting. H&S matters of note were also discussed at the Divisional Planning and Resource Committee. As the HoDiv Professor Goodman had received no briefing on his H&S responsibilities but, as far as the main H&S risks in his division were concerned, he identified fieldwork, particularly when conducted abroad, as the main area of concern. External training sometimes had to be bought in to cover the variety of circumstances likely to be encountered in the field; and there was the problem of ensuring that the training available was actually taken up. In this regard, academic supervisors and others needed to be informed, preferably in face-to-face briefings, of their H&S responsibilities.

4.3.3. Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences. In the MPLS Division, the HoDiv had established a review of H&S whose detailed report contained recommendations that were now being taken forward. Whilst the prime responsibility for H&S lay with HoDepts, given his academic specialism, he was very H&S aware and felt the need for greater feedback from departments. He also had frequent contact with the DUSO and valued his advice.

4.3.3.1. Professor Halliday confirmed that, as a HoDiv, he had received no specific H&S briefings and that a relevant training package was required. Whilst the prime H&S responsibilities lay with HoDepts, HoDivs needed to be able to ensure informed oversight. At present the Divisional office was not staffed to undertake this oversight function, but an appointment was pending and the person appointed would have H&S as part of his/her job description.

4.3.3.2. Ensuring compliance with H&S policies and procedures was the responsibility of HoDepts, but there could be occasions when formal enforcement action was required, when the USO looked to the HoDiv for support. In such cases Professor Halliday felt the USO and its Director should have enforcement powers which would, in turn, enable the HoDiv to take a firmer stance. There needed to be an ability to impose an H&S solution as necessary.

4.3.3.3. Professor Halliday agreed that the H&S implications of novel technology were a big issue and that potential hazards were embedded within all such work. There was a need for researchers to use their experience to think of what could/might go wrong and to be prepared for it, i.e. to ‘horizon scan’. He agreed that it would also be helpful if such work could be scrutinised by a ‘fresh pair of eyes’. Much of the challenge in this area was the result of changes within University staffing which had seen the loss of employed technical staff and an increase in the numbers of short-term sponsored researchers who, by the nature of their contract work, were subject to high rates of turnover. Any move to reverse this trend would require considerable financial investment by the University, which was very unlikely in the current financial climate.

4.3.4. Medical Sciences. In the Medical Sciences Division, which had a very small divisional structure in relation to the size of its constituent departments, the HoDiv stated that the Divisional Office provided oversight and advice but was not resourced to carry out fully the accountability responsibilities for departmental H&S arrangements laid upon it by the University; and that any H&S incidents were reported by departments directly to the USO, informing the Divisional Office. If the division were to be able to discharge more fully its role, additional resources would be needed. Whilst the Review Group understood how this situation had arisen, following the creation of divisions, the Review Group felt that it was unsatisfactory that the division was apparently unable to carry out fully any accountability role required by the University’s H&S policy. The Review Group considered that the division and the University should, together, work to address the issue.

4.3.5. The Academic Services and University Collections. ASUC is effectively a division led by a Pro-Vice-Chancellor. Professor McKendrick had not received any formal briefing on his H&S responsibilities and, initially, had been unaware that the ASO’s formal reporting line was to him as HoDiv, since the ASO’s main working relationship was with the Divisional Secretary. Whilst this arrangement worked well, Professor McKendrick suggested that, in order to avoid conflicting advice being received, consideration should be given to ASOs and DSOs having a direct reporting line to the DUSO. Without a direct reporting line to the Head of the Safety Office he felt that there was a risk of confusion because reporting lines were not as clear as they should be.

4.3.6. Below the top level, the four academic divisions and ASUC have their own structures for delivering the H&S agenda, in line with the University’s Statement of H&S Policy. Within each division, there are varying arrangements involving ASOs, DSOs or UnSOs, with a variety of different job descriptions and reporting lines. There are only three full-time DSOs and it was thought important to note that the majority of other DSOs were drawn from the academic, academic-related or technical staff of a department who might have no formal H&S qualifications and whose H&S responsibilities are carried in conjunction with their main responsibilities. DSOs report to HoDepts, often through a departmental administrator, but the arrangements were not uniform in departments, centres and institutes. The Review Group did not consider that the lack of uniformity in such arrangements was necessarily problematic, provided the arrangements worked well in practice. It did, however, seek to establish whether the arrangements and reporting lines were known about and understood in each division and department or unit and found that such knowledge was quite often lacking, despite the fact that these are set out in Departmental Statements of Safety Organisation.

4.3.6.1. ASOs are full-time H&S professionals who normally hold high-level H&S qualifications. Whilst all are at grades 7 to 9, their job descriptions vary. The Review Group heard that, following a policy decision taken some years ago, none of the safety officers within divisions report to the DUSO but to HoDepts or, in the case of some ASOs to HoDivs or, in the case of Humanities, to a DSO, who is the Divisional Secretary. Whilst, in practice, there was excellent liaison between all safety officers and the DUSO, the Review Group noted that one consequence of the decision that neither ASOs nor DSOs should report to the DUSO was that there was no de facto ‘head of profession’ for safety officers in the University, with responsibility for quality assuring overall standards of training and qualifications of H&S staff and of ensuring appropriate job-descriptions and grading. A further consequence of this was that there was insufficient sharing of good practice between safety professionals and this was an important area where improvement was possible.

4.4. Reporting lines for the Director of the University Safety Office and the Director of the Occupational Health Service

The Review Group noted that, at present, the University’s two top-level H&S professionals, the DUSO and DOHS, both had direct reports to the Registrar. The DUSO, should any particular situation demand it, also has direct access to the Vice-Chancellor.

4.4.1. The Review Group was informed of a recommendation, within a draft review of personnel-related functions being conducted by the Registrar, that the reporting line of the DUSO and DOHS should be changed from a direct line to the Registrar to the proposed post of Director of Human Resources (DHR). In respect of the DUSO, the Review Group noted that he would retain immediate access to the Vice-Chancellor on safety matters if required and considered the new reporting proposal appropriate providing that immediate access was retained. However, the matter of the revised report of the DOHS gave the Review Group some concern and was discussed in some detail with both the Vice-Chancellor and the Registrar. They were sympathetic to the view of the DOHS that a reporting line to the DPS carried some risks to the delivery of the OHS, with potential to impact on work-related staff health. This was because staff confidence in the OHS could be undermined if they had concerns about a potential loss of medical confidentiality and because they might perceive a conflict of interest for the DOHS if he was being performance-managed by the DHR. Whilst the Review Group was anxious to make its view on this issue known, it recognised that it did not fall within its ToRs to suggest an alternative direct report. In her evidence to the Review Group, the Registrar was able to give reassurance that the issue had now been addressed and that the DOHS accepts the proposed new arrangements.

4.5. The Registrar also indicated that she would like to see the profile of H&S in Council raised. Appropriate mechanisms needed to be in place for Council to be assured that it would be kept informed of serious issues as they arose, that it was able to monitor staff sickness, including stress, and for relevant systems for training and management to be in place. Work was in progress to develop the H&S Risk Register, which the Review Group was later informed was in its second draft and awaited re-submission to the HSMC, and further work was needed on the H&S policy statement. Briefings for Council members on their H&S responsibilities and the legal obligations placed on them as members of the University’s Governing Body should be introduced. Overall, the Registrar was of the view that the University should aim for the highest standards in the management of H&S, exceeding those required by law where possible.

4.6. The Vice-Chancellor, in his evidence to the Review Group, emphasised the importance he placed on the University operating to the highest standards in relation to H&S. He had been most impressed, on arriving from Yale, at the rigour and attentiveness of the H&S regime in the Chemistry Department, where he was continuing his research. For the University as a whole, he identified the question of assurance as the principal area of weakness in the implementation of the University’s H&S policy and he hoped the ongoing review would identify a positive means of gaining the requisite assurance. He very much welcomed the increased visibility to be given to H&S in Council through discussion of the termly reports from the HSMC and through the proposed system of annual reports to Council from the HSMC’s reviews of H&S in each division and ASUC, on a four-yearly rotating basis.

5.1. H&S-related financial arrangements within the University

The Review Group was informed that current quantifiable resources specifically dedicated to H&S management amounted to £2M in respect of the USO and £0.5M in respect of the OHS. Whilst the Review Group did not consider these sums insufficient, it was later informed that these sums had been reduced, in line with reductions applied elsewhere within University services, to £1.881M and £0.47M respectively, as a consequence of the overall pressure on resources. The Review Group was told that reductions would be met, in respect of the USO, through reductions in USO grants to departments and to USO office costs and, in respect of the OHS, by the withdrawal of physiotherapy services.

5.1.1. Whilst it was not appropriate for Review Group to comment on any future, or further, cuts it did wish to make clear that it hoped that, in times of significant budgetary pressures, the current H&S priorities would be retained. It was also pleased to note that any additional reductions were to be secured through agreed deferment, but not cancellation, of desirable, as opposed to essential programmes.

5.1.2. It was clear to the Review Group that significant sums in direct and indirect costs were being spent on H&S beyond those devoted to the USO and OHS, but these were difficult to quantify. For example, safety officers of the different divisions, departments and units were of different grades and there was significant input of departmental and other staff time. It was also evident that funds set aside and available for H&S were held within numerous different allocations. However, the Review Group was pleased to receive assurances from a number of departments that funding required for H&S measures was invariably found when required, even at the expense of other non-H&S priorities.

7.1. Perceived challenges

The Review Group assessed these to be as follows:

(a) H&S is not visible enough in key parts of the University’s planning process, such as in the Strategic Plan and the five-year divisional plans;

(b) H&S does not occupy a prominent enough place in the Council’s deliberations for Council to be seen to be taking an active leadership role in this area;

(c) Council needs a better mechanism of being assured that its H&S policies are operating effectively;

(d) the profile and authority of the HSMC is insufficient;

(e) divisions have a variable approach to the leadership and management of H&S and there is a need for the split of responsibilities between divisions and departments to be clarified;

(f) there is scope for a more pro-active approach to the dissemination of best practice;

(g) the ASO and DSO roles and reporting lines vary and a formal system of performance appraisal in relation to the conduct of H&S duties is lacking;

(h) little evidence of H&S training needs analysis which leads to inadequate uptake of necessary H&S training and there is little, if any, provision of on-appointment briefing on their H&S responsibilities for those in senior management or leadership roles, including members of Council;

(i) the University’s student and staff population is, by its very nature, subject to much turnover, and post-doctoral researchers on fixed-term contracts are now taking on responsibilities that would formerly have been the province of long-serving technical staff or permanent research staff, making it difficult to ensure systems and procedures are embedded in a sustainable way;

(j) the extent of work-related illness and stress is not known, as effective systems are not yet in place for central recording, monitoring and reporting of work-related illness, including stress;

(k) the University has to manage a huge diversity of potential risks, ranging from overseas trips to laboratory equipment, fire hazards, ionising radiation, pathogens, chemicals, construction works, student and public safety; the University’s H&S system therefore has to cover the entirety of risks and focus on the priorities;

(l) the University works at the leading edge of research, where there is potential for new and unknown H&S risks which those working closest to the novel technology may not be best placed to identify.

SECTION 8

8.1. Recommendations

To address the above perceived challenges, the Review Group recommends that:

8.2. Council

Council should:

(1) include a section on H&S in the University’s Strategic Plan;

(2) include H&S in the University’s Strategic Risk Register;

(3) require divisions to include H&S in their five-year divisional plans;

(4) clarify the respective responsibilities for H&S of HoDivs and HoDepts and ensure that HoDivs have adequate resources for carrying out their H&S assurance role;

(5) require the HSMC to prepare an operational plan for implementing the H&S strategy;

(6) endorse the proposal of the Chair of the HSMC for an H&S review of each division and of ASUC, in rotation over a four-year cycle, reporting to Council;

(7) appoint an elected member of Council to the HSMC;

(8) promote timely implementation and effective use of the Human Resources Information System for monitoring staff illness, including stress;

(9) undertake repeat reviews of the leadership of H&S at suitable intervals.

8.3. HSMC

HSMC should:

(1) prepare an H&S strategy for incorporation in the University’s Strategic Plan;

(2) prepare an operational plan to give effect to the strategy, to include:

(a) the four-yearly H&S reviews of divisions and ASUC, in collaboration with the USO;

(b) a plan for the supply and delivery of relevant and appropriate training for staff and students, incorporating the training needs identified by each division;

(c) an approach to dealing with persistent non-compliance with agreed policies;

(3) establish a mechanism for ‘horizon scanning’ to ensure that, as far as possible, potential H&S hazards are identified at an early stage in the development and implementation of novel technologies;

(4) institute an annual joint meeting with the CCHS.

8.4. Heads of Divisions

HoDivs should:

(1) ensure that the full range of H&S risks are considered and those of highest priority/impact are included in their Divisional Risk Registers;

(2) include H&S in their divisional plans;

(3) clarify with their departmental, faculty and unit heads the roles and responsibilities for H&S within the Division and foster improved communication on H&S matters within the Division;

(4) ensure systems are in place for briefing newly appointed managers and supervisors on their H&S responsibilities including their responsibility to ensure the take-up by staff and students of relevant training;

(5) arrange for their Divisional Board to receive regular reports of rates of sickness absence from the departments and units once central monitoring has been put in place;

(6) participate in the four-yearly reviews of H&S by the HSMC, working on the reviews in close collaboration with the USO;

(7) where new or novel technology is to be introduced into the Division, it should be subject to appropriate ‘horizon scanning’ scrutiny.

8.5. Heads of Departments and Units

HoDepts and Units should:

(1) review their departmental H&S risks, prioritise them and include them on their Risk Registers;

(2) consider H&S aspects in all departmental planning.
(3) work with the Divisional Office to clarify roles and responsibilities for H&S and ensure good communication with the Division and other departments on relevant H&S issues, to benefit from lessons learned;

(4) ensure that all new appointees with H&S management responsibilities receive face-to-face briefing on these, as part of their induction, and that effective briefing of all students and researchers takes place;

(5) ensure that all those with statutory H&S responsibilities (e.g. radiation protection) undertake the requisite training and refresher courses;

(6) identify other H&S training needs across their department/unit;

(7) ensure that corrective actions and new procedures are effectively embedded into the department’s processes so that they are not eroded over time;

(8) include performance on H&S responsibilities in staff appraisals;

(9) monitor and benchmark sickness absence rates and investigate increases over expected or benchmarked rates once central monitoring has been put in place;

(10) participate in the four-yearly review of H&S by the HSMC;

(11) seek feedback from the DUSO on lessons to be learned from Departmental Safety Audits and HASMAP audits and implement recommended improvements.

8.6. DUSO

The DUSO should:

(1) work closely with the divisions and ASUC to produce reports for the four-yearly H&S reviews by HSMC;

(2) provide feedback to departments and units following their submission of their self-assessment audits and from any HASMAP audits;

(3) be proactive in disseminating good practice;

(4) assist departments and divisions in developing a scheme of performance appraisal for safety officers.

8.7. DOHS

The DOHS should work closely with Personnel Services to develop the HRIS for the central monitoring of work-related illness, including stress.

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD STATEMENT OF HEALTH AND SAFETY POLICY

www.admin.ox.ac.uk/safety/

For the Health and Safety Management Committee

1. The general provisions of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 impose a duty on all employers to ensure, as far as is reasonably practicable, the safety of their employees at work by maintaining safe plant, safe systems of work, and safe premises, and also by ensuring adequate instruction, training and supervision. The University is also bound by the Act to ensure the safety of all other persons, who (though not employees) may be affected by the University’s work activities.

2. The University has established the Health and Safety Management Committee as a committee of Council with the responsibility to determine the health and safety management strategy and policies necessary for the University to discharge its legal obligations regarding health and safety. There is also a Consultative Committee for Health and Safety, which includes representatives of the recognised trades unions together with others representing a wide spectrum of interest in the University. The Consultative Committee will advise the Health and Safety Management Committee on all new health and safety policies and is expected to determine the appropriate health and safety culture for the University.

The Chairman of the Health and Safety Management Committee, who also chairs the Consultative Committee, is appointed by the Vice-Chancellor.

The Health and Safety Management Committee has appointed three specialist advisory groups to advise on radiation protection, biological safety and occupational health. It has also appointed a finance sub-committee to oversee expenditure on all matters relating to the programmes of work undertaken on the grounds of safety.

3. The Act requires every employer to prepare a written statement of general policy with respect to the health and safety at work of his employees and the organisation and arrangements in force for carrying out that policy, and to bring the statement to the notice of all his employees. Council therefore circulates the following Statement of Safety Policy:

It is the policy of the University, and the responsibility of Council, to adopt all reasonably practicable measures:

(a) to secure the health, safety and welfare of all employees at places of work under the University’s control and elsewhere when performing their duties;

(b) to protect students and other persons who are lawfully on University premises against risk to their health or safety which might arise out of activities in those places;

(c) to maintain safe plant, machinery and equipment and a safe and healthy place of work.

4. It is also the policy of the University to ensure that all members of the University and its staff are aware of their individual responsibility to exercise care in relation to themselves and those who work with them. To this end individuals are enjoined to:

(a) familiarise themselves with University Safety Policy and any departmental or unit safety requirements;

(b) take reasonable care that all procedures used are safely carried out, and seek expert advice in any case of doubt;

(c) warn of any special or newly identified hazards in existing procedures or risks in new procedures about to be introduced;

(d) report accidents or incidents promptly;

(e) familiarise themselves with fire and emergency drills (including the location of emergency telephones) and escape routes; and

(f) where required by University policy register with the Occupational Health Service for health surveillance purposes.

Where self-employed persons or contractors and their employees carry out work on University premises, they must comply with standards of safe working contained in any regulations or codes of practice applicable to their operations, and in the University’s safety rules.

5. Divisional heads are responsible for the oversight of departmental arrangements for health and safety within their division in order to ensure that they are functioning in accordance with the University’s policies.

6. Heads of departments and institutions, and unit administrators in the Humanities Division, are responsible for the health, safety, and welfare of all persons who are lawfully in the buildings under their charge and are required to bring to the notice of all employees a written statement describing the organisation and arrangements for

7. Responsibility for implementing University Safety Policy rests with heads of departments and institutions or with unit safety officers in the case of the Humanities Division. In order to provide expert advice on matters of health and safety, the Council has appointed the following officers:

Director of the University Safety Office;

University Occupational Physician and Director of the University Occupational Health Service.

The policies of the University on specific legislative and other matters are issued as University Policy Statements (previously known as University Guidance Notes). Advice on specific hazards and technical items is issued as memoranda by the University Safety Office and by the University Occupational Health Service.

Heads of departments must appoint suitable members of their staff as departmental safety officers to advise them and to liaise with University officers. Area safety officers are appointed in high-risk science and clinical departments in order to enhance the departmental safety officer system. Any department using ionising radiation must have a system of radiation protection management based on departmental radiation protection supervisors, whose task is to ensure compliance with statutory regulations and local rules. Departments carrying out genetic modification work must appoint a departmental biological safety officer.

8. This Policy supersedes all previous versions of University Safety Policy. It will be reviewed annually by the Health and Safety Management Committee.

9. The names of the chairmen of the committees and advisory groups and of the University officers are given in the Appendix.

Council Regulations 15 of 2002
Made by Council on 26 June 2002

Health and Safety Management Committee

3.60. The Health and Safety Management Committee shall consist of:

(1) a member of Congregation appointed by the Vice-Chancellor as chairman of the committee;

(2) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor with responsibility for Research;

(3)-(6) the heads of each of the divisions;

(7) one person appointed by Council.

3.61. The committee may co-opt up to four additional members, who shall hold office for such period as the committee may determine.

3.62. The committee shall be responsible for the following matters:

(1) the determination of the management strategy and policies necessary for the University to discharge its legal obligations in respect of occupational health and safety;

(2) the recommendation of appropriate action necessary to implement the University’s Safety Policy, as designed to promote the safety of staff, students, authorised visitors, and members of the public lawfully on university property;

(3) the taking of action on all management matters of safety and occupational health and other areas of the committee’s remit, including the control of such funds as may be allocated to it.

3.63. The committee’s remit shall include all matters covered by legislation on health and safety, fire safety, food safety, and the transport of dangerous goods, and by environmental protection legislation relating to the disposal of all hazardous wastes, radioactive substances, and genetic modification.

3.64. The committee may set up such subcommittees and specialist advisory groups as it considers desirable, and shall determine their membership and terms of reference.

3.65. The committee shall meet at least once a term, and following each meeting shall report to Council on the main matters which it has discussed; the committee shall also make an annual report to Council.

COMPOSITION AND TERMS OF REFERENCE — CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE FOR HEALTH AND SAFETY

Remit
The committee shall constitute the consultative forum on health and safety required by the Safety Representatives and Safety Committee regulations 1977, or any subsequent legislation. It shall consider and, as appropriate, comment on the following:

(a) questions of health and safety policy;
(b) the implementation of health and safety policy;
(c) administrative matters relating to health and safety;
(d) health and safety training within the University;
(e) significant accidents and incidents occurring within the University;
(f) the minutes of each of the specialist advisory groups set up by the Health and Safety Management Committee;
(g) matters brought to the University’s attention by trade union safety representatives.

The committee shall be invited to consider and comment on all proposed new and revised health and safety policies before they are submitted to the Health and Safety Management Committee.

The committee shall meet at least three times a year, and on such additional occasions as the chairman may decide to be appropriate. The minutes of each meeting shall be forwarded to the Health and Safety Management Committee.

Composition
The committee may co-opt up to two additional members.

Appointed and co-opted members shall serve for such periods as may be determined by the body appointing or co-opting them.

2 Ibid., after ‘Bachelor of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science’ insert ‘or Computer Science and Philosophy’.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute V concerning Greyfriars

Explanatory Note

WHEREAS it is expedient to remove a reference to Greyfriars in Statute V, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

In section II of Statute V, concerning the Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended on 17 July 2003, Vol. 133, p. 1536), delete ‘Greyfriars’.

REGULATIONS TO BE MADE BY COUNCIL IF THE STATUTE IS APPROVED

3 Voting on resolution authorising use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

PRINCIPLES AND PROCESS FOR SPACE ALLOCATIONS IN THE RADCLIFFE OBSERVATORY QUARTER

The Radcliffe Observatory Quarter (ROQ) was acquired by the University in 2003 with the intention of developing an integrated campus, capable of phased development, which offers expansion space for the collegiate University over the next twenty years. The overall principles for the development of the site are set out in the ROQ Masterplan developed over a three-year period and endorsed by Council in December 2008.

In the case of the ROQ development, all space allocations are considered in the first instance by the ROQ Project Board, a committee established in 2005 by the Planning and Resources Allocation Committee (PRAC) to provide further oversight for the project. Its members are the Proctors and Assessor, the Pro-Vice-Chancellors for Planning and Resources, Education and Research, the Heads of Division (except Medical Sciences), the Chief Executive of Oxford University Press, Bodley’s Librarian, the Chair of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee (BESC), and the Heads of Estates, Development and Planning. Allocations recommended by the ROQ Project Board are then considered through the normal space approvals process: consideration by BESC, which may authorise an allocation of up to 300 sq. m. Any allocation above that size is referred onwards to PRAC and, if the proposed site exceeds 1000 sq. m. or a building is over 600 sq. m., PRAC asks Council to recommend it to Congregation.

The establishment of the Blavatnik School of Government promises to be an important milestone in the University’s centuries-long tradition of varied contribution to government and public policy around the world. A major philanthropic donation provides an opportunity to bring together the knowledge borne of this rich tradition, and new and exciting strands of thinking. The emerging vision for the School is one characterised by the following key objectives. The Blavatnik School of Government will:

(a) train future leaders through a pioneering multi-disciplinary approach which prepares them to innovate, to think globally, and to deliver public goods that aim to ensure growth, opportunity, security and social harmony;
(b) forge partnerships and collaboration between the world’s best thinkers and practitioners;
(c) inject cutting-edge academic research into policy-making;
(d) create a global network of public policy-makers who can continue to learn from one another for the future.

The School has been the prime capital project for the Social Sciences Division for some time and the conclusion of negotiations with the donor now enables this project to become a reality. It is the first major capital development project since the building of the Centre for Advanced Study in the Social Sciences in 2004 (the Manor Road building) that now houses the departments of Economics, Sociology and Politics and International Relations as well as two research centres of the Faculty of Law.

The location of the School on the ROQ site provides an important opportunity to produce a high-quality landmark building fit for the purpose of establishing the School as the first of its kind outside North America. It is a founding aim for the School to have a strong and well-grounded multi-disciplinary approach spanning all divisions of the University. The School’s presence on the ROQ site will bring it into close proximity with the Humanities Division, which will be centring its activities on the site, enabling the development of strong links with the division through the School.

The new building will house the School’s academic and support staff, provide purpose-built facilities for academic and practitioner visitors, provide teaching accommodation for a new graduate cohort to be established (120 students at maturity), as well as space and facilities for individual research centres coming under the School’s remit and for the provision of outreach/third-leg activities associated with the School’s academic aims.
Text of resolution authorising the use of space in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter
That approximately 6,300 sq. m. in the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter be allocated as the site of the new Blavatnik School of Government.

Congregation

Election: Audit and Scrutiny Committee

General Notices

Facilities Available to Retired Members of University Staff

Retired members of staff in receipt of a university pension (whether under or over seventy-five, and whether or not they are a member of a faculty or of Congregation) are able to obtain a retired staff card, which gives them access to a very wide range of facilities. Application for such a card can be made via a departmental or college administrator.

A provided a valid card is held, the privileges offered include continued access to university libraries, access to OUCS and its email services, discounts at the Oxford University shop and at the Ashmolean and Bodleian gift shops, free entrance to the Botanic Garden, the ability to apply for membership of the University Club on Mansfield Road, and discounted membership of the University sports club at Iffley Road. Retired staff are also welcomed at the Language Centre.

Circulation of the Gazette to retired members of staff

Former members of Congregation resident in the United Kingdom can continue to receive copies of the Gazette (as well as the University's staff newsletter Blueprint, and the Oxford Magazine), on application in writing to the Information Office, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

In the case of those over the age of seventy-five such applications must be renewed at the beginning of each academic year.

MSC in Clinical Embryology

NUFFIELD DEPARTMENT OF OBSTETRICS AND GYNAECOLOGY

Research dissertations are to be submitted to the Examination School by noon on Friday, 12 August 2011.

Report Issued by the Internal Auditors

The following report issued by the Internal Auditors has been accepted by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee:

IC£ Governance Review

The executive summary of this report has now been posted on the intranet at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/councilsec/oxonly/audit/auditrep.shtml. The full reports may be consulted by members of Congregation at the University Offices by arrangement with the Head of the Council Secretariat, Emma Rampton (email: emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk; telephone: (2)70002).

Department of Earth Sciences

The Department of Earth Sciences moved to a new building on 20 September. The new Earth Sciences Building is located on South Parks Road, on the site of the old Central Chemistry building.

The new address is: Department of Earth Sciences, South Parks Road, Oxford OX1 3AN. Departmental phone numbers will remain the same as far as possible; if you experience any difficulty in contacting members of staff, please call reception on 01865 (2)72000.

OXFORD MARTIN SCHOOL
Announcement of new shorthand name and website

The Oxford Martin School is the new shorthand name given to the James Martin 21st Century School, which launched a new website and logo on 27 September 2010. The School is an interdisciplinary research initiative addressing major global future challenges. Following the successful $50 million matched funding challenge announced earlier this year, the Oxford Martin School now comprises thirty research institutes and programmes, which are clustered under four broad themes:

Energy and Environment
- 21st Century Ocean Institute
- Institute of Biodiversity
- Institute for Carbon and Energy Reduction in Transport
- Institute on Plants for the 21st Century
- Oxford Centre for Tropical Forests
- Oxford Geoengineering Programme
- Programme on Globalising Tidal Power Generation
- Programme on Modelling and Predicting Climate Change
- Programme in Nuclear and Energy Materials
- Programme on Solar Energy: Organic Photovoltaics

Technology and Society
- Institute for Economic Modelling
- Institute for the Future of Computing
- Institute for Science, Innovation and Society
- International Migration Institute
- Oxford Institute of Ageing
- Oxford Institute for Global Economic Development
- Programme on Computational Cosmology
- Programme on Future Technologies
- Programme on the Future of Cities

Health and Medicine
- George Centre for Healthcare Innovation
- Institute for Emerging Infections
- Institute for the Future of the Mind
- Institute of Nanoscience for Medicine
- Institute for Vaccine Design
- Oxford Stem Cell Institute
- Particle Therapy Cancer Research Institute

Ethics and Governance
- Future of Humanity Institute
- Oxford Institute for Ethics, Law and Armed Conflict
- Programme on Ethics of the New Biosciences
- Programme on Mind and Machine

For more information please visit the website at www.oxfordmartin.ox.ac.uk or contact info@oxfordmartin.ox.ac.uk.

4 Ibid., l. 9, delete ‘statistics portfolio, and literature review’ and insert ‘journal article review, literature review, and activities report’.

5 Ibid., p. 762, delete ll. 19–47 and p. 763 delete ll. 1–32 and insert:

(a) Philosophical Foundations of Psychological Research

This module begins with historical and foundational issues and progresses to philosophical issues arising from areas of contemporary research in psychology. Topics studied will include some of: the subject matter of psychology; levels of description; the epistemology of psychology; psychological understanding; cognitive science; the study of neuropsychological and psychiatric disorders; the scientific study of consciousness; and philosophical issues arising from areas of contemporary research.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(b) Design Skills

This module is delivered as a series of oral presentations collaboratively prepared by groups of students followed by group discussions. The focus is on research articles that illustrate the use of particular kinds of methodology and/or design.

Each candidate shall be required to produce a 2,000 word review of a journal article assigned by the course committee. Details of this assessment shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(c) Brain and Cognition

This module covers methods used in research in cognitive psychology and neuropsychology. It presents foundational knowledge from neuroanatomy, neurological disorders, neurological and psychological assessment and the use of experimental methods, to familiarise students with the diverse methodologies which contribute to cognitive neuropsychology. Methodologies deployed in the investigation of perception and cognition are discussed and evaluated.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(d) Social Behaviour and Personality

This module provides a critical analysis of the range of methods and approaches used in social psychology and the study of individual differences.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(e) Project Design

This module provides practical instruction in research and presentation skills. Students will undertake detailed planning of the research project to be carried out under (i).

Each candidate shall be required to submit a 3,000 word review of relevant literature and methods relating to their research project. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course. In addition each candidate shall be required to give an oral presentation outlining the design of his or her research project and the ideas behind it, but this shall not contribute to the overall result for this module.

(f) Statistical Theory and Methods

This module comprises a series of statistical lectures and complementary statistical workshops.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course. Each candidate shall also be required to complete a portfolio of reports based on SPSS data analyses carried out during the workshops, in addition to a computer-based test but neither of these shall contribute to the overall result for this module.

(g) Mini Project
Small groups of 2–4 students will be assigned to research teams within the Department of Experimental Psychology and guided through research tasks involving, for example, setting up equipment and procedures for a study, collection of pilot data, coding and processing of data, and statistical analysis.

The module will be assessed by a written report of activities conducted in the mini-project. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(h) Language and Development
This module addresses methods used in selected areas of developmental psychology with a particular emphasis on language. Longitudinal designs, and observational and experimental methods are reviewed and evaluated with examples from recent research. Attention is also given to studies of brain function during development and to the uses of fMRI and EEG data. Particular issues arising from the study of infants lacking verbal skills are identified.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course.

(i) Computational Neuroscience
This module provides an introduction to the goals and methods of computational modelling in the context of cognitive neuroscience, covering the architecture, function, and properties of a number of basic prototypical classes of neural network. It also looks at how these basic neural networks provide building blocks for larger-scale models of brain function. Lectures will be supplemented by practical sessions providing hands-on experience of computational modelling.

Each candidate shall be required to submit an essay of no more than 3,000 words. Essay topics must be approved by the course committee. The deadline for submission shall be notified to students at the start of the course. In addition, candidates shall be required to complete reports based on practical assignments conducted as part of the module but these shall not contribute to the overall result for this module.

(j) Research Project
Each student shall carry out a project under the supervision of a research supervisor on a subject selected in consultation with the academic advisor and approved by the course committee. The course committee shall be responsible for the appointment of the research supervisor. The Research Project module shall consist of data collection, analysis of the data, delivering a poster presentation and writing a dissertation on the project.

Candidates shall be required to submit to the examiners not later than noon on the first Monday in September three copies of a typewritten or printed dissertation of not more than 10,000 words in length (excluding bibliography and any appendices) on his or her research project. The cover of the copies must bear the candidate's examination number and name of the examination, but not their name or college, and must be sent in a parcel to 'The Chairman of Examiners: M.Sc. in Psychological Research, c/o Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford'. The dissertation must be accompanied by a signed statement by the candidate that the dissertation is his or her own work.

Candidates shall also be required to deliver a poster presentation based on their research project, however this shall not contribute to the overall result for this module. 'The date on which candidates are required to deliver their presentations will be in the long vacation.'

Elections

Election 25 November

Vacancies and Retiring Members
The lists below show the retiring member or members, and indicate the length of appointment, from MT 2010 unless otherwise stated.

Audit and Scrutiny Committee
Vacancy: One
Mr B.A. Sufrin  From HT 2011  To MT 2013
One member of Congregation, not necessarily being a member of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation who shall not serve on Council or the Finance Committee or on any committee which in the view of Council has main line executive authority within the University, or hold any office in the University or any college which involves executive authority.

Further information on the Audit and Scrutiny Committee can be found at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/520-122c.shtml. Enquiries may be directed to the Secretary.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 25 November, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate will be received by the Elections Office, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/).

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 11 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency: If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Excerpts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Physical chemistry seminars

The following seminars will be held at 2.15 p.m. on Mondays in PTCL Large Lecture Theatre, unless otherwise stated. All welcome.

Conveners: Professor P.J. Hore and Dr S. Mackenzie.

Dr Michele Vendruscolo, Cambridge 11 Oct.: ‘Protein structure determination using NMR chemical shifts.’

Professor John Pyle, Cambridge 18 Oct.: ‘Halogenes in the atmosphere: an update.’

Dr Arzhang Aradan 1 Nov.: ‘Mott-insulator-related physics in organic molecular metals and superconductors.’

Professor Hagan Bayley 8 Nov.: ‘Engineered protein nanopores for biotechnology.’

Dr Mark Newton, Warwick 15 Nov.: ‘Taming Defects in Diamond.’

Prof Ian Smith, Cambridge 29 Nov.: ‘The Elusive H03 Radical: Kinetics of Formation, Thermodynamics and Atmospheric Role.’

Theoretical chemistry group seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4.45 p.m. on Mondays in the John Rowlinson Seminar Room (20.12), opposite the PTCL Main Lecture Theatre. All welcome.

Convener: Dr M. Wilson.

Dr Ard Louis 18 Oct.: ‘Modelling the self-assembly of protein quaternary structure, virus capsids and DNA nanostructures.’

Professor John McGrady 1 Nov.: ‘Mechanistic Insights from Computational Inorganic Chemistry.’

Dr David Cooper, Liverpool 15 Nov.: ‘Visual descriptions of correlated electronic structure in molecules.’

Dr Matthew Turner, Warwick 29 Nov.: ‘Active Membranes.’

Solid Mechanics and Materials

Engineering Group Seminar Series

Seminars will take place at 2 p.m. on Mondays in Lecture Room 8, IEB.

Nien-Ts Tsu 11 Oct.: ‘Compatible domain structures in ferroelectric single crystal.’
Professor Nicola Marzari
18 Oct.: ‘Engineering thermal transport from first-principles.’

Professor Paul Hazel, Cranfield

Professor John Hogan, Bristol
1 Nov.: Title to be confirmed.

Professor James Marrow
8 Nov.: ‘New Techniques for In-situ Observation of Cracking.’

Dr Mithila Achintya
15 Nov.: ‘Eigenstrain modelling of residual stresses generated by laser shock peening.’

Dr Daniele Dini, Imperial College
22 Nov.: Title to be confirmed.

Dr Zhong You
29 Nov.: Title to be confirmed.

Mathematical Biology and Ecology Seminars

The seminars are held on Fridays, 2 p.m., in Lecture Room 1 (unless otherwise stated) at the Mathematical Institute. For correspondence and further details, please contact Sara Jolliffe (email: cmb@maths.ox.ac.uk).

Prof Neil Ferguson (Division of Epidemiology, Public Health and Primary Care, Imperial College, London)
15 Oct.: ‘Modelling the 2009 H1N1 Swine Flu pandemic: conclusions and lessons learned.’

Dr John MacKenzie (Dept of Maths and Statistics, University of Strathclyde)
29 Oct.: ‘Modelling cell motility and chemotaxis using pseudopod-based feedback.’

Prof Kevin Burrage (Computational Biology, Computing Laboratory)
12 Nov.: ‘Coping with heterogeneity: from cells to tissue.’

Prof Ray Goldstein (Dept of Applied Maths and Theoretical Physics, University of Cambridge)
26 Nov.: ‘Microfluidics of cytoplasmic streaming.’

Welcome Trust Centre for Human Genetics

MICHAEL DAVYS LECTURE IN NEUROSCIENCE

Professor Maria Karayiorgou, Professor of Psychiatry, Columbia University Medical Centre, will deliver the Michael Davys Lecture in Neuroscience at 5 p.m. on Monday, 11 October, in the Lecture Theatre, Medical Science Teaching Centre, South Parks Road. All are welcome.

Convenor: Professor Jonathan Flint.

Subject: ‘Linking DNA structural variation to brain dysfunction and schizophrenia.’

Oxford Biomedical Imaging Festival

The Oxford Biomedical Imaging Festival will be held on Wednesday, 13 October, at St John’s College. The festival is aimed at gathering together biomedical imaging scientists across the University and partner NHS hospitals, working from microscopy to radiology. Registration is free to University of Oxford biomedical imaging community members and to NHS partners. For details and to register, visit www.imaging.ox.ac.uk.

Ludwig Institute for Cancer Research

SPECIAL SEMINAR

Professor Fiona Watt, Cancer Research UK Cambridge Research Institute, will deliver the following seminar at 3 p.m. on Friday, 26 November, in the Lecture Theatre, Richard Doll Building, Old Road Research Campus.

Subject: ‘How intercellular signalling regulates stem cell fate in adult epithermis.’

SIGNALLING PATHWAYS AND GENETICS OF CANCER SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given at 11 a.m. on Wednesdays in the Ludwig/Jenner Seminar Room, lower ground floor, Old Road Campus Research Building.

Dr Janine Erler, Institute of Cancer Research
13 Oct.: ‘Lysyl oxidases in metastasis mediated by the tumour microenvironment.’

Professor Christopher Garland
17 Nov.: ‘Endothelial cells, hyperpolarisation and vascular dilatation.’

Oxford Biomedical Research Centre/ Research Services

RESEARCH INTEGRITY LUNCHTIME SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given at 1 p.m. on Mondays in the Lecture Theatre, Richard Doll Building, Old Road Campus. All are welcome.

Professor Douglas Altman
11 Oct.: ‘EQUATOR network—promoting transparent and accurate reporting of research studies.’

Professor Melissa Anderson, Minnesota
25 Oct.: ‘International research collaborations: much to be gained, many ways to get in trouble.’

22 Nov.: ‘Good practice in research collections and biobanking.’

Dr Sabine Kleintert, The Lancet; Committee on Publication Ethics
22 Nov.: ‘Research integrity and publication ethics.’

Professor Michael Parker
6 Dec.: ‘The ethics of collaborative global health research.’

Neuroscience grand round guest lectures

The following lectures will be given at 11.30 a.m. on Fridays in Lecture Theatre 1, Academic Block, John Radcliffe Hospital. All are welcome.

Dr Mary Reilly, University College, London; National Hospital, London
8 Oct.: ‘Hereditary sensory neuropathies.’

Professor Nick Fox, Institute of Neurology, London
5 Nov.: ‘Why and how to set up a disease-based neuroimaging consortium—lessons from the Alzheimer’s Disease Neuroimaging Initiative (ADNI).’

Professor Henry McQuay
19 Nov.: ‘Pain matters.’

Pharmacology, anatomical neuropharmacology and drug discovery seminars

The following seminars will be given at 12.30 p.m. on Tuesdays, unless otherwise noted, in the Lecture Theatre, Department of Pharmacology, Mansfield Road.

Dr Caroline Dart, Liverpool (Convenor: Professor C. Garland)
12 Oct.: ‘Regulation of vascular potassium channels: implications in health and disease.’

Dr Melanie Woodine, Toronto (Convenor: Dr Karri Lamsa)
Thurs. 14 Oct., 2 p.m.: ‘Inhibitory synaptic plasticity and chloride regulation.’

Professor David Palmer, Lincoln, New Zealand (Convenor: Professor F. Platt)
19 Oct.: ‘Studies on ovine Batten disease: neurodegeneration, glial activation and therapeutic possibilities.’

Dr Anthony Davenport, Cambridge (Convenor: Dr Kim Dora)
26 Oct.: ‘Emerging role of apelin peptides in the cardiovascular system.’
2 Nov.: To be confirmed.
9 Nov.: To be confirmed.
16 Nov.: To be confirmed.
23 Nov.: To be confirmed.
Dr Richard Billington, Plymouth (Convener: Dr G. Churchill)
30 Nov., 12 noon: To be confirmed.

Oxford Centre for Diabetes, Endocrinology and Metabolism seminar series
The following seminars will be given at 12.45 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Robert Turner Lecture Theatre, ODECM, Churchill Hospital. Sponsored by Lilly.
13 Oct.: To be confirmed.
Dr Fiona Gribble
20 Oct.: ‘Molecular mechanisms underlying the secretion of incretin hormones.’
Professor Michael Roden
27 Oct.: ‘Mitochondrial function in metabolic diseases.’
Dr David Savage
3 Nov.: ‘Recent insights into the pathogenesis of human lipodystrophy.’
Professor Jens Juul Holst
10 Nov.: ‘Regulation of glucagon secretion.’
Professor Tim Spector
17 Nov.: ‘Genetics of osteoporosis: what have we learned from genome-wide association studies?’
Professor David Dunger
24 Nov.: ‘The early developmental origins of type 2 diabetes risk.’
Dr Edward Fisher
1 Dec.: ‘Regression of atherosclerosis: interference by diabetes.’

Medieval and Modern Languages
Ilchester Lecture
Professor Viktor Zhivov, Moscow, Berkeley and Stanford, will deliver the Ilchester Lecture at 5 p.m. on Thursday, 21 October, in Room 2, the Taylor Institution.

Note on procedures in Congregation

Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 160, as amended on 12 October 2004, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: 2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to (Registrar) Elections Office (email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
Notices

Consultative notices

All Souls: revised statutes
The committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of All Souls College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 13 June 2009 and 12 June 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 18 October.

The effects of the amendments are to remove inconsistencies and errors arising from previous amendments; to clarify the expectations and requirements of Examination Fellows; to make changes to certain Fellows’ retirement age; to update pension and accounting record arrangements; to ensure that the Warden and Fellows have full statutory authority for all benefits payable to or on behalf of the Warden and certain groups of Fellows; to provide for the establishment of a Remuneration Committee; to introduce a requirement to observe the College Conflict of Interest Policy and Code; and generally to improve the governance of the College in accordance with Charity Commission guidance.

Queen’s: revised statutes
The committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of the Queen’s College approved by the Governing Body on 5 and 26 May 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 18 October.

The effects of the amendments are to remove inconsistencies and errors arising from previous amendments; to clarify the expectations and requirements of Examination Fellows; to make changes to certain Fellows’ retirement age; to update pension and accounting record arrangements; to ensure that the Warden and Fellows have full statutory authority for all benefits payable to or on behalf of the Warden and certain groups of Fellows; to provide for the establishment of a Remuneration Committee; to introduce a requirement to observe the College Conflict of Interest Policy and Code; and generally to improve the governance of the College in accordance with Charity Commission guidance.

St Anne’s: revised statutes
The committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of St Anne’s College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 22 April 2009 and 16 June 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 18 October.

The effects of the amendments are to make changes to the Statute which deals with the Wardenship of the college.

Review of Conference: Joint Planning and Decision Making
The Conference of Colleges is conducting a review of the reforms made to Conference and its committees in 2007. This review will look at how that report’s recommendations have been implemented, but will also look more broadly at how effectively Conference is carrying out its roles of enabling colleges to work together effectively and to engage collectively and constructively with the university. A questionnaire is available on the Conference website www.confcoll.ox.ac.uk, and the review group, chaired by Lord Krebs, would like to invite anyone with an interest to complete the questionnaire, which should take no longer than five minutes.

Responses should be sent to Tabitha Schenk in the Conference Secretariat (tabitha.schenk@admin.ox.ac.uk, or at the University Offices, Wellington Square) by Friday 22 October 2010.

Examinations and Boards

Changes to Regulations

1. Humanities Divisional Board
   Subject to the approval of the Humanities Divisional Board and the Education Committee, the following changes in special regulations are made:

   BACHELOR OF THEOLOGY
   With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

   1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 466, l. 40, delete ‘4–5’ and substitute ‘9–10’.
   2. Ibid., l. 41, delete ‘11–15’ and substitute ‘7–11’.
   3. Ibid., l. 41, delete ‘4–5’ and substitute ‘9–10’.
   4. Ibid., l. 42, delete ‘11–12’ and substitute ‘7–8’.

2. Social Sciences Divisional Board
   (A) MPhil in Politics (Comparative Government, Political Theory, European Politics and Society)
   With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

   1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 573, l. 29 after ‘(af)–(ag)’ insert ‘(ai)’.
   2. Ibid., l. 31 after ‘(s)–(ab)’ insert ‘(ah)’.
   3. Ibid., l. 33 after ‘(e)’ delete ‘(ah)’ and substitute ‘(ag)’

   ‘(ah)’ Kant’s Political Philosophy

   The course will address all aspects of Kant’s political philosophy, including its relation to his moral philosophy. Specifically, it will look at his theory of the formation of the state, the nature of law and constitution, the role of social contract, his rather authoritarian view of political obligation, his conception of citizenship, his theory of property, his theory of international law and international relations, and his cosmopolitanism. There will be some discussion of the roots of Kant’s political philosophy in the work of Jean-Jacques Rousseau and also of the influence of his political philosophy in the twentieth century, particularly in the work of John Rawls.

   (ai) Political Economy of Inequality and Democracy

   This course will introduce MPhil students to some of the major topics related to the political economy of inequality, politics, institutions and redistribution. It is organized around a framework that emphasizes the relationship between equality and efficiency, the nature of inequality, the political causes and consequences of redistribution, and the relationship between inequality and democracy. Through reading, writing of discussion papers, and seminar participation, students will develop the relevant analytical skills to understand the relationships affecting individual preferences, political and economic institutions, and policy outcomes.

   (B) MSC in Applied Linguistics and Second Language Acquisition
   With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

   In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 679, l. 40, after ‘subject’ insert ‘and title’.

   (C) MSC in Educational Research Methodology
   With effect from 1 October 2010 (for first examination in 2011)

   1. In Examination Regulations, 2009, p. 706, delete ll. 4–8 and substitute:

   2. Every candidate will be required to complete the four elements of the course as listed in the schedule below, and candidates shall be examined in accordance with the schedule below. Candidates undertake a two week research internship.

   3. Every candidate will be required to satisfy the examiners in the following:
   1. Satisfactory attendance at the appropriate classroom-based courses;

   2. Ibid., delete ll. 17–20 and substitute:

   ‘phy, the title to be selected in consultation with the supervisor, on a topic relevant to the subject of the course. The subject and title selected by the candidate must be approved by the Departmental Board not later than the first day of the fifth week of Hilary Term in the year in which they complete the written examination.’

   3. Ibid., delete ll. 32–3 and substitute:

   ‘8. Candidates shall be deemed to have passed the examination if they have satisfied the examiners in both Part 1 and Part 2. If Part 1 is failed, the candidate may re-take the whole examination of Part 1 one further time on the next occasion when this is examined. Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 (2)80548
Fax: 01865 (2)70178
Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellingdon Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by deadline of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication).
Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc.
VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl.
6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)
External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length.
Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid
for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.
ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements
General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is accepted through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate members of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University;
fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students,
Recognised Students, Visiting Students;
students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules,
regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements.
Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/ gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Oration by the Vice-Chancellor

The University Challenge
When I spoke briefly to Congregation on this day a year ago, I had the strong sensation that my feet had barely touched the ground. I hope this confession will seem both understandable and pardonable given that I had been officially in office as Vice-Chancellor for all of five minutes. Yet when I look back now over an exhilarating first twelve months, and more importantly when I look ahead to the months and years to come, it strikes me that there was perhaps something prophetic about that initial sensation. For though my feet have certainly become fully grounded in the terrain of Oxford, a great deal about the world of higher education remains up in the air.

This is a critical and hugely challenging time for universities in this country and I want, this morning, to reflect with you a little on what that means for Oxford and for its place in the world. I speak of Oxford’s place in the world advisedly, because my conviction has grown ever stronger over the last year that the future health and prosperity of Oxford as a great university is intimately connected to its international character, achievement, and ambition. I do not mean by this that we will become any less committed to nurturing and developing the academic potential of the most able young people in the UK. But it does mean, I believe, that unless we are able to continue to provide an academic environment and resources to compete with the best in the world, we will not be able to offer those students what they deserve and have rightly come to expect from a university with Oxford’s reputation. We successfully attract internationally recognised academics and researchers, who create the learning environment which attracts outstanding students to apply. So Oxford’s role in Britain and its place in the world are, I believe, deeply intertwined. If one were to suffer, the other would also be at risk.

It is easy to lose sight of just how international Oxford has become. I know from my own experience working in the US that many universities in North America have developed internationalisation programmes. By contrast, Oxford seems to be international in its very fabric. From the arrival of Emo of Friesland in 1190 to the hundreds of international students I met at their orientation events just last week, this university has a proud history of serious engagement with the wider world. More than a third of our students and academic staff come from overseas, hailing from over 140 different countries and territories. At the postgraduate level, the figure is even higher: six out of ten full-time graduate students come from outside the UK. Anyone who, like me, attended the student union international festival at the Examination Schools in February, will have received a graphic illustration of modern Oxford and its extraordinary range of artistic, cultural and—indeed—culinary traditions. And Oxford is not just a global magnet for outstanding academic talent, at staff as well as student level; it also attracts increasing amounts of research income from international sources. Last year the figure was about one pound in every five. Oxford is truly a university of the world, for the world.

When I spoke a moment ago of things being ‘up in the air’, I, might, I suppose, have been referring to the lot of the modern-day vice-chancellor, certainly to the lot of the vice-chancellor of a university with a worldwide reputation. And while it is the case that I have become happily rooted in the richly fertile academic soil of Oxford, that has not prevented me from spending a good deal of the last twelve months at about thirty-eight thousand feet above sea level. Oxford’s reputation goes before it and keeping up with it can be a demanding business. It is also an immensely rewarding one—not least in the opportunity it provides to meet Oxford alumni and to hear their accounts of what this University meant and continues to mean to them, often many years later. Our old members are one very real and valuable expression of Oxford in the world.

International travel also provides insight into another aspect of Oxford’s international character—its collaborations and fieldwork overseas. In the area of global health, for example, one can point to Oxford’s tropical medical research laboratories in Thailand, Vietnam and Kenya, and to other outposts in Laos, Indonesia and China. Projects like these are living examples of the practical difference Oxford can and does make to people’s lives in places where that help is so sorely needed.

But if travelling the globe on behalf of the University can cement a sense of positive achievement and of significant contribution to the common good, it also provides a powerful antidote to any tendency towards complacency. International competition in the world of higher education has never been fiercer. For obvious reasons, I have extensive first-hand knowledge of both the achievements and the continuing aspirations of our peer institutions in North America. But travel over the last year has also left me in no doubt that the competition is increasingly on a global, not just a transatlantic, scale. One only has to look at the higher education trends and ambitions in countries such as China and India to realise that resting on one’s laurels would mean only that they wither and die.

It may come as a relief to hear that I intend to resist the temptation this morning to offer a detailed statistical analysis of comparative levels of national investment in higher education. It is a sad fact, however, that the most recent figures put the share of our own national GDP at below the OECD average. This seems to me to be quite inadequate and seriously ill advised, given that higher education is one of the most important investments in the future that a country can make. It is an observation that holds true in my mind whatever the government of the day and with or without an economic downturn.

While on the subject of national investment in higher education, I do want to focus a bit on where the money comes from—in other words, private or public funds. It will not surprise you, I suspect, to learn that the country at the top of the OECD list is the United States, or that the majority of the money there is from private sources. Philanthropy in the United States has long underpinned the resource-rich environment of the upper reaches of American higher education. Much has been written and said about the need for us in the UK to learn from and follow the American example. I don’t necessarily dispute that much-repeated mantra but I would add that, having now had first-hand experience on both sides of the Atlantic, I have been genuinely impressed by what Oxford has already achieved. The Oxford Thinking campaign is fast approaching the total of £1bn across the collegiate University, a truly impressive sum to reach in little more than two years of the active phase of the campaign, and especially against a forbidding economic backdrop. Just two weeks ago we had the pleasure of formally launching the Blavatnik School of Government. This project will make possible the realisation of a long-cherished Oxford dream, thanks to the extraordinary generosity of Len Blavatnik who was able to join us for the launch. During the year we also benefited from a remarkable matched-funding initiative from James Martin, whose earlier generosity founded the Oxford Martin School, as it is newly renamed, that focuses on twenty-first-century global challenges. Not every gift, of course, can be transformative for the University in the way that these promise to be. But every gift regardless of size is received with genuine gratitude and a sense of humility. Each gift adds to the pool of resources from which the University seeks to secure the present and build the future. Each also represents a tangible vote of confidence in what Oxford has been and what it aspires to be.

It was that recently beatified Oxford don, John Henry Newman, who did much to shape our modern understanding of universities and their purpose. In his influential work, The Idea of a University, Newman wrote: ‘A University is a place... whether students come from every quarter for every kind of knowledge... a place for the communication and circulation of thought, by means of personal intercourse... It is a place where inquiry is pushed forward... discoveries verified and perfected... error exposed by the collision of mind with mind... and knowledge with knowledge.’ Formulated one hundred and fifty years ago, that remains an attractive template for what universities are all about. But it does not mean, of course, that all universities are the same. They come in many shapes and sizes and with diverse understandings of their particular place and role in the broader higher education landscape. One way in which universities have increasingly been categorised in recent decades is in relation to whether their primary focus is on teaching or on research. In many ways this is a false distinction. The great universities of the world flourish through their ability to link the progress of research with its impact on teaching: linked, in the words of Louis Pasteur, ‘as the fruit and the tree that bears it’. Those of us who toll in the groves of academe know full well that our research helps inform our teaching as we lay out to students the shifting boundaries of knowledge. And our teaching, probed and challenged by bright students, brings new perspective and direction to our research questions. For the students, whether graduate students in our libraries and laboratories or undergraduates in our classrooms and tutorials, there is no educational experience more profound than being taught by those who themselves are repositioning those intellectual boundaries. It is one of the great glories of Oxford that it aspires to do both its teaching and research to an exceptional standard.

Oxford research can stand comparison with the best in the world and a large part of the University’s international standing is built upon it. In recent times there has been eye-catching growth in Oxford’s research activity and numbers of both staff and income. But, in the current economic climate, funding for research in all areas of scholarship is threatened as rarely before. The Government’s recent invitation to do more research with fewer resources has received an understandably cool reception. At the same time a government commitment to focus resources on areas of research excellence may hold out more hope for universities of the calibre of Oxford.

But what then of Oxford as a teaching rather than research institution? It’s worth noting that teaching is something we do a great deal more of than our peer institutions in the United States. Oxford has more than twice as many full-time undergraduates, for example, as my old university, Yale, and the ratio isn’t vastly different in relation to Harvard. The teaching responsibilities of Oxford academics are significantly larger than those of their disciplinary peers at Yale and Harvard. But it is not just a matter of numbers. Teaching as an activity is surely where the historic understanding of the University has rested for much of its nine-hundred-year history. It is from Oxford’s collegiate structure and tutorial system, with the emphasis on individual and personalised learning that the public understanding of the distinctive quality and character of Oxford (and of Cambridge, too) has been formed. The excitement, challenge and—yes—sometimes the fear of the tutorial, are by all accounts something that stays with our students long after they have left the University. And of course the key ingredient in that experience are the tutors themselves, whose own research and deep knowledge of their subjects informs and shapes the student experience in both tutorials and other small group settings. It was Newman again who described evocatively the university as a ‘place where the professor becomes eloquent, and is a missionary and preacher, displaying his science in the most complete and most winning form, pouring it forth with the zeal of enthusiasm and lighting up his own love of it, in the breasts of his hearers.’ I’m particularly fond of that last line!

It is no secret that this form of education does not come cheap. The full cost of teaching an undergraduate student at Oxford is estimated at about £16,000 per year, which means that when you subtract the contribution made by tuition fees and public funding, the annual deficit per undergraduate every year of their Oxford career is about £8,000. You might say the size of the gap is matched only by the strength of our conviction that this is a system that works uniquely well. It is a conviction, tried, tested—and yes, refined—by long and productive experience. Given that we think it is the best way to nurture maturing minds, the challenge clearly is to make it more financially sustainable. Of course, we need to continue to examine whether we are doing it as cost-effectively as possible. The current review of teaching will help us to understand in a more complete way the full extent of our tutorial offering, with a view to ensuring that we use the resources as effectively as we can. But we also need to be extremely vigilant about maintaining its quality. The one thing that Oxford really cannot afford to do is to sacrifice excellence—this would be an utterly false economy. So we need to continue to use and develop other ways of plugging as well as narrowing the funding gap. One coping strategy—as the jargon has it—that we have been using is internal cross-subsidies. But this is something that carries its own price. The negative effects are already starting to show: in recurrent deficits, in the underfunding of Oxford’s infrastructure, and, most worryingly for our competitive position relative to our North American peers, in the scale of our endowment and our support for doctoral students. We should not fool ourselves that such a strategy is any kind of long-term cure and even as a palliative it is one that, as I have indicated, involves increasingly unacceptable side-effects.

I mentioned earlier that a large proportion of investment in higher education in the United States comes from private as opposed to public sources: two-thirds, in fact, compared with one-third in the UK. Here at Oxford it is clear that the generosity of our benefactors is going to play an increasingly important part in meeting the intense challenge of supporting our outstanding teaching. And that is true at graduate as well as undergraduate level. As an illustration of the high demand for graduate student places, the number of applications for graduate study has risen from 17,510 in 2009–10, to over 20,000 for those wishing to study in 2010–11. This year the University has launched a dedicated fund that will channel philanthropic support into developing more graduate scholarships for both UK and international students. The fund will augment initiatives already in place. It is vital that we are able to attract the best graduate students nationally and internationally in what is a growing and highly competitive market. In helping to develop their potential we are helping to nurture the outstanding teachers and researchers of the future.

When it comes to the funding of undergraduate teaching this is obviously an area where—to return to my point of departure in this speech—we are very much ‘up in the air’, though Lord Browne and his Independent Review of Higher Education Funding and Student Finance are due to land (one suspects with a bump) any day now, closely followed by the results of the government’s Comprehensive Spending Review. The air traffic controllers of higher education are going to need their wits about them. In Oxford’s own submissions to the Browne Review, we put forward a model which would not, we believe, involve additional burdens on the public purse in this period of austerity in the public finances. At the same time, we believe this model would secure vital investment for universities, while safeguarding educational excellence and student participation. Under the system we advocate, a university would be able to raise fees over time, in step with robust arrangements to ensure student affordability. Study would remain free at the point of access and, as now, graduates would not start to repay fees until an earnings threshold had been exceeded and then at a rate directly linked to income. Our proposals to the Browne Review have been based on the understanding that a funding structure that makes sense for Oxford, in allowing it to support its distinctive teaching and world competitiveness, must not damage other parts of the UK higher education sector. But, conversely, we are clear that any other structure that might find favour should not put at risk the ability of the leading universities in the UK to retain their pre-eminent positions.

It will be interesting and instructive to see at last what Lord Browne has made of it all; and possibly even more interesting to see what the politicians make of Lord Browne. As for timescale, the coalition government has recently indicated that a new Higher Education Bill is likely next autumn, with the target of implementing whatever reforms are agreed by the academic year 2012–13. Given all the uncertainty and unpredictability of the situation, it would be both foolhardy and ill advised for me to try to second guess what the higher education terrain will look like at ground level by then. In any case, institutions with a nine-hundred-year history need and expect to take a longer view. So returning to my aerial perspective for a moment may prove more productive and more useful. It seems to me highly improbable—all right then, inconceivable—that the funding gap in our teaching costs is going to be closed overnight. However, if our model or something like it were advocated by Browne and accepted by Parliament, then over time we could hope to travel progressively in that direction. We have made clear, as I have already indicated, that if we are going to come closer to covering the real costs of our teaching then this cannot be at the expense of our strong commitments on student access. We continue to expend huge amounts of time and effort and considerable amounts of money on these activities. No one who witnessed the extraordinary buzz of the UNIQ summer school programme, for example, could fail to be impressed by the strength of commitment on all sides—staff, volunteers, and potential students. Such projects are important because we believe that promoting equality of opportunity is fundamental to a civilised society. But we also run them out of self-interest. As a university, we aspire to be the best and to attract the most talented students whoever and wherever they are. Financial barriers to them are also barriers to our own aspirations and ambitions. If we are going to charge more, we need to help more.

So in future it seems to me that we are going to have to ensure that support—for student bursaries and scholarships, at both undergraduate and graduate level, and for teaching—plays a much bigger role in our fundraising activity. I have seen this at close quarters in the United States and my strong sense is that our well-wishers and benefactors, large and small, will be prepared to identify with and respond to such a priority here at Oxford. In the next few months, as the highly successful Oxford Thinking Campaign passes the £1bn milestone, it will be time to come together across the collegiate University to plan a new phase, a recallibration, of the Campaign: a recallibration that will set new aspirations for sustaining Oxford’s research and teaching pre-eminence in a changed financial landscape. This is something that aligns the very real interests of all parts of the collegiate University. And these are the ambitious goals that I know we can achieve if we, colleges and University, continue to work together.

Oxford is what it is because of the immense contributions of so many dedicated members of the academic and professional staff. Many of this year’s achievements have been commented on by the Public Orator in his Creweian Oration, with considerably more eloquence than I can manage. But because of the international theme of this Oration, I should here—invidious as it may be to give specific examples when so many are worthy of comment—make note of the recently-announced 2010 Lasker Award for Special Achievement to Professor Sir David Weatherall; the award of the Légion d’Honneur to Professor Vernon Bogdanor and to Professor Sir David King; and the inaugural Onassis International Prize in Humanities for Sir John Boardman. Our students, too, have excelled in a wide range of activities. Just one example of these is the Vice-Chancellor’s Civic Awards, made this year for the first time to six of our students for their activities ranging from local charities to national outreach work and to international climate change.

Although this has been an anxious year in terms of the public funding provided for Oxford’s museums, rewards and plaudits have continued to come the way of our collections. In the spring, the University received the Queen’s Anniversary Prize—for the seventh time in eight awarding rounds, and more often than any other institution—in recognition of the outstanding quality and public benefit of its museums, libraries and archives. Last autumn saw the final stages of the redevelopment, and the reopening by Her Majesty the Queen, of the Ashmolean Museum. The extension to the Ashmolean was nominated for the prestigious Stirling Prize of the Royal Institute of British Architects. The upper gallery of the Pitt Rivers Museum was reopened following refurbishment funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund, and the University’s Museum of Natural History celebrated its 150th year, an anniversary that has coincided with the retirement of its director, Professor Jim Kennedy, who has done so much for the Museum and who in particular has furthered its outreach and public access work. Finally, the new Bodleian Library has received planning permission for its forthcoming transformation into the Weston Library, and the new book storage facility for the Bodleian Libraries, located just outside Swindon, is to be opened in two days’ time.

I should like to thank publicly Dr Julie Maxton, who completes her term as Registrar in January and will take up a new role as Executive Director of the Royal Society. Dr Maxton has contributed much to the significant improvements within the administrative functions of the University over the past five years. She is to be succeeded by Professor Ewan McDermid, currently Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education, Academic Services and University Collections). There has been a number of changes of heads of house during or at the end of the past year. Sir Tim Lankester retired as President of Corpus Christi at the end of last Michaelmas Term, and has been succeeded by Professor Richard Cawardine. Professor Colin Bundy is succeeded by Sir David Watson as Principal of Green Templeton, and Mr Mark Damazer becomes Principal of St Peter’s, in succession to Professor Bernard Silverman. This year sees the retirement of no fewer than four heads of house who have served as Pro-Vice-Chancellors without portfolio: Dame Averil Cameron is succeeded as Warden of Keble by Sir Jonathan Phillips; Dame Jessica Rawson by Sir Martin Taylor as Warden of Merton; Dame Fiona Caldicott by Dr Alice Prochaska as Principal of Somerville; and Professor Paul Slack by Dr Nick Brown as Principal of Linacre. I thank all four for their immense help over the past year, and for their service to the University, in a range of duties spanning many years. Dame Fiona has been succeeded in her role as Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Personnel and Equality) by Dr Sally Mapstone. I should note also my immense gratitude to Professor Michael Earl, who, as acting Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Development and External Affairs), stayed longer and worked harder than any new vice-chancellor has a right to expect. He is succeeded by Professor Nick Rawlins. This year has also seen the retirement of many other distinguished colleagues who have contributed to the University’s intellectual life over the years: Professor Douglas Abraham, Professor of Statistical Mechanics; Dr Ruth Barnes; Dr Peter Beverley; Professor Vernon Bogdanor, Professor of Politics and Government; Professor Sir Mike Brady; BP Professor of Information Engineering; Dr Lucy Carpenter, Reader in Statistical Epidemiology; Dr Peter Clifford, Reader in Mathematical Statistics; Professor Francis Close, Professor of Theoretical Physics; Dr David Cram; Professor Robin Devenish, Professor of Physics; Professor Arthur Dexter, Professor of Engineering Science; Professor John Finnis, Professor of Law and Legal Philosophy; Dr Kenneth Fleming, former Head of the Medical Sciences Division; Dr Martin Francis; Professor Michael Glazer, Professor of Physics; Dr Paul Griffiths; Dr Ann Hackmann; Mr Philip Healy; Professor Anthony Heath, Professor of Sociology; Dr Tim Horder; Mrs Janet Howarth; Professor Harold Jaffe, Professor of Public Health; Professor Richard Jenkyns, Professor of the Classical Tradition; Professor Jacob Klein, Dr Lee’s Professor of Chemistry; Dr Mansur Lalljee; Dr Anthony Lemon; Professor Gary Lock, Professor of Archaeology (Computing and Statistical Methods); Dr Hugh Macmillan; Professor Henry McQuay, Nuffield Professor of Clinical Anaesthetics; Professor David Mant, Professor of General Practice; Mr Martin Matthews; Professor John Morris, Professor of Human Anatomy; Professor Andrew Neil, Professor of Clinical Epidemiology; Dr Michael Nicholson; Dr John Norbury; Professor John Ockendon, Professor of Mathematics; Professor David Pettifor, Isaac Wolfson Professor of Metallurgy; Dr Guo Ping; Professor Peter Renton, Professor of Physics; Mr Craig Raine; Professor Peter Raynes, Professor of Optoelectronic Engineering; Dr Julie Scott-Jackson; Ms Valerie Seagrave; Professor John Secor, Professor of Anaesthetics; Professor David Sherratt, Ivecagh Professor of Microbiology; Professor George Smith, Professor of Materials Science and George Kelley Reader; Dr Paul Smith, Reader in Engineering Science; Mr Bernard Sufrin; Professor John Sykes, Professor of Materials; Professor Kathy Sylvia, Professor of Educational Psychology; Dr Roger Tomlin; Dr Roger Trend; Dr Malcolm Vale; Professor Michael Vaughan-Lee, Professor of Mathematics; Professor Michael Vickers, Professor of Archaeology; Dr Roger Ward; Dr Helen Whitehouse; Mr Gavin Williams; and Professor Adrian Zuckereman, Professor of Civil Procedure. I mention with relief and eager anticipation of future Creweian Orations, that although Professor Jenkyns retires from his academic post, he continues as Public Orator.

A number of senior administrators have retired during the past year: Mr Roger Boning, formerly Director of Finance at OUP, from a second career as Head of Business Services and Projects; Ms Jennifer Wood as Director of Estates; Lady Kenny as Director of the Oxford University Society; Ms Lesley Sims as Head of the Planning and Resource Allocation Section; Dr Felicity Cooke as Head of the Equality and Diversity Unit; Mrs Sarah Wolfensohn as Head of Veterinary Services; and Ms Frances Barnwell, as Deputy Head of the Legal Services Office. In addition, I should note the retirement of Mr Martin Harrington after twenty-one years as editor of the Gazette. I understand that a number of vice-chancellors, in finalising their Orations, have had cause to be grateful for his skills.

I would also like to mention those other colleagues who have retired from valued administrative, library or service posts in the University. Dr Adrian Allsop, Ms Shirley Ashmore, Ms Sarah Ayers, Mr David Barnwell, Mrs Jennifer Beaton, Miss Alison Bird, Mrs Lorraine Bird, Ms Stella Brecknell, Mr Timothy Bruce, Mr Lou Burnard, Mrs Jean Clay, Mr Philip Cleary, Mr Geoff Clough, Mrs Grazyna Cooper, Mr Barry Cornelius, Mr Gordon Cunningham, Mr Peter Dobbs, Ms Christine Elliott, Mr Harry English, Ms Barbara Farrell, Mr Harry Fearnley, Mr Mike Field, Mrs Anne Flavell, Mr Ken Fowler, Mrs Wendy Fuggles, Mr Michael Gardner, Mr Richard Gaskell, Ms Ann Gavin, Dr Kit Goodwin-Bailey, Dr Anne Grocock, Mr Malcolm Harper, Mr Brian Harrison, Ms Kim Hart, Ms Gay Haskins, Mr Edwin Laming Macadam, Mr Raymond Leece, Mr Richard Lidwell, Ms Deborah Lisburne, Mrs Pilar McIlGillyCuddy, Ms Judith McIntyre, Mr Angus McDermid, Mr John Mason, Mrs Valerie Moar, Mr John Moffatt, Ms Carole Newbigging, Mrs Margaret Okole, Mr Alan Peters, Mr Derek Reed, Mr David Rischmiller, Mrs Katherine Rowland, Ms Katherine Salahi, Mr Richard Saxton, Mr Christopher Scotcher, Ms Julie Sidebotham, Miss Ann Stedman, Mr Keith Thomas, Mr David Tilley, Dr Nick West, Mrs Jennifer Williams and Mr Fred Wondre.

This year the University community has lost colleagues whose early deaths have been a source of great sadness: Dr Joan Austedt, Director of the Primary Care Education Research Group; Dr John Barnett, Reader in Physics; Professor Elizabeth Fallaize, former Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education) and Fellow of St John’s; and Mrs Katie Haines, of the Public Affairs Directorate. I note also with great regret the recent death of the former High Steward, Lord Bingham of Cornhill.

Finally, we pause to remember the contributions of those colleagues who have died in retirement over the past year: Mrs Doris Beyer, Dr Martin Birch, Miss Grace Briggs, Sir Ian Brownlie, Mr Eric Buckley, Mr Dennis Burden, Professor John Burrow, Dr Charles Caine, Dr John Clarke, Professor Jerry Cohen, The Revd Herbert Cowdrey, Professor Alex Crampton-Smith, Mr Ian Crombie, Dr Tony Crowle, Sir Marrack Goulding, Dr Roger Hay, Dr Ronald Hingley, Professor Anthony Hopwood, Mrs Mary Hulin, Mr Austin Jones, Mr George Jones, Dr Richard Kindersley, Dr Elizabeth Lennox, Professor Sir Hugh Lloyd-Jones, Dr Pamela Mackinnon, Mrs Christine Martin, Dr Patrick Martineau, Dr John Mason, Mr George Melson, Dr Bruce Mitchell, Baroness Park of Monmouth, Professor Jack Pole, Lord Quinton of Holywell, Dr Robin Robbins, Mr Jim Sharpe, Mr Winfred Siertsema, Mrs Ann Smart, Mr Graham Spindler, Mrs Pamela Taylor, Mr Pat Thompson, Mr Roger Van Noorden, Mr Stephen Wall and Professor Michael Williams.

I began this speech setting Oxford in a world context and I want to conclude it in the same way. As I have noted, my travels over the past twelve months as Vice-Chancellor have been extensive. Wherever I have gone, Oxford has needed no introduction. It is what marketing people would call ‘a global brand’ – perhaps the top global brand in higher education. But a brand is nothing without top quality content. I hope and believe that those who regulate and shape the future of our higher education environment in the UK understand what an extraordinary asset our great universities represent in the world. I also hope and believe they will wish to accompany and support us at Oxford in our particular mission. But whatever the surrounding context, my aim and my duty will remain to do everything I can to ensure that Oxford remains among the very best universities in the world: a centre combining outstanding research and outstanding teaching, where the best and brightest staff and students from here in the UK, and from all over the globe, can develop new understanding and knowledge for the benefit of all. The means may, and probably will, alter over time but, let none of us doubt, the end remains the same.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 29 October.

ESTABLISHMENT OF DEGREE OF MASTER OF COMPUTER SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

Explanatory Note
Following approval of the establishment of the new degree of Master of Computer Science and Philosophy, the consequential changes below are being made to the regulations concerning academic precedence and standing.

Text of Regulations
1 In regulation 2.1 of Council Regulations 22 of 2002 concerning academic precedence and standing (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 14 June 2005 and 11 October 2005, Vol. 135, p. 1174, 16 June 2005; Vol. 139, p. 1004, 30 April 2009), after 'Master of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer science' insert 'or Computer science and Philosophy'.

2 Ibid., after 'Bachelor of Arts, or Master of Biochemistry or Chemistry or Computer Science' insert 'or Computer Science and Philosophy'.

PERMANENT PRIVATE HALLS: GREYFRIARS

Explanatory Note
Following approval of the removal of Greyfriars from the list of Permanent Private Halls in Statute V, this change removes a reference to Greyfriars in a list of Permanent Private Halls licensed by the University.

18 October

Degree by Resolution

This content has been removed as it contains personal information protected under the Data Protection Act.

2 November 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 25 October, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space within the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

Under the terms on which the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter site was purchased, the University is required to construct a new Primary Care Trust (PCT) building to replace the Jericho Health Centre. The three-floor building proposed by the University will provide approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space per floor.

A resolution allocating one floor of this building to the Department of Public Health and Primary Care was passed by Congregation on 1 December 2009.

Following discussions with the PCT, it is clear that its space requirements will be met by one floor of the building. It is therefore proposed that one floor be allocated to the PCT.

It is proposed that the remaining floor be allocated to Oxford University Press.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to the Primary Care Trust;

(ii) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to Oxford University Press.

2 Voting on Resolution authorising use of the site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory and the allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building

Explanatory Note

The site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory, together with the parking area immediately in front of the building, is proposed as the location for a new Chemistry Research Laboratory. This new laboratory will provide improved teaching facilities and will achieve the Department’s long-standing objective of consolidating teaching and research activity currently split across three buildings.

In addition, the temporary allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building (formerly the Earth Sciences building) is proposed as part of the decant strategy for this project.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That the site of approximately 3,500 sq.m., which includes the site on which the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory currently stands, be allocated to the Department of Chemistry for the construction of a new building.

(ii) That approximately 2,765 sq.m. net useable space in the Robert Hooke Building be allocated to the Department of Chemistry on a temporary basis from 12 October 2010 until 30 September 2013.

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of a site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building

Explanatory Note

The Sciences Area masterplanning process identified a development site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building. This site is proposed as the location for a new building for the Department of Physics. The building, which would be occupied primarily by Theoretical Physics, will contribute towards the achievement of the long-term objective of consolidating the Department in a single location.

Text of Resolution

That the site of approximately 1,700 sq.m. located in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building be allocated to the Department of Physics for the construction of a new building.

Joint Division/Education Committee Review of the Department of International Development

TERMS OF REFERENCE FOR THE REVIEW

1 To review the quality of academic activities in the department, by reference to:
   • international standards of excellence;
   • action taken since the last review of the faculty/department;
   • planning statements at faculty/department and divisional level, and in the context of the University’s mission statement and corporate plan.

In particular:
   (a) the quality of the research of the faculty/department, including its participation in inter-departmental, inter-divisional and inter-disciplinary activities, its research profile and strategy, and future challenges and opportunities;
   (b) the quality of graduate programmes and their delivery and related issues, including:
      • access and admissions
      • curriculum design and programme structure
      • teaching, learning and assessment
      • the relationship between teaching and research
      • academic and pastoral support and guidance
      • the provision and use of learning resources (including staff resources)
      • specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies (including research degrees and research training and provision for part-time study)
   • relationships with colleges
   • quality assurance mechanisms;
   (c) the organisation of the faculty/department, its management structures and the relationship between the faculty/department and the Division, including such matters as:
      • strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plans and the University’s Corporate Plan)
      • academic and non-academic staff planning and recruitment
      • student number planning
      • terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issues
      • accommodation and future space needs
      • fundraising;
   (d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the faculty/department, and between the faculty/department and cognate subject areas and colleges to which it is linked in teaching and research.

2 To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, the faculty/department, and its financial strategy.

The review committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference. These should be sent to the secretary of the review committee, c/o Helen Passey (helen.passey@socsci.ox.ac.uk), Social Sciences Division, Hayes House, 75 George Street, Oxford OX1 2BQ, by Wednesday, 10 November.

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 (2)80548
Fax: 01865 (2)70178
Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 29 October.

(A) KELLOGG COLLEGE

Explanatory Note
This change in regulations widens the scope of those whom the college may present for admission as members of the University but, for those students not undertaking a degree course or the Postgraduate Certificate in Education, limits the number of students who may be presented in any one year.

Text of Regulations
In Council Regulations 10 of 2002, concerning Kellogg College (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, p. 1386, as amended on 25 July 2002, 29 May 2003 and 15 February 2007), delete existing regulation 1(1) and substitute:

‘(1) (a) Kellogg College may present for admission as members of the University the President and any Fellow of Kellogg College, if not a member of any college, society, Permanent Private Hall, or other institution designated by Council by regulation as being permitted to present candidates for matriculation, together with any person admitted to Kellogg College for the purpose of working for (i) a graduate degree course; (ii) the Postgraduate Certificate in Education; (iii) any other graduate university qualification; or (iv) other persons at the discretion of the Governing Body.

(b) In any one year, the college may present no more than six persons in total in categories (iii) and (iv) combined, as defined in paragraph (a) above.’

(B) APPOINTMENTS TO COMMITTEES

Explanatory Note
Currently, when a member of Council is appointed to serve in his or her capacity as a member of Council on a University committee, the regulations concerning the term are sometimes suspended to allow the Council member to serve on the committee in question for the remainder of his or her term on Council, instead of a full term or remainder of term, where the terms do not match. The change in regulations below provides an exception to the general rules concerning the filling of vacancies in those circumstances.

Text of Regulations
In regulation 11 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees (made by Council on 24 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1544, 5 July 2002), insert new paragraph (3) below:

‘(3) Where it is a condition of an appointment that the person appointed is a member of Council or another committee, the period of appointment shall coincide with the appointee’s known membership of the latter, provided that the period does not exceed the maximum term allowed.’

CORRIGENDA: THE HOLDING OF OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS AND THE CONDUCT OF OUTSIDE WORK

The following changes to Council Regulations 5 of 2004, published on 22 July (Gazette, Vol. 140, p. 1340), are being republished to correct some errors and to include a change to the Financial Regulations.

1 In Council Regulations 5 of 2004 concerning the holding of outside appointments and the conduct of outside work (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4703, 14 July 2004) delete regulations 1–8 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘1. (b) All university employees, with the exception of CUF lecturers, shall obtain approval from their head of department, faculty board chairman, or head of division as appropriate for the holding of any outside appointment (including directorships), and for undertaking other outside activities (including the holding of consultancies and directorships).

(2) CUF lecturers shall be subject to regulations 6–8 below in relation to the holding by them of executive directorships.

2. The following shall not count as outside appointments for this purpose. Such approval is not required for:

(I) the holding of the office of Proctor or Assessor;

(2) the holding of the office of examiner in any examination which is part of a degree course at any university;

(3) the holding of a commemorative lectureship or similar post in any university with the duty to give not more than eight lectures in any year, or clinical work, where this is already set out in the terms and conditions of employment of staff with clinical responsibilities;

(4) activities or responsibilities normally associated with, or arising from, scholarly work which do not involve a formal and continuing contract, including, for example, serving as a grant reviewer, or as a member of an editorial board, research advisory body, or government sponsored committee, or giving occasional guest lectures;

(5) activities or responsibilities which are neither paid nor require the commitment of time that might otherwise reasonably be expected to be devoted to university duties.

2. For the purpose of the regulations which follow, an executive directorship is one involving an active management role, whether or not including research in the company concerned.

43. Approval may be granted for outside work and the holding of outside appointments, without any deduction from salary, subject to the following conditions:

(I) the application shall be made on the appropriate form (available, together with a guidance note which includes information about the role which Oxford University Consulting can play in support of staff who wish to make their expertise available to outside bodies, on the university website),

(2) the employee’s line manager where relevant and head of department (or faculty board chairman in non-departmentally organised subjects) must sanction the application; where the employee is a head of department (or faculty board chairman), the head of division shall be responsible for granting this sanction;

(3) the employee must make a conflict of interest declaration on the application form;
(4) the total commitment to such outside work and appointments must not exceed thirty days in any calendar year (subject to regulation 5 below); where, exceptionally, consent is given under regulation 5 below for the holding of an executive directorship, the employee shall have an ongoing obligation to consult both the head of the department (or faculty board chairman in non-departmentally organised subjects) and the head of the division concerned if there is any indication that the thirty-day period may need to be extended in order that the employee might perform his or her statutory and common law duties as an executive director;

(5) terms and conditions which are proposed for and common law duties as an executive employee might perform his or her statutory obligations to consult both the head of the department, faculty board chairman (or faculty board chairman in non-departmentally organised subjects) and the head of the division concerned if there is any indication that the thirty-day period may need to be extended in order that the employee might perform his or her statutory and common law duties as an executive director;

(6) no employee of the University shall hold any executive directorship without the express consent of the Committee on Conflict of Interest, as well as of his or her head of department, faculty board chairman, or head of division as appropriate.

7. Consent to the holding of executive directorships may be given in the following circumstances:

(1) where the employee has satisfied the Committee on Conflict of Interest that the holding of an executive directorship is or will be necessary in order to satisfy the requirements of a recognised stock exchange for the listing of scientific research-based companies, and/or

(2) where the Committee on Conflict of Interest is satisfied that consent will be justified on other grounds, although it should be noted that such consent will only be given in exceptional cases.

8. If the Committee on Conflict of Interest gives consent under regulation 6 above, the employee may proceed with an application for approval under regulations 4-5 above.

2 In the Financial Regulations (Council Regulations 1 of 2010, Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4923, 25 June 2010), delete existing § 312 and substitute:

§ 312. Said Business School and Business Advisory Council

1. (1) In the light of the munificent benefaction of £20m by Mr Wafic Said (the Benefactor) for the University’s School of Management Studies, the school shall be named the Said Business School.

2. The school shall promote study and research within the field of Management Studies.

3. The academic direction and day-to-day management of the school shall be entirely and exclusively the responsibility of the University.

2. The academic direction and day-to-day management of the school shall be entirely and exclusively the responsibility of the University.

3. (1) The office of Dean of the School, who shall be called the Peter Moores Dean, shall be held for a period of five years, or such other period as Council may determine from time to time, and may be renewed for such periods thereafter.

(2) The appointment of the Dean shall be made by Council, on the recommendation of the Social Sciences Division, after consultation with the Peter Moores Foundation and with the approval of the Said Business School Foundation, such approval not to be unreasonably withheld.

4. (1) There shall be a School Board consisting of:

(a) a representative of the University appointed by the Vice-Chancellor;

(b) a representative of the Social Sciences Division appointed by the Head of the Social Sciences Division;

(c) the Chairman of the Business Advisory Council;

(d) the Peter Moores Dean (or the Head of Department, where appointed in lieu of the Peter Moores Dean);

(e) the Associate Dean of Executive Education;
(f) the Faculty Dean;
(g) the Chief Operating Officer;
(h)–(i) two members appointed by the Head of the Social Sciences Division, following consultation with the Chair of the Business Advisory Council, as representatives of the business and SBS alumni communities;
(j) a person appointed by the Benefactor or his successor in title;
(k)–(m) three members elected by the Faculty Forum from among its members.

2. The first chairman shall be appointed for an initial period of two years from amongst the members of the board by the Head of the Social Sciences Division, upon the recommendation of the board following its inaugural meeting. Thereafter, the board shall elect its own chairman for a period of three years. In no case shall the chairman be the Peter Moores Dean.

3. The period of office for appointed and elected members shall be three years. Appointed and elected members may be re-appointed or re-elected for one further term of office.

4. The board may co-opt up to two additional members, on condition that the board shall always ensure by the use of its power of co-optation that the overall range of activities and concerns is as fully represented within the total membership of the board as is reasonably practicable.

5. The broad functions of the board shall be to oversee, manage and regulate the School and OSBS Limited's strategy, budgets and senior appointments, and make such recommendations to the University as appropriate.

6. The board shall delegate the day-to-day running of the School to the Peter Moores Dean.

5. (1) There shall be a Business Advisory Council consisting of:

(a) the Vice-Chancellor;
(b) a person appointed by the Benefactor or his successor in title;
(c) the Peter Moores Dean of the Said Business School;
(d) the Associate Dean of Executive Education;
(e) the Faculty Dean;
(f) the Chief Operating Officer;

and not fewer than fifteen persons drawn from the international business community, appointed by Council after consultation with the Dean.

(2) The Business Advisory Council shall appoint a chairman from among its members.

(3) The period of office for appointed members shall be three years. Appointed members may be re-appointed for one further term of office.

(4) The functions of the Business Advisory Council shall be to advise the School Board on the needs of the business community in respect of business education, research, and training, corporate engagement and careers. The members of the Advisory Council will individually and collectively leverage their own knowledge and expertise to inform, challenge, and debate the School's strategy, as articulated by the School Board.

6. These regulations may be modified or replaced in whole or in part by further regulations or statutes, so long as the Trustees of the Said Business School Foundation shall first have approved the modification or replacement

(1) in the case of regulations 1–3 and 5–6 by a four-fifths majority; and
(2) in the case of regulation 4 by a simple majority.

Congregation 2 November 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 25 October, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space within the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

Under the terms on which the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter site was purchased, the University is required to construct a new Primary Care Trust (PCT) building to replace the Jericho Health Centre. The three-floor building proposed by the University will provide approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space per floor.

A resolution allocating one floor of this building to the Department of Public Health and Primary Care was passed by Congregation on 1 December 2009.

Following discussions with the PCT, it is clear that its space requirements will be met by one floor of the building. It is therefore proposed that one floor be allocated to the PCT.

It is proposed that the remaining floor be allocated to Oxford University Press.

Text of Resolution

(i) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to the Primary Care Trust;

(ii) That one floor (approximately 750 sq.m. net usable space) in the Primary Care Trust building to be constructed at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, be allocated to Oxford University Press.

2 Voting on Resolution authorising use of the site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory and the allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building

Explanatory Note

The site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory together with the parking area immediately in front of the building, is proposed as the location for a new Chemistry Research Laboratory. This new laboratory will provide improved teaching facilities and will achieve the Department’s long-standing objective of consolidating teaching and research activity currently split across three buildings.

In addition, the temporary allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building (formerly the Earth Sciences building) is proposed as part of the decant strategy for this project.

Text of Resolution

(i) That the site of approximately 1,700 sq.m., which includes the site on which the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory currently stands, be allocated to the Department of Chemistry for the construction of a new building.

(ii) That approximately 2,765 sq.m. net usable space in the Robert Hooke Building be allocated to the Department of Chemistry on a temporary basis from 12 October 2010 until 30 September 2013.

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of a site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building

Explanatory Note

The Sciences Area masterplanning process identified a development site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building. This site is proposed as the location for a new building for the Department of Physics. The building, which would be occupied primarily by Theoretical Physics, will contribute towards the achievement of the long-term objective of consolidating the Department in a single location.

Text of Resolution

That the site of approximately 1,700 sq.m. located in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building be allocated to the Department of Physics for the construction of a new building.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations
2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2004, Vol. 133, p. 160, as amended on 12 October 2004, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

General notice

Corrigendum: Advanced German Translation 2011

Please note the following change in examining conventions in the Final Honour School for examination Trinity term 2011 onwards.

PAPER XII: SPECIAL SUBJECTS

Advanced Translation

The course will be examined by a portfolio consisting of three exercises:

1. A translation of a text (or excerpt of a text) of 2,500–3,000 words in length, selected by the student; the text should be of a certain difficulty in order to present challenges to the translator; it is not a requirement that the text not be already translated, but where a text has already been translated, the student will be expected to comment on the justification for a new translation and to address in her/his introduction the different approach adopted. The selected texts will normally be in German, for translation into English. However, students of native-speaker competence in German may opt to translate from English into German. (40% of the mark for the paper).

2. An introduction of 2,000–2,500 words (excluding footnotes and bibliography) to the above translation, setting out the reasons for the selection of the text or excerpt in question together with an account of the approach adopted and detailing choices made in respect of specific identified problems and challenges. The purpose of the introduction will be to make transparent the decisions which lie behind the translation as submitted. Students will be encouraged to apply terminology learned in the course of the seminars for the paper and to incorporate such reference to their reading in translation theory as may be relevant to explaining their choices, but demonstration of knowledge of theories of translation is not the main object of the exercise. (30% of the mark for the paper).

3. A comparative analysis, 2,000–2,500 words in length (excluding footnotes and bibliography), of two different published translations (German–English) of the same source text (or excerpt of a text), to be supplied as a common exercise for all participating students by the special subject tutor in week 5 of the term during which the paper is being taught. The text or excerpt, given in two translations, should be long enough to give a clear impression of the characteristics of each translator’s approach and choices: ca. 3–5 pages. (30% of the mark for the paper).

The text for translation should not be by an author that forms the subject of an extended essay or that is offered as a prescribed author. The bibliography of the translation will include a list of existing translations of the text, or a statement that to the best knowledge of the student, there are no published translations of it. The course tutor will be permitted to read and comment on a draft of the introduction and a draft of the translation; the latter will normally have been presented for seminar discussion. As a formative exercise, a comparative analysis of two different translations of the same text (or excerpt), different from the one set for assessment, will be treated in one of the seminars for the paper in order to introduce techniques and terminology. The comparative analysis done for assessment will then be written without further input from the tutor. Examiners will have regard to accuracy and appropriateness of renderings in the translation, and the intellectual quality of the introduction and the comparative analysis.

Method of Assessment: B(3).

Visiting Professorships

Conferment and reconferment of the title of Visiting Professor

The Medical Sciences Board has conferred the title of Visiting Professor of Knowledge Management on Sir Muir Gray, MB ChB MD Glas, for a further period of five years from 1 January 2010.

Wellingtont Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publications (i.e. eight days before publication).
Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc.
VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl.
6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)
External advertisers £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length.
Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid
for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note: Payment can be made by card only
when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one

are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro,
please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication
at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers.
The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of
Congregation; employees of the University;
fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students,
Recognised Students, Visiting Students;
students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford
or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules,
regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements.
Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/
conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices,
Wellingtont Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate
that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances
of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

University of Oxford: Head of the Humanities Division

Head of the Humanities Division

The University is seeking an academic of distinction in any field of the Humanities to head this large, highly diverse and internationally renowned academic division. The priority for the next Head of Division will be to provide leadership and vision in taking forward the Division’s strategic agenda for research and teaching. This is a full-time senior management position within the University, with responsibility for academic and administrative leadership. It provides an exciting opportunity to shape the development of the Humanities at Oxford building on and extending its international reputation for research and teaching. The appointment will commence on 1 October 2011 or as soon as possible thereafter and will be for an initial period of five years.

Please see the further particulars at http://www.ox.ac.uk/about_the_university/jobs/ for more details about the post and for full instructions before making an application. Applications, including a covering letter and full CV, and naming three referees, should be received no later than Tuesday 30 November 2010, by Dr Gwen Booth, Personnel Officer, Senior Appointments at professorships@admin.ox.ac.uk. If you have a query about how to apply, please contact Mrs Elaine Eastgate at professorships@admin.ox.ac.uk or telephone: +44 (0) 1865 280189.

Applications are particularly welcome from women and black and minority ethnic candidates, who are under-represented in academic posts in Oxford.

The sustainability team provides advice, training and talks on such matters as building-related energy and water efficiency, waste minimisation, fairtrade and sustainable travel. The team coordinates a network of volunteer ‘eco reps’ and publishes an advisory e-bulletin, EcoFinance. Oxford Teaching Awards 2009–10

This year’s awards were announced at a reception in Rhodes House on Tuesday, 19 October, in the presence of the Vice-Chancellor who presented the winners with certificates. The citations below are extracts from the reports of the divisional or departmental bodies that judged the awards.

Humanities

This year, Humanities reserved the use of its awards to acknowledge excellence through the award of project grants.

Dr Alexandra da Costa
Faculty of English; St Hilda’s
Dr da Costa is a Research Fellow and Tutor in Medieval Literature. Her project will trial a short immersion course in medieval language and literature.

Dr Diane Purkiss and Dr Alexandra da Costa
Faculty of English; Keble and St Hilda’s
Dr Purkiss is Tutorial Fellow in English, and Dr da Costa is a Research Fellow and Tutor in Medieval Literature. Their project will run a series of seminars linking Middle English and Early Modern literature.

Dr Jan Fellerer
Faculty of Modern Languages (Sub-faculty of Russian); Wolfson
Dr Fellerer is a University Lecturer in Non-Russian Slavonic Languages. His project will further develop the course materials for the first year of the Russian ab initio course.

Dr Martyn Harry
Faculty of Music; St Anne’s and St Hilda’s
Dr Harry is University Lecturer in Music. His project will train students in the use of digital audio and music notation software.

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences has used its awards to acknowledge excellence in teaching both in established staff and in new teachers, and also to acknowledge the support of teaching. In addition, there is one project grant.

Professor Gavin Lowe
Computing Laboratory; St Catherine’s
Professor Lowe is a Professor of Computer Science. He is being recognised for the significant contribution he made to the department during his tenure as Director of Teaching; for designing and teaching a new course at undergraduate and Masters level, which has received excellent feedback; and for the development of the new degree in Computer Science and Philosophy.

Professor Stephen Pulman
Computing Laboratory; Somerville
Professor Pulman is Professor of Computational Linguistics. He is being recognised for his consistently excellent teaching as judged by student feedback and the popularity of his course, as well as his many valuable contributions to the organisation of teaching and examining.

Professor Michael Worthington
Department of Earth Sciences
Professor Worthington is a Senior Research Fellow. He is being recognised for his consistently excellent teaching, as judged by student feedback, and his many valuable contributions to the organisation of teaching and examining.

Dr Jane Frew
Department of Engineering
Dr Frew, the Deputy Administrator (Academic) in the Department, is being recognised for her support of teaching. For many years, she has played the lead role in the administration and smooth running of the Department’s courses. Her dedication, efficiency and attention to detail are exemplary. She has established an excellent relationship with staff and students alike, based on her approachable personality and her willingness always to help.

Professor Alison Noble
Department of Engineering: Wolfson
There have been two very important developments in graduate teaching in the Department in recent years: the establishment of the MSc in Biomedical Engineering, and the creation of an RCUK Centre for Doctoral Training in Healthcare Innovation. Professor Noble has played an absolutely central role in both of these developments, which have not only involved a great deal of hard work, but have also required imagination and flair in developing new teaching programmes.

Dr David Watkin
Department of Inorganic Chemistry
Dr Watkin is the Head of the Chemical Crystallography Laboratory. He is being recognised for his superb teaching style coupled with a remarkable ability to teach complex subjects such as crystallographic mathematics and least-square refinement. All his students hold him in the highest regard.
Dr John Murphy
Department of Materials; St Anne’s
Dr Murphy is a Royal Academy of Engineering Research Fellow, and all the teaching he does is wholly voluntary.
In recent years, he has contributed substantially to the teaching of the Department’s undergraduate programme covering a full range of duties more typical of a University Lecturer and Tutorial Fellow. His reflective approach to the development of his teaching skills is exemplary and it is clear from a wide range of feedback that he is an excellent teacher whose approach is greatly appreciated by the students and much valued by his academic colleagues.

Mrs Lyn Richmond
Department of Materials
Mrs Lyn Richmond, an outstanding member of the Department’s clerical support staff, is being recognised for her support of teaching. She provides superb support to the academic staff and to our undergraduates and research students and is always willing to go the extra mile. Comments about her include the following: ‘Lyn’s support and help for students and members of the Department is unparalleled... She knows everyone’s names, and exactly whom to contact if you need help... She is incredibly friendly and very supportive of students at times of stress such as when they are about to give a talk or hand in a thesis’ She makes an exceptional contribution to the support, organisation and planning for undergraduates and graduate students and is an excellent example of a good citizen.

Dr Andrew Dancer
Department of Mathematics; Jesus
Dr Dancer is nominated for the excellence of his undergraduate teaching, supported by evidence from lecture questionnaires from the whole year group, and for his significant contribution as coordinator of the Taught Course Centre.

Dr Richard Earl
Department of Mathematics; Worcester
Dr Earl is nominated by the mathematics undergraduates at Worcester for the excellence of his teaching; this is supported by excellent lecture questionnaire returns and very positive feedback on outreach activities.

Dr Jan Obloj
Department of Mathematics
Dr Obloj is nominated for the excellence of his graduate lectures on Mathematical Finance, in which he took on two hard courses at an early stage in his career; he is also nominated for his very positive input into graduate recruitment and training, including supervision and DPhil examining.

Dr Christoph Reisinger
Department of Mathematics; St Catherine’s
Dr Reisinger is nominated for the excellence of his graduate supervision at an early stage of his career, and for his substantial input into the curriculum redesign for the MSc in Mathematical Finance.

Mr Philippe Trinh
Department of Mathematics; Balliol
Mr Trinh, a doctoral research student, is being acknowledged for the excellence of his class teaching in Viscous Flow, where his enthusiasm, energy and attention to detail were highly appreciated. He was nominated both by his supervisor and by the Mathematics Undergraduate Representative Committee via the Joint Consultative Committee with Undergraduates. He is commended also for having undertaken an educational development course and writing a project on mathematical education.

Dr Mark Moloney
Department of Organic Chemistry; St Peter’s
Dr Moloney is being recognised for his outstanding commitment to teaching, obtaining a Diploma in Teaching to further his lecturing and teaching abilities. Over the last ten years he has had a heavy examining load as well as making a valuable contribution to the general running of the undergraduate course which has been changed twice during this time.

Professor David Manolopoulos
Department of Physical and Theoretical Chemistry; St Edmund Hall
Professor Manolopoulos is being recognised for his outstanding ability to teach and to explain clearly the difficult concepts of Maths and Physical Chemistry, as well as his ability to motivate his students.

Professor Stephen Blundell
Department of Physics; Mansfield
Professor Blundell achieves the highest standard in lecturing. His ability to communicate and make students fully understand material is second to none. He makes sure students leave the lectures with a full understanding of the subject, and the consequences of any theory fully explored. Professor Blundell is extremely motivational, and is also easily approachable and will spend time giving students complete explanations for any questions. From the feedback, 97% of students found his thermodynamics lectures useful.

Dr Anthony Dyson
Department of Physics
Dr Anthony Dyson is an outstanding demonstrator, taking time to help each student with their work and fully explaining the theory behind each practical class. In doing so, he makes the practicals enjoyable and easy to complete. Typically, he uses a variety of models to explain the experiments, and will then test the students’ understanding with a challenging question. He provides ‘what feels like a tutorial’ for each practical.

Professor Paul Ewart
Department of Physics; Worcester
Professor Paul Ewart has produced an exceptional set of lectures. Full of information and entertaining with the occasional joke, Professor Ewart managed to make the course understandable at the same time as interesting. Professor Ewart is particularly able to present seemingly complicated topics at a clear and concise level. He is known for the quality of his lecture notes; clear and informative, they provide students with exactly the right amount of material for understanding the subject, while providing an insight into the consequences of the theory.

Professor Nick Jelley
Department of Physics; Lincoln
This project was initiated through the accreditation of the BA and MPhys physics courses by the Institute of Physics. This grant will enable Professor Jelley and colleagues to undertake and develop two of the project ideas discussed with the accreditation panel. One project will be to develop ‘essay’ writing skills. Another project will be to develop a group project for the second-year cohort. It is envisaged that the group work will take the form of an intercollegiate competition where the second-year students will work (possibly in college groupings) on a presentation.

Dr Roosa Leimu
Department of Plant Sciences
Dr Leimu is employed as a departmental demonstrator to assist with the delivery of our Ecology courses. She has far exceeded our expectations in all areas of teaching, giving of her time unstintingly with regard to lectures, tutorial provision and examining. We wish to recognise her outstanding contribution.

Dr Nicolai Meinshausen
Department of Statistics; Somerville
Dr Meinshausen is being recognised for his teaching of Statistical Data Mining, a course taken both by fourth-year undergraduates and by MSc students. His well-structured presentation and interesting practical sessions, at an appropriate level for his varied audience, contributed to an excellent and very successful course.
Dr Matthias Winkel
Department of Statistics
Dr Winkel has been made an award by the divisional committee for his excellent teaching, particularly in the course in Actuarial Science which spans a number of different departments and is extremely well received by the students.

Dr Thomas Kemp
Department of Zoology; St John’s
Dr Kemp retired from a University Lectureship in September 2009 but agreed to continue teaching both his FHS courses in 2009-10 so there would not be a gap in provision. In his 38 years of lecturing in Oxford in Biological Sciences he has made a huge contribution to the leadership and development of undergraduate teaching as well as being an effective lecturer and tutor as evidenced by student feedback. He has been Course Organiser for various modules, developed and designed new courses, served as Chair of the Examinations Subcommittee for a number of years and was also co-chair of a committee that reviewed and radically redeveloped the Biological Sciences course.

Medical Sciences
Medical Sciences has made a Major Educator Award and Excellent Teacher awards to acknowledge excellence in teaching and the design and organisation of teaching, and it has also acknowledged excellence in the support of teaching. In addition, there is an award for a young teacher and researcher for his exceptional contributions to the educational development of research students.

Dr Richard Boyd
Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; Brasenose
Dr Boyd is being recognised with a Major Educator Award for his outstanding leadership of educational activity in the Medical Sciences Division over a period of five years, between 2003 and 2008. He has raised the profile of education within the most research-intensive division of the University, defined the aims of the division’s teaching, and put strategies in place to achieve those aims. Dr Boyd has always promoted an inclusive dialogue and a culture in which ideas about education are not limited by subject, departmental or divisional boundaries. This has encouraged joined-up thinking with regard to all aspects of education, bridging divides between pre-clinical and clinical medicine, promoting links with Psychology and Biochemistry, and sustaining relationships with NHS partners.

Dr Mark Wormald
Department of Biochemistry; Corpus Christi
Dr Wormald is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for a range of contributions he has made within his department. He has improved the Biochemistry admissions process to make it more transparent for both applicants and tutors, and is heavily involved in access initiatives and widening participation activities at departmental, college and university level. Dr Wormald also provides training and support for new teachers within the department, and plays a significant role in organising and teaching on the undergraduate Biochemistry course, receiving consistently high student feedback for the teaching he delivers.

Dr Tim Littlewood
Department of Clinical Haematology; Christ Church
Dr Littlewood is being recognised with an Excellent Teacher Award for his sustained commitment and enthusiasm for teaching. He successfully addresses the communication and ethical aspects of medicine, and is frequently cited by students as a role model for developing an open, honest and caring manner in a specialty where there is a frequent need to communicate intellectually complex and emotionally difficult information to patients.

Dr Daniel Bulte
Department of Clinical Neurology; Wolfson
Dr Bulte is being given an Excellent Teacher Award in recognition of his excellent teaching on, and development of, the Teaching Skills Stage 1 course ‘Preparation for Learning and Teaching at Oxford’. The course is offered collaboratively by the Medical Sciences Division and the Oxford Learning Institute, its aim being to introduce senior graduate students and research staff to theories of teaching and learning within the context of tuition at Oxford. Every course has consistently been rated as excellent by attendees.

Professor Brian Rogers
Department of Experimental Psychology; Pembroke
Professor Rogers is being recognised with an Excellent Teacher Award for the quality of his teaching and his commitment to students’ individual needs. Professor Rogers successfully communicates his enthusiasm for Experimental Psychology to students, and receives consistently positive student feedback. He also played a major role in the design and implementation of the course format in use today, and introduced a system that fully integrates tutorial provision with lecture courses, thereby ensuring equity of provision for undergraduates across the colleges.

Dr Simon Draper
The Jenner Institute, Nuffield Department of Medicine, Merton
Dr Draper is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for his supervision of DPhil students within the Jenner Institute of the Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine. Dr Draper gives students confidence in their abilities as researchers and consistently goes out of his way to make sure students receive the pastoral support they need as well as appropriate academic supervision. His scientific advice and feedback is consistently pragmatic and sound, but always delivered with encouragement.

Professor Herman Waldmann
Sir William Dunn School of Pathology; Lincoln
Professor Waldmann is receiving an Excellent Teacher award for his strong advocacy of undergraduate teaching within the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology over the last 16 years. As Head of Department, Professor Waldmann has ensured that all principal investigators share in undergraduate teaching and examination duties. He maintains a close interest in pathology teaching through his regular attendance at the departmental teaching committee, his impromptu visits to pathology practical classes, and the close attention he pays to student feedback forms, as well as his own active contribution to teaching.

Dr Helen Christian
Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St Anne’s
Dr Christian is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for her contributions to teaching Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences students. In particular, she has demonstrated successful leadership in bringing about innovations and improvements to histology (microscopic anatomy) classes, which have been very well received by students. She has also been praised for the clarity and thoroughness of her lectures, and for producing model hand-outs.

Professor Zoltan Molnar
Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St John’s
Professor Molnar is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for his contributions to lecturing and practical class teaching for Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences students, for which feedback is extremely positive. He has developed extensive e-learning materials to accompanied his classes, and has also demonstrated successful leadership in relation to the Neuroscience teaching cluster within his department. This has led to improvements in the mentoring of newly appointed academics and in the better distribution of teaching loads.

Dr Jan Schnupp
Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St Peter’s
Dr Schnupp is being recognised as an Excellent Teacher for the very positive feedback received on his teaching from both Physiological Sciences and Pre-clinical Medicine students, and for his overall contribution to the Physiological Sciences course. Dr Schnupp’s teaching focuses on basic neurological physiological mechanisms and on his major subject—audition. His lectures are cited as being clear and concise, interesting and enjoyable.

Dr Robert Wilkins
Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics; St Edmund Hall
Dr Wilkins is being given an Excellent Teacher Award in recognition of his contributions to lecturing and practical class teaching for Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences students, for which he regularly receives some of the highest student feedback scores. Dr Wilkins has also revised and developed areas of the syllabus for which he is responsible, and has improved the admissions process for Pre-clinical Medicine and Physiological Sciences to make it more robust and efficient. Additionally, he has been very active in the development of the Division’s new Biomedical Sciences course.

Miss Carlynn Cook
Clinical Medical School
Miss Cook is receiving a Learning Support award in particular recognition of her work as Elective Coordinator for the Medical School. Electives involve students from other medical schools in the UK and around the world coming to Oxford on placement as part of their studies, for several weeks or months at a time. Miss Cook has consistently exceeded the requirements of her role by developing provision for Elective students and by actively supporting them during their time at Oxford: she helps them to integrate into the academic and social community and to make the most of their experience here; she has produced a handbook specifically tailored to the needs of Elective students, and arranged for feedback mechanisms to help improve the programme. The measure of Miss Cook’s impact is that Elective students have such a positive experience at Oxford that they return to pursue further study and to work.

Mr Peter Ward
Department of Experimental Psychology
Mr Ward is receiving a Learning Support Award in recognition of his long-standing technical support of the undergraduate teaching laboratories within the Department of Experimental Psychology. He has exceeded the duties of his role in becoming a key member of the team organising and delivering the undergraduate experimental Psychology course. In particular, through the many revolutions in digital technology that have occurred during his service, which spans several decades, Mr Ward has played a leading role in assimilating, implementing, and overseeing computer applications both in practical teaching and in course administration. He has always carried out his duties with energy, commitment and skill, and his unassuming but outstanding readiness to master new technologies and adapt them to the needs of the course has earned the respect and gratitude of both students and teachers alike.

Miss Nicola Gregg
Department of Paediatrics
Miss Gregg is receiving a Learning Support Award for her exceptional coordination of the Paediatrics course, which forms part of Year 5 of the medical programme. The Paediatrics course is held in high regard within the Medical School and this success is in no small part attributable to Miss Gregg’s organisational skills: she demonstrates great flexibility in timetabling teaching to fit around consultants’ busy schedules whilst minimising disruption to students’ learning, and she goes the extra mile to ensure that students have a positive experience while on the course. She receives exceptional feedback from students and consultants alike and her enthusiasm and cheerfulness are personal attributes that allow her to carry out her duties so effectively. Miss Gregg is an invaluable and indispensable member of the Paediatrics teaching team.

Mrs Paula Savin
Department of Pharmacology
Mrs Savin is receiving a Learning Support Award in recognition of her long-standing and invaluable contribution to single-handedly supporting teaching activities within the Department of Pharmacology. Her role has expanded significantly during her tenure; however, Mrs Savin has remained exceptionally industrious throughout and always has the best interests of the department at heart. She also displays an outstanding balance of persuasion with diplomacy when interacting with academics and demonstrates continued commitment and dedication to student needs, particularly those from overseas.

Social Sciences

Social Sciences has acknowledged exceptional teaching by a DPhil student and used the remainder of its awards to acknowledge excellence through the award of project grants.

Mr Cavit Pakel
Department of Economics; University College
Mr Pakel is a DPhil student who teaches on the Year-1 Econometrics course of the MPhil in Economics. He is being recognised for his excellence in teaching as attested by student feedback and with the support of his department.

Professor James Edelman
Department of Law; Keble
Professor Edelman is Professor of the Law of Obligations and is the Faculty Mooting Officer. He is being recognised for his apposite and thoughtful project proposal to introduce moot court competitions as part of developing the Legal Research and Mooting Skills Programme. He is supported by the Faculty’s IT Training and Development Officer.

Dr Rachel Murphy
School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies/ Sociology; St Antony’s
Dr Murphy is being recognised for her project proposal to introduce a two-day workshop to promote the intellectual development of the School of Interdisciplinary Area Studies shared research methods course.

Dr Laura Rival
Queen Elizabeth House; Linacre
Dr Rival is being recognised for her team project to create a new option in ‘Development, Environment, and Health’, shared by Queen Elizabeth House, the Department of Public Health and the School of Geography and the Environment.

Department for Continuing Education

Continuing Education continues its practice of using the scheme to acknowledge excellence through the award of project grants.

Dr Clare Morgan
Kellogg
The Master of Studies degree in Creative Writing developed by Dr Morgan has an innovative and flexible course design that allows students from the UK and overseas to study together in residential periods in Oxford. Thanks to Dr Morgan’s industry and the challenging standards she sets, the Master’s degree has quickly become a prestigious award in the field, with impressively high student application rates and a growing cadre of graduates achieving prizes and distinctions for their published work. Dr Morgan’s project will increase the scope of the course by adding a focus on different genres of writing.

Dr Mark Smith, Dr Elizabeth Gemmill and Dr Adrienne Rosen
Kellogg

Dr Smith and his two colleagues, Dr Gemmill and Dr Rosen, oversee a rich and varied programme of courses in English Local and Social History, successfully leading the field in the use of online learning to extend the constituency of people who can study the subject at Oxford. Their project will build on this experience by developing a one-year undergraduate Certificate in Local and Family History, which will exploit to the full the Department for Continuing Education’s flexible and online learning capacity.

Bodleian Libraries

For teaching support.

Ms Louise Clarke
Social Science Library

Ms Louise Clarke is Librarian in Charge of the Social Science Library. She is being recognised for her focus on inter-disciplinary work, her dedicated effort providing a good example of what we hope all subject librarians aspire to.

Ms Nia Roberts
Health Care Libraries

Ms Nia Roberts is the Reader Services Librarian, Knowledge Centre, Health Care Libraries. She is being recognised for the wide range of activities undertaken in applying her teaching and learning skills.

Mr James Shaw with Mr Roger Mills, Mrs Juliet Ralph, Mr Matthew Searle, Mrs Lijija Ristic, Mrs Karine Barker and Ms Isabel McMann
Radcliffe Science Library

Mr James Shaw is a Team Leader at the Radcliffe Science Library. Mr Shaw and his colleagues are sharing a Team Award for their group effort, for enabling good library public relations, and for learning from each other and working in a non-traditional way to support teaching and learning.

OUCS OXTALENT Awards

OXTALENT Awards are given annually to acknowledge excellence in the use of technology in teaching and research. OXTALENT winners whose use of IT represented outstanding teaching or learning support are being recognised with Oxford Teaching Awards.

Dr Emma Smith
Faculty of English; Hertford

Dr Smith is being acknowledged for her use of podcasting. Last year, she released a series of six lectures, ‘Not Shakespeare: Elizabethan and Jacobean popular theatre’, introducing six plays from the Elizabethan and Jacobean theatre. She was completely self-sufficient in producing her podcasts: she records her lectures with her own equipment, creates her own mp3 files, and then uploads them to her WebLearn site. She provided a photograph to be used as an iTunes U album cover, and provided detailed descriptions of all her talks. This meant that the series could be added to iTunes U quickly, and it subsequently raced into the Oxford top ten, with 700 downloads a week at peak.

Mr Benjamin Spagnolo
Department of Law; Magdalen

Mr Spagnolo is a DPhil student who has recently started teaching. He is being acknowledged for his use of WebLearn to support a course or programme of study. To support undergraduate intercollegiate mooting competitions, he has developed an online system such as is used by many real courts. It enables students to receive and file information as ‘counsel’ and transmits the files appropriately between ‘counsel’ and judges. The system has allowed him to organise sixty courts, each with four counsel and a judge, and to ensure that the right documents go to the right people at the right time.

Dr Barbara Gabrys
Department of Materials

Dr Gabrys is being acknowledged for her use of technology in learning spaces. She has introduced the use of hand-held ‘clickers’ to enable students to respond directly to questions posed by a lecturer or seminar leader. This technology is aimed at raising individual participation when students are being taught in a group. Evaluation forms returned by the students showed that they enjoyed this kind of involvement in teaching sessions, and the answers that they made using the clickers showed that they were engaged and had understood the material being taught.

Dr Elizabeth Frazer and Dr Scott Peterson
Department of Politics; New College and Balliol

Dr Fraser and Dr Peterson are being acknowledged for their use of WebLearn to support a course or programme of study. In developing ‘WebLearn for teaching politics’ they have experimented with different tools to see what works best for communication, feedback and interaction. The chat room in particular proved very popular on the night of the recent general election and for the protracted discussions which followed.

Ms Victoria Brown and Miss Rachel Woodruff
Department of the History of Art

Ms Brown and Miss Woodruff are being acknowledged for their use of WebLearn to support a course or programme of study. They are using WebLearn as an interactive platform to engage students and enrich teaching both inside and outside the classroom. Their site allows for the creation of small communities of students within the History of Art to encourage communication, interaction and exchange in a ‘safe’ environment, whilst allowing space for cross-cohort communication and bringing the undergraduate and graduate communities together. As an image-orientated department, it was important for them to have a platform to utilise and promote the analogue and digital collections, which are an intrinsic part of the Department’s activities.

Changes in Regulations

Corrigendum: Use of the Facilities of the Bodleian Libraries

When changes were made to various regulations concerning the Bodleian Libraries (Gazette Vol. 140, p. 610, 18 February 2010), amendments to cross-references in one set of regulations were overlooked.

Corrigendum: Museum of the History of Science

When changes were made to Statute VIII, concerning libraries, museums and scientific collections, and the University Press (amended with effect from 2 March 2010, Gazette Vol. 140, p. 329, 3 December 2009), a consequential change to the regulations was overlooked.

Congregation 1 November

1 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space within the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

(For explanatory note and text of Resolution, see p. 111.)

2 Voting on Resolution authorising use of the site of the Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory and the allocation of space in the Robert Hooke Building

(For explanatory note and text of Resolution, see p. 111.)

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of a site in front of the Clarendon Laboratory Lindemann Building

Congregation 16 November 2 p.m.

Presentation of Vice-Chancellor’s Oration

The Oration delivered by the Vice-Chancellor on 5 October will be presented and may be discussed.

¶ The Oration has been published as Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4929.

Congregation 2 November 2 p.m.

¶ The meeting of Congregation is cancelled. The sole business comprises questions to which no opposition has been notified and in respect of which no request for adjournment has been received, and Mr Vice-Chancellor will accordingly declare the resolutions carried without a meeting under the provisions of Sect. 7(1) of Statute VI (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, p. 100).

Changes to Regulations

1. Education Committee
Proposal to amend the regulations governing the Postgraduate Diploma in Paediatric Infectious Diseases: communication from the Continuing Education Board

With immediate effect
In Examination Regulations 2010, p 1006
Delete from p.1040, l. 44 to p. 1042, l. 5 and insert:

1. The course will consist of lectures, written assignments and online Interactive case studies in the field of paediatric infectious disease. The course may be taken on a part-time basis over a period which shall normally be of two years’ duration but shall not exceed three years’ duration.

2. Every candidate must normally:

(a) Attend a residential course held annually in Oxford entitled “Infection and Immunity in Children”.

(b) Attend a second residential course held annually in Oxford entitled “Infection and Immunity in Children” (with a different course syllabus each year).

(c) Attend the residential PENTA-ESPID trí.Tr@inforPedHIV) training course in paediatric HIV medicine.

(d) Complete Online PENTA-ESPID trí.Tr@inforPedHIV)module in paediatric HIV medicine.

(e) Actively participate in seven ESPID Online Case Rounds.

(f) Actively participate in one four week PENTA-ESPID trí.Tr@inforPedHIV) Online Case Discussion in paediatric HIV medicine.

(g) Actively participate in six online multiple choice sessions.

3. Every candidate shall be required to satisfy the examiners in the following:

(a) Active participation, to the satisfaction of the Course Director, in all parts of the course.

(b) A written assignment consisting of either:

   i. An audit of clinical practice in paediatric infectious disease of no more than 4000 words.

   Or

   ii. A case study and literature review of no more than 4000 words.

   And

   iii. A short oral presentation.

(c) A written assignment consisting of either:

   i. A dissertation in an area of special interest of no more than 8000 words.

   Or

   ii. A project report describing a research study in the field of paediatric infectious diseases undertaken by the candidate of no more than 8000 words written in the style of a scientific paper with abstract, introduction/background, methods, results and conclusion.

(d) An examination consisting of multiple choice questions in paediatric infectious diseases covering the topics outlined in the schedule for training in paediatric infectious disease summarised below.

The assignments under 3(b) and 3(c) shall be forwarded to the examiners c/o Registry, Department of Continuing Education, 1 Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2J, for consideration by such date as the examiners shall determine and of which they shall notify candidates. The assessed work will, in normal circumstances, be submitted through an electronic submission system.

Candidates may be required to attend a viva voce examination at the end of the course of studies at the discretion of the examiners.

The examiners may award a distinction to candidates for the Postgraduate Diploma

6. A candidate who fails to satisfy the examiners in the assignments under 3(b) and 3(c) or the examination under 3(d) above may normally be permitted to resubmit work in respect of the part or parts of the examination which they have failed on not more than one occasion which shall normally be within one year of the original failure.'

Correction to Examination Regulations 2010:

Honour Moderations in Classical Archaeology and Ancient History

With immediate effect

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 73, delete II. 44-6 and substitute:

The prescribed plays are Acharnians and Lysistrata. Compulsory passages for comment will be set from these. Candidates will also be expected to be familiar with Frogs.

[Note: The syllabus prescribed in Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 73, was included in error, and will apply for the first time in the academic year 2011/12. The syllabus remains unchanged from the prescription in Examination Regulations 2009. Changes to Regulations]

MEDICAL SCIENCES BOARD

(a) Preliminary Examination in Biomedical Sciences

With effect from 1 October 2011 (for first examination in 2012)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 58, after I. 8 insert:
‘Biomedical Sciences

2 Ibid., p. 62, after I. 5 insert:
‘Biomedical Sciences
3rd’

3 Ibid., p. 105, after I. 19 insert:

‘Special Regulations for the Preliminary Examination in Biomedical Sciences’

A

1. The subjects of the Preliminary Examination in Biomedical Sciences shall be:

1. Systems
2. Cells, Molecules and Genes
3. Mathematics and Statistics
4. The syllabus, number of papers, and their format shall be as prescribed by regulation by the Medical Sciences Board.
5. A candidate shall be deemed to have passed the examination if he or she has satisfied the Moderators in all three subjects.
6. Candidates must offer all three subjects at one examination, provided that a candidate who has failed in one, two or all three subjects may offer that number of subjects again on one further occasion.
7. The Moderators may award a Distinction to candidates of special merit who have satisfied them in all three subjects at a single examination.

B

One written paper will be set in each subject. The duration of the written papers will be three hours for subjects 1 and 2, and two hours for subject 3.

All candidates shall be assessed as to their practical ability in coursework under the following provisions:

(a) The Course Director, or a deputy, shall make available to the Moderators, at the end of the fifth week of the term in which the examinations are held, evidence showing the extent and the standard to which each candidate has completed the prescribed coursework.

(b) Coursework cannot normally be retaken. Candidates whose attendance or performance is deemed unsatisfactory may be required by the Moderators to submit to further examination. Failure to satisfy the Moderators in the coursework associated with an examination paper will normally constitute failure of that examination paper.

Schedule

1. Systems
   a. Body: cardiovascular; respiratory; renal and gastrointestinal systems
   b. Brain: introduction to neuroscience; neuroanatomy overview; sensory; motor; neural development; learning and memory; sleep, dreams, and consciousness
   c. Behaviour: memory; language; awareness and attention; decision-making and rationality; disorders; social; genetics of diseases
2. Cells, Molecules and Genes
   a. Cells: cell division and cell cycle; inter- and intra-cellular signalling; excitable tissues; membrane transport; general principles of pharmacology
   b. Molecules: DNA/RNA structure; protein structure; lipids and membrane structure; energy metabolism
   c. Genes: fundamentals of genes; molecular biology techniques
3. Mathematics and Statistics
4. (b) Preliminary Examination in Biomedical Sciences

   3 Ibid., p. 153, after I. 11 insert:
   ‘Special Regulations for the Preliminary Examination in Psychology and Philosophy’

A

1. The subjects of the examination shall be:

1. (1) Neurophysiology
2. (2) Introduction to Psychology
3. (3) Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics
4. (4) Introduction to Psychology
2. A candidate shall be allowed to offer himself for examination in one, two, or three subjects.
3. A candidate shall be deemed to have passed the examination if he or she shall have satisfied the Moderators in three subjects.
4. In the case of candidates who have satisfied the Moderators in three subjects in a single examination the Moderators may award a Distinction to those of special merit.

B

1. (1) Neurophysiology

Excitable Tissues. Membrane potential,

Chemical Transmitters. Storage and release of transmitter. Removal and synthesis of transmitter. Selected drugs acting on the nervous system.

Afferent Mechanisms. Hearing. Vision. Somaesthetic system, including pain.

One three-hour paper will be set.

(2) Introduction to Philosophy

As specified for the Preliminary Examination for Philosophy, Politics, and Economics.

(3) Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics

This examination is intended to test the candidate’s understanding of the elements of probability theory and of the principles of statistics as applied to the design and analysis of surveys and experiments and to the interpretation of the results of such investigations. The topics below are more fully detailed in Definitions and Formulae with Statistical Tables for Elementary Statistics and Quantitative Methods Courses, which is prepared by the Department of Statistics. Copies of this will be available at the examination.

Descriptive statistics and statistical presentation using graphs and simple measures of central tendency and dispersion. Frequency distributions. Samples and populations. The addition and multiplication laws of probability; conditional probability and Bayes’ Rule. The binomial, Poisson and normal distributions: their properties and uses and the relationships between them. Statistical inference using sampling distributions, standard errors and confidence limits. Common uses of z, t, chi-square and F tests and nonparametric tests including tests of hypothesis for the mean, median or proportion of a single population or for the difference between two or more populations, goodness-of-fit tests and tests of difference between two population distributions.

The analysis of 2-way contingency tables using chi-square tests. Linear regression and correlation.

A comprehensive list of formulae together with statistical tables will be available at the examination.

One three-hour paper will be set.

(4) Introduction to Psychology

Methods and topics in: development; individual differences; social behaviour; animal behaviour; the neural basis of behaviour; perception; learning; memory; language; cognition; skills; abnormal behaviour.

One three-hour paper will be set.

For papers (3) and (4) only, examiners will permit the use of any hand-held pocket calculator subject to the conditions set out under the heading ‘Use of calculators in examinations’ in the Regulations for the Conduct of University Examinations.

2. Ibid., p. 171, after l. 50, insert on a new page:

‘SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF CELL AND SYSTEMS BIOLOGY’

A

1. The subject of the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology shall be all aspects of the scientific study of the development and functioning of living organisms with particular but not exclusive reference to mammals.

2. No candidate shall be admitted to examination in this school unless he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination.

3. The examination in this school shall be under the supervision of the Medical Sciences Board, which shall make regulations concerning it.

4. The examination in Cell and Systems Biology shall consist of two parts: Part I and Part II.

5. No candidate shall be admitted to the Part II examination in this school unless he or she has passed the Part I examination in this school.

6. The examination for Part I will take place during Week 0 or 1 in Trinity Term of the candidate’s second year. The examination for Part II will take place during Trinity Term of the candidate’s third year.

7. In addition to the form of examination prescribed below, candidates may be examined viva voce in either part of the examination.

8. Candidates for Part II may offer themselves for examination in one or more of the Supplementary Subjects. The Supplementary Subjects available in any year will be notified to students annually during Trinity Term. Account shall be taken of a candidate’s results in any subject in the candidate’s overall classification in the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology. Candidates awarded a pass in a Supplementary Subject examination may not retake the same Supplementary Subject examination.

B

PART I

1. Candidates will attend lectures and practicals in subjects totalling five full options from a list published in the University Gazette by Week 8 in Trinity Term in the year preceding the examination. The handbook for the course will specify which options are recommended to proceed to particular options in Part II.

2. Options offered from the Honour School of Experimental Psychology Part I will be examined by Papers I-IV as specified for that examination. Candidates will be expected to show knowledge of the appropriate components of the papers relating to their chosen option or options.

3. All other options will be examined by one-hour papers requiring short answers. Shorter papers will be set on half options. Candidates will be required to offer papers in each option or half option that they have chosen.

4. Candidates will be required to undertake practical work as specified in the course handbook which will constitute part of the examination. The Course Director, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners, at the end of Week 9 of Hilary Term in which the examinations are held, evidence showing the extent and the standard to which each candidate has completed the prescribed practical work. Practical work cannot normally be retaken. Candidates whose attendance or performance is deemed unsatisfactory may be required by the Examiners to submit to further examination. Failure to satisfy the Examiners in the practical work associated with an examination paper will normally constitute failure of that examination paper.

PART II

1. Each candidate must offer timed written examination papers and a project report based on a research project.

2. The options of the school shall be:

   A Neuroscience
   B Molecular Medicine
   C Myocardial, vascular and respiratory biology
   D Infection and Immunity
   E Signalling in health and disease as specified for the Honour School of Medical Sciences.

3. Each candidate must offer 4 written papers: Paper 1 for two chosen options, Paper 2, and Paper 3 as specified for the Honour School of Medical Sciences, except that Paper 1 for the second chosen option will require candidates to answer 2 questions in 2 hours.

3. The Research Project

   The research project will normally be carried out in the Trinity Term of the candidate's second year and the Michaelmas Term of the candidate's third year.

   (i) Form, subject and approval of the project

   The project shall consist of original experiments done by the candidate alone or in collaboration with others (where such collaboration is, for instance, needed to produce results in the time available).

   A list of potential supervisors and their research interests shall be published no later than the end of Week 6 of Hilary Term in the academic year preceding the examination. Candidates should normally discuss their intended project with the potential supervisor and their tutor before submitting a project outline to the course administrator no later than noon, Friday of Week 0 of Trinity Term of the academic year preceding the examination. Decision on the application shall be made by the Course Director, or a deputy, and communicated to candidates by Friday of Week 1 of the same term.

   (ii) Submission of the Project Report

   The length and format of the Project Report based on the project shall be according to guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board in Week 6 of Hilary Term of the academic year preceding the year of examination. Material in a candidate's Project Report must not be duplicated in any answer given in a written examination paper. Project Reports previously submitted for the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology may be resubmitted. No Project Report will be accepted if it has already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution.

   Project Reports (three copies) must be sent to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than noon on the Friday of Week 1 of Hilary Term in the academic year in which the candidate intends to take the examination. The copies shall be accompanied (in a separate sealed envelope) by a certificate signed by each candidate indicating that the research project is the candidate's own work and that the supervisor has commented on no more than the first draft of the Project Report. In the case of laboratory-based work that has been produced in collaboration, the certificate shall indicate the extent of the candidate's own contribution.

   In exceptional cases, where through unforeseen circumstances a laboratory-based project produces no useful results (i.e. not even negative or ambiguous results), the candidate may apply through his or her college to the Course Director, or a deputy, for permission to submit a concise review of the scientific context and the aims of the work that was attempted in place of the normal Project Report. Such an application must be accompanied by supporting evidence from the supervisor of the project. The concise review to be submitted in such circumstances should be comparable in length to the Report of a successful laboratory-based project and will be presented orally to the examiners and be examined viva voce in the usual way for a research project. The examiners will be advised that substantive results could not be produced.

   In all cases, the examiners shall obtain and consider a written report from each supervisor indicating the extent of the input made by the candidate to the outcome of the project and also any unforeseen difficulties associated with the project (e.g. unexpected technical issues or problems in the availability of materials, equipment, or literature or other published data).

   (iii) Oral Assessment of project-based written work

   In addition, each candidate shall make a brief oral presentation of their project to a group of two examiners (or examiners and assessors appointed to ensure an adequate representation of expertise), after which, the candidate shall be examined viva voce on the project. The form of the presentation to the examiners shall be specified in guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board.

4. The weighting of marks for the five exercises required of each candidate shall be 25 per cent for the Project Report based on the research project, 15 per cent for Papers 1, 2 and 3, except that Paper 1 for the second chosen option will carry 10 per cent of the marks. Marks carried forward from the Part I examination will account for the remaining 20 per cent for the candidate's overall result for the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology.

   (f) Honour School of Neuroscience

   With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first Part I examination in 2013, and first Part II examination in 2014)

   1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 65, after l. 33, insert:

   ‘Neuroscience

   Medical Sciences Division’

   2 Ibid., p. 380, after l. 14 insert on a new page:

   SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF NEUROSCIENCE

   A

   1. The subject of the Honour School of Neuroscience shall be all aspects of the scientific study of the nervous system.

   2. No candidate shall be admitted to examination in this school unless he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination.

   3. The examination in this school shall be under the supervision of the Medical Sciences Board, which shall make regulations concerning it.

   4. The examination in Neuroscience shall consist of two parts: Part I and Part II.

   5. No candidate shall be admitted to the Part II examination in this school unless he or she has passed the Part I examination in this school.

6. The examination for Part I will take place during Week 0 or 1 in Trinity Term of the candidate's second year. The examination for Part II will take place during Trinity Term of the candidate's third year.

7. In addition to the form of examination prescribed below, candidates may be examined viva voce in either part of the examination.

8. Candidates for Part II may offer themselves for examination in one or more of the Supplementary Subjects. The Supplementary Subjects available in any year will be notified to students annually during Trinity Term. Account shall be taken of a candidate's results in any such subject in the candidate's overall classification in the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology. Candidates awarded a pass in a Supplementary Subject examination may not retake the same Supplementary Subject examination.

PART I

1. Candidates will attend lectures and practicals in subjects totalling five full options from a list published in the University Gazette by Week 8 in Trinity Term in the year preceding the examination. The handbook for the course will specify which options are recommended to proceed to particular options in Part II.

2. Options offered from the Honour School of Experimental Psychology Part I will be examined by Papers I-V as specified for that examination. Candidates will be expected to show knowledge of the appropriate components of the papers relating to their chosen option or options.

3. All other options will be examined by one-hour papers requiring short answers. Shorter papers will be set on half options. Candidates will be required to offer papers in each option or half option that they have chosen.

4. Candidates will be required to undertake practical work as specified in the course handbook which will constitute part of the examination. The Course Director, or a deputy, shall make available to the Examiners, at the end of Week 9 of Hilary Term in which the examinations are held, evidence showing the extent and the standard to which each candidate has completed the prescribed practical work. Practical work cannot normally be retaken. Candidates whose attendance or performance is deemed unsatisfactory may be required by the Examiners to submit to further examination. Failure to satisfy the Examiners in the practical work associated with an examination paper will normally constitute failure of that examination paper.

PART II

1. Each candidate must offer timed written examination papers and a project report based on a research project.

2. Each candidate must offer 4 written papers: Paper I A, Neuroscience, and Paper 2 as specified for the Honour School of Medical Sciences; two advanced options as specified for the Honour School of Experimental Psychology Part II.

3. The Research Project

   The research project will normally be carried out in the Trinity Term of the candidate's second year and the Michaelmas Term of the candidate's third year. (i) Form, subject and approval of the project

   The project shall consist of original experiments done by the candidate alone or in collaboration with others (where such collaboration is, for instance, needed to produce results in the time available).

   A list of potential supervisors and their research interests shall be published no later than the end of Week 6 of Hilary Term in the academic year preceding the examination. Candidates should normally discuss their intended project with the potential supervisor and their tutor before submitting a project outline to the course administrator no later than noon, Friday of Week 0 of Trinity Term of the academic year preceding the examination. Decision on the application shall be made by the Course Director, or a deputy, and communicated to candidates by Friday of Week 1 of the same term.

   (ii) Submission of the Project Report

   The length and format of the Project Report based on the project shall be according to guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board in Week 6 of Hilary Term of the academic year preceding the year of examination. Material in a candidate's Project Report must not be duplicated in any answer given in a written examination paper. Project Reports previously submitted for the Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology may be resubmitted. No Project Report will be accepted if it has already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution.

   Project Reports (three copies) must be sent to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Cell and Systems Biology, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than noon on the Friday of Week 1 of Hilary Term in the academic year in which the candidate intends to take the examination. The copies shall be accompanied (in a separate sealed envelope) by a certificate signed by each candidate indicating that the research project is the candidate's own work and that the supervisor has commented on no more than the first draft of the Project Report. In the case of laboratory-based work that has been produced in collaboration, the certificate shall indicate the extent of the candidate's own contribution.

   In exceptional cases, where through unforeseen circumstances a laboratory-based project produces no useful results (i.e. not even negative or ambiguous results), the candidate may apply through his or her college to the Course Director, or a deputy, for permission to submit a concise review of the scientific context and the aims of the work that was attempted in place of the normal Project Report. Such an application must be accompanied by supporting evidence from the supervisor of the project. The concise review to be submitted in such circumstances should be comparable in length to the Report of a successful laboratory-based project and will be presented orally to the examiners and be examined viva voce in the usual way for a research project. The examiners will be advised that substantive results could not be produced.

   In all cases, the examiners shall obtain and consider a written report from each supervisor indicating the extent of the input made by the candidate to the outcome of the project and also any unforeseen difficulties associated with the project (e.g. unexpected technical issues or problems in the availability of materials, equipment, or literature or other published data).

   (iii) Oral Assessment of project-based written work

   In addition, each candidate shall make a brief oral presentation of their project to a group of two examiners (or examiners and assessors appointed to ensure an adequate representation of expertise), after which, the candidate shall be examined viva voce on the project. The form of the presentation to the examiners shall be specified in guidelines published by the Medical Sciences Board.

4. The weighting of marks for the five exercises required of each candidate shall be 25 per cent for the Project Report based on the research project and 55 per cent in total for the four written papers. Marks carried forward from the Part I examination will account for the remaining 20 per cent for the candidate’s overall result for the Honour School of Neuroscience.

(g) Honour School of Experimental Psychology

With immediate effect

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 249, l. 43 - l. 48, delete:

‘The Head of Department, or deputy, shall inform the examiners by the end of the noughth week of the Trinity Term in which the Part I examination is to be held (a) as to which candidates have failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work, and (b) as to which candidates have failed to satisfy the requirement to submit portfolios.’

and substitute:

‘The Head of Department or deputy shall inform the examiners by the end of Week 0 of the Trinity Term in which the Part I examination is to be held as to which candidates have (a) failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work or (b) failed to submit a portfolio.’

(h) Special Regulations for Philosophy in All Honour Schools Including Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first Part I examination in 2013, and first Part II examination in 2014)

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 408, after l. 16, insert new section:

‘Psychology and Philosophy

Candidates may take at most five subjects in Philosophy. All candidates must take eight subjects in total. Candidates may only take subjects in Psychology if they offer Psychology Parts I and II.

Candidates who take one subject in Philosophy may take any subject, except 121, in conformity with the General Regulations. Candidates who take two subjects in Philosophy must take at least one of 101, 102, 104, or 125. Those offering three or more Philosophy subjects must choose at least two from the above list. Their further subjects taken in Philosophy must be chosen in conformity with the General Regulations.’

(i) Honour School of Physiological Sciences

With effect from 1 October 2014

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 66, delete l. 6.

2 Ibid., delete from pp. 440 to 443.

(J) Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy

With effect from 1 October 2012 (for first Part I examination in 2013, and first Part II examination in 2014)

1 In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 66, after l. 6, insert:

‘Psychology and Philosophy
Medical Sciences Division and Faculty of Philosophy’

2 Ibid., p. 443, after l. 41 insert on a new page:

SPECIAL REGULATIONS FOR THE HONOUR SCHOOL OF PSYCHOLOGY AND PHILOSOPHY

A

1. All candidates shall be examined in Psychology and Philosophy.
2. No candidate shall be admitted to the examination in this school unless
(a) he or she has either passed or been exempted from the First Public Examination; and
(b) he or she has satisfied the Moderators for the Preliminary Examination in Psychology and Philosophy in the subject Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics or has passed the Qualifying Examination in Statistics for this school.

The Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology may dispense a candidate from the Qualifying Examination in Statistics in cases where it is clear that the candidate has reached an adequate standard in Statistics by virtue of previous study and qualification.

3. The examination shall consist of two parts. Part I shall consist of papers in Psychology. Part II shall consist of papers in Psychology and Philosophy.

4. No candidate shall be admitted for the Part II examination in this school unless he or she has passed the Part I examination.

6. The Examination Board shall comprise such of the Public Examiners in the Honour School of Experimental Psychology as may be required, and such examiners in Philosophy as are nominated by a committee of which the two elected members shall be appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Philosophy.

7. The examinations in this school shall be under the joint supervision of the Medical Sciences Board and the Philosophy Faculty Board which shall make regulations concerning them subject always to the preceding clauses of this sub-section.

Candidates must take five papers for Part I and six papers for Part II. The five papers for Psychology Part I shall count as two papers for the Final Honour School.

The examination for Psychology Part I shall be taken during Weeks 0 and 1 of Trinity Term of the candidate’s second year. The examination for Psychology Part II and for Philosophy shall be held during Trinity Term of the candidate’s third year. The dates of submission for assessed work are those prescribed in sections 2-3 below.

The subjects in Psychology shall be those specified in 2. Psychology below; and in Philosophy those listed in the Special Regulations for Philosophy in all Honour Schools including Philosophy.

Candidates may offer either a research project or a library dissertation in Psychology, or a thesis in Philosophy.

There are further restrictions on the choice of subjects and requirements to be satisfied which are set out below.

The highest honours can be obtained by excellence in either branch of the School, provided that the candidate has taken sufficient subjects in the branch and that adequate knowledge is shown in the other branch of examination.

Every candidate shall give notice to the Academic Registrar and Secretary of Faculties of all papers being offered not later than Friday in Week 8 of Michaelmas Full Term preceding the examination.

2. PSYCHOLOGY

PART I

1. The five written papers as specified for Part I of the Honour School of Experimental Psychology will be set:

Paper I Biological Bases of Behaviour
Component parts: (i) Cognitive Neuroscience, (ii) Behavioural Neuroscience.

Paper II Human Experimental Psychology I
Component parts: (i) Perception, (ii) Memory, Attention, and Information Processing.

Paper III Human Experimental Psychology II
Component parts: (i) Language and Cognition, (ii) Developmental Psychology.

Paper IV Social Psychology, and Individual Differences and Psychological Disorders.

Component parts: (i) Social Psychology, (ii) Individual Differences and Psychological Disorders.

Paper V Experimental Design and Statistics

Candidates will be required to answer essays and short answer questions in four of the eight components of Papers I-IV. All candidates are required to offer Paper V.

Candidates who wish to be deemed eligible for Graduate Basis of Registration (GBR) for the British Psychological Society (BPS) must ensure that the components they select provide coverage of all five of the areas defined in the GBR curriculum. In order to achieve this, candidates must offer one component from each of four areas, chosen from the five areas prescribed below:

I. Cognitive Neuroscience or Behavioural Neuroscience from Paper I 2. Perception; or Memory, Attention and Information Processing; or Language and Cognition from Papers II and III; 3. Developmental Psychology from Paper III; 4. Social Psychology from Paper IV; 5. Individual Differences and Psychological Disorders from Paper IV.

In addition, candidates must sit additional short answer questions covering one component from the remaining fifth area.

The other requirements for BPS Graduate Membership are set out in Part II below.

Qualifying Examination in Statistics

Any candidate who has not satisfied the Moderators for the Preliminary Examination for Psychology and Philosophy in the subject Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics must pass a Qualifying Examination in Statistics before being admitted for examination in the Honour School. The Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology shall have the capacity to dispense a candidate from the examination in cases where it is clear that an individual has reached an adequate standard by virtue of previous study and qualification.

The syllabus and paper set for the examination shall be that for the subject Introduction to Probability Theory and Statistics in the Preliminary Examination in Psychology and Philosophy.

For all papers in Psychology and for the Qualifying Examination in Statistics, the examiners will permit the use of any hand-held pocket calculator subject to the conditions set out under the heading 'Use of calculators in examinations' in the Regulations for the Conduct of University Examinations.

Practical work

Candidates will be required to undertake practical work, as specified by the Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology, and this will constitute a part of the examination. In exceptional circumstances the Proctors may dispense a candidate from the specified requirements on the recommendation of the Head of Department or deputy.

Candidates shall submit to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than Week 10 in Hilary Term preceding the term in which the Part I examination is to be held, portfolios containing reports of their practical work completed during their course of study for Part I. These portfolios shall be available to the examiners as a part of the examination. Each portfolio shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the candidate indicating that the portfolio submitted is the candidate's own work. This certificate must be submitted separately in a sealed envelope addressed to the Chairman of Examiners. Where the work submitted has been produced in collaboration, the candidates shall indicate the extent of their own contributions. Reports of practical work previously submitted for the Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy may be resubmitted but reports will not be accepted if they have already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution. The Head of Department or deputy shall inform the examiners by the end of Week 0 of the Trinity Term in which the Part I examination is to be held as to which candidates have (a) failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work or (b) failed to submit a portfolio. Candidates in category (a) will be deemed to have failed Paper V. Candidates in category (b) will be deemed to have failed the entire Part I examination. The Head of Department or deputy shall also make available records showing the extent to which candidates have adequately pursued a course of practical work. The examiners shall take this evidence into consideration along with evidence of unsatisfactory or distinguished performance in each portfolio of practical work.

A candidate who fails the Part I examination may retake the examination once only, in the Long Vacation of the same academic year as the original examination. The highest mark that can be awarded to a candidate retaking the examination is a Pass.

PART II

Candidates must offer six papers for Part II. At least one and at most three of the papers must be in Psychology, the others to be chosen from those available in Philosophy below. Candidates taking three papers in Psychology may offer a Research Project or a Library Dissertation in place of one of the three Psychology papers. Candidates may substitute one paper from the list below in place of one of the Psychology Advanced Options:

- Animal Behaviour
- General Linguistics
- Phonetics and phonology.

In order to be deemed eligible for Graduate Membership of the BPS, candidates must take at least two subjects in Part II Psychology.

Written papers, research project, and Library Dissertation:

Each candidate will be examined in either one, two or three areas of Psychology by means of one, two or three written papers, each of three hours or two written papers, each of three hours, and either a research project or a Library Dissertation. The written papers will be selected from the list of at least 12 options approved by the Medical Sciences Division and published at the Department of Experimental Psychology. A list of options will be posted in the Department of Experimental Psychology not later than noon on Friday of Week 5 of Hilary Term in the year preceding that in which the examination is taken.

Research Project

As specified for the Honour School of Experimental Psychology.

Library Dissertation

As specified for the Honour School of Experimental Psychology.

Candidates will be required to undertake practical work, as specified by the Head of the Department of Experimental Psychology, and this will constitute a part of the examination. In exceptional circumstances the Proctors may dispense a candidate from the specified requirements on the recommendation of the Head of Department or deputy. Candidates shall submit to the Chairman of Examiners, Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy, Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford, not later than Week 10 in the Hilary Term preceding the term in which the Part II examination is to be held, portfolios containing reports of their practical work. These portfolios shall be available to the examiners as part of the examination. Each portfolio shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the candidate indicating that the portfolio submitted is the candidate’s own work. This certificate must be submitted separately in a sealed envelope addressed to the Chairman of Examiners. Where the work submitted has been produced in collaboration, the candidates shall indicate the extent of their own contributions. Reports of practical work previously submitted for the Honour School of Psychology and Philosophy may be resubmitted but reports will not be accepted if they have already been submitted, wholly or substantially, for another Honour School or degree of this University, or for a degree of any other institution. The Head of Department or deputy shall inform the examiners by the end of Week 0 of the Trinity Term in which the Part II examination is to be held as to which candidates have failed to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work. Failure to satisfy the requirement to undertake practical work will result in the candidate’s final degree classification being lowered by one class. Candidates who fail to submit a portfolio will be deemed to have failed the entire Part II examination. The Head of Department or deputy shall also make available records showing the extent to which candidates have adequately pursued a course of practical work. The examiners shall take this evidence into consideration along with evidence of unsatisfactory or distinguished performance in each portfolio of practical work.

3. PHILOSOPHY

Candidates must satisfy both the General Regulations, and those relating specifically to Psychology and Philosophy in the Special Regulations for Philosophy in all Honour Schools including Philosophy.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements
General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.
Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.
2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.
3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.
4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.
5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.
Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.
For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.
Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/cond.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations
The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 19 November.

Establishment of Professorship of Informatics

Explanatory Note
These changes, made on the recommendation of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council, establish a Professorship of Informatics held in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division. The Professor will teach and undertake research in Informatics and Algorithms and will be on the establishment of the Computing Laboratory in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division.

Text of Regulations
1 In SCHEDULE A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, after ‘Chichele Professor of the History of War’ insert:
‘Professor of Informatics’.

2 In Sect III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 442, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461) insert new § 142 as follows and renumber existing § 142–56 as §143–57:

§142. Professor of Informatics
1. There shall be a Professor of Informatics, who shall undertake research in and shall lecture and give instruction in that subject and generally promote its study in the University.
2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:
(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in paragraph (2) of this regulation is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;
(2) the head of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf, or if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college;
(3) a person appointed by the governing body of the college specified in paragraph (2) of this regulation;
(4)–(5) two persons appointed by Council;
(6)–(9) four persons appointed by the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Board.
3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons ‘working in’ a Department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 25 November, by four members of the Faculty of Medicine other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college and department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 11 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November.

Vacancy: One

Dr D.F. Cram, Jesus MT 2011

One person elected by and from among the members of the Faculty of Linguistics, Philology and Phonetics. For further information on the Board, please contact the Secretary (lindsay.rudge@humanities.ox.ac.uk).
Board of the Faculty of Oriental Studies

Vacancy: One
Professor V.A. Wallace, Balliol MT 2011
One official member elected by and from among the members of the Faculty of Oriental Studies.

For further information on the Board, please contact the Secretary (oriental@admin.ox.ac.uk).

The following nomination has been received:

C.Z. Minkowski, AB PhD Harvard, MA Oxf, Fellow of Balliol, Faculty of Oriental Studies

Nominated by:

J. Finkin, St Cross, Oriental Studies
L. Flores, Pembroke, Oriental Studies
J. Kiaer, Hertford, Oriental Studies
G.P. Persiani, Oriental Studies

Notes on elections: 2 December

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons ‘working in’ a Department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the elections on 2 December, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 4 November.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form. Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 18 November.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 2 December.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University of Oxford Calendar, 2010–11.

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 2(80548
Fax: 01865 2(70178
Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)
External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.
For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.
Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.
Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.
Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.
2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.
3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.
4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.
5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.
For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

30 November

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 22 November, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to vote against, or propose an amendment to, the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

Voting on resolutions to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme

Text of Resolutions

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme (USS).

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education (EPF) which purports to explain ‘why changes are needed’ and that ‘the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members’; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/index.cfm?articleid=4598) criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/media/pdf/q/9/USS_statement2_Oct10.pdf) a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:
(i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;

(ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;

(iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;

(iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and

(v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution's response to USS and that they are published locally.

Congregation

2 December

Elections

- Council
- Humanities Divisional Board
- Board of the Faculty of Linguistics, Philology and Phonetics
- Board of the Faculty of Oriental Studies

Details are in ‘Elections’ section below.

Note on procedures in Congregation

Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 160, as amended on 12 October 2004, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
Consultative notice

Universities Superannuation Scheme (USS) Consultation

Following many months of discussions about changes to the USS pension scheme, a package of proposals put forward by the USS Joint Negotiating Committee has been accepted by the USS Trustee Board, subject to consultation with affected members and their representatives.

The consultation period runs from 20 October 2010 until 22 December 2010. During this period, USS members and those who are eligible to join USS, together with recognised employee representatives, have the opportunity to consider the proposed changes and provide their responses. Once the consultation period ends, the USS Trustee Board will consider all the comments received from affected members and their representatives before it decides on the final form of any changes.

To find out more about the proposed changes, and to provide your response, visit www.ussconsultation.co.uk. An information pack about the consultation has been distributed by post to those eligible to take part.

The proposed changes are supported by the Employers’ Pension Forum (EPF), the national body representing the employers, but opposed by the University and College Union (UCU), which represents scheme members. Further information is available on their respective websites at www.employerspensionsforum.co.uk and www.ucu.org.uk.

To ensure that the USS Trustees receive your views, you should use the USS online consultation at www.ussconsultation.co.uk. The University will also pass on to the USS Trustees the views put to it by the Oxford representatives of the UCU.

General notices

Guidelines for Leave for Academic Staff

Ref. nos. ATC/1, EMS/11

1. Approval of applications for leave

All applications for leave from normal academic duties (sabbatical leave, leave to hold research awards, special leave etc.) must be accompanied by a recommendation from the individual's department or faculty board, as appropriate, and must also be approved by the divisional board which now has the authority to grant leave.

2. Sabbatical leave and dispensation from CUF lecturing obligations

The University's regulations in respect of sabbatical leave and dispensation from CUF lecturing duties are set out in Council Regulations 4 of 2004. Application forms and advice on individuals' entitlement may be obtained from:

- Humanities—Ms Parsons, 34 St Giles’, tel.: (2)70559, email: muriel.parsons@humanities.ox.ac.uk
- Social Sciences Divisions and Continuing Education—Ms Hales, Hayes House, 75 George Street, tel.: (6)14857, email: michelle.hales@socsci.ox.ac.uk
- Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division—Ms Sutcliffe, 9 Parks Road, tel.: (2)82588, email: sheila.sutcliffe@admin.ox.ac.uk
- Medical Sciences Division—Ms Armitage, Medical Sciences Office, the John Radcliffe, tel.: (553) 21689, email: caroline.armitage@medsci.ox.ac.uk

Completed application forms (signed by the head of department where appropriate) should be returned to the head of the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division or the divisional contact shown above, as appropriate, for processing and for faculty board/divisional board approval.

3. Sabbatical leave in advance of entitlement

In some circumstances individuals may wish to take leave for purposes covered by the sabbatical leave scheme at a time when they do not have sufficient sabbatical entitlement. Such circumstances might include an unrepeatable opportunity to pursue academic interests, or a need to undertake fieldwork for a period exceeding one year. In such cases leave could be granted in whole or in part as sabbatical leave in advance of entitlement if a good academic case could be demonstrated.

4. Applications for leave to hold some public offices

Applications for leave to accept an appointment in the public service of national or international importance are normally granted by the divisional board, provided that:

- the purpose of the leave can be shown to be compatible with the academic interests of the department or faculty;
- the department or faculty (and the college in the case of joint appointments) supports the application and is able to cover the individual’s duties including examining and graduate supervision;
- it is clear that the individual intends to return to university service after the period of leave.

Applications for leave to hold such offices should be made to the divisional secretary, faculty board secretary or other officer as notified locally.

5. Applications for certain research awards

Applications to national bodies of prestigious and competitive research awards (e.g. British Academy Research Readerships and Senior Research Fellowships, AHRC Research Leave awards, EPSRC Senior or Advanced Fellowships) are normally granted by the divisional board provided that the department or faculty (and the college in the case of joint appointments) supports the application and that appropriate arrangements can be made to cover the individual's duties, including examining and graduate supervision, should the application be successful.

Applications for research awards by members of the Humanities Division must be notified to the appropriate divisional research facilitator at least one month before the funder’s deadline. The research facilitator will provide advice and support for the application, produce a budget and an OG (internal authorisation form required by Research Services) and will liaise with the Humanities Division and Research Services to obtain approval for the application. It is the responsibility of the applicant to obtain in advance the consent of the college (where appropriate) for any research leave application. Consent must be forwarded to the research facilitator and is required by Research Services as part of the internal checking and authorisation process. Note: all applications to outside bodies for research funding must be checked and authorised by Research Services. The AHRC will not accept applications directly from colleges; applications from CUF lecturers to that body can only be submitted via the relevant faculty.

6. Applications for special unpaid leave

Applications for leave other than those outlined above may be considered as applications for special unpaid leave. Applications may be considered if they meet one or both of the following criteria:

i) providing academic benefit to the University;

ii) providing a career development opportunity for the individual, hence aiding staff retention.

Activities under these criteria might include visiting another institution to study specialised laboratory techniques, taking up a visiting lectureship or visiting professorship at a prestigious department abroad, an extended period of fieldwork etc.

In all cases, it is essential that the consent of the college (where appropriate) and of the department/faculty board is obtained before an application is made to the divisional board. In considering applications, colleges and departments/faculty boards must be satisfied that the proposed leave fits with their overall plans and objectives, and it must be clear that the individual’s duties for the college and for the department/faculty, including examining and graduate supervision, can be covered satisfactorily. Divisional boards will consider applications both on their own merits and in the context of overall operational needs, and will not approve applications which are prejudicial to the teaching and research of the department/faculty or which are not supported by the applicant’s college.

Occasionally applications are made for leave to enable an individual to accept a fixed-term appointment in another academic institution (other than routine visiting appointments held during sabbatical leave). In such instances the college and the department/faculty board would need to be satisfied that the application was in line with their overall plans and objectives, as above, and that all operational requirements could be covered satisfactorily, before the application was put to the divisional board. Applicants would normally be expected to give a commitment to return to Oxford after the period of leave. It should be noted that the longer the appointment at the other institution, the less likely it is that leave will be granted.

Leave will not be granted, except in the most truly exceptional circumstances, to enable an individual to decide whether to accept a permanent post elsewhere.

It is recognised that some offers are made to individuals at short notice. Given the fact that all members of the academic staff have clear obligations to the University and to their college under the terms of their contracts, no such offer should be accepted without the support of the college and the department/faculty and the explicit approval of the divisional board. It is essential, therefore, that any prospect of such an offer is discussed, in confidence, with the college and with the divisional secretary or faculty board secretary at the earliest opportunity so as to avoid delays, and the possibility of refusal, if a firm offer is then made at very short notice.

All applications for special unpaid leave should be made to the divisional secretary, faculty board secretary or other officer as notified locally, who will also be able to advise on the likelihood of success of any application on the university side; the college's consent in appropriate cases must be obtained before an application is put to the divisional board.

7. Special paid leave

Divisions may, if they wish, with the concurrence of the college in relevant cases, grant additional paid leave outside sabbatical entitlement, funded from their own resources, to enable staff to undertake projects of mutual benefit to the individual and the University. Examples might include asking a member of staff to concentrate for a term wholly on considering revised teaching patterns across a whole subject area; or permitting a member of staff to teach at another university for a term to foster inter-institutional links, possibly as part of an exchange arrangement.

8. Stipendiary arrangements

Sabbatical leave and dispensation from CUF lecturing duties: leave will be granted with stipend (although it may be granted without stipend if taken for the purpose of holding a remunerated visiting appointment under 6 above).

Leave to hold a public office: leave will be granted without stipend.

Leave to hold a research award: the arrangements vary depending on the regulations governing the award, but it is normal for individuals holding such awards to continue to receive their usual university stipend, the awarding body either providing funds to make a replacement appointment or reimbursing the University for the individual’s salary costs.

Special leave: leave will normally be granted without stipend, but see 7 above.

9. Implications for future entitlement to sabbatical leave or dispensation from CUF lecturing duties

Special leave does not count as qualifying service for the purposes of calculating future entitlement to sabbatical leave or dispensation from CUF lecturing duties. However it does not count against an individual’s future entitlement. When special leave has been granted for the purposes of holding a public office or a research award, sabbatical leave is not normally granted in the period immediately preceding or following the period of special leave, although some flexibility may be exercised at the divisional board's discretion in respect of periods of special leave not exceeding one year, especially in connection with the holding of research awards.

St John’s College: Display of Laudian Vestments

The College intends to open to the public its collection of medieval vestments on Saturday, 27 November, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. The collection is displayed in the Garden Quadrangle and entrance, free of charge, will be via the Main Lodge.

Humanitas Programme

The Humanities Division is delighted to announce the launch of a new initiative for 2010/11: the Humanitas Programme. Humanitas is a series of Visiting Professorships at Oxford and Cambridge intended to bring leading practitioners and scholars to both universities to address major themes in the arts, social sciences and humanities. Created by Lord Weidenfeld, the Programme is managed and funded by the Institute for Strategic Dialogue with the support of a series of generous benefactors and administered by the Humanities Division in Oxford and the Centre for Research in the Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities (CRASSH) in Cambridge.

Humanitas will welcome some twenty Visiting Professors, who will be appointed for a given academic year and invited to deliver a series of lectures, followed by a related symposium, workshop or masterclass for graduate students.

The Programme will include the following fields:
- Architecture
- Chamber Music
- Chinese Studies
- Classical Music and Music Education
- Comparative European Literature
- Contemporary Art
- Diplomacy and Statecraft
- Drama
- Economic Thought
- Film/TV
- History of Art
- History of Ideas
- Interfaith Studies
- Media
- Museums, Galleries and Libraries
- Opera Studies
- Popular Music
- War Studies and Terrorism
- Women's Rights

The Humanities Division is delighted to welcome Athol Fugard, the leading South African playwright, director and actor, to Oxford as the first Humanitas Visiting Professor in Drama, generously sponsored by Eric Abraham.

Further information on the Humanitas Programme can be found at: http://www.humanities.ox.ac.uk/events/humanitas.

Recognition of Distinction

The following title has been conferred on behalf of the Recognition of Distinction Committee: Hambly, B.M., BSc Adelaide, PhD Camb, University Lecturer in Mathematics and Fellow of St Anne's, Professor of Mathematics with immediate effect.

Awards

Medical Sciences

The Osler Memorial Medal 2010 for the Oxford medical graduate who, in the opinion of the Board of Awarders, has made the most valuable contribution to the science, art or literature of medicine has been awarded to: David A. Warrell, DM, DSc, FRCP, FRCPE, FMedSci, Honorary Fellow of St Cross.

Electoral Boards

Composition of an Electoral Board

The composition of the electoral board to the post below, proceedings to fill which are currently in progress, has been revised and is now as follows:

EP Abraham Professorship of Chemical Pathology

Appointed by

The Master of St Catherine's
Mr Vice-Chancellor
The Rector of Lincoln ex officio
Council
Professor Sir John Bell Council
Professor J. Thomas
Professor H. Bayley Medical Sciences Divisional Board
Professor N. Proudfoot Medical Sciences Divisional Board
Professor C. Marshall Medical Sciences Divisional Board
Professor H. Waldmann Medical Sciences Divisional Board
Professor J. Raf Lincoln

Musical Events

Kellogg College

Fundraising piano and viola recital, Saturday, 20 November, 7.30 p.m., Kellogg College.

Programme includes piano works by Schumann, Mendelssohn and Chopin; Berlioz's Harold in Itlay arranged for viola and piano by Liszt. Tickets £7, £5 students, including glass of wine. Funds raised go to the Student Hardship Fund. All welcome. Further information and tickets: Jitka Fort on 01865 612014 or jitka.fort@kellogg.ox.ac.uk.

Exhibitions

Museum of Natural History and Pitt Rivers Museum: Christmas Light Night

In association with Oxford City Christmas Light Night, 26 November, 18.00-22.00, free.

Oxford University Museum of Natural History and Pitt Rivers Museum will be continuing their series of magical evening events. Explore the Natural History collections by lantern light, with live jazz, blues and choral music to welcome the festive season. Experience the Pitt Rivers by torchlight accompanied by sounds from around the world (timed tickets available on the night). Mask making and festive refreshments (bar closes at 21.30).

University staff and students and members of the general public welcome to attend. No advance booking or charge and seats allocated on a first-come, first-served basis. Further information on the Humanitas Programme at: http://www.humanitas.ox.ac.uk/events/humanitas.

- Thu., 11 Nov., 6 p.m., Simpkins Lee Lecture Theatre, Lady Margaret Hall: Playwriting – The Process. Athol Fugard in conversation with Jez Butterworth and Rebecca Lenkiewicz.
- Fri., 12 Nov., 5 p.m., Gulbenkian Theatre, St Cross Building: Athol Fugard in conversation with Janet Suzman and Dr John Kani.
- Sat., 13 Nov., 5 p.m., Simpkins Lee Lecture Theatre, Lady Margaret Hall: Keynote Lecture: ‘Defining Moments’.
- Sat., 13 Nov., 6.30 p.m., Talbot Hall, Lady Margaret Hall: reception.

Theology

IAN RAMSEY CENTRE SEMINAR

Professor Nidhal Guessoum, Professor of Astrophysics, American University of Sharjah, United Arab Emirates, will deliver the IAN Ramsey Centre seminar at 8.30 p.m. on Thursday, 18 November, in the Old Dining Room, Harris Manchester College. Free and open to the public. Drinks reception 8.15 p.m.

Subject: ‘Reconciling Islam and modern science: from schizophrenia to harmony.’

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

Mathematical Institute

Professor Luis Caffarelli, Texas, will lecture at 4.30 p.m. on Friday, 12 November, in Lecture Theatre 2, the Mathematical Institute.

Subject: ‘Non linear problems involving anomalous diffusion.’

Medical Sciences

Special Grand Round Seminar

Geoffrey Gurtner, Stanford, is scheduled to deliver a lecture at 8 a.m. on Friday, 19 November, Lecture Theatre 1, John Radcliffe Hospital.

Subject: ‘Developing New Medical Technologies: The Essential Role of the Surgeon-Scientist.’

Institutes, Centres and Museums

Bodleian Libraries

WORKSHOPS IN INFORMATION SKILLS AND ELECTRONIC RESEARCH (WISER)

The following workshops will be held on the days shown in the OUCS, 13 Banbury Road. Further details may be found at www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/services/training/wiser/.

- Angela Carritt
  - Wednesday, 17 November, 1–2.30 p.m.: WISER: Technology Tools – Keeping Up To Date with Research
  - Hilla Wait
  - Wednesday, 17 November, 3–4 p.m.: WISER: E-Books
  - Isabel McMann and Laura Wilkinson
  - Wednesday, 17 November, 4–5 p.m.: WISER: E-Book Readers

- Angela Carritt, Penny Roberts and Kerry Webb
  - Friday, 19 November, 9.15–10.15 a.m.: WISER: Finding Stuff – Books etc on SOLO
  - Angela Carritt, Penny Roberts and Kerry Webb
  - Friday, 19 November, 10.15–11.15 a.m.: WISER: Finding Stuff – Journal Articles

Lady Margaret Hall

AMANDA FOREMAN LECTURE

Amanda Foreman, Lady Margaret Hall alumna, will discuss her latest work A World on Fire: An Epic History of Two Nations Divided, at 5.15 p.m. on Friday, 19 November, in the Simpkins Lee Lecture Theatre, Lady Margaret Hall. All welcome. Please contact: development@lhm.ox.ac.uk.

Subject: ‘Tales of heroism, tales of terror: the British in the American Civil War.’
Examinations and Boards

St John’s College Research Centre Legalism Seminar Series

Patrick Lantschner, Christ Church, Oxford, will deliver the St John’s College Research Centre Legalism Seminar at 4.30 p.m. on Tuesday, 16 November, in the Research Centre Seminar Room, 45 St Giles’. Tea served from 4 p.m. For further information, please contact Judith Scheele at: judith.scheele@all-souls.ox.ac.uk.

Subject: ‘Justice contested and affirmed: the political order and conflicts in Late Medieval European cities.’

Other Groups

Oxford Asian Textile Group

Mary Dusenbury will lecture at 5.45 p.m. on Wednesday, 17 November, in the Pauling Centre, 58 Banbury Road. Visitors welcome. £2.

Subject: ‘Ikat Weaving in Central Asia—history and contemporary production.’

Oxford Intelligence Group

The following lecture will be given on Monday, 22 November 5.30 p.m. in the Large Lecture Room, Nuffield College. The seminar will be given by Chris Pocock, the recognised authority on the U-2 programme, and the first of only two foreign civilians to have flown in the aircraft.

Enquiries to Claire Bunce (email: claire.bunce@nuffield.ox.ac.uk).

Subject: ‘Mayday 1960—The U-2 Spy Flights over the Soviet Union 1956-1960.’

Changes to Regulations

Elections

Contested Election

MEDICAL SCIENCES DIVISIONAL BOARD

One person from among the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies, of whom there shall be no more than one from each of the Department of Biochemistry, the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics, the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Experimental Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies.

Professor J.N.P. Rawlins, Wolfson MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

O.J. Braddock, MA PhD Camb, MA Ox, Fellow of Magdalen, Department of Experimental Psychology, Faculty of Psychological Studies

Nominated by:

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

B.J. Rogers, Pembroke, Psychological Studies

I. Tracey, Pembroke, Anaesthetics

N. Yeung, University College, Experimental Psychology

Candidate statement:

I have been Head of Experimental Psychology since 2001, actively engaged in divisional governance on the Planning and Resources Committee (2001-2006), Educational Strategy Group (2005), chairing the Review of Physiological Sciences FHS (2006), and a Board member (2008-2010).

The Division works in a complex and demanding context, requiring relationships with the NHS as well as with other Divisions and Colleges, and needing to sustain excellence in diverse research and teaching areas. I would seek a balanced integration of these areas in Board discussions, keeping in view the diversity of the Division’s activities. I believe the defining characteristic of a University is the synergy between research and undergraduate and graduate teaching, each activity gaining strength from the others.

I would be the only member of Experimental Psychology on the Board, bringing a special interest in neuroscience (a key strategic area for the Division but not strongly represented on the current Board), and in educational aspects of the Division’s mission going beyond preclinical and clinical medicine. However, my record on the Board will show that I take a broad and collegial view in promoting the interests of the Division as a whole.

The Division derives strength from internal and external interdisciplinary links. I greatly value such links in my own research (with Paediatrics) and between Experimental Psychology and other basic and clinical sciences, social sciences and humanities. I would aim to promote such links that allow the Division to benefit fully from Oxford’s range of intellectual strengths.

Mark S.P. Sansom, MA DPhil Ox, Student of Christ Church, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Biochemistry

Nominated by:

I.D. Campbell, St John’s, Biochemistry

R.A. Dwek, Exeter, Biochemistry

J.A. Hodgkin, Keble, Biochemistry

E.J.C. Mellor, Queen’s, Biochemistry

K.A. Nasmyth, Trinity, Biochemistry

D.J. Sherratt, Linacre, Biochemistry

Candidate statement:

Qualifications. I have held a joint appointment in Oxford for 19 years with a U.L in Molecular Biophysics, and a Studentship in Biochemistry at Christ Church. I have undertaken a range of administrative duties. At University level I chaired the Oxford Supercomputing Centre (OSC), and I have been actively involved in (and currently co-direct) the Wellcome Trust Structural Biology graduate programme. Within Biochemistry, I have acted as head of the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics for one year, and currently head the Research Laboratory of Molecular and Systems Biochemistry, one of five groupings within the Department responsible for research strategy and space planning. Within Christ Church I have held a number of posts, including Tutor for Graduates. Nationally, I have chaired the HECToR Science Board, responsible for the procurement of the UK national supercomputer. I therefore appreciate the competing academic and financial pressures within the University at all levels, and have wide experience of the development of large scale resources and training across the physical/biomedical sciences interface.

Reasons. There is a need to fully integrate research and teaching (both graduate and undergraduate) in order to maintain Oxford medical sciences as world-leading. During a period of transitions in funding models, we need to develop a strategy that supports research spanning from the fundamental to the translational. Within this context, we need to maintain high academic standards whilst developing innovative and well-resourced models of graduate student training.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday 28 October 2010.

The following members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election: members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies. Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 280548
Fax: 01865 2870178
Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)

External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note: Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the web-site. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency: If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgment will be e-mailed automatically to the e-mail address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgment does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/cond.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Council and Main Committees

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 3 December.

(A) PROPERTY MANAGEMENT SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE PLANNING AND RESOURCE ALLOCATION COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note
In accordance with recommendations made in the Report of the Property Working Party, approved by Council in March 2010, the following changes in regulations establish a Property Management Subcommittee. The Subcommittee will report to PRAC and will have responsibility for the graduate accommodation, professorial and other residential accommodation, together with other parts of the Corporate Estate and let properties held in the Capital Fund not held for pure investment purposes, for which there may be a future functional use. A new Estates Committee, not established by regulation, will advise and report to the Investment Committee on the investment of rural and urban investments held by the University. An amendment to the Financial Regulations is also required to reflect the fact that the new subcommittee will have delegated authority in the context of the management of accommodation for sales and purchases involving amounts of up to £2m that are unrelated to capital projects.

Text of Regulations
1 In Part 3 of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 (Supplement (I) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, p. 230), insert new regulations 3.97–3.100 below and renumber existing regulations 3.97–3.140 as 3.101–3.144:

Property Management Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee

3.97. The Property Management Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee shall consist of:

(1) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), who shall chair the committee;
(2) the Registrar;
(3) the Director of Finance.

3.98. The committee shall:

(1) supervise the management of accommodation held by the University, subject to a delegated authority level for sales and purchases involving amounts of up to £2m that are unrelated to capital projects;
(2) establish and keep under review strategy, guidelines and policies concerning the matters under (1) above;
(3) review and approve budgets and end of year accounts;
(4) approve annual rent increases for graduate accommodation;
(5) report matters under (1)–(4) above as appropriate, and submit an annual report, to the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council.

3.99. Accommodation held by the University shall be defined as graduate accommodation, professorial and other residential accommodation, and, where there may be a future functional use, the urban properties managed as an investment in the Corporate or Capital Funds.

3.100. The committee shall obtain external valuation advice concerning any purchase or sale transaction in excess of £750,000.

2 In the Financial Regulations (Council Regulations 1 of 2010, Supplement (I) to Gazette No. 4923, 25 June 2010), amend regulation 5.3(1) as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through, inserted text underlined):

5.3 Real Property Not Held as an Investment

(1) The purchase, leasing, or sale of all real property owned or leased by the University, which is not held as an investment, must be authorised by PRAC. In cases where the purchase, lease, or sale involves no more than £24,000,000 and is unrelated to a capital project, this authority has been delegated to the Property Management Subcommittee under Council Regulations 15 of 2002.

(B) BUDGET SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE PLANNING AND RESOURCE ALLOCATION COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note
The following amends the regulations concerning the membership of the Budget Subcommittee, removing the Registrar from the formal membership. The Registrar will continue to be present at meetings as an officer in attendance.

Text of Regulations

‘3.12. The Budget Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee shall consist of:

(1) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources) who shall chair the committee;
(2) the Registrar;
(42) one external person appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;
(43)–(7) five members of Congregation appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee for their expertise in an area relevant to the remit of the committee, but ensuring cross-divisional membership;
(58) one person with expertise in Information and Communications Technology appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee, who does not have responsibility for Information and Communications Technology provision by service units in the University Administration and Services and the Academic Services and University Collections.’

2 This change in regulations shall be effective from 1 January 2011.
(C) COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN

Explanatory Note

The change below notes the process for the approval of allowances paid to committee chairmen, following a decision to create a separate scale for these payments.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 3 of 2004 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4703, 14 July 2004, p. 1269, as amended), after Table 6 insert the following:

'Particular provisions for committee chairmen

29. Any allowances payable in respect of the duties of committee chairmen shall be on a scale as determined from time to time by the General Purposes Committee, subject to the approval of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council as to the financial implications of any proposed amendments. The General Purposes Committee shall, on the recommendation of the Registrar, have discretion to determine in exceptional circumstances whether a chairman should be paid an allowance for a fixed term and the scale point to be paid in each case.'

Election

Medical Sciences Divisional Board
Details are in ‘Elections’ section below.

Congregation

† Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 22 November, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to vote against, or propose an amendment to, the resolution below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolution shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

The title for this agenda item has been amended from that published last week so that, in conformity with the request received from the members of Congregation, it now refers to one resolution, and to a consultative ballot on the proposed changes put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the University and College Union.

Voting on resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Resolution

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme (UK).

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education (EPF) which purports to explain ‘why changes are needed’ and that ‘the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members’; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/index.cfm?articleid=4598) criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/media/pdf/q/9/USStatement2Oct10.pdf) a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

(i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;

(ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;

(iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;

(iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and

(v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution’s response to USS and that they are published locally.

Details are in 'Elections' section below.

Congregation 14 December 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 6 December, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

Voting on resolutions authorising use of sites at the Old Road Campus

Explanatory Note

The Old Road Campus was acquired by the University from the NHS in 1996. The site is now the focus for a significant proportion of the University’s medical research, housing both general and specialist laboratories together with facilities for office-based research. In 1999, following the acquisition of further land and the completion of the first major new building on the site (the Henry Wellcome Building for Genomic Medicine), a master-planning exercise was undertaken to identify the main development plots. Since that time, the site has evolved rapidly. However, one area (the location of the original NHS buildings) has yet to be developed. It is proposed that space in that area be allocated for the construction of two new buildings: the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine (NDM).

The establishment of the Kennedy Institute in Oxford aligns with a key strategic aim of the Medical Sciences Division: to develop an institute capable of pursuing state-of-the-art biomedical research at both a basic and translational level in autoimmunity and inflammation. The facility will offer the ability to provide high-quality research space that will enhance recruitment and retention of high calibre researchers.

The new NDM facility would accommodate work on Structural Biology, a Target Discovery Institute and clinical trial activities. This project is closely aligned to high priority objectives of both the Medical Sciences Division and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division, and each of the three components that would be incorporated into the facility will strengthen an aspect of the University’s medical research position.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 3,710 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of the Kennedy Institute;

(ii) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 2,380 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463; email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Elections

Vacancies and retiring members
The lists below show the retiring member or members, and indicate the length of appointment, from MT 2010 unless otherwise stated.

Election 25 November

Contested Election

MEDICAL SCIENCES DIVISIONAL BOARD

One person from among the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies, of whom there shall be no more than one from each of the Department of Biochemistry, the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics, the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Experimental Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies.

Professor J.N.P. Rawlins, Wolfson MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

O.J. Braddock, MA PhD Camb, MA Oxf, Fellow of Magdalen, Department of Experimental Psychology, Faculty of Psychological Studies

Nominated by:
K.E. Davies, Hertford, Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics
B.J. Rogers, Pembroke, Psychological Studies
I. Tracey, Pembroke, Anaesthetics
N. Yeung, University College, Experimental Psychology

Candidate statement:
I have been Head of Experimental Psychology since 2001, actively engaged in divisional governance on the Planning and Resources Committee (2001–2006), Educational Strategy Group (2005), and chairing the Review of Physiological Sciences FHS (2006), and a Board member (2008–2010).

The Division works in a complex and demanding context, requiring relationships with the NHS as well as with other Divisions and Colleges, and needing to sustain excellence in diverse research and teaching areas. I would seek a balanced integration of these areas in Board discussions, keeping in view the diversity of the Division’s activities. I believe the defining characteristic of a University is the synergy between research and undergraduate and graduate teaching, each activity gaining strength from the others.

I would be the only member of Experimental Psychology on the Board, bringing a special interest in neuroscience (a key strategic area for the Division but not strongly represented on the current Board), and in educational aspects of the Division’s mission going beyond preclinical and clinical medicine. However, I believe my record on the Board will show that I take a broad and collegial view in promoting the interests of the Division as a whole.

The Division derives strength from internal and external interdisciplinary links. I greatly value such links in my own research (with Paediatrics) and between Experimental Psychology and other basic and clinical sciences, social sciences and humanities. I would aim to promote such links that allow the Division to benefit fully from Oxford’s range of intellectual strengths.

Mark S.P. Sansom, MA DPhil Oxf, Student of Christ Church, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Biochemistry

Nominated by:
I.D. Campbell, St John’s, Biochemistry
R.A. Dwek, Exeter, Biochemistry
J.A. Hodgkin, Keble, Biochemistry
E.J.C. Mellor, Queen’s, Biochemistry
K.A. Nasmyth, Trinity, Biochemistry
D.J. Sherratt, Linacre, Biochemistry

Candidate statement:
Qualifications. I have held a joint appointment in Oxford for 19 years with a ULR in Molecular Biophysics, and a Studentship in Biochemistry at Christ Church. I have undertaken a range of administrative duties. At University level I chaired the Oxford Supercomputing Centre (OSC), and I have been actively involved in (and currently co-direct) the Wellcome Trust Structural Biology graduate programme. Within Biochemistry I have acted as head of the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics for one year, and currently head the Research Laboratory of Molecular and Systems Biochemistry, one of five groupings within the Department responsible for research strategy and space planning. Within Christ Church I have held a number of posts, including Tutor for Graduates. Nationaly, I have chaired the HECToR Science Board, responsible for the procurement of the UK national supercomputer. I therefore appreciate the competing academic and financial pressures within the University at all levels, and have wide experience of the development of large scale resources and training across the physical/biomedical sciences interface.

Reasons. There is a need to fully integrate research and teaching (both graduate and undergraduate) in order to maintain Oxford medical sciences as world-leading. During a period of transitions in funding models, we need to develop a strategy that supports research spanning from the fundamental to the translational. Within this context, we need to maintain high academic standards whilst developing innovative and well-resourced models of graduate student training.

General notes:
The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October 2010.

The following members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election: members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 8 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Elections 2 December

Contested Election

COUNCIL

Vacancy: One

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being members of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation.

Dr A.W. Graham, From HT 2011
Balliol To MT 2013

Full details of Council’s remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml. Enquiries may be directed to the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk).

The following nominations have been received:

Tony Brett, MA Ox, Computing Services

Nominated by:

K.M. Craddock, OUCS
D.C. Hastings, OUCS
W. Horn, OUCS
H.F. Morton, Somerville
M.J. Parrott, Brasenose

Candidate statement:

- Head of IT Support Staff services in Oxford University Computing Services, where I have worked since 2003.
- Institute of Molecular Medicine IT Manager 1993–1998
- Corpus Christi (Oxford) IT Manager 1998–2003

As a long-standing academic-related member of Congregation I offer the perspective of this institution’s increasing number of academic-related staff to Council if elected. With the increasing emergence of ‘third space’ professionals in the higher education sector I believe I would bring strategic advantage to Council in contributing to governance that balances the professional, academic and administrative needs of our world-leading institution with the management of its finances, services, and property.

I have a wide remit across the whole Collegiate University providing strategic direction to all units on ICT matters. I sit on divisional and departmental IT Committees and have conducted large- and small-scale reviews of IT provision in several departments and colleges. I regularly challenge units to ensure their IT strategy is in line with, and driven by, their overall strategy and aims. I am responsible to around 650 IT Support Staff at every level of seniority in all parts of the Collegiate University of Oxford. As a member of Oxford City Council I offer a unique insight into the civic context of our University.

Sarah E. Thomas, AB Smith College, MA PhD Johns Hopkins, MA Ox, MS Simmons College, Fellow of Balliol, Bodleian Libraries

Nominated by:

C.A. Lewis, Dean of Christ Church, Faculty of Theology
F.A. Cairncross, Rector of Exeter
R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine’s, Faculty of Engineering Science
K.E. Davies, Hertford, Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics
W.S. James, Brasenose, Dunn School of Pathology
R. Ovenden, St Hugh’s, Bodleian Libraries
S.P. Perry, Balliol, Faculty of English
A.E. Trefethen, Oxford e-Research Centre

Candidate statement:

As Bodley’s Librarian I have the privilege of serving the entire University of Oxford as well as providing a service for the ‘Republic of the Learned’. I would bring this same multi-lateral orientation to the responsibilities of Council. The role of Oxford’s university librarian gives me a broad perspective on the university and requires me to understand and balance the needs of a variety of sectors in shaping our information policies and practices. A complex organisation, the Bodleian Libraries are one of the largest departments in the university and offer regular opportunities to interact with all divisions as well as the administrative, financial, legal, and other services of the university, such as estates and IT.

Now in my fourth year at Oxford, I have substantial experience as a member of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee and of the Personnel Committee. As a professorial fellow at Balliol I have gained a deep appreciation of the value of the collegiate university.

My library career began at Harvard’s Widener Library and I subsequently held positions at Johns Hopkins, Stanford, the Library of Congress, and Cornell, where I was University Librarian for a decade and adjunct professor of German. I hold an A.B. in German from Smith College, a M.S. in Library Science from Simmons College, and a Ph.D. in German from Johns Hopkins and have studied at universities in Hamburg, Freiburg, and Frankfurt. These diverse experiences would provide a useful foundation of reference on which to build contributions to Council.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 4 November 2010.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 15 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 2 December 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Uncontested Elections

As the number of nominations received is no more than sufficient to fill the following vacancies, the candidates nominated below shall be deemed to be duly elected as of 4 November 2010; and, where the vacancies are to be filled for periods of different length, the candidate senior in academic standing shall hold office for the longer period (as per Council Regulations 17.22 and 17.26 of 2002; and Council Regulations 19.37 and 19.41 of 2002). For the purposes of elections, academic standing is as defined in Council Regulations 22 of 2002, Part 2: Academic Precedence and Standing, made by Council on 26 June 2002.

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 280548
Fax: 01865 270178
Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £20 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)
External advertisers: £25 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.
For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.
Note: Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.
Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number. Payment by cheque in foreign currency: If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements
General
1. Advertising is accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.
Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.
Gazette publication arrangements

Advertisers are asked to note that the remaining Gazettes of Michaelmas Term will be published on 25 November, and 2 and 9 December. Publication for Hilary Term will begin on 13 January. The usual deadline will continue to apply (see above).

Congregation

30 November 2 p.m.

† The title for this agenda item has been amended from that published on 11 November so that, in conformity with the request received from the members of Congregation, it now refers to one resolution, and to a consultative ballot on the proposed changes put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the University and College Union.

Voting on resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Resolution

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme (USS).

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education (EPF) which purports to explain ‘why changes are needed’ and that ‘the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members’; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/index.cfm?articleid=4598) criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and (at http://www.ucu.org.uk/media/pdf/q/9/uss_statement2_oct10.pdf) a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

(i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;

(ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;

(iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;

(iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and

(v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution’s response to USS and that they are published locally.

The following amendment will be taken into consideration:

The purpose of this amendment is to ensure that the consultation and ballot should take place with proper information available, and to invite USS, through the University, to make good the major defects in the existing consultation. As the requested further information may lead to consultation responses that cover more than the two choices in the ballot, we also remove the requirement that the ballot result be the 'principal' local response.

Replace 'as the principal local response' in (iv) by 'as part of the local response', remove 'and' from the end of (iv), replace the final ';', in (v) by ';', and then add '(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and (vii) request USS to restart the consultation.'

¶ At its meeting on 15 November, Council gave careful consideration to the resolution first published on 11 November (as amended on 18 November). Members of Council had reservations about the wording and the purpose of the proposed ballot but considered that a broad discussion in Congregation of pensions issues would be highly desirable. Council members took the view that the surest way to bring about such a discussion, given the way in which the relevant regulations are drafted, was to instruct the Registrar to declare the resolution unacceptable to Council.

At a special meeting on 23 November, Council considered the amendment set out above. Council similarly had reservations about the wording and purpose of the amendment but reiterated its wish for members of Congregation to have the opportunity for broad debate on these issues.

Council wishes it to be known that its decisions were taken not in any way in a spirit of confrontation, but to ensure an opportunity for wide discussion by the University’s sovereign body around these important issues. Further information about the USS proposals may be seen on the University website (at http://www.ox.ac.uk/staff/staff_communications/update_on_major_issues/index.html#fau/universities, superannuation_scheme_uss_consultation).

As a consequence of these decisions, debates will be held at the Congregation meeting on Tuesday 30 November. The structure of the meeting will be as follows: first, the amendment will be debated and amended, or the original resolution if the amendment is not carried; (i) indicate, as appropriate, whether they wish to support or oppose the amendment, the resolution if amended, or the original resolution if the amendment is not carried; (ii) explain broadly the topic about which they wish to speak. This will help to determine the order in which speakers are called. Speakers on the original resolution will only speak if the amendment is rejected; likewise, speakers on the amended resolution will only speak if the amendment is accepted. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so.

The Vice-Chancellor and the Proctors have determined that voting during the meeting will take place by paper ballot. Members of Congregation will be required to identify themselves on their voting slips by name and signature and by college/department or faculty and to deposit their own voting slips in ballot boxes at the doors of the House. Slips will be sorted and counted by the Proctors, and will subsequently be kept in strict confidence by the Proctors for a period of six days, after which they will be destroyed.

It is intended that a verbatim transcription of the debates will be published in the Gazette on 9 December and, before then, on the University website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-debate). As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton (Council Secretariat) on the day of the debate, or to email them to congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk by 5 p.m. on Wednesday 1 December.

For security purposes, all those attending are asked to bring their University Cards. The Vice-Chancellor has decided that the wearing of gowns shall be optional on this occasion.

Details are in ‘Elections’ section below.

Congregation
14 December 2 p.m.

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 6 December, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more members of Congregation intending to speak.

1 Voting on resolutions authorising use of sites at the Old Road Campus

Explanatory Note

The Old Road Campus was acquired by the University from the NHS in 1996. The site is now the focus for a significant proportion of the University’s medical research, housing both general and specialist laboratories together with facilities for office-based research. In 1999, following the acquisition of further land and the completion of the first major new building on the site (the Henry Wellcome Building for Genomic Medicine), a master-planning exercise was undertaken to identify the main development plots. Since that time, the site has evolved rapidly. However, one area (the location of the original NHS buildings) has yet to be developed. It is proposed that space in that area be allocated for the construction of two new buildings: the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine (NDM).

The establishment of the Kennedy Institute in Oxford aligns with a key strategic aim of the Medical Sciences Division: to develop an institute capable of pursuing state-of-the-art biomedical research at both a basic and translational level in autoimmunity and inflammation. The facility will offer the ability to provide high-quality research space that will enhance recruitment and retention of high calibre researchers.

The new NDM facility would accommodate work on Structural Biology, a Target Discovery Institute and clinical trial activities. This project is closely aligned to high priority objectives of both the Medical Sciences Division and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division, and each of the three components that would be incorporated into the facility will strengthen an aspect of the University’s medical research position.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 1,710 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of the Kennedy Institute;

(ii) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 2,380 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine.
2 Voting on resolution approving the conferment of Honorary Degree

That the conferment of the Degree of Master of Arts, honoris causa, upon Lady Nancy Caroline Gayley Kenny, BA Vassar, PGCE Oxf, former Director of Alumni Relations at the University, former Secretary of the Oxford University Society, Fellow of St Peter’s, be approved.

† If the resolution is approved, the degree will be conferred at a ceremony on 5 March 2010.

Note on procedures in Congregation

† Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Office, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463; email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

General notices

Gazette publication arrangements

The final Gazettes of Michaelmas term will be published on 2 and 9 December. Publication for Hilary term will begin on 13 January. The usual deadlines arrangements will apply.

Statute Approved By Her Majesty in Council

Mr Vice-Chancellor has received a communication from the Clerk of Her Majesty’s Privy Council, stating that on 21 July 2010 Her Majesty was pleased to approve the Statute concerning the publication of regulations, amending Statute VI, printed in Gazette, 10 December 2009, p. 357, and approved by Congregation on 19 January 2010, p. 444. This Statute shall be effective from 2 December 2010.

Notice of new arrangements: publication of changes to Examination Regulations in the Gazette

The Education Committee has approved new arrangements for the above, to take effect from the Gazette of 2 December 2010. The print and online versions of the Gazette itself will in future include only the programme/subject title and a brief note of the nature of the change to regulations. A link will be provided to the full text of each change to regulations, which will be published separately online as a pdf document, at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/examregulations/.

Divisional and other colleagues responsible for regulatory amendments should submit their changes for publication, as Word documents, to the editor of the Gazette, gazette@admin.ox.ac.uk. It should be noted that these documents will now be published in full to the web audience of the Gazette. Staff involved in drafting amendment notices are asked to consult the Guidance Note and template available at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/examregulations/ which have also been separately circulated to interested parties.

Please address any queries to sally.powell@admin.ox.ac.uk, Education Policy Support, or to the editor of the Gazette as above.

Review of the Oxford University Museums

There is to be a joint review during Hilary term 2011 of the University’s four principal museums: the Ashmolean Museum, the Museum of the History of Science, the Museum of Natural History, and the Pitt Rivers Museum. The terms of reference and the membership of the review committee are as follows:

ORIENTATION AND ADMINISTRATION

i. To explore the scope for greater collaboration and support between the museums, including the extent to which resources could be more widely shared and/or a stronger presence could be developed for the Oxford University Museums and Collections as an organisational unit.

GOVERNANCE

ii. To review the governance arrangements for the museums, individually and collectively, with particular reference to their fitness for purpose in delivering the vision (see v. below).

FUNDING

iii. To review current funding arrangements and identify possible alternative options by which financial sustainability can be achieved.

FUNDRAISING AND COMMERCIAL OPERATIONS

iv. To review current fundraising and commercial strategies across the museums with a view to optimising best practice and effectiveness.

VISION

v. To assist in articulating an agreed vision for the Oxford University Museums and Collections, incorporating both their role as departments of the University (including teaching and research) and their contribution to the world of museums and to the broader cultural landscape at local, national and international levels (including outreach activity).
MEMBERSHIP

Professor Ewan McKendrick (in the chair)
Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Academic Services and University Collections)
Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resource Allocation)
A senior member of the University with museum experience (Warden of Wadham)

Two members of the academic divisions:

Mathematical, Physical, and Life Sciences Division/Education Committee

REVIEW OF THE DEPARTMENTS OF PLANT SCIENCES AND ZOOLOGY

The Mathematical, Physical, and Life Sciences Divisional Board is undertaking a review of the departments of Plant Sciences and Zoology jointly with the Education Committee, as part of Council's programme of rolling reviews of departments. Given their common undergraduate programme (BA in Biological Sciences), it was agreed that the two departments be reviewed jointly. The review will be chaired by the Head of Division, Professor Alex Halliday, and will take place on 7, 8, and 9 March 2011.

The Review Committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference given below. These should be sent to the Mathematical Physical and Life Sciences Divisional Secretary and joint secretary to the Review Committee, Ms Mary Ann Robertson (email: maryann.robertson@mpls.ox.ac.uk) by Friday, 7 January 2011.

The Review Committee's membership is:

- Professor Alex Halliday, FRS, Head of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division (Chair);
- Professor George Coupland, FRS, Director, Max Planck Institute for Plant Breeding Research;
- Professor Loren Rieseberg, FRS, Department of Botany, University of British Columbia;
- Professor Robin Weiss, FRS, School of Life and Medical Sciences, UCL;
- Professor Peter Hudson, FRS, Director, Huck Institutes of the Life Sciences, Pennsylvania State University;
- Professor Dianne Edwards, CBE, FRS, School of Earth and Ocean Sciences, Cardiff University;
- Professor George Ratcliffe, appointed by the Department of Plant Sciences;
- Professor Charles Godfray, FRS, appointed by the Department of Zoology;
- Professor Judith Armitage, Department of Biochemistry, appointed by the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division;
- Professor Paul Madden, FRS, Provost of Queen's College, appointed by the Education Committee.

The terms of reference of the review are:

1. To review the quality of academic activities in the departments, by reference to:
   - international standards of excellence;
   - action taken since the last review of the departments;
   - planning statements at departmental and divisional levels, and in the context of the University's mission statement and strategic/corporate plan.

In particular:

- (a) the quality of the research of the departments, including their participation in interdepartmental, interdivisional, and interdisciplinary activities, their research profile and strategy, and future challenges and opportunities;
- (b) the quality of undergraduate and graduate programmes, and their delivery and related issues, including:
  - access and admissions;
  - curriculum design and programme structure;
  - teaching, learning, and assessment;
  - the relationship between teaching and research;
  - academic and pastoral support and guidance;
  - the provision and use of learning resources (including staffing resources);
  - specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies;
  - relationships with colleges;
  - quality assurance mechanisms;
- (c) the organisation of the departments, their management structures, and the relationship between the departments and the Mathematical, Physical, and Life Sciences Division, including such matters as:
  - strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plan and the University's strategic/corporate plan);
  - academic and non-academic staffing and recruitment;
  - student number planning;
  - terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issue;
  - fundraising;
- (d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the departments, and between the departments and cognate subject areas, and colleges to which it is linked in teaching and research.

2. To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, the departments, and their financial strategy.

Elections

Vacancies and retiring members

The lists below show the retiring member or members, and indicate the length of appointment, from MT 2010 unless otherwise stated.

Election 25 November

Contested Election

MEDICAL SCIENCES DIVISIONAL BOARD

One person from among the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Experimental Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies.

Professor J.N.P. Rawlins, Wolfson  MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

O.J. Braddick, MA PhD Camb, MA Oxf, Fellow of Magdalen, Department of Experimental Psychology, Faculty of Psychological Studies

Nominated by:

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

B.J. Rogers, Pembroke, Psychological Studies

I. Tracey, Pembroke, Anaesthetics

N. Yeung, University College, Experimental Psychology

Candidate statement:

I have been Head of Experimental Psychology since 2001, actively engaged in divisional governance on the Planning and Resources Committee (2001–2006), Educational Strategy Group (2005), chairing the Review of Physiological Sciences FHS (2006), and a Board member (2008–2010).

The Division works in a complex and demanding context, requiring relationships with the NHS as well as with other Divisions and Colleges, and needing to sustain excellence in diverse research and teaching areas. I would seek a balanced integration of these areas in Board discussions, keeping in view the diversity of the Division’s activities. I believe the defining characteristic of a University is the synergy between research and undergraduate and graduate teaching, each activity gaining strength from the others.

I would be the only member of Experimental Psychology on the Board, bringing a special interest in neuroscience (a key strategic area for the Division but not strongly represented on the current Board), and in educational aspects of the Division’s mission going beyond preclinical and clinical medicine. However, I believe my record on the Board will show that I take a broad and collegial view in promoting the interests of the Division as a whole.

The Division derives strength from internal and external interdisciplinary links. I greatly value such links in my own research (with Paediatrics) and between Experimental Psychology and other basic and clinical sciences, social sciences and humanities. I would aim to promote such links that allow the Division to benefit fully from Oxford’s range of intellectual strengths.

Mark S.P. Sansom, MA DPhil Oxf, Student of Christ Church, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Biochemistry

Nominated by:

I.D. Campbell, St John’s, Biochemistry

R.A. Dwek, Exeter, Biochemistry

J.A. Hodgkin, Keble, Biochemistry

E.J.C. Mellor, Queen’s, Biochemistry

K.A. Nasmyth, Trinity, Biochemistry

D.J. Sherratt, Linacre, Biochemistry

Candidate statement:

Qualifications. I have held a joint appointment in Oxford for 19 years with a UJ in Molecular Biophysics, and a Studentship in Biochemistry at Christ Church. I have undertaken a range of administrative duties. At University level I chaired the Oxford Supercomputing Centre (OSC), and have been actively involved in (and currently co-direct) the Wellcome Trust Structural Biology graduate programme. Within Biochemistry, I have acted as head of the Laboratory of Molecular Biophysics for one year, and currently head the Research Laboratory of Molecular and Systems Biochemistry, one of five groupings within the Department responsible for research strategy and space planning. Within Christ Church I have held a number of posts, including Tutor for Graduates. Nationally, I have chaired the HECToR Science Board, responsible for the procurement of the UK national supercomputer. I therefore appreciate the competing academic and financial pressures within the University at all levels, and have wide experience of the development of large scale resources and training across the physical/biomedical sciences interface.

Reasons. There is a need to fully integrate research and teaching (both graduate and undergraduate) in order to maintain Oxford medical sciences as world-leading. During a period of transitions in funding models, we need to develop a strategy that supports research spanning from the fundamental to the translational. Within this context, we need to maintain high academic standards whilst developing innovative and well-resourced models of graduate student training.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 28 October 2010.

The following members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election: members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 8 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 25 November 2010.

For more information, please contact the Elections Office (elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Election 2 December

Vacancy: One

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being members of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation.

Dr A.W.M. Graham, From HT 2011

Bodleian Library to MT 2013

Full details of Council’s remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml. Enquiries may be directed to the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk).

The following nominations have been received:

Tony Brett, MA Oxf, Computing Services

Nominated by:

K.M. Craddock, OUCS

D.C. Hastings, OUCS

H.F. Morton, Somerville

M.J. Parrott, Brasenose

Candidate statement:

• Head of IT Support Staff services in Oxford University Computing Services, where I have worked since 2003.

• Institute of Molecular Medicine IT Manager 1993–1998

• Corpus Christi (Oxford) IT Manager 1998–2003

• Matriculated, Corpus Christi (Oxford) 1989, BA (hons) 1993, MA 1998

As a long-standing academic-related member of Congregation I offer the perspective of this institution’s increasing number of academic-related staff to Council if elected. With the increasing emergence of ‘third space’ professionals in the higher education sector I believe I would bring strategic advantage to Council in contributing to governance that balances the professional, academic and administrative needs of our world-leading institution with the management of its finances, services, and property.

I have a wide remit across the whole College University providing strategic direction to all units on ICT matters. I sit on divisional and departmental IT Committees and have conducted large- and small-scale reviews of IT provision in several departments and colleges. I regularly challenge units to ensure their IT strategy is in line with, and driven by, their overall strategy and aims. I am responsible to around 650 IT Support Staff at every level of seniority in all parts of the College University of Oxford. As a member of Oxford City Council I offer a unique insight into the civic context of our University.

Sarah E. Thomas, AB Smith College, MA PhD Johns Hopkins, MA Oxf, MS Simmons College, Fellow of Balliol, Bodleian Libraries

Nominated by:

C.A. Lewis, Dean of Christ Church, Faculty of Theology

F.A. Cairncross, Rector of Exeter

R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine’s, Faculty of Engineering Science

K.E. Davies, Hertford, Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

W.S. James, Brasenose, Dunn School of Pathology

R. Ovenden, St Hugh’s, Bodleian Libraries

S.P. Perry, Balliol, Faculty of English

A.E. Trefethen, Oxford E-Research Centre

Candidate statement:

As Bodley’s Librarian I have the privilege of serving the entire University of Oxford as well as providing a service for the ‘Republic of the Learned’. I would bring this same multi-lateral orientation to the responsibilities of Council. The role of Oxford’s university librarian gives me a broad perspective on the university and requires me to understand and balance the needs of a variety of sectors in shaping our information policies and practices. A complex organisation, the Bodleian Libraries are one of the largest departments in the university and offer regular opportunities to interact with all divisions as well as the administrative, financial, legal, and other services of the university, such as estates and IT.

Now in my fourth year at Oxford, I have substantial experience as a member of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee and of the Personnel Committee. As a professorial fellow at Balliol I have gained a deep appreciation of the value of the collegiate university. My library career began at Harvard’s Widener Library and I subsequently held positions at Johns Hopkins, Stanford, the Library of Congress, and Cornell, where I was University Librarian for a decade and adjunct professor of German. I hold an A.B. in German from Smith College, a M.S. in Library Science from Simmons College, and a Ph.D. in German from Johns Hopkins and have studied at universities in Hamburg, Freiburg, and Frankfurt. These diverse experiences would provide a useful foundation of reference on which to build contributions to Council.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4.00 p.m. on Thursday 4 November 2010.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 15 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4.00 p.m. on 2 December 2010.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency: If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/ stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/ stdg/ conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.
Gazette publication arrangements

Advertisers are asked to note that the remaining Gazettes of Michaelmas term will be published on 2 and 9 December. Publication for Hilary term will begin on 13 January. The usual deadline will continue to apply (see above).

Congregation 30 November 2 p.m.

1 Approval on a division of amendment to resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Amendment

The purpose of this amendment is to ensure that the consultation and ballot should take place with proper information available, and to invite USS, through the University, to make good the major defects in the existing consultation. As the requested further information may lead to consultation responses that cover more than the two choices in the ballot, we also remove the requirement that the ballot result be the ‘principal’ local response.

Replace ‘as the principal local response’ in (iv) by ‘as part of the local response’, remove ‘and’ from the end of (iv), replace the final ‘;’ in (v) by ‘,’ and then add ‘(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and’ (vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available, with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, re-start the local consultation.’

[For: 181; against: 33]

2 Approval on a division of amended resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

Text of Resolution

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme.

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education which purports to explain ‘why changes are needed’ and that ‘the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members’; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the Scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website criticism of the process being followed by Higher Education employers in carrying out the consultation, and a critique of the EFP document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

(i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EFP and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;

(ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;

(iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;

(iv) send the ballot result to USS as part of the local response to the statutory consultation exercise;

(v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution’s response to USS and that they are published locally;

(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and

(vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available, with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, re-start the local consultation.’

Congregation

Council

Details are in ‘Elections’ section below.

Congregation 14 December 2 p.m.

* Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 6 December, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the resolutions below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on resolutions authorising use of sites at the Old Road Campus

Explanatory Note

The Old Road Campus was acquired by the University from the NHS in 1996. The site is now the focus for a significant proportion of the University’s medical research, housing both general and specialist laboratories together with facilities for office-based research. In 1999, following the acquisition of further land and the completion of the first major new building on the site (the Henry Wellcome Building for Genomic Medicine), a master-planning exercise was undertaken to identify the main development plots. Since that time, the site has evolved rapidly. However, one area (the location of the original NHS buildings) has yet to be developed. It is proposed that space in that area be allocated for the construction of two new buildings: the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine (NDM).

The establishment of the Kennedy Institute in Oxford aligns with a key strategic aim of the Medical Sciences Division: to develop an institute capable of pursuing state-of-the-art biomedical research at both a basic and translational level in autoimmunity and inflammation. The facility will offer the ability to provide high-quality research space that will enhance recruitment and retention of high calibre researchers.

The new NDM facility would accommodate work on Structural Biology, a Target Discovery Institute and clinical trial activities. This project is closely aligned to high priority objectives of both the Medical Sciences Division and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division, and each of the three components that would be incorporated into the facility will strengthen an aspect of the University’s medical research position.

Text of Resolutions

(i) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 3,710 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of the Kennedy Institute;

(ii) That a site at the Old Road Campus (providing approximately 2,380 sq.m. net usable space) be allocated for the construction of a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine.

2 Voting on Resolution approving the conferment of Honorary Degree

That the conferment of the Degree of Master of Arts, honoris causa, upon Lady Nancy Caroline Gayley Kenny, BA Vassar, PGCE Oxf, former Director of Alumni Relations at the University, former Secretary of the Oxford University Society, Fellow of St Peter’s, be approved.

* If the resolution is approved, the degree will be conferred at a ceremony on 5 March 2010.

Note on procedures in Congregation

* Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

The lists below show the retiring member or members, and indicate the length of appointment, from MT 2010 unless otherwise stated.

Election

25 November

Contested Election

MEDICAL SCIENCES BOARD

Election of one person from among the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies, of whom there shall be no more than one from each of the Department of Biochemistry, the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics, the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Experimental Psychology, elected jointly by the members of the Faculty of Biochemistry, the Faculty of Clinical Medicine, the Faculty of Physiological Sciences and the Faculty of Psychological Studies.

On Thursday, 25 November, the following was duly elected to the Medical Sciences Divisional Board to hold office until MT 2014:

Professor M.S.P. Sansom, MA DPhil Oxf, Student of Christ Church, Department of Biochemistry, Faculty of Biochemistry.

[The votes recorded were: for Professor Braddick, 55; for Professor Sansom, 76. Two ballots were spoiled.]

Questions relating to this election should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Election

2 December

COUNCIL

Vacancy: One

One member of Congregation, not necessarily being members of any division and not in any case being nominated in a divisional capacity, who shall be elected by Congregation.

Dr A.W.M. Graham, From HT 2011 To Balliol

MT 2013

Full details of Council’s remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml. Enquiries may be directed to the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@ox.ac.uk).

The following nominations have been received:

Tony Brett, MA Oxf, Computing Services

Nomination by:

- K.M. Craddock, OUCS
- D.C. Hastings, OUCS
- W. Horn, OUCS
- S.D. Lee, Merton, Faculty of English, OUCS
- H.F. Morton, Somerville
- M.J. Parrott, Brasenose

Candidate statement:

- Head of IT Support Staff services in Oxford University Computing Services, where I have worked since 2003.
- Institute of Molecular Medicine IT Manager 1993-1998
- Corpus Christi (Oxford) IT Manager 1998-2003

As a long-standing academic-related member of Congregation I offer the perspective of this institution’s increasing number of academic-related staff to Council if elected. With the increasing emergence of ‘third space’ professionals in the higher education sector I believe I would bring strategic advantage to Council in contributing to governance that balances the professional, academic and administrative needs of our world-leading institution with the management of its finances, services, and property. I have a wide remit across the whole Collegiate University providing strategic... direction to all units on ICT matters. I sit on divisional and departmental IT Committees and have conducted large- and small-scale reviews of IT provision in several departments and colleges. I regularly challenge units to ensure their IT strategy is in line with, and driven by, their overall strategy and aims. I am responsible to around 650 IT Support Staff at every level of seniority in all parts of the Collegiate University of Oxford. As a member of Oxford City Council I offer a unique insight into the civic context of our University.

Sarah E. Thomas, AB Smith College, MA PhD Johns Hopkins, MA Oxf, MS Simmons College, Fellow of Balliol, Bodleian Libraries

Nominated by:

C.A. Lewis, Dean of Christ Church, Faculty of Theology
F.A. Cairncross, Rector of Exeter
R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine’s, Faculty of Engineering Science
K.E. Davies, Hertford, Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics
W.S. James, Brasenose, Dunn School of Pathology
R. Ovenden, St Hugh’s, Bodleian Libraries
S.P. Perry, Balliol, Faculty of English
A.E. Trefethen, Balliol E: Research Centre

Candidate statement:

As Bodley’s Librarian I have the privilege of serving the entire University of Oxford as well as providing a service for the ‘Republic of the Learned’. I would bring this same multi-lateral orientation to the responsibilities of Council. The role of Oxford’s university librarian gives me a broad perspective on the university and requires me to understand and balance the needs of a variety of sectors in shaping our information policies and practices. A complex organisation, the Bodleian Libraries are one of the largest departments in the university and offer regular opportunities to interact with all divisions as well as the administrative, financial, legal, and other services of the university, such as estates and IT.

Now in my fourth year at Oxford, I have substantial experience as a member of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee and of the Personnel Committee. As a professorial fellow at Balliol I have gained a deep appreciation of the value of the collegiate university.

My library career began at Harvard’s Widener Library and I subsequently held positions at Johns Hopkins, Stanford, the Library of Congress, and Cornell, where I was University Librarian for a decade and adjunct professor of German. I hold an A.B. in German from Smith College, a M.S. in Library Science from Simmons College, and a Ph.D. in German from Johns Hopkins and have studied at universities in Hamburg, Freiburg, and Frankfurt. These diverse experiences would provide a useful foundation of reference on which to build contributions to Council.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4.00 p.m. on Thursday 4 November 2010.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 15 November. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4.00 p.m. on 2 December 2010.

D.L. Dooher, MA Oxf.
For a properly-informed consultation on our pension scheme

As the Vice-Chancellor's Summary of the Council meeting of November 15th 2010 makes clear, Council has welcomed the opportunity provided by a Congregation resolution (of 11th November) for a broad discussion in Congregation on pensions issues. That discussion will take place at 2 pm on Tuesday 30th November in the Sheldonian Theatre. An amendment to the resolution has now been tabled and this flysheet explains why this was thought necessary.

Members of Congregation should be in no doubt that the reforms proposed to pensions by USS will affect almost all of us, including current employees and pensioners, and that almost all the proposed changes will have deleterious consequences for our pensions. As demonstrated in the article by Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley in the Week 5 issue of Oxford Magazine, some future pension entitlements could be less than 50% of current entitlements; and the capping of inflation-indexed rises introduces further insecurity.

USS is in the process of consulting its members on the proposals. The amendment was proposed because the present consultation is flawed: the consultation process has not conformed with guidelines issued by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of major pension reviews because members have not been given adequate information with which to judge the potential effects of the changes on them.

The University, as employer, cannot modify the USS proposals unilaterally. But they could be modified if the University and individuals make direct representations to the USS Trustees as part of the consultation.

The University has asked for further information from USS in order to provide its employees with appropriate information on which to base their response to the consultation. Cambridge has already done likewise but at the time of writing it is understood that no further information has been forthcoming.

Nevertheless whatever response USS makes to the University, it cannot address the second problem highlighted by the amendment. The consultation must be restarted because the present consultation---already half over---has been conducted without adequate information being provided. Whatever one's position on the details of the USS proposals, it is surely unacceptable that major changes could be made on the basis of such a flawed consultation process.

This is an important issue of direct relevance to all Congregation members. The motion and amendment provide our most effective route to influence the USS Trustees to think again. Cambridge's Regent House will soon be debating a motion similar to the one before Congregation. Staff at other UK universities do not have such democratic rights.

We urge all members of Congregation to attend this meeting, so that the views of the University can be put clearly and unequivocally to USS.

Flysheet: USS Pension Scheme Debate
Congregation 30th November 2010

The resolution before Congregation on 30 November seeks to ensure both that members of the University’s staff who are currently making contributions towards their pensions to the Universities Superannuation Scheme [USS], or who are eligible to do so, have adequate information on which to base their response to the consultation taking place on proposed changes to the scheme. It also seeks to ensure that USS members and those eligible to become members are individually balloted by the University on the proposals for change, and that the result of that ballot forms the basis of the University’s own institutional response to the consultation.

The changes which are planned are ones that have been put forward by the employers’ side on the USS Joint Negotiating Committee [JNC], through the Employers Pension Forum [EPF]. If implemented - the intended date of implementation is 1 April 2011 - they will fundamentally and for the foreseeable future dramatically change the scheme and reduce the pension benefits available to members through it.

The changes will:

- raise for most members the age at which they will be permitted to retire with an unreduced pension (the ‘Normal Pension Age’ [NPA])
- raise employee contribution rates
- change the basis for calculating inflation-proofing increases in pensions, in ways which are likely to lead to smaller increases than at present
- base pensions on career average earnings (revalued for inflation), rather than on final salary as at present, for new entrants to the scheme and for people rejoining it after a gap of more than six months.

They will, in fact, mean that all members and potential members of the scheme who have not already retired will almost certainly be worse off when they come to draw their pensions, and for many near the beginning of their careers pensions will be some thousands of pounds a year less than they would be under current arrangements. The total lifetime loss for some is likely to run well into six figures.

The EPF have justified the proposed changes on the need to secure the long-term safety of USS. In doing so they are taking advantage of the current public concerns about the nation’s economic situation and about the affordability of existing pension schemes, but USS is not a scheme that is in any sense in crisis. It is a very large and fundamentally very safe scheme. Its huge financial resources dipped a little a couple of years ago, but not to the extent that urgent and drastic action was necessary, and they have recovered quite well in the most recent period. The scheme has to be formally valued every three years, and the next occasion for this will be March 2011. There is good reason to think that the valuation will show the scheme to be in good health, and it is therefore perverse to be pushing through detrimental changes when a favourable valuation is likely to follow in a matter of a small number of weeks.

Furthermore, alternative changes have been put forward by the University and College Union [UCU], which officially represents all employee members and potential members for USS purposes, whether UCU members or not, and which is the other body represented on the USS JNC. The JNC having been equally divided over the proposals for change, the EPF proposals were adopted only by the independent chair casting his vote in their favour.
The changes proposed by UCU would provide for some increases in employee contributions (on a tiered basis), and would raise the NPA for new entrants but leave it unchanged for all existing members of the scheme. These proposals by UCU would, we are confident, be fully sufficient to give what additional stability the scheme’s finances might be thought to need. In so doing, the proposals would

- retain the final salary basis for pensions for all USS members
- protect the current basis for the calculation of inflation-proofing increases in pensions
- retain greater protection for members leaving and rejoining the scheme

For staff of the University of Oxford to be well enough informed to make a meaningful response to the consultation which the University, as employer, is required to conduct, they must have information about the alternative to the EPF proposals. So far, only the latter have been explained and advocated in the consultation documents that have been sent to all USS members by the University. That is why the resolution, if passed, will require that the UCU proposals are also circulated, with supporting arguments.

Additionally, in order that the University’s institutional response to the consultation properly reflects the views of all its members, the resolution, if passed, will require that a ballot of all affected staff be conducted and the result used as the principal response from this institution.

Pensions may be very much at the front of the minds of colleagues who are approaching retirement. For many at an earlier stage in their career, they may well be rather further towards the back of the mind. But pensions constitute a very significant part of the set of rewards all USS members earn from their employment. They pay contributions out of their current salary in order to have the benefit of a pension. Similarly, the University pays a contribution to the scheme on their behalf towards that pension. Changes to USS which have the effect of increasing members’ contributions and reducing the benefits eventually received are the same in effect as a reduction in pay. All the University’s current and future USS-pensionable staff will be affected to a smaller or (in very many cases) a larger - frequently much larger - extent.

It is vital, therefore, that changes which are both unnecessary and very detrimental are not implemented. The passing of the resolution by Congregation on 30 November would be a significant step towards preventing that implementation. We therefore urge all our colleagues who are members of Congregation to attend the meeting and to vote in favour of the resolution.

Report of proceedings in Congregation, 30 November 2010

Debate on a resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union

The report of the debates in Congregation on 30 November on the resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pensions Forum and the University and College Union (see Gazette, 25 November, p. 240), and on an amendment to that resolution, is set out below.

At the close of the debate on the amendment to the resolution, the amendment was approved on a division [for: 181; against: 33].

At the close of the debate on the amended resolution, the amended resolution was approved on a division [for: 161; against: 25].

Papers for the consultative ballot are being circulated with a closing date of 20 December.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: The business before Congregation is voting on a resolution to conduct a consultative ballot on changes to the Universities Superannuation Scheme put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the University and College Union, and on an amendment to that resolution. Will you please be seated.

The resolution, which comprises the main business of today’s meeting, was placed on the agenda of this meeting in the University Gazette, first published on 11 November. As noted in the Gazette notice, published on 25 November, an amendment to the resolution has been received. Therefore the amendment will be debated and voted upon; then a vote and a debate will take place on the original resolution as amended, or on the original resolution, as appropriate.

The procedure for today’s meeting will therefore be as follows: I shall begin by asking the Registrar to read the resolution and the amendment. I shall then invite Professor Barbara Harriss-White to move the resolution, and Mr Terry Hoad to second it. I shall then invite Dr Sally Mapstone, Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Personnel and Equality), to oppose the resolution and Dr Stephen Goss to second that opposition. I shall then invite Mr Robin Briggs to move the amendment and Dr Sabina Lovibond to second it. I shall next invite Dr Mapstone to oppose the amendment and Dr Goss to second that opposition. The mover and opposer of the resolution have been asked to speak for no more than eight minutes, and their respective seconders to speak for no more than five minutes. The mover and opposer of the amendment and their respective seconders have been asked to speak for no more than five minutes.

After that, the debate on the amendment will be open to the House. I would ask all speakers to come forward and speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the House should please follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. May I draw the attention of speakers to the device positioned to the side of the lectern. This anti-loquitor device has green, amber and red lights to help speakers with the timing of their speeches. The amber light shows with one minute remaining and should encourage speakers to begin to wind up their remarks. Red means speakers are out of time and must conclude their remarks.

A number of members of Congregation have indicated a wish to speak, and I will endeavour to call them all but I cannot guarantee that I shall be able to do so. Priority will be given to those who have indicated in advance that they wish to speak and I would ask that additional speakers come forward to speak only if they have new points to add which have not already been raised by the other speakers.

In accordance with health and safety guidelines, the stenographer, who is helping us to transcribe today’s proceedings, is entitled to a break after an hour and a half. Therefore if speeches are still being made at 3.30 p.m., I shall call for a five-minute break.

I would be grateful if any speaker who uses a written text would afterwards provide a copy of that text to Mrs Benton, the officer who is collecting such speeches, as this will be of assistance in preparing the published record of the debate, which will appear as a Gazette supplement as soon as possible, although I hope in the issue published on 9 December, but, of course, also on the University website. At the end of the debate, I shall give Dr Mapstone the right of reply on behalf of Council, and I shall give Mr Robin Briggs the right of the reply to the debate on the amendment. They will each have five minutes in which to do so. I remind them both that they should at that stage deal only with points raised during the course of the debate and should not introduce any new matters.

I shall then take a division on the amendment. This will be by written ballot, for which members of Congregation should have received voting papers as they entered the Theatre. Any members who have not will have an opportunity to collect a paper at the exits as they leave. Under Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002, a vote can only be taken at the close of the debate, and I regret that any members who are unable to stay until I call the vote on the amendment will therefore not have an opportunity to register a vote. I should stress that this means that a member may not leave a completed voting paper with another member. The Proctors, Pro-Proctors and Bedels who will be collecting the papers at the door at the close of the debate will accept only each member’s single personal voting paper. I shall explain the detailed voting arrangements when the vote is to be taken.
After the vote on the amendment, a debate and vote will then be held on the resolution as amended, or the original resolution, as appropriate. The second vote will also be by written ballot. I now ask the Registrar to read the resolution and the amendment.

REGISTRAR: The following is the text of the resolution.

Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006 to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme.

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education which purports to explain ‘why changes are needed’ and that ‘the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members’; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website criticism of the process being followed by higher education employers in carrying out the consultation, and a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

(i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;
(ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;
(iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;
(iv) send the ballot result to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise; and
(v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution’s response to USS and that they are published locally.

The following is the text of the amendment:

The purpose of this amendment is to ensure that the consultation and ballot should take place with proper information available, and to invite USS, through the University, to make good the major defects in the existing consultation. As the requested further information may lead to consultation responses that cover more than the two choices in the ballot, we also remove the requirement that the ballot result be the ‘principal’ local response.

Replace ‘as the principal local response’ in (iv) by ‘as part of the local response’, remove ‘and’ from the end of (iv), replace the final ‘;’ in (v) by ‘;’ and then add:

‘(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and
(vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, restart the local consultation.’

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Could I ask Professor Harriss-White to move the resolution.

Professor Barbara Harriss-White (Wolfson College, Department of International Development)

Mr Vice-Chancellor and fellow members of Congregation, we are here today to discuss an employers’ document on pension reform that has been sent to all of us with a request for responses. On the face of it, the problem is how to deal with the fact that we are living ever longer. The employers’ proposals would raise the normal pension age to 65, and to 66 by 2020; increase existing members’ contributions from 6.35 to 7.5 per cent; introduce a cap on the level of protection against inflation, and on the revaluation of deferred benefits; and for new entrants, exchange the final salary scheme, which I’ll call FS, for a career average re-evaluated earnings scheme, with a nice acronym of CARE. USS members will then get significantly different benefits depending on the circumstances they experience in the course of their university service.

The season for consultation opened on 20 October and will close on 22 December. In this process, employers are bound to provide information to employees and their representatives. The clock is ticking and it is already two-thirds spent.

In proposing the resolution, I wish to make two points: one about information, and the other about procedure.

With respect to information, the guidelines of the Department of Work and Pensions require USS members to be provided with appropriate worked examples. Without these, we cannot make an informed response to the consultation, but the information provided by the USS on their website has been far from adequate. They seem to acknowledge this themselves, as they recently added twelve points of supplementary information to total the eighty-nine questions that they anticipate our asking, yet it is still inadequate.

For instance, on the key issue of what individuals will lose, and what USS will save, by changing from FS to CARE, USS simulates CARE over three immediate years, but according to Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley’s calculations in the Oxford Magazine, Week 5, the change will reduce pensions from a working lifetime of contributions by at least twenty per cent. This does not count any potential additional losses from the proposed cap on inflation protection. USS should have provided us with worked examples over typical careers.

Second, we need information on issues ignored by USS, or only very lately added to their website. The proposals seek to write the Consumer Price Index specifically into the rules as the basis for calculating pension increases, so that even if the government decided to do something different, and better, for ‘official pensions’ in the future, USS would remain stuck with the CPI, which is a lower rate of increase than the index we have now. We need to know the reasons why.

Then there is the matter of its impact. USS explains that this aspect of the proposal is ‘straightforward and illustrations are unnecessary’, I quote, but they then contradict themselves by saying that the impact is an impossible question to answer fully without sophisticated modelling.

Well after the deadline for USS to provide information, the website has, indeed, made a spirited attempt at modelling, which then shows significant losses to individuals, averaging five per cent per year over a twenty-year pension. The issue should have been prominently published so we could consider it properly. We also need to know the reasons for the proposal to cap the CPI at five per cent. Cooper and Cowley show that had this cap been applied in the 1970s and 1980s, it would have cut pensions by up to thirty-six per cent in real terms. Clearly, our pensions are not ‘defined benefits’ if inflation exceeds five per cent. We need expert advice on the exposure of our pensions and our pension fund to market risks, including inflation.

Third, certain pensions face a wall of discretion. We need more information on the exemption from CARE for staff who take more than six months but less than five years of time out for whatever reason: to work in industry, to work for the UN, to work abroad, to wait for a research grant to come, bringing up young children or caring for relatives. It is proposed that such cases will need ‘pre-agreement’ according to criteria which USS itself confesses are ‘inexact’.

They introduce a discretion associated with, and I quote, ‘a reasonable expectation of a return to duty with that employer, or with an associated employer.’ The USS advises haste in resolving such cases, suggesting that they appreciate that the CARE scheme is inferior to FS. We are entitled to know Oxford’s criteria for exemptions from CARE, and USS should have provided a direct comparison. These reforms are likely to have the worst effect on women, because women earn less than men, and if breaks are taken to care for young children, it tends to be women who take them. We need to know the gender or the equalities impact of the reforms. This is devolved to each university. According to the proposals, there may be a requirement. We should insist that it is a requirement here. In sum, the changes proposed will reduce both existing and future pensions. The academics who replace us will have a very much worse deal, and staff who intermit, defer, take early requirement or are made redundant, will be liable to have still poorer pensions. These are serious losses.

In considering our response, we’re entitled to have timely and relevant information that has so far not been given. There is one last issue of information I wish to raise. The employers’ proposal is not the only proposal for solving the problem posed by our living longer. There is a UCU proposal, but instead of it also being there for us to consider, it is buried under thick sediment on the USS website. Eight informed clicks; I can give the URL to anybody interested.

My second point concerns procedure, and it will be much more brief. The University’s institutional response should represent the opinions of its staff. Under DWP rules, USS must consult the University, which must, in turn, consult its staff. So Oxford could, and it should, circulate the two alternative proposals for change to USS pensions; provide the arguments in support of each of them; test opinion in a ballot between them; and then use the ballot results to provide Oxford’s institutional response to the USS board and, if necessary, the government.

If we, employers and employees of the University, put this together, one wonders at the reasons why, if we are in this together, we can today express our concern about the future of our profession, about recruitment and retention in higher education, as encapsulated in the question of pension reform. I therefore move the resolution, first, for a properly informed 4° consultation on the proposal to reform our pension scheme, which includes its equality impact; and, second, for a representation from Oxford University to the USS trustees which truly and clearly reflects the view of the staff of this University. Now, we want to get through the amendment as efficiently as possible and to have the main discussion on the resolution after the debate on the amendment, so I hope that we can develop a broad discussion of the proposal of the official alternative, and of many other alternatives later. Thank you.

VICE-CHELLENSOR: Could I call on Mr Hoad to second the resolution, please.

Mr Terry Hoad (St Peter’s College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. We’ve just heard cogent arguments as to why fuller information is needed in the USS consultation process. In seconding the resolution, I will focus on just two questions on which fuller information is needed: how much change is required? and what alternative courses of action are available? The twelve-page USS consultation booklet provides just one side of rather bland text on ‘the need for change’. It tells members that employers see the proposed changes as ‘necessary to safeguard the long term sustainability of the scheme.’ It tells them that, nevertheless, ‘the scheme is not in crisis, although it is in danger of becoming unaffordable’. And it tells them that ‘mounting financial and other pressures are putting a strain on the scheme.’ The pressures are identified as being, firstly, the habit members have acquired of living longer, and so drawing their pensions for more years; higher than anticipated salary increases in recent years; and lower than expected investment returns and ongoing volatility in the markets.

There is not a scrap of quantification of the financial pressures on the scheme, but the impression is given, firstly, that the scheme is in a perilous situation, calling for swift and serious remedial action; and, secondly, that only changes set out in EPP proposals will suffice. Neither should be accepted. How seriously is the scheme in danger? Three relevant facts can be gleaned from the USS Members’ Annual Report 2010. Last year, the value of the USS fund increased by £8.5 billion, an increase of around forty per cent. The proportion of the scheme’s liabilities for future pensions that is covered by its accumulated funds rose from seventy-five per cent to ninety-one per cent. It has therefore moved back quite close to the figure of 10% per cent, which applied when the 2008 valuation took place. Finally, employee and employer contributions received exceeded benefits paid by £129 million. It has, in fact, routinely been the case for a good many years that USS contribution income has substantially exceeded benefits paid out. As the scheme matures, that is likely to change, of course, but the timescale will be moderately long. All this is scarcely evidence justifying immediate major cutbacks in member benefits, but how will members know the flimsiness of the evidence unless provided with the relevant information? For very many of us, pensions are a pretty arcane subject; confident assertions, even if unsubstantiated, are all too likely to be accepted without question if no counter-argument is made. Will members see behind a veneer of talk about ‘sustainability’ to the employers’ real claim: that they cannot afford the present arrangements? The USS leaflet, ‘USS—the need for reform’, is more explicit. I quote: ‘Employers are certainly unable to fund the rising costs of USS in its current form.’ Can we accept that claim? Consider, because of constraints of time, just one point. Noting recent salary increases, the USS consultation booklet speaks of trends of higher than expected pay rises as ‘one of the cost pressures on the scheme.’ Salary increases and higher education have been less than extravagantly generous for some time, so talk of a trend of higher than expected pay rises strikes a risibly implausible note. Rather, universities were blessed with a significantly lower pay increase—0.5 per cent in 2009—than most had expected and, indeed, had budgeted for.

Let me turn more briefly to my second topic: alternative ways of addressing the situation. There is very little mention in the USS consultation booklet, and none in the USS leaflet, of the fact that the University and College Union put forward a carefully worked out alternative set of proposals, some very close to the ones proposed by the employers. On the basis of the information in the consultation papers, would members know that the UCU proposals included raising the normal pension age to sixty for entrants to the scheme? Would they know that those proposals included increases in employee contributions? Would they know that UCU had agreed that cost increases, which at present fall exclusively on the employers, would in future be shared between them and the employees? Would they know that actuarial advice taken by UCU supported the Union’s belief that the changes it was suggesting would be fully sufficient to address the scheme’s needs? Members of Congregation, I ask you to support the resolution which will enable staff members to make a properly informed response in the consultation.

VICE-CHELLENSOR: Thank you. Could I ask Dr Mapstone to oppose the resolution.

Dr Sally Mapstone (St Hilda’s College, English Faculty)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, I’m Pro-Vice-Chancellor
This is itself a challenge, and thus this debate is further to be welcomed. We would intend to submit a transcript of this debate to USS on behalf of the University.

The proposals on which we’re being consulted have been two years in the making and are the result of extensive discussion in the Joint Negotiating Committee of the USS, which, although a USS body, sits apart from the trustee board. The JNC consists of two stakeholder groups: five people appointed by Universities UK, and five people appointed by the UCU. It has an independent chairman. Proposals for change have come about as a result of concerns about the sustainability of the scheme, following a series of recent valuations, the last of which, at March of this year, showed a funding deficit of £2.7 billion. The employers and the unions take different views on the current state and long-term prognosis for the scheme, and we will certainly be hearing different views on this today, and different views were expressed on it in Council. The proposals that we should remind ourselves we’re currently being consulted on, however, are those which were accepted by the Joint Negotiating Committee on 7 July of this year, when the chairman cast his deciding vote in favour of them. These were the proposals of the Employers Pensions Forum, proposals that also, as you have heard, have been put forward by the UCU members on the committee. The employers’ proposals, once accepted, were subsequently accepted by the USS trustees at a meeting on 22 July and have been worked up into the form on which consultation is now taking place.

The employers’ proposals retain final salary benefits for existing USS members. They introduced, for everyone under fifty-five, a normal pension age of sixty-five for future service, so that pensions taken from before that age are actuarially reduced to recognise the extra length of time over which the pension would be payable—important as a response to increasing longevity. They increase employee contributions, such contributions having remained broadly constant since the scheme was set up, and employers alone having borne the additional costs required by the scheme since its inception. They introduce cost-sharing between employers and employees in relation to any future increases. They introduce a new way of calculating benefits for new starters: this so-called CARE scheme reduces the strain on the scheme that arises from substantial salary increases close to retirement, which boost the pension without concomitant contributions to cover the full cost. They cap increases in pensions in payment in line with the CPI or five per cent, whichever is the lower, on future rights that are earned in the scheme. They cap increases in pensions in deferment in line with the CPI or 2.5 per cent, whichever is the lower. They introduce arrangements to permit flexible retirement after age fifty-five.

When a consultation of this sort takes place, there are statutory obligations on the employer. Under the terms of the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 2006, the University as an employer is required to consult on listed changes—which include certain of the USS proposals—with specified representatives of affected members and, after the consultation is complete, to forward the comments received to the trustees. Our recognised representatives are the UCU. Stephen Goss, who chairs the University’s Joint Consultative Committee with the Oxford UCU will be talking next about our recent discussions with the Union. We should also note at this stage that the catchment of the present consultation has been expanded by USS and the employers to cover each individual affected member of USS, although that is not technically required.

I need now to share with Congregation the second reason that Council viewed the resolution and amendment as unacceptable. This lay in the reservations that some members of Council, as University trustees, had about aspects of the wording and purpose of the resolution and the amendment. In my remarks at this stage I will concentrate on the resolution and on the headline concerns about this.

The resolution requires the University firstly to publish the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the Employers Pension Forum and the UCU, together with supporting arguments for each, to conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals and to publish the results to the scheme members. The concern of some members of Council with this is that it advocates a process that is not part of the national consultation being undertaken by USS. There is no provision within the scheme rules for balloting members as an alternative to the JNC process in which the UCU have participated. The request is for a ballot on the ‘alternative proposals’, but nationally there are no alternative proposals on the table. The USS consultation is on one set of proposals originating with the employers, put forward by the JNC and worked up in their present form by the trustees. How meaningful to the consultation would be a ballot on something that is not part of the consultation itself?

The resolution also requires that the ballot response be sent to USS as the principal local response to the statutory consultation exercise. This is something, as we’ve heard, that has been changed in the amendment. The removal of this requirement is something that we would... very much welcome, as we did not see how we could comply with the requirements of the statutory consultation by making a separate exercise the University’s principal response. As noted, under the regulations, the response of the representatives, i.e. the one we will forward from the UCU, is the one strictly required.

Finally, Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Council were concerned that this kind of exercise—time-consuming, resource intensive and tangential to the national consultation exercise itself—will distract from what should be the primary focus of this consultation period, considering the details of the proposals and seeking clarification, as we have been doing recently, of elements that would benefit from additional comment from USS. It was thus for this combination of reasons that Council took the decision it did, and I thus formally now oppose the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you very much. Could I ask Dr Goss to second the opposition to the resolution.

Dr Stephen Goss (Wadham College, Oxford Learning Institute)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, and members of Congregation. I’m speaking this afternoon as Vice-Chairman of the Personnel Committee and I should like, please, to set this afternoon’s discussion of the resolution in the context of two similar requests made recently to us by the UCU. The origins of the resolution can be traced specifically to a motion adopted in late August by the Oxford UCU. This motion asked the University to hold a consultative ballot on two sets of proposals—on the one hand, those approved by the JNC for implementation by the USS; and, on the other, the UCU proposals which were not supported by the JNC, and so which are no longer under consideration. The USS had, on behalf of the employers, devised a website to inform scheme members of the intended changes, and, as a supplement to the legally required consultations with the Union, to take a direct record of members’ comments. When we met the Oxford UCU to consider their request for a ballot, none of us had seen the site as it had not been opened.

For officers of the University to have agreed to the Union’s ballot could have been seen outside Oxford as indicating that we anticipated, even without having seen the USS site, that the questions which would be asked by the USS would be inappropriate or insufficient and we were concerned not to undermine the USS consultation by giving any such impression. When the USS site opened, it transpired that the areas addressed were wider ranging than required for statutory consultation, and the site offered scheme members the chance to comment specifically on each of six aspects of the proposed changes, and to make additional comments, including, if they wished, rejection of the entire package. As it had already taken two years of informed debate for the JNC to decide on their instruction to the trustees, it was clearly prudent, and also respectful of its intended audience, that the consultation should have been designed so as to tease out members’ specific concerns, rather than just providing them with a yes/no ballot. The local ballot now sought by members of Congregation closely resembles the ballots sought by the Oxford UCU. Members will be given the choice between two sets of proposals—USS and UCU—and will also be able to comment. The USS consultation already provides well for collecting views on the proposals that the trustees are planning to implement, and a ballot on other proposals which the trustees are not considering could be misleading. It would be regrettable, providing the ballot were suggested to members that voting for a set of proposals not under consideration could be more meaningful than commenting directly on the changes that the USS trustees are now bound to implement, subject to this consultation.

I would note in this context that, in early August, the national UCU made individual requests to all universities for a ballot on the two sets of proposals. Having had that request turned down, they decided to set up their own referendum and make it open to everyone, whether UCU member or not. It seeks a yes/no vote on only the USS proposals. The national UCU seems to have decided not to hold a referendum on its own proposals. We are now in a position where we can use the USS consultations site, which is designed to ensure that each individual can submit comments once only, and we can also use the national UCU referendum, which is open to all, including all those who have already had their say on the USS site. The resolution before Congregation proposes that we give Oxford staff a third chance to reject the substantive proposals and a second chance for free comment. It is difficult to see the need for Oxford staff to have so many opportunities to express their views, and it is equally difficult to see how such local preference could be justified in a national context, especially since it is not possible to detect multiple voting.

Having called into question the appropriateness of the proposed ballot, I’m pleased now to acknowledge that it is very helpful that the proposed amendment would make a local ballot only a part of Oxford’s response. Given our legal obligations, the requirement that the ballot should be our principal response would rightly have been a cause for concern. Furthermore, it is proper that we should not, in any way, subordinate our equality impact assessment of the USS proposals. That assessment is nearing completion and we are providing it to the UCU to inform their response in the statutory consultation. We are meeting to discuss the matter on Friday. Mr Vice-Chancellor, having offered these points in the spirit of Council’s wish to facilitate a full debate on these matters, I should now like to second opposition to the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I now call on Mr Briggs to move the amendment.

Mr Robin Briggs (All Souls College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. My primary task for this afternoon is to explain the logic behind the amendment. This is a natural extension of the resolution, supported by those who drafted the latter, so its proposers hope that it can be approved quickly as the first step in moving to a general debate.

First, a few general remarks. This matter goes well beyond the individual interests of current members of USS. A sharp deterioration in the conditions of service of academic and academic-related staff, such as the proposed changes to the pension scheme would bring for new members in particular, would be a very bad thing for the University as a whole. We can expect discord due to pension rights that differ according to mere issues of career timing, and future recruitment and retention problems. However, it would seem that elsewhere University managers have thought differently and have often presented the changes as a done deal, presumably looking to their balance sheets. Oxford and Cambridge, with their exceptional democratic structures, may have a vital role to play in defending the general interest against such short-sighted attitudes. We cannot of our own accord vote the changes down nationally, but we can hold an open debate and require the University to consult properly. Ultimately, we must hope that when the USS trustees meet on 20 January, they can be persuaded, in part due to such measures, to refer the matter back for further negotiations.

The proposed ballot is one crucial instrument to that end, which the proposers of the amendment endorse very strongly. At a procedural level, I must stress that deleting the word ‘principal’ is a technical change to allow responses to further information and does not wish to downgrade—does not imply any wish to downgrade—the importance attached to this ballot or any future ballot.

The amendment strengthens the resolution by the very reasonable request that USS restart the consultation after providing adequate information. No date is specified in order to allow some flexibility to Council, and we recognise it is vital our reply be made by 22 December, both to meet our legal obligations and to ensure that USS cannot simply ignore our response. That should not preclude starting a second consultation after that date in order to remedy the deficiencies in the first. In this situation, the ballot alone would be an inadequate response to what we see as a major threat to the best interests of the University.

For the more senior members present, and even more for current pensioners like myself, the changes have only fairly modest effects. That’s one reason why I’m making this opening speech as someone who has a less significant personal interest. In addition, as the chair of a body of pension fund trustees, I have myself already been obliged to undertake a certain amount of home study on procedures and regulations.

The amendment seeks to focus attention very precisely on the defects in the present consultation. This is a rather technical matter, so I hope you will bear with me as I try to unravel some of the complexities. We are operating under a set of rules laid out in this statutory instrument issued by the Department of Work and Pensions in 2006, already mentioned. When changes of certain specified kinds are proposed, employers must consult on amendments. So, Oxford University has the responsibility to consult, although the proposals come from USS. Both are under a duty to ensure that the consultation follows the rules, which includes the provision of full and adequate information. I do not believe that anyone could assert that with any confidence whatsoever about the present highly flawed exercise, which must surely lay both USS and Oxford open to an appeal to the Pensions Regulator.

What the statutory instrument actually says in Regulation II includes the following key requirements about information, which must be provided before the start of the consultation, not during it, and it must describe the listed change and state what effects it would or be likely to have on the scheme and its members, be accompanied by any relevant background information, and be given in such fashion and with such content as are appropriate to enable, in particular, representatives of affected members to consider, conduct a study of and give their views to the employer on the impact of the listed change on such members.

Then there is the supporting advice from the DWP, making it clear that worked examples of the type cited in the amendment should form part of the consultation. We can all read the sketchy document circulated by USS and see they have gone to some lengths to avoid giving figures: there are just two or three short and rather unhelpful answers. They would prefer to make reassuring statements of a general kind, and from calculations made by Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley you will know why we should feel anything but reassured.

USS have very recently added some answers to questions on their website, much too late to count legally or morally. While some of them are more revealing than they may intend, I think it is actually misleading to tell us that changes have been agreed by the Joint Negotiating Committee, as we’ve also been told already in speeches today, without making really very clear that this was on the casting vote of the chair, and that such an agreement is, really, a form of words which is not, I think, entirely helpful.

In defence of the ungenerous accrual rate chosen for the new CARE arrangement, USS offers this justification: ‘The changes proposed are intended by the employers to allow them to pass on to the members the costs of modifying the scheme’s investment strategy by changing asset mix towards less volatile, risk-reducing assets with lower returns than equities. The proposed CARE-like structure has been put forward at 1/80th and 3/80ths of level so that, in terms of overall costs to the employer, it enables this switch to lower-risk assets to take place whilst reducing the likelihood of employer contributions being raised above sixteen per cent.’ So, this is a cut in benefit to achieve a cut in costs. The claimed advantage is allowing a change to a more conservative investment strategy, which will make their life easier at everyone else’s expense and pass risk from the employers to the members. This change goes to the very heart of the dispute. I believe that USS has failed to offer any plausible explanation for how the trustees could see it as a decision which holds the balance between the interests of members and employers.

Behind all of this lies some notably clumsy legislation with which I’ve become familiar in my own trustee role. The valuation arrangements and the actuarial calculations combine to form something of a black art, open to much complex interpretation. Here I commend the analysis by the expert used by the UCU, who points out that the USS trustees and the Regulator should remember that in this case the employers are not commercial companies, so it is wholly rational for USS to take a different approach to risk from that used in many company schemes.

Our amendment seeks to bring some of these issues out into the open. Let me remind everyone that the USS trustees have a very clear duty to respect the interests of both employers and members and to strike a fair balance between them. So, in the interests of British universities as a whole, and the future of our profession, Oxford should formally request correction to the current defective consultation. Our amendment strengthens the resolution so that it does just that. Mr Vice-Chancellor, I beg to move the amendment.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Mr Briggs. Could I call on Dr Lovibond to second the amendment.

Dr Sabina Lovibond (Worcester College)
Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. Actually, colleagues, I’m going to forego my five minutes. I’ve undertaken to come here this afternoon and act as a formal seconder of the amendment, and I hereby do so.

As one of the proposers of the original resolution, I’m also a proposer and supporter of the amendment and I urge you to support it too, so I’ll stop there to leave more time for debate.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Lovibond. Could I call on Dr Mapstone to oppose the amendment.

Dr Sally Mapstone (St Hilda’s College, English Faculty)
Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, there are, again, two reasons for Council taking the view that the amendment as put was unacceptable. The first was to ensure a broad debate of pension issues in Congregation. The amendment places emphasis on the information supplied within the consultation process and members of Council acknowledged concerns that the information provided to members of the scheme should be adequate. However, the second reason was that some members also have reservations, as university trustees, about the wording and purpose of the amendment in terms of the University’s legal obligations as an employer within the consultation process. I will focus on the reservations so that Congregation can understand them.

In commenting on this it is necessary to give Congregation an indication of what, through dialogue with UCEA—the Universities and Colleges Employers Association—and with the Employers Pension Forum we understand USS’s position to be. Putting forward the position of another party in the dispute of course risks one being attributed with what, recognising the danger of intruding a metaphor like this into Congregation, I may refer to as poodle status. I don’t actually think that anyone would fancy being USS’s poodle at the moment, and I hope you will appreciate that I’m not here to speak for USS perfectly disguised as a poodle. I am, rather, trying to explain to Congregation our understanding of USS’s position; thus there may be limits about what I can say about that position in...

The amendment requires the University to seek proper information from USS in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme, to include worked examples.

We understand that USS’s position on this is that the consultation being carried out by employers in USS fulfils the legal requirements under pensions legislation. Indeed, advice provided to the trustee company by its legal advisers is that the consultation goes well beyond those requirements, which are established by the 2006 regulations. These regulations are illuminated by the DWP guidance, referred to in the amendment. That guidance itself has no legal force but USS, we understand, is of the view that it has complied with it. Thus, while some members of both Council and Congregation will be of the view that more detail should have been provided by USS and the EPF, this does not mean that the information is demonstrably legally inadequate, or would be ruled so if referred in due course to the Pensions Regulator.

That said, USS has, as we’ve already indicated, recently published additional information in response to requests to it from this University. On behalf of the University, twelve additional questions were sent to USS with the request that they be addressed on the Q and A part of the consultation website. As of this weekend they have been added to the website with answers under the heading ‘Supplementary material’. When the website went live, it had indeed contained a statement in relation to the Q and As that, ‘During the consultation additional Q and As may be added to the website.’ We understand USS’s position to be that these additional questions and answers are regarded as clarificatory and supplementary.

If the amendment is passed, a decision would need to be taken about the sufficiency of this supplementary information as far as the reference to ‘proper information’ in the amendment is concerned, and a decision will need to be taken on who is making that judgment. We’ve already heard the view expressed that the information is progress, but not enough, and that more information needs to be asked for. However, the implication of the amendment then is that if no ‘proper information’ is eventually provided by USS, the rest of the sequence of actions—requesting the USS to restart the consultation, and if that is refused restarting locally—falls away. We would request clarification on that from the proposers of the amendment. Whether or not more material can be obtained from USS, USS’s position seems to be, as I’ve indicated, that any information provided by it in this context is clarificatory. This makes it highly unlikely that USS will agree to restart the consultation because it does not see itself as under any necessity or obligation to do so.

The amendment next goes on to posit that if additional information is made available and the consultation restarted by USS, those who have already submitted responses should be allowed to modify them. The amendment envisages this only in the circumstances in which additional information has been supplied by USS and a consultation restarted. What we can say to Congregation now, however, is that any member of USS wishing to modify what they have already said can set out their intended changes in writing and provide them to the University for forwarding to USS within the consultative period. This would be in addition to the statutory return we have to make by the set date and would ensure that we would return to USS not only the information we’re required to return by law, but also the full range of comments provided to us by individual members.

The final point in the amendment is that if USS refuses to restart the consultation process, the University should restart the local consultation, and this was the point which gave members of Council most concern. Firstly, there are some sequencing issues here. As I’ve indicated, if the amendment is passed, a view will need to be taken on whether the supplementary information now supplied by USS is ‘proper’, or whether USS needs to be asked for supplementary supplementary information. If USS is still to be asked for further information, how is this to be correlated with the running of the consultative ballot? We have heard some comments on this already, but let me set this out as we currently understand it. In order for the ballot to be completed before the stated end of the consultation process on 22 December, it would be necessary to conduct the ballot as soon as possible, before the completion of the sequence of events that might involve asking USS for more information, and could involve asking USS to restart the consultation process. If USS declines to restart the consultation process—and every indication is that it will so decline—the University would be required to restart it locally. As the consultation process is a minimum of sixty days, this would mean that our local consultation process would finish well after 22 December.

A key point here is that, as I explained in relation to the resolution, the University is required under law to complete its consultation with its recognised representatives and submit to USS their response by the end of the set consultation period. There are potentially serious penalties if it does not do so. We are concerned that if we restart the local consultation process, in circumstances in which USS nationally has not accepted any need for this, we and the Oxford UCU risk a muddled and incomplete response to the consultation that Oxford is obliged to return. The University’s legal advice is that we will still be compliant with the 2006 regulations if we submit to USS an account of consultation with the UCU up to 22 December. We are concerned that the value of UCU’s comments will be reduced if the University has undertaken to start additional local consultation which will effectively be running outside the statutory timetable.

In order to follow the requirements of the amendment, it might thus be necessary for the University to conduct one ballot while it asks USS for information, in order to get a response to that ballot by 22 December, and then, having restarted its local consultation because the USS has declined to do so nationally, conduct another ballot in the New Year and conclude its local consultation in February 2011. The changes to USS are due to be introduced in April.

Members of Congregation must thus decide if they think what is proposed in the amendment is the most effective way for the University to influence the current consultation. USS is required to consider the responses it receives within time to the consultation and, as a result, modifications to the proposals may be put forward for further discussion in the JNC. That being the case, I would encourage members of Congregation, whatever their position, to respond to the consultation via the USS website. We look forward now to hearing the other range of points members of Congregation will make in relation to the amendment and, in that spirit, Mr Vice-Chancellor, I move to oppose the amendment.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Mapstone. Could I ask Dr Goss to second the opposition to the amendment.

Dr Stephen Goss (Wadham College, Oxford Learning Institute)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors and members of Congregation, in speaking now as seconder opposing the amendment, I shall be brief, though not quite as brief as Dr Lovibond.

Dr Mapstone has just described the procedural ambiguities arising from the amendment and also the difficulties with respect to timing and deadlines when it comes to implementing what is proposed. I should like to give a summary of the procedural questions that arise, and which I submit it would be helpful to have answered, for the information of members of Congregation, as they consider how to cast their votes.

Who will draft the specification of the further information that we have been told is still needed to satisfy Congregation? Who will then assess whether the information, if any, provided by the USS is such as to trigger clause (vii) so that we need to ask USS to restart the national consultation? Is it intended that the University should open the consultative ballot required by the resolution before the outcome of this correspondence with the USS is determined? Assuming that the consultative ballot is indeed started whilst discussions with USS continue, is it nevertheless accepted that the University must provide the responses from that ballot to the USS regardless of any subsequent decision to restart our local consultation? Is it accepted that the amendment makes no provision for further specific action by the University if the USS simply refuses to provide any supplementary information? If, having been asked to restart the consultation, the USS refuses to do so, the University is then required by the amendment to restart its local consultation. Is it intended this will involve a second consultative ballot in Oxford if one has already been undertaken? Is it intended that the University should restart its local consultation even if it turns out to be the case, as can be expected, that the outcome of the restarted process will be known too late to be taken into account by the USS? More straightforwardly, is it the intention either under the amended or the unamended resolution that the comments of members to be published locally should be just those comments submitted in the local ballot and that publication should be only with the consent of those submitting the comments?

Finally, if the responses to the ballot can be got ready for publication whilst the consultative period is still running, is it intended that they be published so that they can influence anyone who has not by then taken part in the consultation?

I submit that the answers to these questions would be helpful to members of Congregation in their understanding of the process that the amendment seeks to bring about. Furthermore, any clarification which can be provided whilst we are all together this afternoon will reduce the possibility of needless controversy arising as the procedures evolves. Mr Vice-Chancellor, given the uncertainty about the procedural implications of the amendment, I should now like to second opposition to the amendment.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Goss.

The debate on the amendment is now open to the House. Mr Briggs, do you wish to reply?

Mr Robin Briggs (All Souls College)

Yes, briefly, Vice-Chancellor. I think it’s a rather remarkable debating technique to pose a whole series of questions of considerable complexity and difficulty and seem to require an answer on the spot. I think that speaks for itself. I don’t wish to comment on it further, except to say that clearly it would be necessary for me to consult a whole group of people who have views on this, and it cannot be done this afternoon.

It was certainly no part of the wish of those moving either resolution or amendment, I think, to create legal difficulties for the University, and I think it should be understood by all that we really wish is for Council to take responsibility – Council and its committees – for this matter in the light of this debate. That was how I read the original response of Council, as I understood it, and I’m rather bewildered that we should be presented with this kind of legal and technical minefield to which, as I say, I don’t think I could possibly give any answers now. What I would simply stress again is that this is a very important matter: it has huge significance for the future of universities in this country and it is something where we are faced, in the view, I believe, of most members of this House, with a very flawed consultation. If I’m told that it is legal, then I suppose I have to accept that, although I think that on this matter, as others, there may well be different legal opinions and I do believe that a serious challenge could be mounted, and I would stress again that there is a requirement for information to be given at the start of the process, and that, plainly, has not been met with many of the matters that have been mentioned. That was one reason for wanting a restarted consultation on a proper basis.

I think that it is these general issues that we are here to debate rather than the minutiae, important and difficult though those minutiae might be, and so I urge the House to support the amendment.

Debate on the amended resolution

VICE-CHANCELLOR: As the amendment has been approved, under Regulation 3.19 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 the resolution as amended shall be put to the House. I shall now ask the Registrar to read the resolution as amended.

REGISTRAR: Congregation notes that the University as an employer has a statutory obligation, under the Occupational and Personal Pension Schemes (Consultation by Employers and Miscellaneous Amendment) Regulations 2006, to consult affected employees on the changes that have been proposed to the Universities Superannuation Scheme.

Congregation further notes:

(a) that persons who are active members of USS or are eligible to join the scheme have received as part of that consultation process a copy of a USS document outlining the proposed changes and a document from the Employers Pension Forum for Higher Education which purports to explain ‘why changes are needed’ and that ‘the proposed changes are considered by the employers to be right for the benefit of the scheme and its members’; and

(b) that as the body representing all employee members of USS under the rules of the scheme, the University and College Union has published on its website criticism of the process being followed by higher education employers in carrying out the consultation, and a critique of the EPF document.

Believing that consultation, if it is to be meaningful, must seek the views of those consulted when the latter have been provided with all the information necessary for them to make an informed response, Congregation determines that the University will:

(i) publish to all affected employees the alternative proposals for changes to USS put forward by the EPF and by UCU, together with supporting arguments for each;

(ii) conduct a consultative ballot on those alternative proposals;

(iii) publish the result of the ballot to scheme members within the University;

(iv) send the ballot result to USS as part of the local response to the statutory consultation exercise;

(v) ensure all members of USS are able to engage in the process and that their comments are fully reflected in the institution’s response to USS and that they are published locally;

(vi) seek proper information from USS, in conformity with the guidance provided by the Department of Work and Pensions on the conduct of a formal consultation by employers on major changes in a pension scheme; this information should include a suitable range of worked examples; and

(vii) request USS to restart the consultation after this information is made available, with those who have already submitted responses being allowed to modify them; if USS refuses, restart the local consultation.
VICE-CHANCELLOR: The debate on the amended resolution is now open to the House. As before, I would ask all speakers to come forward and to speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the House should please follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. At the end of the debate I shall ask Dr Mapstone and then Professor Harriss-White whether they wish to deal with any of the points raised in the speeches.

I take this opportunity to remind them that they should at that stage deal only with points raised during the course of the debate and should not introduce any new matters. I shall then take a division on the amended resolution. Again, this will be by written ballot for which members of Congregation will have been given a voting paper. Any member who does not have a voting paper will have an opportunity to collect one at the exits.

Professor Harriss-White, under the regulations the proposer of the resolution has the right to speak first in the debate on the amended resolution. Do you wish to speak first in the debate?

Professor Barbara Harriss-White (Wolfson College, Department of International Development)

I wish to waive that right.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: I will call on Mr Bernard Sufrin.

Mr Bernard Sufrin (Worchester College, Computing Laboratory)

Bernard Sufrin, superannuated member of Worchester College. Dr Mapstone and I argued during the voting that our predecessors must be made of sternier stuff than we are. Let us hope that our successors don’t have to be made of sternier stuff than we are. Will the USS proposals, Vice-Chancellor and colleagues, serve Oxford’s future needs? Will they serve the future needs of any leading UK university? I learned something about risk while serving on the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in the last four years. I learned about the risks to which complex systems are exposed by the tendency to a herd mentality among those who oversee parts of them. If we accede to the present USS proposals without giving them proper scrutiny, then we, and much of the UK university system, will be exposed to several big, and unjustifiable, needs. These include damage to our international competitiveness and damage to the commitment of our staff to our students.

A prominent company chairman, John Timpson, recently wrote defining defined benefit schemes. He wrote of the herd mentality he thinks has infected other company chairman, actuaries and even the Pensions Regulator. He thinks, and I quote: ‘It is amazing that funds which should be looking fifty years ahead should rely so heavily on short-term fluctuations in equity prices for making their judgments.’ I think the USS trustees may have been infected by this herd mentality to the extent that they have forgotten that they are not overseeing the pension fund of a company on whose balance sheet pension liabilities must appear, but overseeing a healthy fund – the second largest in the UK – that has a very large current account surplus, and whose valuation has been rising since the crash of 2008, and is already within nine per cent of where it would need to be if every single UK university went bankrupt next year.

Let me address a couple of the risks the USS trustees will expose us to if they adopt the proposed structure unchanged. The first risk is that of damaging the international competitiveness of top UK universities like ours. The pension scheme has been an important part of the attraction of the job to many academics, so what is the point of saving money on pensions if the net effect is that we slip down the league because you become less effective at recruiting and retaining staff? These days we expect that our brightest young post-docs will move around the globe in mid-career, taking up fixed-term contracts in leading universities, in commerce and in industry, and when we advertise established posts we expect the best of them to apply, and we expect to make use of the knowledge, the experience and the networks they developed while away. But the proposed changes set in place a two-tier system in which those who remain UK academics for the whole of their career will be offered much higher benefits than those who move around. Why would anyone in their right minds want to come back to a second-class pension? The financial incentives are being changed to point in the opposite direction to our academic goals.

The second risk is of a deterioration of relationships between academics and their students and its effects on the long-term health of our university system. The implicit contract between us and the university system has been that academics accept lower pay during our careers in return for academic freedom and a decent and specified measure of security in our old age, but the capping of the inflation indexing at five per cent will surely catalyse a deterioration in relationships because academics will, in future, have to spend very much more time and energy trying to mitigate the unknowable risks that they might be exposed to in retirement.

We may no longer be able to spend the time to do a third reading of a thesis or spend an extra two weeks setting up a Master’s project or an extra hour or two on a difficult tutorial question, or any of the countless other acts of generosity that contribute so much to the education of students’ education but are not accounted for in the official narratives of our work. Capping inflation indexing takes away the reliability of the scheme for academics, but – unless high inflation is guaranteed – doesn’t reliably make it cheaper for universities. In a period of even moderately high inflation, our pensioners will be pauperised if they live too long. This isn’t good value for anybody. Leading universities need to ask whether USS is really serving their needs with these proposals. Fatalism is inappropriate today. This is not a done deal. We are the sovereign body of one of those two universities whose academics can make them think again when they are about to make a mistake. Our administration would be making a mistake if Oxford failed to conduct a proper employer’s consultation, and they would be making a mistake if Oxford failed to insist that USS provide enough information for that consultation to take place, and they would be making a serious mistake with potentially epic consequences if Oxford failed to point out to the USS trustees the long-term damage that the proposed restructuring risks doing to the UK universities as a whole. Council needs the strongest possible mandate in talking to USS. I urge you to support the amendment and the motion.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Sir Ivor Crewe.

Sir Ivor Crewe (Master of University College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, I should declare an interest. In 2006 and 2007 I was a USS trustee, nominated by Universities UK, and in that period it quickly became clear to me that reforms in the benefits scheme were necessary if employers were to be protected against short notice significant increases in contributions which would threaten their own financial sustainability. This, incidentally, was the view taken not only by trustees drawn from the employers’ side, but also by the independents amongst the USS trustees.

The case to reform has been strong for at least five years, and not just the last two years of negotiations on the Joint Negotiating Committee, and it is now urgent.

The risks to the long-term sustainability of the current USS scheme are well known: firstly, the increased longevity of academics, who know all about healthy lifestyles; secondly, the stretch in real salary level at the upper end of the scale, which obviously reflects a final salary scheme, not, as somebody said earlier, the overall increase in pay; and, thirdly, the increased use of early retirement on the generous USS terms by some universities as a means of restructuring their personnel. The USS actuaries have consistently underestimated the acceleration of these trends. There is no reason to believe that they will reverse and it would be prudent to assume that they will continue. The proposed reforms do not, in my view, go far enough. They are the minimum that can protect employers from unaffordable increases and contributions, and they are certainly modest compared with reforms in pension schemes elsewhere. They introduce to everyone under fifty-five a normal pension age of sixty-five for future service—a benefit, incidentally, to Oxford, where the average retirement age is sixty-six. Oxford has been for years subsidising USS member institutions with aggressive early retirement schemes.

They do increase employee contributions but, as we’ve already been told, such contributions have remained virtually the same since the scheme was set up and employers alone have had to bear the additional costs required by the scheme since its inception. They do introduce career average revalued earnings for new entrants, but that will reduce the cross-subsidy by the average academic for the minority of academic stars. The inflation metric does switch from RPI to the less favourable CPI, but the USS lawyers are quite clear that this is an unalterable government requirement. There is a cap on increases in pensions in line with the CPI or five per cent, whichever is the lower, and that would, of course, reduce the value of the pension in highly inflationary times, but there is also a proposed change to the USS rules which allows trustees to grant higher increases on a discretionary basis, subject to inflation and the availability of funds.

These terms are superior to those available in the private sector, which have closed down almost all defined benefit schemes, and we can be confident that they will compare favourably with public sector pension schemes after the reforms likely to be brought in by the Hutton Report. The Cooper-Cowley article in the Oxford Magazine refers to the superior deal available to some illustrious members of the Civil Service scheme, but that scheme is unfunded and very unlikely to survive. It is argued by the UCU and others that the future risks faced by the USS scheme are greatly exaggerated because, with the recent surge in equities, the March 2011 valuation is likely to be much more favourable than the March 2010 valuation. This is irresponsibly complacent: for one thing, bond yields have fallen to historic lows, so it is far from certain that the £3 billion pension deficit last March will have gone down significantly. Moreover, USS is a balance of cost scheme: employers have to meet the cost of any deficit at the triennial review. If that had happened to take place in 2009, when equities were very low, the cost to employers who must meet the deficit would have been enormous, and seriously destabilising to many institutions. If institutions go bankrupt, the strain increases on the remaining member employers, because USS is a ‘last man standing’ scheme.

My final point is a political one. The USS scheme may be a private scheme, but it is publicly funded. Employers’ contributions come largely out of tuition fee income or government grant; from students, parents and taxpayers. Do those who wish to scupper these moderate reforms, and to associate this University with their scuppering, really believe that it is in the corporate interest of this University to be marked out by the public and politicians as the university that wants to charge higher fees but won’t accept a mild reform of its very favourable benefits for the future generations of its academic staff?

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Professor James Malcomson.

Professor James Malcomson (All Souls College, Department of Economics)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, fellow members of Congregation, I wanted to address the USS reform proposals from a slightly different angle than most of the speakers so far; that is from the point of view of the principles underlying defined benefit pension schemes.

Now, fortunately for my getting finished within five minutes, the economics primer material involved in this is pretty straightforward. Fundamentally, defined benefit pension schemes are about insurance. If you doubt that, ask yourself the question whether you would be willingly paying USS contributions if you knew for sure that you and all your dependents were going to be killed in a car accident the day after you retired and so none of them were going to benefit. No, you wouldn’t. I wouldn’t, certainly. So it’s about insurance and that’s what fundamentally defined benefits are all about. Now, insurance is based on the principle that the risk is carried by the party that is best placed to bear it, and I want to apply that principle to three of the particular reforms involved in the USS proposals. I would just wish to add that I am not opposed to all reforms: I wish to apply sensible principles of pensions to those reforms.

So, the first of these issues is the cap on inflation indexing. USS proposes to limit the inflation indexing to five per cent for pensions and to 2.5 per cent for deferred benefits, which would simply put the risk of high inflation onto the beneficiaries. It is hard to see any logic for this in principle. Beneficiaries have very little scope for hedging their pension entitlements against high inflation, but pension funds have lots. Equities is one way of doing it—they are a slightly risky way of doing it—but there are other ways of doing it too. There are inflation-indexed bonds and these are readily and widely available. So, pension schemes are, indeed, in a very good position to be able to hedge against high levels of inflation. Now, I haven’t heard any logical case for these caps put forward by USS—not even on the recent additions to the USS website—so I’m just kind of left with the suspicion that they’re really there to protect USS managers against making bad investment decisions in a very high inflationary period.

The second issue I want to talk about is the proposal that in future USS will use the Consumer Price Index, the CPI, rather than the Retail Price Index for indexing pensions and deferred benefits. Now, let’s be clear: USS isn’t bound by the government rules that it should use the CPI, as the government is proposing for other public sector pension schemes, so it can make decisions on the basis of principles of insurance, and on insurance principles, and in view of the investment possibilities that are available to the pension funds, the appropriate index is the one that insures pensioners against a decrease in their standard of living. A case for a proposed change should be made on that; not simply that CPI will cost people less and we should save a bit of money on the pension schemes as a result of that.

The third issue concerns the shift to a career average revalued earnings based pension rather than a final salary based pension. Now, CARE pensions, as the career average ones have come to be called, actually seem to me to provide better insurance when seen from the perspective of somebody starting out on an academic career, and be less open to the abuse that we’ve heard about of paying artificially inflated salaries towards the ends of people’s working lives just before they retire. So, I personallly actually think that would be a desirable change for USS if it were to be done in an actuarially neutral way. Again, it is presented as a desirable thing, but it is presented in a way in which it is very hard to see that it is actuarially neutral. I certainly haven’t seen any evidence for that, and it certainly wouldn’t be if, as proposed, the beneficiaries are going to accrue their rights at the same 1/80th per year of service as under a final salary pension scheme.

Now, just to give you a rough idea of the implications, because clearly this isn’t a place for detailed calculations but, approximately speaking, if a final salary is double the starting salary in inflation-adjusted terms, and people move up from one to the other over the course of an academic career, then on the same accrual rate and on the same working lifetime, the pension under CARE is going to be seventy-five per cent of that final salary pension scheme. For that to be actuarially neutral, it would need to be that either the expected length of life of people after they retire — and you must remember that the proposals are that the retirement age will be increased would require this, or, indeed, that the investment would make that necessary. To my knowledge, USS has provided a detailed case for neither of these. So for these reasons, on the basis of the principle of good insurance, I strongly support the proposal as amended.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Giles Kerr.

Mr Giles Kerr (Director of Finance)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors and members of Congregation, Part of my responsibilities as Director of Finance for the University is the identification of the financial risks facing the University and to ensure that Council and Congregation are made aware of those risks. My purpose today is, therefore, to outline the significance of pension risk to the University and the significance of pension costs in our budget. The provision of pension benefits is, of course, a very important part of the overall employment benefit package made available to the great majority of our staff, but it is also a very significant part of the University’s budget. In 2009/10, for example, the University spent a total of £55 million on pension contributions. This cost is significant and it is also increasing. The cost of providing a guaranteed pension has increased sharply in recent years, and in 2009 pension contributions increased by £5 million a year when USS decreased the contribution rate to sixteen per cent of salary.

To put this figure into context, the University made a surplus in 2009 of only slightly more than £6.2 million, and in the previous year made a surplus of £1.2 million. The recent increase in USS pension contributions can, therefore, be the difference between balancing the budget and being in deficit. In 2009, when USS increased the rate of employer contributions to sixteen per cent, it did not rule out the possibility of further increases in the rate and, indeed, indicated that in the absence of change to the benefits structure, such further increases were likely. As indicated before, an increase of one per cent in the contribution rate is equivalent to a cost of £2.5 million per annum, and this cost will keep on rising each year in line with the increase in pay. In order to avoid the need for further increases, it has been necessary to bring forward changes to the benefit structure to the USS, and the changes are needed to bring the projected assets of the scheme into balance with its projected liabilities. The changes also go some way towards managing the financial risks associated with the scheme.

For all of us who are members of the scheme, as we’ve heard earlier on today, one of the most important benefits we receive is a guarantee that we will get a pension based on how much we earn, irrespective of what happens to the assets and liabilities of that scheme.

As members of the scheme, we do not have to worry about how the scheme investments perform in the future, because it is the University and the other employers that bear that risk. If the investments don’t perform as expected, it is the University that has to make up the gap between the pension we are guaranteed and the one that the scheme’s assets will actually pay for. This financial risk to the University, and to all the other participating employers in USS, is a very substantial and volatile one. USS themselves publish figures that indicate just how big this risk can be and, for example, if the rate of interest of the scheme should be one per cent different to that assumed by USS, the impact on the scheme is a staggering £4 billion. To further illustrate this, we can just look at the recent history of the funding position, and in March 2008 the scheme was fully funded. A year later, it has a deficit of £5.4 billion, and by March 2010, the deficit stood at £2.7 billion. That’s a very large figure and it is equivalent to about £20,000 for every active member of the scheme still contributing. If we multiply that number by the number of Oxford members in the scheme, our share of the deficit, crudely put, is about £120 million. This figure gives an indication of the scale of liabilities that the University could be facing if the scheme is not made more affordable. If we do incur further increases in pension costs, we certainly can’t assume that the increasing costs of our pension provision will be met by our funders. As we know from a recently published comprehensive spending review, our teaching grant is to be cut by approximately £45 million per annum, and the science budget has been frozen, so we certainly can’t look to government to help. We might be able to replace some of this lost funding with higher tuition fees, but I think it is obvious from recent events just a few yards from this building and elsewhere, that we cannot say by how much we will be able to increase the undergraduate fee, or how willing we will be to do so. We also know that many of our larger research funders will not be prepared to accept, and fund, ever increasing pension costs.

Now, before ending I’d also like to go back to one of the more insidious risks associated with participation in USS that Sir Ivor Crewe touched on. USS has this rather lovely phrase of being a ‘last man standing’ arrangement, and this means that in the event that any of the employers in USS is unable to fund its pension contribution and is forced to withdraw from the scheme, the amount of any shortfall in respect of the withdrawing employer has to be picked up by the remaining employers. In short, if one of the employers goes down, it’s the remaining employers in the scheme that foot the bill. There are more than 400 employers in USS, and I suspect that not all are as financially strong as this University, and making the scheme affordable is, therefore, in the interests of all the employers, not just Oxford.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Dr Wylie Horn.

Dr Wylie Horn (Computing Services)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, there are a number of points that I would like to raise in favour of the motion. I’d like to actually depart from my script just to respond to the points that Sir Ivor Crewe and Giles Kerr so eloquently made about the risks inherent to the employers made by short-term market fluctuations. What they both omitted to mention was the employers actually had the benefit during the 1990s of benefiting from payment holidays caused by market fluctuations in a more favourable direction, so these things can cut both ways.

To return to my speech, to begin with we shouldn’t forget that the many colleagues who aren’t members of Congregation but are members of the USS scheme would, had they had the opportunity to do so, have welcomed the opportunity to be here to press for a ballot to register their opposition to the changes that are being proposed. By voting for the motion, we’re ensuring that their voice will also be heard. I’m going to highlight two other key points, one of which Terry has already covered, so I’ll probably just dash through that, and that is: is there a case for changes to be made at all? To quote the USS employer consultation paper circulated to all USS members: ‘Employers within USS are committed to the proposed changes as necessary to safeguard the long-term sustainability of the scheme.’ However, the last actuarial report as of March 2010, conducted by Mercer Limited and published in September 2010, states in the summary, under point 5: ‘Despite the deterioration over the two-year period from 2008, I can confirm that I am content with waiting until the 2011 valuation before reviewing or amending the current contribution rates.’ The deterioration described still left the fund able to meet ninety-one per cent of its liabilities which, I would argue, is hardly a cause for undue pessimism. One has to ask why the employers’ side on the JNC weren’t willing to follow the actuary’s advice and be content to wait until the next valuation before proposing changes which may not be necessary at all. Given that we are discussing the fate of a fund with a value of just over £30 billion as of 31 March 2010, it would seem sensible to wait a mere four months for the next triennial valuation before taking such far-reaching action.

Second, I believe we need to consider the integrity of the consultation process itself. I was disappointed by the extremely partial information that all USS members were sent by post last month. My disappointment was coupled with surprise at the inclusion of a paper from the Employers Pension Forum, hereafter referred to as the EPF, and compounded by the lack of any paper presenting the counter-arguments.

My initial surprise at the inclusion of the EPF document was heightened by the similarities between the two documents. For example, compare this from the EPF leaflet: ‘As a result it seems likely that higher education could be facing significant cuts in public funding over this period’, with this from the USS document: ‘As a result it seems certain that higher education will be facing significant funding cuts over this period’. Or, to give another example, compare this from the EPF document: ‘In this environment, where institutions are facing a significant squeeze in their income, the failure to control pension costs can only lead to additional reductions in staff numbers, with a consequent impact on the student experience and research.’ Compare that with this from the USS document (the words will be familiar to you): ‘In this environment, failure to control rising pension costs can only lead to additional reductions in staff numbers with a consequent impact on the student experience and research.’

Finally, compare: ‘The higher education sector is still significantly publicly funded and it would, understandably, be considered unacceptable to use additional public funds to meet increased pension costs’, that from the EPF document. Compare with the USS document: ‘The higher education sector is still significantly publicly funded, and it would understandably be considered unacceptable to use additional public funds to meet increased pension costs.’

Members of Congregation will, I am sure, forgive me for preparing this speech by peppering it with quotes from elsewhere; after all, I’m just following where others involved in the consultation have led. In light of this evidence, I’ll leave all present to draw their own conclusions about the editorial provenance of this information presented to USS members. All we’re proposing is that local USS members receive full and objective information so they can consider the conclusion about the proposed changes. The motion, if carried with the amendment, will ensure that happens. I urge you to support both the amendment and the motion.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Roger Boden.

Mr Roger Boden (Bursar of Keble College, Chairman of the Estates Bursars’ Committee)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, members of Congregation, I should like to make two observations: the first on the resolution before us as it relates to the role of Congregation; the second on the proposed pension changes, as seen from a bursarial perspective. The University is a charity; Congregation is its sovereign body. When we meet in Congregation, we meet as charity trustees. Now, of course, Congregation routinely delegates its powers to Council, but that it is jealous of its powers there can be no doubt, as is evidenced by the governance debates five years ago. I rejoiced in that famous victory, a victory to which several signatories to the present resolution made very distinguished contributions. Can they really now be seeking to bind Congregation to a consultation response dictated in part not by its members, but by a ballot of university employees on proposals drawn up by a trade union? That surely undermines the authority of Congregation and is a derogation of its duty.

Outside this place, we are employees and USS scheme members, but in here we are trustees. We must be mindful of the conflict of interest. Outside, we naturally want the best possible deal for ourselves in terms of contributions as we work, and benefits when we retire. But in this place, we must leave aside personal interests: our duty is to make decisions that best support the objects of the University. We cannot in this place, where self-interest is prohibited, commit the University to a response to be determined in another place, where self-interest is legitimate. We are proud to be a self-governing academic community. That is not the same thing as a workers’ co-operative. So, the resolution must be a matter of both principle and duty: it must be defeated.

Of course, were Congregation itself to determine that the proposed pension changes were not in the best interests of the University, that would be a different matter, but if we were debating a resolution to that effect, I would argue that it, too, should be rejected, and it is to the argument for rejection that I should now like to turn.

Like the University, colleges are charities; the members of their governing bodies are trustees. Their duty is to act in the college’s best interests. Is it in the best interests of colleges that the USS proposals be implemented? The aim of a salary and benefits package is to attract and retain the best possible staff on the most economical terms, having regard to issues of equality. If the pension proposals were adopted, would our ability to attract and retain the best staff be impaired? I do not think so. The current USS package is, by common consent, a pretty good one—better than many in the public sector, better than almost all in the private sector. The trouble is, it is unaffordably generous, but even after implementation of the changes, it will still be a pretty good package, and better than most. So, unwelcome as the changes might be to us as employees, I doubt that they will affect Oxford’s ability to retain us.

But might the changes deter prospective employees from applying? Well, for UK academics USS will still be the best deal going, and Oxford’s competitiveness, relative to the rest of the UK higher education sector, will be unchanged. As to overseas applicants, does anyone here seriously think that, in deciding whether to take up a post at Oxford, the details of the USS scheme will weigh heavily in the balance?

The damage to Oxford’s interest from implementation of the USS proposals is, frankly, negligible. What about the damage from non-implementation? Non-implementation would involve an increase in the average college’s USS bill by about £50,000 per annum. That’s roughly the cost of employing one CUF or two ULS. So there are constitutional and fiduciary reasons why Congregation must reject the resolution, and there are strong practical ones why it should too. Implementing the USS proposals will not damage the charities of which we are trustees: not implementing them almost certainly will. We have to act responsibly. We must reject the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Rowan Tomlinson.

Dr Rowan Tomlinson (New College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation, I did not expect in attending my first Congregation to be standing here behind the lectern, but the fact that I am here calling on my right to speak is testimony to the democratic values of our University, values that are currently being undermined by the failure to provide a full and proper consultation on the proposed changes to USS.

I’ve chosen to speak today because my particular status and situation mean I represent three constituencies of USS members who risk being particularly negatively affected by the changes to our pension system. I’m an early career academic, I’m on a fixed term contract, and I am a woman. All USS members would find themselves worse off under the proposed new regime, but it is arguably young academics and women in particular who could be hit especially hard by the proposal that those who take a break of six months or more may not be able to rejoin the final salary scheme. This apparently ill-thought-through proposal would be hugely damaging, but one might also wonder whether its likely impact on particular groups means that it flouts equality laws.

The academic job market has changed significantly in recent years. The days when my father, now a professor, was able to move straight from his doctorate into a permanent post are long gone. The most temporary of lectureships today attracts a flurry of hugely qualified applicants. The result of this is that many young academics find themselves at best in short-term jobs, sometimes cobbling together hourly paid teaching, or, worse still, without any kind of post at all. It is commonplace for extremely able young academics to find themselves without a job for periods of more than six months. To punish these academics further still, by not allowing them to rejoin the final salary scheme after a break in service not of their own volition, is simply unacceptable. But choice is something which I also wish to defend, and which is threatened by this particular proposal: the choice to work abroad for a spell—particularly precious to me as a linguist, and vital in this academic climate where we are urged to make international contacts and networks and to produce 'world-beating' research—the choice to take a career break for whatever reason, or to follow a related career path that could enhance one's work as an academic; the choice to start a family, already a major decision for women in academic posts because of the perceived effects it has on our research outputs. Under the new regime, the loss of pension benefits that a six-month break might entail endangers these important choices.

The final point I'd like to raise is that I'm concerned that the proposed changes would affect recruitment. As it is, those of us who choose to enter academia opt for what we might call a front-loaded job, in the sense that the qualifications take a long time, during which we are likely to accrue debt, and many of us don't start earning until our late 20s, if we are lucky. Compared to our peers, we are in a kind of arrested development. We are qualified later, which means we start paying National Insurance contributions later, and even then we're likely to occupy jobs whose security is fragile, making such important steps as getting a mortgage very difficult. The good pension package has until now represented a reward for these years of not earning, or of earning precariously, or of earning a salary that is, by national standards, decent but which isn't enough to allow a young academic to rent in Oxford's housing market, let alone enough to buy a place of her own. Removing this benefit would not only be detrimental to existing members but could well deter people from pursuing a career in academia. One can envisage a return to the days when academia was a career choice for the more privileged, for whom worries over pensions were rather less of a concern. I urge you, therefore, not least on behalf of the many USS members who aren't members of Congregation and so don't have a voice in this debate, to use your vote to support the resolution and by so doing maintain the openness, discussion and democracy which this University has, until now, held dear. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Ms Margaret Watson.

Ms Margaret Watson (Bodleian Libraries)
Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation. Four years ago, I attended Congregation for the first time for the debate on governance. I saw then how highly the members of this University value its democratic processes and our right to be consulted on essential matters. I therefore find the situation today very likely rather strange. The changes proposed for USS are significant and far-reaching, and yet so far there has been no direct consultation between employer and employee in Oxford. Not only does this fly in the face of the University's tradition of open discussion and debate, but also under the law, the University, our employer, has a legal obligation to consult us, its employees.

We have all received a brochure from USS and a leaflet from the Employers Pension Forum, and on the basis of these documents, and further information on a website, we were invited to make comments on the proposals under six headings. Setting aside the flaws in this—I quote the employers—'narrative' approach, it is no substitute for direct consultation between employer and employee.

Turning to the documentation, at first glance this might appear quite informative, but there are glaring omissions. For example, there is no mention of the fact that the Joint Negotiating Committee, the JNC, only adopted these proposals on the casting vote of the chairman and in the teeth of the fierce opposition of all the employee representatives. Now, I'm a librarian. It is part of my professional responsibility to collect, organise, make available and evaluate sources. My colleagues in the Bodleian and I do this every day, dealing with materials that range from the Magna Carta to social media: helping our readers to assess the authority, accuracy and quality of sources and compare them with alternative data is part of our work. So, if an undergraduate were attempting to write an essay on the merits of the USS proposals on the basis of the information that we have been given, I think I would strongly advise him to seek out more material, otherwise he would be relying on incomplete information assembled to support just one point of view. Further, an article by Susan Cooper and Stephen Cowley in the Oxford Magazine has shown that even the data provided in the worked examples is insufficient.

I have responded to the questions on the USS website, but I had to use section 7. 'Other', to comment on the USS proposals that I consider to be manifestly unjust: the fact that a member leaving the final salary scheme for more than six months will not, except in very special circumstances, be able to rejoin it. Many of us, particularly women, must at some stage balance our career with responsibility for a young child, an aged parent, or someone who is sick, disabled or in special need. I myself once gave up a very good job because I needed to take care of my children. If I needed to do that in future, the years that I had accrued in USS before the career break would only count at the level of salary achieved before the break, inflated with just CPI and capped at 2.5 per cent, rather than counting at my final salary level, as now. Think how much more distressing these difficult decisions will be if we know that we risk losing memoship of the final salary pension scheme, and that as well as making a choice about our immediate future, we are also putting the financial provision for our own old age on the line. I just leave that thought with you.

To conclude, the employee representatives on the JNC have acknowledged that some changes to the scheme are necessary to accommodate, for example, increased longevity. I urge the University to circulate these alternative proposals to all of us as part of a formal, local consultation process. It is only fair that we should be provided with both sets of proposals and supporting arguments, and then allowed to choose between them. I believe that the University, as our employer, has both a legal and a moral responsibility to consult us directly in this way, and I therefore appeal to you to vote for consultation, to vote for democracy, and to support the resolution.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor Susan Cooper.

Professor Susan Cooper (St Catherine's College, Department of Physics)

We all want a sustainable pension scheme. Academic life is very busy. We have neither the time nor the money to invest efficiently ourselves. Part of the deal has been, until now, a good pension scheme we could trust. Many of us have even invested more with USS as additional voluntary contributions. I initially assumed USS was being reasonable in their proposed changes—times are hard everywhere. Then Stephen Cowley called me and told me of his initial calculations, which we then refined and extended. The more I looked into it, the more concerned
I got. ‘Trust’ and ‘USS’ are no longer words I easily put together, but I hope we can come to the USS truths out of the deeply flawed nature of both this consultation and the proposals and get them to ask the Joint Negotiating Committee to think again.

We have been given many words but few facts. As the main reasons for the changes, we are told that ‘the life expectancy of an individual retiring today is many years longer than it was when the scheme was set up in 1975.’ Undoubtedly true, but how many is ‘many’? This is not serious information. An EPF spokesman told the Guardian it had increased from six to eight years in 1974 to twenty years now. An EPF press release said the increase was thirteen years, which is the same, so apparently that is their number. It just sounded wrong to me, so I looked up longevity data and found only about five years’ increase, possibly eight. My trust was not restored.

However, the longevity increase is the serious issue: no one-off change could make the pension scheme sustainable in the face of this continuing increase. Either our pensions need to continually decrease—and I find suddenly going to fifty per cent of my pay frightening enough—or we need higher contributions during our working lives, which we can’t afford, or we simply have to work longer. If longevity increases by three years, we need to work about two years longer and get one year extra retirement time, paying in at the same rate and getting the same pension as now. This increase of normal retirement age is both necessary and sufficient to make the scheme sustainable.

Once this is clear, one wonders why the list of proposed changes is so long, complicated, and patently unfair—making benefits depend on the timing of a person’s career, and with capping taking the inflation risk away from the pension fund, which has expert investors who should know how to deal with it, and putting it onto pensioners who can’t.

Although it hasn’t been well publicised, recent additional information makes it clear that the real motivation is to abandon their current investment policy for a much more conservative one. The need for this is highly questionable, as the UCU actuarial advice has explained; the trustees just need to have a robust discussion with the Pensions Regulator.

That the cuts are cuts has still not been admitted by USS. How many of you know what your career average revalued earnings are now and what you can expect them to be at retirement? CARE is a lot less transparent than a final salary scheme, so it is the clear duty of the employer in consulting on such a change to give us some typical worked examples. They haven’t, but Stephen Cowley and I have. Even if inflation weren’t a problem, the reduction would be about twenty per cent for a typical academic. Why haven’t they told us? A non-transparent scheme is a good way to introduce cuts without people realising it. If cuts really are necessary, they should be made explicit and justified, and not hidden in the ironic acronym of CARE. CARE with a higher accrual rate wouldn’t be a cut and would avoid those promoted to very high salaries late in their careers getting a pension they haven’t paid for, but it requires trusting the pension fund not to meddle with the parameters. A simpler way is to keep final salary pensions for our basic salaries—say those within the nationally agreed pay scales—and to put any additional amount into a direct contribution scheme. A core reliable pension would be kept, with the extras costing less.

I conclude that this is not a properly informed consultation and most of the proposed changes are not what is needed. Most deeply affected are those just entering our profession, upon which the future of our universities rests, but the effect on them has been obscured. USS should restart the consultation with proper information provided at the beginning. Better yet, both sides should go back to the negotiating table and try again. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Todd Huffman, please.

Dr Todd Huffman (Lady Margaret Hall, Department of Physics)

Let me start by thanking the Vice-Chancellor and Council for responding to today’s motion in a way that ensured it would be discussed at Congregation, its sovereign body. Oxford is one of only a tiny number of universities whose sovereign bodies are composed of their scholars. This means that we have a forum where important issues such as this one can be debated when required. If this debate and its outcome attract the attention they deserve outside Oxford, they could contribute to averting serious hardship in future for all academics in the USS scheme.

It took reading Professor Cooper and Cowley’s article in the Oxford Magazine before I realised that I would need to do a similar exercise as they did, but tailored to my own specific circumstances. I will need to look up RPI and CPI and try to find some sort of historical context that reflects what is likely to come about in the next thirty years. I will then try several different scenarios to estimate the margins of error and self-assess my own risks. After this I will need to assess how much of my current income I will need to sacrifice, regardless of tax efficiency, to acceptably reduce my own individual risk of impoverishment in old age. This is the crux of the matter: as pointed out by Professor Malcolmson, I have to calculate my own risks. I then have to make my own best guess and take sufficient risk guard against all unreasonable, but still quite possible, scenarios. Mr Kerr admits the risks to the University are high, so the answer is to put that risk onto me.

A proper set of documentation, provided by USS within a properly conducted consultation exercise, would at least give me a one-stop resource for this process. There might even be an example which matches my own financial situation, close enough to give me a rough understanding of my circumstances.

The documentation does not provide this. In fact, the documentation that’s been provided has the stench of propaganda. The documentation even attempts to create an artificial ‘us’ versus ‘them’ atmosphere by pointing out, as the first line in a USS flysheet, that I will receive a final salary pension under this scheme and it is a good thing. Obviously this is ‘good’ for me, but by implication ‘bad’ for anyone new or returning. This is merely one of the worst examples in a set of documentation full of imprecation, disingenuous value judgments, and quite low on useful facts. I need enough information to understand my own risks, so that I might intelligently comment on the scheme. I do not need to be patronised.

Regardless, though, I cannot understand why I even need to assume some of these risks alone. Is not this spreading of risk one of the reasons for a retirement fund in the first place, and the spreading of risk is even more highly leveraged in a fund as large as USS? I understand that our fund managers collectively received about £3 million in bonus compensation. They must, therefore, be doing their job and mitigating risk on our behalf.

I will end here and simply encourage Congregation to vote in favour of the amended resolution, a strong vote in favour will direct our Vice-Chancellor and our Council to make the serious point that any paltee of cuts which substantially increases the financial risk to individual members during their time of retirement is unacceptable. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Sebastian Rahtz.

Mr Sebastian Rahtz (Computing Services)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of Congregation, I’d like to speak in favour of the motion before you. I may note in passing the ingenuity of the arrangements which probably have solved the problem for us by forcing us to sit in this cold building for several hours, probably taking some years off our lives and thereby millions off the scheme. I’m not offering myself here as an expert in pension finance, nor am I drawing some kind of line in the sand about the level of pensions I demand to be given or the amount of money I or the University contribute. I’m taking a more folksy attitude towards this.

I am deeply concerned about the effects the proposed changes would have on recruitment, on the perception of benefits, and the perversive attack on career breaks, and in answer to the earlier rhetorical question posed (do people when they apply for jobs here look at the USS benefits?), the answer is an unequivocal ‘yes, thank you’. That’s not the point of my intervention.

What I ask instead is that the work of the Universities Superannuation Scheme, and Oxford University’s relationship with it, should move into a more modern world.

As part of my job at the University Computing Services I’m involved in a number of academic and administrative projects, which have three things in common with other developments happening all around us. Firstly, an emphasis on exposing the data behind research, an attitude graced, perhaps surprisingly, with the name of the Fourth Paradigm by the e-Research community—and the Humanities scholars amongst you may have thought this was, in fact, the first paradigm to relate things to data. For me, the most exciting trend in academic research at the moment is the idea, finally realised, of an open, published, repeatable audit trail from raw data to final analysis, something which our environmental colleagues at East Anglia are now espousing rather late in the day. Secondly, the assertion that information which comes to us from on high can and should be questioned, is the second meme of our times, and it can be improved upon.

The concept behind social networking—and I can hear you cringe when I say it—crowd sourcing, Wikipedia, and open source software, the idea that many eyes and many minds can shed new light on problems is easy to dismiss as a populist fad, but its benefits now seem to be becoming incontrovertible. This is the other side of exposing data, knowing that other people may find different answers. We no longer trust the single answers fed to us by secretive bodies, which have been amply illustrated by previous speakers. Thirdly, the notion of accountability in local decision-making. Much as one may pour scorn on David Cameron’s apparently risible ‘big society’—and how many of you thought you would come and hear that in an Oxford University consultation—it has yet its basis in the laudable idea that people should be involved and take responsibility as far down the chain as is practical. Oxford University is, after all, the ultimate example of subsidiarity, as many of us know to our cost.

Now, what do all these platitudes (which, of course, underlie—and this is the important point—the business of what we at the University have been doing for the last thousand years) have to do with the USS and their proposals to change our pension arrangements, and thus this University’s response? USS have failed in their simple duty to give all of their members information on all the alternatives to the solution that they propose. They sent me a leaflet explaining their plans with details on how these might affect me, and left it at that. The UCU—of which I’m not a member, I may note—has alternatives, I’m aware by anecdotal evidence from meeting people in corridors. Individuals, such as the laudable Professor Cooper preceding, have presented analyses, but these have not even-handedly been sent to me. I happened to read the issue of the Oxford Magazine, not something one would normally do. They have not even-handedly been sent to all members of USS to give them a basis on which to respond to consultation. The open data test has simply failed. This University has plans to make a reply to the USS consultative process, but has taken no steps to inform itself as to what the USS members in Oxford know or feel about the changes. On what basis is it therefore going to make the response? The local decision-making test has failed.

This motion asks Congregation to do something that is right, that is sensible, and that meets the long traditions of our institution, and I therefore urge you to vote in favour of the motion.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Undy.

Mr Roger Undy ( Said Business School, Green Templeton College)

Mr Vice-Chancellor, members of the Congregation, I was not intending to speak but I’ve been prompted by a number of comments, particularly by Dr Goss, and the reason for that, as well as being a member of the Said Business School and Green Templeton College, and—I hesitate to mention this, given Mr Boden’s speech—also President of the Oxford UCU, I thought I ought to comment a little bit on what UCU was doing. But I hope I can assure Mr Boden that I’m in no sense hoping to pull down the columns of the Sheldonian. Indeed, in 1995/96, I conducted a programme for the New Labour shadow cabinet: surely that must assure everybody that I’m not the revolutionary or the person that’s intending to destroy this University, as Mr Boden seems to think. But back to Dr Goss. As a university lecturer teaching MBAs, I’m quite used to some of the extreme comments you get about trade unions and other social organisations, but in my teaching I used to say there’s a continuum between joint regulation and unilateral management action, and trade unions are somewhere in there trying to move it to a more, it might be called, collegiate activity, rather than one of unilateral action.

But towards the unilateral action end is joint consultation, and when we went to the joint consultation meeting, at which we tabled our motion, asking for something as revolutionary as a ballot of members of the USS, and, even more revolutionary, that we be given information about alternatives that the employers were proposing, at the start of that debate—there was really no debate—at the start of that debate I looked down the table to Dr Goss and I said, ‘I presume we’re going to finish up with a failure to concur’, and at that stage we hadn’t even started to discuss it. The reason was that at that meeting, although we offered arguments, it was very clear that people outside that meeting had decided that our proposal was not going anywhere, and we considered it an important proposal, and a group of us got together—not all in the Union, from other parts, from Congregation—and decided to move this motion. Of the 200 people signing this motion, they were split more or less straight down the middle, fifty-fifty, non- UCU members and UCU members.

So we come to this motion on the basis of representing Congregation, not of representing the Union, and when asked, after we’d moved this motion in an informal meeting, was I in a position to withdraw it, I said no, because this motion was one that Congregation owned, and on that basis I urge Congregation to support it. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Mapstone, do you wish to reply to the debate?

Dr Sally Mapstone (St Hilda’s College, English Faculty)

I’ll do so briefly, Mr Vice-Chancellor. As you can see, I’ve got my coat. That’s primarily because it’s cold in here. It’s been informative and instructive to hear the various points made by members of Congregation. Concern about the impact of the proposed changes clearly clusters in a number of areas, particularly over the impact of the shift from RPI to CPI and the related caps, where the kind of modelling that could be done is clearly very extensive. There are also concerns, which I entirely recognise, about the shift to CARE, particularly so far as researchers and women are concerned, points made very effectively. I thought, in Dr Tomlinson’s excellent speech.

I would want to reiterate the point that’s been made—that the University has conducted an equality impact exercise in relation to the proposals, which it will be sharing with the UCU and which it will be forwarding to USS. I would, if I may, just reiterate the point in relation to the University’s duty to consult—and I’m sorry if this is tiresome to members, but I’m not sure that everybody has entirely understood it. The professionally run pension is to consult with the recognised trade unions, the recognised representatives, and that is what we shall be doing. Members of Congregation should understand that if the amended resolution were to be passed, the University will take care to pursue what Congregation has determined it should do, but it won’t be inapparent—and indeed I concede that it was apparent—from our opening remarks, that this is not straightforward. The University will seek to run the consultative ballot as soon as possible in order to complete it before the conclusion of the statutory consultation period.

As Congregation has also deemed that it should seek additional information from USS, it will embark upon the sequence of events that follow from that, which may lead to a restart of the local consultation process and a sequence of events outside the statutory consultation period.

I would like to say that I think it’s slightly hard to levy the accusation that we were concerned with technicalities here. It seems to me that it’s our obligation to try to understand the will of Congregation, and that was the reason for which we focused on those particular details, and we will certainly need to go on focusing on them. The preamble of the resolution and the amendment invite you to accept two assertions: first, that financially the scheme is only in need of very minor change. The UCU asserts this. It’s not the view taken by the EPF or by the USS or by the University’s Director of Finance. Second, that the original terms of the consultation were legally inadequate: the proponents of the amendment assert this. Others—USS, as a professionally run pension scheme, and their lawyers—disagree, and perhaps it is notable that no representations seem to have been made by UCU about this nationally.

Members of Congregation should consider the value, as it will be perceived by USS, of the ballot explicitly predicated on those assertions, and which invites people to choose between two sets of proposals, only one of which is available, and set against that the value of considered and informed comments, many of which we’ve heard today, but I would very strongly recommend should be made in the standard USS consultation in relation to the only proposals which are actually under consideration. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Dr Mapstone. Professor Harriss-White, do you wish to reply to the debate?

Professor Barbara Harriss-White
(Wolfson College, Department of International Development)

Yes, please. Mr Vice-Chancellor, and members of Congregation. We’ve sat through a very cold afternoon hearing a whole series of issues, some of which have been quite contested, and I don’t want to summarise them, I simply want to remind people before they vote on what they were. There was the issue of the urgency of the reform: if it ain’t broke, don’t fix it. There was the issue of the size of the deficit, the health of the scheme. There was the issue of volatility in the future and in the past versus prudence. There were the issues of sustainability and how else to cope with the fact a) that we live longer, and b) that there are some high flyers who get an incredibly high pension.

There were issues to do with the principles of USS, and there were issues raised about the UCU alternative. The UCU may be a fringe group in Oxford, but they are the official representative of the workers and they carry the national burden of negotiating rights and their alternatives do need taking seriously. The employee representatives do have a scheme that increases pension age, that increases employee contributions, that increases cost-sharing for future contributions instead of it being just the responsibility of the employers, but you wouldn’t know that. In other words, there is no no alternative, and, in this general climate of not having enough information to make the informed responses that we’re being asked to make, I think it’s not unreasonable that that alternative, which exists on the USS website, be made available to people in Oxford. We then heard a lot of procedural questions of great complexity, some of which, such as the allegation that there was no alternative proposal in the legal consultation, refer back to the fact that we don’t have adequate information, or that the adequate information is very, very deep, it’s very hard to find on the website, and that even when we have some information we don’t have adequate justification, that’s another point.

As Professor Mapstone has just reminded us, it is really up to the University to decide now how to fulfil its obligation to consult staff. There are a whole series of questions about timetabling and, again, what I would say is that it’s in our procedure, it’s for the Council to decide whether we like this or not, and we must trust our Council. Dr Goss referred to procedural uncertainty and all kinds of legal technicalities, but one might ask: what are the University’s plans for our own institutional response? There are many other issues. There was a spat between Sir Ivor Crewe saying that the CPI was non-reformable and Professor Malcomson saying: yes, they can reform it if they want to. Mr Boden talked about Congregation, us here, being the sovereign body, and so we can, as a sovereign body, decide to act as trustees for non-Congregation people who pay into USS, and I suggest that we act in that way this afternoon.

Last but not least, several very eloquent contributions talked about the scholarly embargo. Almost all of us could have earned much, much more in the private sector or even, let’s face it, in government, but we trade in our relatively low salaries for a decent pension. When the very principles of university life are in jeopardy, and when higher education, which is the jewel in the Great British crown, is being threatened, then these pension proposals make university life less attractive to the best of our young scholars, including our young scholars from overseas. The debates on the amendment and the resolution have been extremely helpful to all of us. Thank you for making it possible. In moving the resolution, one finds that the proposals are very likely to be harmful. They are not actuarially neutral and they are not adequately justified. They seem to transfer risk from the fund to us. We also find that the consultation has not been conducted in a properly informed way—a very nice contribution from Margaret Watson—and that the procedure for consultation has so far been flawed.

The resolution and the amendment invite USS to make good the defects in this consultation, especially to provide an appropriate range of worked examples, and especially—and Dr Tomlinson, we thank you—the example that I also raised about gender equalities impacts.

If the University has done this research, when is it going to give it to us? We’re over two-thirds of the way through this period of consultation. There will be much useful information for staff when they consider their own responses to the consultation, so we, the proposers of the resolution, urge members of Congregation to support the amended resolution. Thank you.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 24 December.

(A) VALUE FOR MONEY COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the General Purposes Committee of Council and supported by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee, establish the Value for Money Committee as a subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee so as to embed the pursuit of value for money more firmly within the University’s processes and culture, and consequently revise the composition and terms of reference of the Value for Money Committee. There are also associated changes to the regulations of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee and of the Audit and Scrutiny Committee.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement 2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.135-3.140 concerning the Value for Money Committee, and substitute:

‘Value for Money Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee

3.135. The Value for Money Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee shall consist of:

(1) a person appointed by Council as chairman of the committee, who shall also be a member of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;

(2)-(5) a member of Congregation from each of the academic divisions with relevant expertise, appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;

(6) a member of Congregation from within Academic Services and University Collections with relevant expertise, appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;

(7) a member of Congregation from within the University Administration and Services with relevant expertise, appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;

(8) the Chairman of the Domestic Bursars’ Committee;

(9) one external person appointed by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee who shall have relevant experience at a senior level within either the public or the private sector.

3.136. (1) The subcommittee may co-opt up to three additional members.

(2) The persons co-opted need not be members of the University.

3.137. (1) The initial period of office on the subcommittee shall be three years.

(2) No person shall serve on the subcommittee for more than six years in total.

3.138. In addition to subcommittee members, the Director of Purchasing shall normally attend all meetings.

3.139. The subcommittee shall meet at least once a term.

3.140. The subcommittee shall be responsible for:

(1) developing and maintaining strategy, policy and guidance setting out the University’s objectives in the pursuit of value for money as defined in regulation 2.17 (6) of Council Regulations 15 of 2002;

(2) developing and implementing strategies to promote and support the pursuit of value for money throughout the University, including within planning and decision-making processes at all levels, to ensure that value for money is embedded within the University’s operations and culture;

(3) adopting and disseminating value for money good practice;

(4) raising the profile of value for money across the University.’

‘2.14 (19) The Chairman of the Value for Money Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee;’.

3 Ibid., add new regulation 2.17 (6) as follows and renumber existing regulations 2.17 (6)-(10) as 2.17 (7)-(11):

‘2.17 (6) the embedding within the University’s processes and culture of greater economy (minimising the cost of an activity), greater efficiency (the relationship between the output of goods and services and the resources used to produce them) or greater effectiveness (the extent to which objectives are met), collectively known as ‘value for money’;’.

5 These regulations shall be effective from 1 January 2011.

(B) SPORTS STRATEGY COMMITTEE

Explanatory Note

With the endorsement of the Conference of Colleges, the University has agreed new arrangements for the governance of sport in line with the relevant recommendation of the Report of the Committee to Review University Sport. The University has already instituted changes to the arrangements for the provision of student services and administration in the light of the formation of the Student Administration and Services section within the Academic Administration Division. Corresponding to this new management system, the Education Committee will exercise a broader range of responsibilities in relation to student-related matters and these will encompass oversight of the work of the Sports Strategy Subcommittee, which will report to the Education Committee. The membership and terms of reference for the Sports Strategy Committee have been amended to accommodate these changes.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement 2 to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.105–111, concerning the Sports Strategy Committee, and substitute:

University Sports Strategic Subcommittee of the Education Committee

3.105. The University Sports Strategic Subcommittee of the Education Committee shall consist of:

1. a chairman appointed by the Vice-Chancellor from amongst the members of Education Committee;
2. one of the Proctors or the Assessor as may be agreed between them;
3. (4) two persons elected by the Conference of Colleges;
4. one person from amongst the four academic divisions as may be agreed between the divisions;
5. person appointed by the Estates Directorate;
6. the President of the Men’s Blues Committee;
7. the President of the Women’s Blues Committee;
8. the President of the Sports Federation;
9. the Director of Sport;
10. the Head of Development–Sport;
11. the Director of Student Administration and Services;
12. a staff representative.¹

3.106. The subcommittee shall report to the Education Committee and shall meet not less than three times a year, normally at least once in each term.

3.107. Elected or appointed members shall hold office for a period of three years and shall be eligible to serve for a total period of six years. With the approval of the Education Committee on each occasion, the subcommittee may co-opt up to two additional members, who are alumni of the University and who shall be chosen so as to bring to the committee high-level expertise in sport or well-being. Co-opted members will hold office for two years and shall be eligible to serve for a total period of four years.

3.108. With the approval of the Education Committee, the subcommittee may establish such panels or groups in relation to operational matters as it deems necessary. It must establish a Sports Safety Panel meeting at least once a year.

3.109. The subcommittee shall be responsible to the Education Committee for the following matters:

1. to provide the strategic direction for the University’s approach to sport;
2. to be responsible for the promotion and management of sport and recreation within the University;
3. operationally, to encourage closer sporting cooperation between the University and its colleges;
4. to promote and encourage the active participation in sport and physical activity for both students and staff;
5. to oversee the University’s management of sport, and to ensure its accountability to both its funders and its users;
6. to be the forum for discussion and planning on existing and future sport provision.’

(C) DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL POLICY AND SOCIAL WORK

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Social Sciences Board, change the name of the Department of Social Policy and Social Work to the Department of Social Policy and Intervention to reflect the full scope of the activities of the department.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 16 of 2002, concerning divisions (Supplement 2 to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), in regulation 4, concerning the composition of the Social Sciences Division, delete existing paragraph (12) and substitute:

‘12 Social Policy and Intervention.’

2 In Council Regulations 17 of 2002, concerning divisional boards (Supplement 2 to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), in regulation 15 delete existing paragraphs (15)–(19) and substitute (new text underlined):

‘15–17 three persons elected on a rotational basis by and from academic members of the following units of the division, with each person serving a two-year period:

(a) the Department of Economics;
(b) the Department of Education;
(c) the Faculty of Law;
(d) the Department of Politics and International Relations;
(e) the School of Geography and the Environment;
(f) the Said Business School;
(g) two persons elected on a rotational basis by and from academic members of the following units of the division, with each person serving a two-year period of office:

(a) the Department for International Development;
(b) the School for Interdisciplinary Area Studies;
(c) the Department of Sociology;
(d) the Oxford Internet Institute;
(e) the Department of Social Policy and Intervention;
(f) the School of Anthropology;
(g) the Institute of Archaeology and Research Laboratory for Archaeology and the History of Art.’

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 24 December.

Buchan Reader in International Relations

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Social Sciences Board and the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council with the endorsement of the Board of Management for the Alastair Buchan Appeal Fund, propose the establishment of a permanent Alastair Buchan Professorship of International Relations, replacing the Buchan Readership in the same subject. The opportunity has also been taken to remove outdated references.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 24 of 2002 concerning academic and other posts (Statutes, 2000, p. 442, as redesignated as regulations by Decrease (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461) delete § 143 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted

¹This is an agreed appointment by the Joint Committee for University Support Staff (UCSS) and Joint Committee with UCU (University College Union).
International Relations professor shall be an Alastair Buchan Professorship of International Relations. The reader professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

1. The Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in (2) of this regulation is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;
2. a person appointed by Council of the Faculty of Social Studies Department of Politics and International Relations for the subsidiary purposes of the appeal, as defined in sub-regulation 5 below, and the Cyril Foster and Related Funds Committee shall administer and have oversight of this expenditure;
3. The reader professor shall engage in advanced study or research and shall lecture and give instruction in International Relations on such conditions and with such duties as the General Board of Council shall from time to time determine;
4. The reader professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:
   (1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in (2) of this regulation is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;
   (2) a person appointed by Council of the Faculty of Social Studies Department of Politics and International Relations for the subsidiary purposes of the appeal, as defined in sub-regulation 5 below, and the Cyril Foster and Related Funds Committee shall administer and have oversight of this expenditure;
   (3) a person appointed by the General Board of Council of the Faculty of Social Studies Department of Politics and International Relations;
   (4) (56) three persons appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Social Studies Council;
   (5) a person appointed by the Social Sciences Board;
   (6) a person appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Modern History;
   (7) a person appointed by the Board of the Faculty of History;
   (8) a person appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Modern History;
5. The subsidiary purposes of the fund are to finance short term visits by outstanding exponents and practitioners in the field of International Relations and to facilitate longer visits; to provide facilities for research in the subject (including travel) and to attract research projects; to provide graduate scholarships in the subject; to advance the study of International Relations generally.
6. This degree These regulations may at any time be altered by Council provided always that the main purpose of the appeal, the support of study, teaching, and research in International Relations in the University in memory of Professor Buchan shall be observed.

In Schedule A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, before 'Montague Burton Professor of International Relations' insert:

'Alastair Buchan Professor of International Relations'.

Free and open to the public. Drinks reception at 8.15 p.m.

Subject: ‘Science and religion around the world: a book launch.

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

Lectures

Professor Camillo De Lellis, Zurich, will lecture at 4.30 p.m. on Friday, 28 January, in Lecture Theatre 2, the Mathematical Institute.

Subject: ‘H-principle and fluid dynamics.

Professor Arkani-Hamed, Institute for Advanced Study, will lecture at 4.30 p.m. on Friday, 4 March, in Lecture Theatre 2, the Mathematical Institute.

Subject: ‘New mathematical structures in scattering amplitudes.

Physical Chemistry Seminars

The following seminars will given at 2.15 p.m. on Mondays in the PTCL Large Lecture Theatre. All welcome. Conveners: Professor F.J. Hore and Dr S. Mackenzie.

Jeremy Hutson, Durham
17 Jan.: ‘Molecules at millikelvin and below.

Marshall Stoneham, University College, London
24 Jan.: ‘Where the quantum meets biology.

David Manolopoulos
31 Jan.: ‘Ring polymer molecular dynamics.

Subject: ‘H-principle and fluid dynamics.

Professor Arkani-Hamed, Institute for Advanced Study, will lecture at 4.30 p.m. on Friday, 4 March, in Lecture Theatre 2, the Mathematical Institute.

Subject: ‘New mathematical structures in scattering amplitudes.

David Manolopoulos
31 Jan.: ‘Ring polymer molecular dynamics.'
Eleanor Campbell, Edinburgh
7 Feb.: ‘Fullerenes and nanotubes: from photionisation to NEMS.’

Mike Duncan, Georgia, USA
14 Feb.: ‘Infrared spectroscopy of protonation and proton-transfer intermediates in the gas phase.’

Marc Vrakking, MBL, Berlin
21 Feb.: ‘Ultrafast dynamics using harmonic-based and FEL-based XUV/ X-ray experiments.’

James Durrant, Imperial College, London
28 Feb.: ‘Molecules and nanostructures for solar energy conversion.’

Justin Benesh
7 Mar.: ‘Elucidating the quaternary heterogeneity and dynamics of protein assemblies.’

Solid Mechanics and Materials Engineering Group Seminar Series

The following seminars will be given at 2 p.m. on Mondays in LR8, IEB Building, Department of Engineering Science.

Dr Chris Burgoyne, Cambridge
24 Jan.: ‘Prestressing of ceramics.’

Dr Matthew Arthington
31 Jan.: ‘Photogrammetric techniques for characterisation of anisotropic mechanical properties of Ti-6Al-4V.’

Professor Nicola Marzari
7 Feb.: ‘Engineering thermal transport from first-principles.’

Andreas Schiffer
14 Feb.: ‘The response of submerged structures to deep-water blast loading.’

Dr Ian Cullis, Qinetiq, Fort Halstead
21 Feb.: ‘Material design for the twenty-first century.’

Dr Daniel Droge
28 Feb.: ‘Dynamic deformation of polymer bonded explosives and their simulants.’

Edward Grey Institute Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4 p.m. on Fridays in D38, Edwards Grey Institute.

Adele Mennerat
21 Jan.: ‘Natural selection in an artificial world: human-induced evolution of parasites.’

Olav Moberg, Bergen
28 Jan.: ‘The trade-off between immunity and cognition: immunized individuals learn less!’

Jessica Metcalf, Princeton
4 Feb.: ‘Serious challenges from a generally mild infection: dynamics, burden and control of rubella.’

Colin Garroway
11 Feb.: ‘Social and genetic networks of EGI members, flying squirrels and fishers.’

Rich Grenyer
18 Feb.: ‘Optimal area selection for vertebrate conservation: taxonomy and the can of worms.’

Wieslaw Babik, Jagiellonian
25 Feb.: ‘Drift, selection and MHC variation.’

Max Burton
4 Mar.: ‘Human cooperation in economic games.’

John Quinn
11 Mar.: ‘Personality, plasticity and life history variation in the Wytham great tit population.’

Physical and Theoretical Chemistry Laboratory

SOFT MATTER, BIOMATERIALS AND INTERFACES SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given on Tuesdays at 4 p.m. in the John Rowlinson Seminar Room (PTCL). All welcome. Conveners: Dr R.P.A. Dunlens and Professor R. Golestanian.

Dr William Sampson, Manchester
18 Jan.: ‘Modelling interdependence of pore size and specific surface area in electrospun polymer fibre networks.’

Professor Stephen Mann, Bristol
25 Jan.: ‘Integrative assembly of nanoscale constructs: from hybrid nanostructures to solvent-less proteins.’

Dr Marco Polin, Cambridge
1 Feb.: ‘Locomotion of a green flagellate.’

Dr Peter Holmqvist, Forschungszentrum Jülich, Germany
8 Feb.: ‘Dynamics in charged colloidal suspension in liquid, crystal and glass state.’

Professor Jens Eggers, Bristol
15 Feb.: ‘The physics of receding contact lines.’

Dr Stephen Peppin
22 Feb.: ‘Dynamics of colloidal particles in ice.’

Professor Seth Fraden, Brandeis
1 Mar.: ‘Active emulsions.’

Professor Helmut Schiessel, Leiden
8 Mar.: ‘Euler’s elastica and their applications to DNA, nucleosomes and chromatin fibers.’

Oxford Physics Colloquia

The following lectures will be given at 4.15 p.m. on Fridays in the Martin Wood Lecture Theatre, Clarendon Laboratory. Tea will be served in the Common Room at 3.45 p.m. Conveners: J. March-Russell, R. Davies and P. Radaelli.

28 Jan.: To be confirmed.

Dr Ard Louis
4 Feb.: To be confirmed.

Professor Andrei Seryi
18 Feb.: ‘Accelerators—giant and compact—for science, industry and society—future directions.’

Professor Ali Yazdani, Princeton
25 Feb.: ‘Helical metals on the surfaces of topological insulators.’

Professor John Shepherd, Oceanography Centre, Southampton
4 Mar.: ‘Geoengineering the climate: science, governance and uncertainty.’

Computational Mathematics and Applications Seminars

The following seminars will be held on Thursdays at 2 p.m. in Seminar Room RLO48, Gibson Building, Maths Institute, except for 27 January and 10 March, which will be held at 2 p.m. at the Rutherford Appleton Laboratory near Didcot. For updates see: http://www.maths.ox.ac.uk/events/seminars/upcoming/PI0YID/4/877. For further information: lottiek@maths.ox.ac.uk. Conveners: Professor Nick Trefethen and Dr Sue Thorne (RAL).

Professor Chris Budd, Bath
13 Jan.: To be announced.

Dr Sébastien Loisel, Heriot-Watt
20 Jan.: ‘Optimized domain decomposition methods that scale weakly.’

Dr David Titley-Peloquin
27 Jan.: To be announced.

Professor Des Higham, Strathclyde
3 Feb.: ‘Algorithms for evolving networks.’

Speaker to be announced
10 Feb.: To be announced.

Professor Raymond Spiteri, Saskatchewan
17 Feb.: ‘Stiffness analysis of cardiac cell models.’

Dr Juan Vera, Tilburg
24 Feb.: ‘Iterative valid polynomial inequalities generation for polynomial programing.’

Dr Selin Damla Ahipasaoglu, London School of Economics

Council of the University

Corrigendum: Regulations for Departments

When Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning the employment of University staff, were published (Supplement I to Gazette No. 4703, 14 July 2004), bringing together legislation governing employment-related matters, a cross-reference in the Regulations for Departments was not updated.

In Council Regulations 30 of 2002 concerning departments (Supplement I to Gazette No. 4629, 10 July 2002, p. 1451, as amended on 22 February 2007), delete regulation 1 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'1. Each department recognised by a divisional board under section 11 of Statute VII shall have a head of department, whose appointment shall be in accordance with arrangements laid down by Council by regulation (see the Regulations for Academic and Other Posts, Employment of University Staff).'

General Purposes Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 28 January.

VAUGHAN MORGAN PRIZES

Explanatory Note

These changes, approved by the board of management of the Violet Vaughan Morgan Fund, remove the requirement for a viva voce examination and allow the prize to be awarded for the best dissertation (under the English Faculty’s new syllabus); and remove the requirement for the prize to be awarded only to someone who ‘shows promise of becoming a loyal citizen of the British Commonwealth’.

Text of Regulations

In Part 2 of Council Regulations 25 of 2002, concerning trusts (Statutes, 2000, p. 737, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002), delete existing § 359 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

§ 359. Vaughan Morgan Prizes

1. There shall be prizes in English Literature which shall be called ‘The Violet Vaughan Morgan Prizes’ in memory of Maud Violet Caroline Vaughan Morgan.

2. The Board of the Faculty of English Language and Literature shall be the board of management of the prizes.

3. The prizes shall be open to members of the University, whether men or women, residing with the University on the date fixed for the examination. The prize shall be awarded for the best dissertation or dissertations, awarded the highest marks by the examiners for the Final Honours School in English Language and Literature in that academic year.

4. No person shall be eligible for a prize who, on the date of submission of the dissertation, will have exceeded nine terms from matriculation.

5. Each prize-winner shall be presented with a bronze medal having on one side a profile of Maud Violet Caroline Vaughan Morgan and on the other side an engraved statement of the origin of the prizes.

6. All expenses incurred in connection with the award of the prizes, including the bronze medals, examiners’ fees, and expenses of administration, shall be met from the income of the fund.

7. In awarding a prize, in addition to scholastic requirements, the character of the candidate shall be taken into consideration so far as they can be judged from a dissertation and also from their records at college, and a prize shall not be awarded to anyone who, in the opinion of the examiners, does not show promise of becoming a loyal citizen of the British Commonwealth. The board of management shall, subject to the conditions specified in regulations 3, 4, and 5, and above, make such regulations for the award and value of the prizes as it shall deem fit.

8. Surplus income arising from vacancies or from any other cause may at the discretion of the board of management either be invested in augmentation of the capital of the fund or be used for the award of a postgraduate studentship for the study of English Literature.

9. Council shall have power from time to time to alter this regulation, provided always that the prizes shall always bear the title of ‘The Violet Vaughan Morgan Prizes’ and that the conditions specified in clauses 5 and 7 above are adhered to:

Congregation 14 December

1 Declaration of approval of Resolutions authorising use of sites at the Old Road Campus

That the allocation of a site at the Old Road Campus for the construction of the Kennedy Institute and the allocation of a site at the Old Road Campus for the construction of a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine be approved.

2 Declaration of approval of Resolution approving the conferment of Honorary Degree

That the conferment of the Degree of Master of Arts, honoris causa, upon Lady Nancy Caroline Gayley Kenny, BA Vassar, PGCE Oxf, former Director of Alumni Relations at the University, former Secretary of the Oxford University Society, Fellow of St Peter’s, be approved.

¶ The degree will be conferred at a ceremony on 5 March 2011.

Green Templeton College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment to the Statutes of Green Templeton College, to update the cross-references in Statute 2.3. in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 24 January.

Hertford College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment to the Statutes of Hertford College, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 24 January. The amendments relate to the following:

(i) compliance with Charity Commission requirements relating to articulation of charitable objects and the responsibilities of trustees;

(ii) simplification of the statutes to address core governance issues and removal of other items better treated in bye-laws or other ways;

(iii) Statute X on employment law provisions relating to academic staff has been moved to an appendix of the statutes. Minimal amendments have been made to better reflect current employment law.

Green Templeton College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment to the Statutes of Green Templeton College, to update the cross-references in Statute 2.3, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 24 January.

Hertford College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment to the Statutes of Hertford College, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 24 January.

The amendments relate to the following:

(i) compliance with Charity Commission requirements relating to articulation of charitable objects and the responsibilities of trustees;

(ii) simplification of the statutes to address core governance issues and removal of other items better treated in bye-laws or other ways;

(iii) Statute X on employment law provisions relating to academic staff has been moved to an appendix of the statutes. Minimal amendments have been made to better reflect current employment law but without altering any of the substantive terms set out in the Statute, as agreed with the University;

(iv) the term of office of the Principal is limited to a fixed term of five years in the first instance, which may be extended by the Governing Body. This replaces the current statute in which a Principal is appointed until his/her 67th birthday;

(v) removal of the Visitor’s right to annul bye-laws or decisions of Governing Body he/she judges to be repugnant to the statutes;

(vi) removal of the requirement for the College to appoint a Chaplain or for the Chaplain to perform divine service according to the liturgy of the Church of England during term time.

The Distinguished Friend of Oxford Award

Nominations are invited for the Distinguished Friend of Oxford Award. The award is made to those who have served as volunteers for the benefit of any part of the collegiate University. This service can entail introducing Oxford to opinion formers or donors, serving Oxford on committees, either internal or external, representing the University to the wider world, being part of a long-term effort to raise funds, or undertaking a significant project for a particular part, or parts, of the collegiate University. Past recipients include Thelma Holt for her work in establishing the Cameron Mackintosh Chair and for University Drama more generally, David Hopkinson for his thirty-seven years’ service on St Anne’s Finance Committee and Sir David Akers-Jones for his involvement with the Hong Kong Advisory Group, the China–Oxford Scholarship Fund and his long support of Brasenose College and the wider University.

Nominees need not be alumni of the University, but must not be employees. The award recognises volunteer service, rather than financial donations.

The closing date for nominations is Thursday, 20 January. The award/s will be made by the Vice-Chancellor at a special ceremony during the Oxford Alumni Weekend (16-18 September).

The Distinguished Friend of Oxford scheme is administered by the Alumni Office. Please see our website for further details: www.alumni.ox.ac.uk/dfo. Enquiries should be addressed to the Acting Director of Alumni Relations, Caroline Cain, at caroline.cain@alumni.ox.ac.uk.

Guidance notes for the holding of outside appointments and the conduct of outside work

This Guidance Note should be read in conjunction with Council Regulations 5 of 2004.

(1) PROCEDURES FOR APPLYING FOR APPROVAL TO HOLD OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS

(a) Applicants must complete an application form available at: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/ps/staff/codes/outsidecov.shtml.

(b) Applicants whose salaries are funded from externally-funded research grants or contracts, or who are Principal Investigators or Co-Investigators on outside-sponsored projects, must adhere to the terms and conditions stipulated by or agreed with the sponsor and, if necessary, seek written approval from the sponsor. If you are in any doubt, please contact Research Services staff for advice on the terms and conditions of externally-funded research grants and contracts held by the University (tel. (2)70143).

(c) Applicants must obtain the approval of their direct line manager where relevant.

(d) When the necessary approvals have been obtained from the relevant line manager or sponsor (as appropriate), applicants should submit the completed form to their head of department, who will be asked to sign to confirm that he/she is content to approve the outside commitment in the context of the applicant’s university duties. Heads of department who themselves wish to accept outside commitments must submit their application forms to their head of division for approval. Heads of Division should submit applications to the Vice-Chancellor.

(e) Applicants must ensure that they are familiar with the University’s policy and procedure on conflict of interest (http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/ro/o/ integrity#conflict). If they have any concerns about potential conflicts implicit in their proposed arrangements they should approach the secretary of the Conflict of Interest Committee (currently Mrs Frances Barnwell, email: frances.barnwell@admin. ox.ac.uk; telephone: (2)70138).

(f) If the outside appointment is arranged via Oxford University Consulting (see section 2 below) and approval is granted for the outside appointment, the applicant will enjoy a measure of protection under the University’s insurance arrangements (see http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/finance/ insurance/liability.shtml). If the outside appointment is arranged privately the individual (or the company) will need to hold their own insurance cover.

(2) OXFORD UNIVERSITY CONSULTING

The University’s wholly-owned subsidiary company, Isis Innovation Limited, has a division, Oxford University Consulting (http://www.isis-innovation.com/ consulting/index.html), to help members of the University to market their expertise to outside bodies, to negotiate commercial terms and payment on behalf of individuals, and to manage the administration associated with consultancy. OUC offers a professional service for academics and departments throughout the University, which will identify consultancy and related opportunities with local, national and international companies and organisations. Details of this service may be obtained by telephone (Q)80829) or by email (consulting@isis.ox.ac.uk).

Members of the University choosing to use the services of OUC must still follow the internal procedures for University approval of their outside appointments as outlined in this Guidance Note; OUC will, however, assist the process on behalf of the individuals concerned. Please see the University’s Consulting Policy and Procedures (http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/ nso/oxonly/consultingactivity/procedure.shtml).

(3) CONSULTANIES WITHIN RESEARCH GRANT APPLICATIONS AND CONTRACTS

The holding of a consultancy may be included where appropriate within research grant applications and contracts. Where consultancies are included in this way and provision is made through the payroll to pay staff for such work, the Outside Grants (OG) form should itemise, among the costs of the project, the costs of the consultancy payment (including employer’s on-costs). Indirect costs should also be calculated on the total cost of the project, including the fee for the consultancy. Research Services (tel. (2)70143) will be able to advise on the most appropriate form of agreement to cover consultancies attached to research grants or contracts. Time spent on such consultancies will count towards the 30-day limit.

If a department wishes to make personal payments to a University of Oxford staff member from a research account, these payments must go through the University payroll. Departments should use the Payroll Change Form (stocks are held in each department). The form entitled ‘Payment to Academic or Academic-related staff in respect of consultancy and/or services to industry’ is no longer in use.

(4) SERVICES TO INDUSTRY AND OUTSIDE BODIES

Not all work for outside bodies is governed by a contract with an external sponsor under the University’s research grants and contracts procedures. Some is likely to be ‘service’ work, i.e. the provision of a service to an external organisation which is not of academic benefit but which makes use of spare capacity in a department (most often specialist facilities/equipment) in return for payment. Such arrangements should nevertheless be covered by an agreement approved by the head of department which is drawn up in consultation with the departmental administrator and (for tax reasons) with the Finance Division. Customers must be made aware of the University’s standard conditions of sale and supply (available from the Legal Services Office (LSO)), which must be incorporated into all contracts (subject to any variations required on a case-by-case basis, and drafted or endorsed by the LSO).

A department may well wish to engage Oxford University Consulting to arrange these service agreements with third parties (see http://www.isis-innovation.com/ consulting/index.html).

Where appropriate a payment may be made through the payroll to individuals for the additional work undertaken in performing the services. It is expected that the head of department will decide on an appropriate fee to be paid to the individual based on the time spent (which again will count towards the 30-day per year limit). In such cases, where an agreement has been made with the University in respect of the service, it is not expected that a further personal consultancy agreement with the academic concerned will be necessary.

(5) FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS

The University does not generally (except in the case of consultancies for which the information is requested for the annual HE-BCI survey) seek details of remuneration which applicants are to receive in return for outside commitments, but reserves the right to request to be provided with such details in certain circumstances, e.g. in the light of any potential conflict of interest with the outside commitment. Applicants wishing exceptionally to make a case to spend a total of more than 30 days in any one year on outside commitments will be required to provide details of remuneration.

(6) MONITORING AND REPORTING OF OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS

(a) Heads of department are responsible, through their departmental administration, for keeping records of the number of days spent on outside commitments by all staff (regardless of staff group) in their departments.

(b) Departments and divisions are responsible for reporting the details of all outside commitments held by staff via the OpenDoor system by the end of September each year.

The Wellcome Trust’s grant conditions, for example, include stringent conditions relating to the holding of consultancies and these apply equally to individuals who are in receipt of Wellcome Trust research grants, as well as to those whose salaries are paid from Wellcome Trust grants.

Throughout this document, the term ‘head of department’ should be taken to include chairman of faculty board.

Continuation charge for postgraduate research students: change in regulations

Draft explanatory note

Council has decided to introduce a university continuation charge, to be paid by research students who start their programme of study in or after September 2011, and who exceed the standard period of university fee liability. Such a charge is currently levied by a significant proportion of colleges, and by many other universities. The charge will provide a contribution to the costs arising from continuing students. In parallel with the introduction of this charge, Education Committee is working with divisions to ensure that procedures to oversee the supervision and monitoring of students are effectively implemented across the University, with the aim of improving completion rates. Divisions will be required to set a minimum level of provision for bursaries to support students.

The continuation charge will be levied on a termly basis to students who are admitted in or after September 2011 to study for a DPhil or other research programme and who reach the end of the standard period of fee liability, until and including the term of submission. The charge will be made for the first time to certain students in 2013-14, and to most DPhil students in 2014-15.

The details of this policy are currently being finalised, with the charge expected to be in the range of £250-£500 per term. The same rate will apply to all students regardless of Home/EU or Overseas fee status. Bursary schemes are being developed to which students may apply for support towards these charges. The level of the charge for 2013-14 will be set in the course of 2011; further information will be published on the University website as soon as it is available, at http://www.ox.ac.uk/feesandfunding/fees/information/documentation.

Draft regulation

(1) In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 1116, after 1.44, insert:

‘§7 Continuation charge
A candidate admitted to graduate research study (that is, a student for the DPhil, EngD, MLitt, MSc(Res), or any other programme of study designated as a research programme) who commenced their current programme of study in or after September 2011 and who has reached the end of the period of fee liability, as defined at §6, cl. 4, and who thereafter remains registered as a graduate research student, shall pay a continuation charge for each subsequent term up to and including the term in which the thesis is submitted. Candidates whose thesis has been referred back shall pay no further composition fee or continuation charge, but shall pay the fee prescribed in §2 above when they apply for re-examination.

A student who is paying composition fees in respect of any given term shall not be liable for a continuation charge in the same term.

The continuation charge will first become payable in 2013–14, and the level of the charge for that year will be set by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee in due course.’

(2) Ibid., ll. 1 and 24, renumber §7 and §8 as §§8 and §9.

*For details of periods of fee liability, see http://www.ox.ac.uk/feesandfunding/fees/information/maxlib/#d.12070

*Mainly MSc(Res), MLitt, and DPhil students who have a reduced fee liability having previously completed an MPhil, BPhil or MSt in Legal Research.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 4 February.

(A) ATTENDANCE AT COUNCIL

Explanatory Note
The following changes extend the coverage of rules governing Council attendance to ex officio members.

Text of Regulations
Council Regulations 13 of 2002 (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 8 May 2003, 14 and 21 January 2010, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1244, 11 June 2009, Vol. 140, pp. 405 and 444), delete regulations 1-2, substitute the following and number existing regulations 3-11 as 2-10:

1. If a member of Council elected or serving under the provisions of section 4 (6) or (1)–(15) of Statute VI, or co-opted under the provisions of section 6, has attended fewer meetings than eight less the number of any meetings which have been cancelled in the course of any academic year, his or her seat shall at the close of that year be declared by the Vice-Chancellor to be vacant and shall then immediately be vacated, subject to the following conditions:

(a) A person elected or co-opted to fill a casual vacancy shall only be required to attend the same proportion of meetings due to be held subsequent to the date of his or her election or co-optation as eight bears to the total number of meetings due to be held in the academic year. Any fraction being reckoned to the nearest unit, and the resulting number then being reduced by the number of any meetings cancelled which were due to be held subsequent to that commencement date.

(b) The applicable commencement date is:

(i) the date of election or co-optation for a person elected or co-opted to fill a casual vacancy;

(ii) the date of the approval by Congregation of the nomination of a person nominated to fill a casual vacancy;

(iii) the date of appointment to the relevant office for a person serving ex officio.

(2) If a member of Council has been dispensed from his or her prescribed university or college duties for not less than one term in any year, he or she shall be deemed to have satisfied the requirements of this regulation if he or she has attended in that year at least six meetings less the number of any meetings which have been cancelled, or in the case of a person elected or co-opted to fill a casual vacancy joining Council after the beginning of an academic year, if he or she has attended such lesser number as shall have been calculated in proportion to six by the method (with any necessary substitutions) prescribed under paragraph (1) above.

(3) A member of Council whose minimum attendance requirement has not been reduced under paragraph (2) above may, at the discretion of the Vice-Chancellor, be deemed to have satisfied the requirements of this regulation if in any year he or she has attended, but for good reason has been prevented from attending more than six meetings less the number of any meetings which have been cancelled, or in the case of a person nominated to fill a casual vacancy has attended, but for good reason has been prevented from attending more than such lesser number as shall have been calculated in proportion to six by the method (with any necessary substitutions) prescribed under paragraph (1) above.

(B) SERVICE ON COMMITTEES

Explanatory Note
The following changes (i) clarify the operation of provisions concerning membership of committees and Council as they apply to the Proctors and Assessor; and (ii) enable the Chairman of the Personnel Committee to exercise discretion in connection with appointments to the General Purposes Committee after retirement from a university or college post.

Text of Regulations

text underlined, deleted text struck through:

6. Existing membership of all committees including Council shall terminate automatically on taking office as Proctor or Assessor. 6. (1) A person who becomes a Proctor or Assessor shall (unless he or she resigns) remain a member of all the committees of which he or she was formerly a member, and his or her place on each of those committees shall remain vacant until he or she resumes it on laying down office, or until his or her normal period of office as member of the committee comes to an end, whichever is the earlier.

(2) A Proctor or Assessor whose normal period of office on a committee comes to an end during his or her tenure of the Proctorship or Assessorship may, subject to any restriction on eligibility, be reappointed or re-elected.

2 Ibid., delete regulation 2 and substitute:

‘2. (1) No person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of a committee while holding any academic post of the University or any other of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)–(9) of Statute IV shall continue to serve on that committee after having retired from that post (or, in the case of a person retiring at different dates from those university and college posts previously held by him or her, after the date of the later of those retirements), unless the General Purposes Committee of Council or, in cases falling within the Personnel Committee’s delegated authority or cases concerning the membership of the General Purposes Committee, the Chairman of the Personnel Committee, shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(2) No person who has previously retired from any of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)–(9) of Statute IV, and who does not continue to hold another such post, shall be appointed or elected a member of a committee, unless the General Purposes Committee of Council or, in cases falling within the Personnel Committee’s delegated authority or cases concerning the membership of the General Purposes Committee, the Chairman of the Personnel Committee, shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(3) No other person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of a committee while not holding such a university or college post shall continue to serve on that committee, and no such person shall be appointed or elected a member of a committee, after the 30 September immediately preceding his or her 66th birthday, unless the General Purposes Committee of Council or, in cases falling within the Personnel Committee’s delegated authority or cases concerning the membership of the General Purposes Committee, the Chairman of the Personnel Committee, shall otherwise determine in an individual case.’

(C) COLLEGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Explanatory Note

The following changes, made on the recommendation of the College Contributions Committee after consultation with the Oxford colleges, (i) confirm that the tax regime to be applied to the accounts for the 2009/10 financial year, under which contributions will be payable in March 2011, will be the same as for the previous year; and (ii) raise the tax threshold from £30m to £35m in respect of the accounts for 2010/11 and the contributions payable in March 2012. The change to the tax threshold is being made to reflect inflation. The College Contributions Committee will continue to review taxation annually but has undertaken to conduct a review of the tax regime in 2013, for report to Council in January 2014.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 1 of 2009 concerning college contributions (Gazette, Vol. 139, 23 April 2009, p. 904, as amended on 21 January 2010, Vol. 140, p. 444), delete regulation 3(4) and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text struck through):

‘(4) The bands and rates for the contributions payable in 2009/10/11 based on the 2008/9/2009/10 accounts shall be as follows:

| On the first £35m of taxable assets | NIL |
| On the next £3m | 0.10 per cent |
| On the next £3m | 0.20 per cent |
| On the next £3m | 0.30 per cent |
| On taxable assets over £35m | 0.36 per cent |

At the same time as submitting its annual financial statements under section 8, each college shall also submit a statement in the form set out in the Schedule to these regulations.’

2 The change in regulations in paragraph 1 above shall have immediate effect.

3 Ibid., delete regulation 3(4) and substitute (new text underlined):

‘(4) The bands and rates for the contributions payable in 2010/11 based on the 2010/11 accounts shall be as follows:

| On the first £35m of taxable assets | NIL |
| On the next £3m | 0.10 per cent |
| On the next £3m | 0.20 per cent |
| On the next £3m | 0.30 per cent |
| On taxable assets over £35m | 0.36 per cent |

At the same time as submitting its annual financial statements under section 8, each college shall also submit a statement in the form set out in the Schedule to these regulations.’

4 The change in regulations in paragraph 3 above shall come into effect on 1 January 2012.

(D) COMMITTEE FOR THE COUNCIL DEPARTMENTS

Explanatory Note

Following rationalisation of the departments within the Council Departments sector over a number of years, and developments in the University’s organisational structure and funding mechanisms, it has been agreed that the Council Departments sector is no longer required. This change therefore disbands the Committee for the Council Departments, the primary purpose of which was to distribute funding to the Council Departments and to monitor the application of that funding.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.47–3.49, concerning the Committee for the Council Departments and renumber existing regulations 3.50–3.142 as 3.47–3.139.

(E) JOINT COMMITTEE WITH STUDENT MEMBERS

Explanatory Note

Following changes to the membership of the Joint Committee and recent developments in the status of OUSU, these changes amend the composition and terms of reference of the Joint Committee of Council with Student Members, and establish it as a subcommittee of the Education Committee.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulations 3.130–3.133, concerning the Joint Committee with Student Members, and substitute:
Joint Subcommittee of the Education Committee with Student Members

3.130. The Joint Subcommittee with Student Members shall be a subcommittee of the Education Committee.

3.131. The Joint Subcommittee with Student Members shall consist of:
(1) a chairman (who shall be the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education) or a member of Education Committee appointed by the Pro-Vice-Chancellor);
(2) one of the Proctors or the Assessor as may be agreed between them;
(3)–(5) three members of Congregation appointed by Education Committee, of whom at least two shall be members of Education Committee;
(6), (7) two members appointed by the Conference of Colleges;
(8) the President of the Oxford University Student Union;
(9) the Vice-President (Graduates) of the Oxford University Student Union;
(10) the Vice-President (Access and Academic Affairs) of the Oxford University Student Union;
(11) one student member appointed by the Executive of the Oxford University Student Union from among their own number;
(12), (13) two student members elected by the Council of the Oxford University Student Union, of whom one shall be a student member who is a graduate.

3.132. With the approval of the Education Committee on each occasion, the subcommittee may co-opt up to two additional senior members who shall hold office for one year and shall be eligible to serve for a total period of four years.

3.133. The subcommittee shall receive on behalf of Council (through its Education Committee) all reports, budget estimates, constitutional amendments, and other business under Part A of Statute XIII and shall make recommendations to Council, save that only those members appointed under regulation 3.131 (1)–(7) and 3.132 above may vote on business under Part A of Statute XIII.

3.134. The subcommittee shall receive all proposed variations to the terms of the University’s annual grant to OUSU and make recommendations to the Budget Subcommittee.

3.135. The subcommittee shall consider and advise Council through its Education Committee on any University matter which affects student members other than matters which fall within the scope of the joint committees of any of the University bodies set up under Statute VII or of the Curators of the University Libraries, or of the Rules Committee.

3.136. The subcommittee shall have power to consider matters which fall within the terms of reference of any joint committee other than those specified in regulation 3.135 above or of any committee which contains representatives of student members, but only if they have first been considered by that committee.

2 Ibid., renumber existing regulations 3.134–42 as 3.137–45.

Congregation 24 January

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 February, 2011 in the Sheldonian Theatre. The topic will be undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow). Views expressed at the Discussion will be taken into account by Council when it deliberates on these matters at its meeting in week 9 (14 March). Factual information to facilitate the Discussion will be provided on the Congregation website at www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting. In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made.

As the University’s Access Agreement for 2012/13 must be submitted to the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) by 31 March 2011, the timetable within which to decide upon a fee level and the associated student support and access arrangements is tight. Notwithstanding this limitation, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January 2011 that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After the Congregation Discussion, the issues will be developed through College and Divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards, Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) and Education Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hilary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting in week 9 (14 March); and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March 2011. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements and will draft the terms of Oxford’s Access Agreement, also for approval by Council in week 9, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March 2011.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide some logical structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 4 February, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). It is also intended to make a downloadable recording available on the same site. As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benten, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 9 February.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to those nominated representatives of OUSU confirmed by the Vice-Chancellor as speaking at the Discussion. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.30 p.m.; there will be a live audio broadcast of the meeting in the Cecil Jackson Room (in the basement of the Sheldonian Theatre) for attendees who do not gain admittance to the main Theatre (subject to space). The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

Note on procedures in Congregation

Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
Consultative notices

Keble: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the revised Statutes of Keble College, approved by the Governing Body at meetings on 22 June and 15 December 2010, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 31 January.

The effects of the amendments are: to make minor alterations to the day-to-day administration of the College and to ensure compliance with changes relating to the responsibilities of trustees of registered charities.

General notices

Joint Division/Education Committee Review of the Department of Education

Terms of Reference for the Review

1 To review the quality of academic activities in the department, by reference to:
   - international standards of excellence;
   - action taken since the last review of the faculty/department;
   - planning statements at faculty/department and divisional level, and in the context of the University’s mission statement and corporate plan.

In particular:

(a) the quality of the research of the faculty/department, including its participation in inter-departmental, inter-divisional and inter-disciplinary activities, its research profile and strategy, and future challenges and opportunities;

(b) the quality of graduate programmes and their delivery and related issues, including:
   - access and admissions;
   - curriculum design and programme structure;
   - teaching, learning and assessment;
   - the relationship between teaching and research;
   - academic and pastoral support and guidance;
   - the provision and use of learning resources (including staff resources);
   - specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies (including research degrees and research training and provision for part-time study);
   - relationships with colleges;
   - quality assurance mechanisms;

(c) the organisation of the faculty/department, its management structures and the relationship between the faculty/department and the Division, including such matters as:
   - strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plans and the University’s Corporate Plan);
   - academic and non-academic staff planning and recruitment;
   - student number planning;
   - terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issues;
   - accommodation and future space needs;
   - fundraising;

(d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the faculty/department, and between the faculty/department and cognate subject areas and colleges to which it is linked in teaching and research.

2 To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, the faculty/department, and its financial strategy.

The review committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference. These should be sent to the secretary of the review committee, c/o Helen Passay (helen.passay@socsci.ox.ac.uk), Social Sciences Division, Hayes House, 75 George Street, Oxford OX1 2BQ, by Monday, 21 February.

General notes:

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons ‘working in’ a department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the election on 10 March, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 10 February 2011.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are available from the ‘Forms’ section of the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of contested election to the vacancies in question, these statements will be available online and published in the Gazette dated 24 February. Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 10 March 2011.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University Calendar, 2010–11. For further information concerning these, or other, elections by Congregation, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP) £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)

External advertisers £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note: Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 11 February.

HARMSWORTH PROFESSOR OF AMERICAN HISTORY

Explanatory Note

The following change amends the composition of the electoral board of the Harmsworth Professor of American History, by increasing the number of members appointed by the History Faculty from one to two, to reflect the academic importance of this visiting professorship to the Faculty. It also replaces reference to ‘decrees’ with reference to ‘regulations’ and removes reference to the General Board.

Text of Regulations

In Sect. III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 432, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), in §119 delete existing regulations 4 and 5 and substitute:

4. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Chancellor of the University of Oxford (provided always that the Chancellor may appoint the Vice-Chancellor to act for him or her);

(2) the Ambassador from the United States of America to the Court of St James at the time of election, or a deputy appointed by the Ambassador to act from time to time;

(3) a person appointed by Council;

(4) Viscount Rothermere for his life, and thereafter each successive holder of the Viscountcy or an elector appointed by him as his representative at the election; but if the Viscountcy should have become extinct or the holder thereof be a minor or otherwise disqualified from acting as an elector or appointing a representative, then the Lord Chief Justice of England shall be the fourth elector;

(5), (6) two persons appointed by the governing body of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf;

(7), (8) two persons appointed by the Board of the Faculty of History.

5. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations as to residence which are applicable to this chair. He or she shall give not less than thirty-six lectures or classes in the year, provided that this obligation may be reduced in exceptional circumstances with the approval of the faculty board concerned.’

Congregation

8 February 2 p.m.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 February, 2011 in the Sheldonian Theatre. The topic will be undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow). Views expressed at the Discussion will be taken into account by Council when it deliberates on these matters at its meeting in week 9 (14 March). Factual information to facilitate the Discussion will be provided on the Congregation website at www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting. In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made.

As the University’s Access Agreement for 2012/13 must be submitted to the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) by 31 March 2011, the timetable within which to decide upon a fee level and the associated student support and access arrangements is tight. Notwithstanding this limitation, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January 2011 that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After the Congregation Discussion, the issues will be developed through College and Divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards, Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) and Education Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hilary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting in week 9 (14 March); and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March 2011. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements and will draft the terms of Oxford’s Access Agreement, also for approval by Council in week 9, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March 2011.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received.

This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide some logical structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 4 February, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). It is also intended to make a downloadable recording available on the same site. As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication.

Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 9 February.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to those nominated representatives of OUSU confirmed by the Vice-Chancellor as speaking at the Discussion. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.30 p.m; there will be a live audio broadcast of the meeting in the Cecil Jackson Room (in the basement of the Sheldonian Theatre) for attendees who do not gain admittance to the main Theatre (subject to space). The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

Elections

Audit and Scrutiny Committee
Humanities Divisional Board

Details are in ‘Elections’ section below.

Note on procedures in Congregation

1 Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
General notices

University of Oxford Bicycle Loan Scheme
The University is now offering staff interest-free loans, to the value of the employee’s monthly net pay (or a maximum of £1,000, whichever is the lower), to assist with the purchase of a bicycle and associated safety equipment for personal use. For full details please see the website: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/estates/travel/sssbike.shtml.

Green Templeton College
Following the formation of Green Templeton College the University has applied to the Charity Commission for a scheme to govern the trust property involved. The Charity Commission’s notice concerning the proposed Scheme is reprinted below.

CHARITY COMMISSION
Notice CSD-1161A
Charity: Trust Property in connection with Green College Oxford and the Morris Trust Reference: 4047411/C-2759686-VJN1
A Scheme is a legal document made by the Charity Commission. It is proposed to make a Scheme for these charities which will amalgamate them and enable the new charity to support Green Templeton College within the University of Oxford.

A copy of the draft Scheme can be seen at: University of Oxford, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford, OX1 2JD or by visiting our website at: www.charitycommission.gov.uk, or a copy can be obtained by sending a stamped addressed envelope to: Charity Commission Direct, PO Box 1227, Liverpool, L69 3UG quoting the above reference number.

Comments or representations on these proposals can be made to the Charity Commission within one month from the date of this notice, either by letter or by completing the form on our website.

Mansfield College: Visiting Fellowship 2011–2012

Mansfield College

VISITING FELLOWSHIP 2011–2012

The College Governing Body proposes to elect a Visiting Fellow for all or part of the academic year 2011–2012. The purpose of the Fellowship, which is non-stipendiary, is to provide a congenial base for visiting scholars, either from abroad or from the UK, to conduct research in Oxford, to have access to Oxford libraries, and to use the College as a means of establishing contact with other scholars in the College and the University. Applications from scholars whose interests lie within the range of subjects represented in the Senior Common Room will be particularly welcome.

Visiting Fellows will be full members of the Senior Common Room. The Fellowship covers the Common Room subscription and entitlement to free lunches and dinners. The College is unable to provide study space or residential accommodation.

Application forms are available on the College website (http://www.mansfield.ox.ac.uk/about/vacancies.html) or may be obtained from the Academic Administrator, Mansfield College, Oxford, OX1 3TF (tel.: 01865 270982, email: helen.etty@mansfield.ox.ac.uk). Five copies of the application form and curriculum vitae should be returned by Friday, 11 March 2011.

Nomination received

The following nomination has been received:

Professor V. Gillespie, MA DPhil Ox, Fellow of Lady Margaret Hall, Faculty of English

Nominated by:

J.D. Bradshaw, Worcester
C.D. Brewer, Hertford
H.D. Moore, Corpus Christi
J. Sloan, Harris Manchester

General notes:

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons ‘working in’ a department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the election on 10 March, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 10 February.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are available from the ‘Forms’ section of the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms, a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of contested election to the vacancies in question, these statements will be available online and published in the Gazette dated 24 February. Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 10 March.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University Calendar, 2010-11, or the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

will regulation for decision by Council at its meeting in weeks. Notwithstanding this timetable, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January 2011 that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After the Congregation Discussion, the issues will be developed through College and Divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards, Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) and Education Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hilary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting in week 9 (14 March); and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March 2011. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements and will draft the terms of Oxford’s Access Agreement, also for approval by Council in week 9, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March 2011.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use to both other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide some logical structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 4 February, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). It is also intended to make a downloadable recording available on the same site. As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the verbatim report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 9 February.
Towards the end of the October statutory meeting, Council was to consider a report from the Audit and Scrutiny Committee, recommending the establishment of a quorum to be determined in accordance with the Statutes of the University, as amended. The meeting was held at 2 p.m., and attendees were allowed to attend in person or by video-conference. The meeting was open to the public, and the annual review of the University's financial transactions was discussed.

The minutes of the meeting included the following amendments to the University's statutes:

1. In Statute VI concerning Council (Supplement 1 to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), insert new section 19 below and renumber existing sections 19-23 as 20-24:

   ‘19. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

   (2) Council shall lay down by regulation the definition of, and the application of rules governing, its quorum.

2. This statute shall be effective from the date on which it is approved by Her Majesty in Council.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

   ‘Quorum

   1. (1) In accordance with section 19 of Statute VI, no business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

   (2) A quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon Council business (rounded to the nearest integer).

   (3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

   2. If:

   (1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting; or

   (2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the Vice-Chancellor acting under delegated authority in accordance with Council's Standing Orders.’

2. In Part I of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees (Supplement 2 to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), after existing regulation 1.5 insert new regulations 1.6-1.7 as follows:

   ‘1.6. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of a committee reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees unless a quorum is present.

   (2) In the absence of provision in these regulations for a larger quorum, a quorum is one third of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee in question (rounded to the nearest integer).

   (3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

1.7. If:

   (1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting; or

   (2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the chairman acting under delegated authority in accordance with the committee’s standing orders.’

3. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Finance Committee, after existing regulation 3.60 insert new 3.61 below:

   ‘3.61. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part I apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).’

4. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Socially Responsible Investment Review Committee, after existing regulation 3.109 insert new 3.110 below:

   ‘3.110. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part I apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).’
The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 665; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), proposes that Council is given power to remove a member of Council, in accordance with the unanimous recommendation made by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in the Governance Report. However, Council has decided that the power to remove a member should also be applicable to ex officio members, as an individual might be removed from Council membership for reasons that would not necessarily cause his or her removal from office.

For the avoidance of doubt, the amendments also transpose to Statute VI provisions concerning membership of committees that are currently in Council Regulations 14 of 2002 but are equally applicable to Council.

A tracked changes version of Statute VI is available online (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/council/CIO191tracked.pdf).

WHEREAS it is expedient to give Council power to remove members of Council, NOW THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, in exercise of the powers in that behalf conferred upon it by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923, and of all other powers enabling it, ENACTS, subject to the approval of Her Majesty in Council, AS FOLLOWS.

2. Ibid., delete sections 6–10 and substitute: ‘6. Council may, but is not obliged to, co-opt up to three members of Congregation as additional members of Council.

7. The Vice-Chancellor, or, in his or her absence, a member of Council deputed by the Vice-Chancellor, shall take the chair at all meetings of Council and have a second or casting vote in the event of equality of voting.

8. (1) Elected or nominated members of Council Members of Council elected under section 4 (15)–(25) or appointed as an external member under section 4 (7)–(10) above shall serve for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(2) The member of Council elected under section 4 (6) shall serve for such period as may be determined under the regulations of the Conference of Colleges.

(3) Members of Council co-opted under section 6 may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years.

(4) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under sub-sections (1) or (2) above shall not be eligible to serve as an elected nominated or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(5) Casual vacancies Vacancies caused other than by expiry of term as a member shall be filled for the remaining period of office of the member replaced in the same manner as that member took up office except on termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) of an ex officio member serving under section 4 (1)–(5) or (11)–(14), when the vacancy shall be filled in accordance with section 10.

(6) A person who is elected or nominated to fill a casual vacancy under sub-section (2) above shall be eligible to serve as an elected or nominated external member of Council after the expiry of the period referred to in sub-section (2) above for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(7) Co-opted members of Council may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years.

(8) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under this section shall not be eligible to serve as an elected nominated or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(9) This section does not apply to the members of Council referred to in section 4 (1)–(5) or (11)–(14) above.

9. (1) If an elected member of Council ceases to be a member of Congregation or his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

(b) a good cause, defined as behaviour incompatible with the member’s duties as a Trustee of the University;

(c) automatically at the close of an academic year for absence without permission from a prescribed number of meetings in that year, as determined by regulation;

(d) automatically on a member elected under section 4 (15)–(25) ceasing to be a member of Congregation;

(e) automatically on an external member appointed under section 4 (7)–(10) becoming the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall, his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

10. Council may determine by regulation that if an elected nominated, or co-opted member of Council has attended fewer than a prescribed number of meetings in any academic year, his or her membership of Council shall end at the close of that year.

9. (1) Membership of Council shall terminate:

(a) automatically on disqualification from acting as a Trustee by virtue of section 72 of the Charities Act 1993 or any statutory re-enactment or modification of that provision;

(b) for good cause, defined as behaviour incompatible with the member’s duties as a Trustee of the University;

(c) automatically at the close of an academic year for absence without permission from a prescribed number of meetings in that year, as determined by regulation;

(d) automatically on a member elected under section 4 (15)–(25) ceasing to be a member of Congregation;

(e) automatically on an external member appointed under section 4 (7)–(10) becoming the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or in any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall;
10. (1) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of an ex officio member other than the Vice-Chancellor, the appropriate body shall appoint a replacement Council member who shall serve with voting rights but that appointment shall cease automatically on a new appointment to the underlying post.

(2) for the purposes of sub-section (1) above, the appropriate body shall be as follows:

(a) under section 4 (2), the Conference of Colleges;

(b) under section 4 (3)-(4), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Proctor in question, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the vicerect;

(c) under section 4 (5), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Assessor, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the vicerect;

(d) under section 4 (11)-(14), the relevant divisional board;

(3) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of the Vice-Chancellor, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman by the Chancellor or, in default of appointment by the Chancellor, by Council.

11. (1) No person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while holding any academic post of the University or any other of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)- (9) of Statute IV shall continue to serve on Council after having retired from that post (or, in the case of a person retiring at different dates from those university and college posts previously held by him or her, after the date of the later of those retirements), unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(2) No person who has previously retired from any of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)-(9) of Statute IV, and who does not continue to hold another such post, shall be appointed or elected a member of Council, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(3) No other person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while not holding such a university or college post shall continue to serve on Council, and no such person shall be appointed, or elected a member of Council, after the 30 September immediately preceding his or her 66th birthday, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

12. (1) If at any time a vacancy arises through an appointing or electing body having failed to make an appointment or, in the case of an election, through insufficient nominations having been received by the due date or for any other reason, the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors shall appoint a person to the vacancy.

(2) This section shall apply to vacancies arising on termination of Council membership which in the opinion of Council have not been filled within a reasonable time by the appropriate body under section 10 (2)(a) and (c), such opinion to be determined by a two-thirds majority of those present and voting.

3. Ibid., renumber existing sections 11-23 as 13-25.

‘(12) ‘ex officio’ means by virtue of office, for example, a person serving on a committee by virtue of his or her office.’

5. In section 2 (2) of Statute IV concerning Congregation (Supplement I) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 100, amended with effect from 8 April 2009, Gazette Vol. 139, p. 932, 23 April 2009), delete ‘Statute VI (sections 1-8 only)’ and substitute ‘Statute VI (sections 1-20 only),’ in section 1 (4) delete ‘section 17’ and substitute ‘section 18’, and in section 6 (5) delete ‘Sections 13-18’ and substitute ‘Sections 15-20’.

6. In section 19 (2) of Statute XVI concerning property, contracts and trusts (Supplement I) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), delete ‘sections 13-18’ and substitute ‘sections 15-20’.

7. These Statutes shall be effective from a date following their approval by Her Majesty in Council, to be announced by prior notice in the Gazette.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

‘1. These regulations shall apply both to Council and to any “committee” of the University as defined in section 6 (3) of Statute I.’

7. (1) In the event of the incapacity of the initiation of the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII or absence from Oxford of the Vice-Chancellor, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship, one of the Pro-Vice- Chancellors shall be appointed Acting Vice-Chancellor.

(2) In the event that the Vice-Chancellor’s membership of Council is terminated under section 9 (1) of Statute VI, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman of Council.

*A further change will be necessary to delete the reference to Council from regulation 6 of Council Regulations 14 of 2002 (see p. 313).
(23) The appointment shall be made:
(a) by the Vice-Chancellor in the event of incapacity or absence, if the incapacity or absence is unlikely to be longer than two months;
(b) by the Chancellor if the incapacity or absence is likely to be for longer than two months, or the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII has been initiated, or membership of Council has been terminated, or after an appointment under (a) has lasted for two months, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship;
(c) by Council in default of an appointment under (a) or (b).

A Brave New World: The Student Perspective on Oxford post-Browne

Oxford has changed forever. The raising of the cap on tuition fees to £9000 and the introduction of a market in Higher Education will have a profound material and ideological effect on how prospective and current students view an Oxford education. The University must be ready to respond to these changes in order to ensure that our ideals of a world-class and unique education accessible and affordable to all are upheld. Here are just a few factors which Congregation should consider at its Discussion next Tuesday.

The Fee Level

There is a real danger that the sudden rise in fees will deter students from poor backgrounds from applying to Universities with the highest fee levels. It will take time to educate schoolchildren about the benefits of the new system, as Oxford recognised in its submission to the Browne Review when it promised to phase in any fee rises. Amongst all Universities, Oxford is in a unique position due to its access to philanthropic resources to honour that promise.

Fee Waivers

All the available evidence suggests that those from the lowest income households are the most likely to be debt-averse. Oxford should consider putting in place an aggressive fee waiver scheme for the poorest students which will dramatically challenge preconceptions about what kind of a place Oxford is and who is welcome here.

Bursary Provision

Bursary provision that allows students from every background to live comfortably in Oxford during term-time without having to work is an absolute must. This means that a bursary system needs to be designed which is not only generous in terms of headline figures but which can guarantee that students will not fall into hardship no matter where in the Collegiate system they find themselves. That is not an easy task, and should not be rushed simply to meet arbitrary Government deadlines.

Freedom and availability of Information on College costs

A huge key to designing a working bursary system will be to uncover the true nature of College costs for undergraduate students. For many years now most Universities have been entirely up front about living costs. Oxford, on the other hand, remains impenetrable in the way Colleges advertise their accommodation, food and other costs. That has got to change under a national market system in which prospective students will be expected to choose their University as rational economic actors. In reality this will be a great PR exercise for the University, because for most Oxford students rent and food are heavily subsidised by their College. However, College charges which do not provide well-defined and direct benefits to students cannot and will not survive in a system in which students are paying a vastly increased proportion of the costs of their course.

College Best Practice

Gross inequality of provision between Colleges simply will not be accepted by students under any new fees system. Serious structural efforts need to be put in place immediately to ensure that best practice on issues such as academic discipline, welfare provision and complaints procedures are taken up by all Colleges.

Careers Information, Advice and Support

Universities will become increasingly judged not simply on their ability to educate, but on their ability to prepare students for lucrative and fulfilling careers. Oxford lags behind its competitor institutions in terms of its funding and support for its Careers Service, and whilst an Oxford education equips students with many key skills, others – such as teamwork and business understanding – are structurally neglected.

With debts of over £20,000, there is a real danger that Oxford graduates will begin to make career choices based on financial considerations rather than personal and social ones. The University should consider a loan repayment assistance programme similar to the one operated by Duke Law School, whereby graduates that go on to teach in primary and secondary schools are assisted by the University in paying back their student loans. This could form a major platform of any new fundraising drive to support students in the new fees system.

Postgraduate Access and Quality of Provision

A combination of the Government’s plans on immigration and the reality of undergraduates leaving Oxford with significant debts will lead to a crisis in Oxford’s graduate provision. For too long Oxford has given graduate students the impression that they are cash-cows, and the internationally competitive nature of postgraduate study will ensure that such a situation cannot continue. A full-scale postgraduate teaching review must be initiated at once, and schemes to give undergraduates more experience of research should be considered to boost top-quality applicants at graduate level.

Student Representation and Common Room Funding

There is a real danger that University students in the UK will begin to see themselves as consumers, and as such will demand increased rights. The only way to counter this perception is to give students a real and meaningful stake in the decisions which affect their lives in Oxford, not as consumers but as co-producers of their own education and as real and valued members of the College and University community. That means opening up more financial and confidential material to elected student representatives. It also means sustainable and significant funding for Common Rooms and for the Student Union, so that students have more of a stake in where their money is being spent.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion was held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 8 February 2011 in the Sheldonian Theatre on the topic of undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow). Views expressed at the Discussion will be taken into account by Council when it deliberates on these matters at its meeting in week 9 (14 March).

A downloadable recording of the discussion is available on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). A verbatim transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 17 February and available on the Congregation website before then.

Council of the University

Register of Congregation

Mr Vice-Chancellor reports that the following names have been added to the Register of Congregation:

Dehalvi, M.N., Faculty of Clinical Medicine
Makishti, R., Social Sciences Division
McNulty, R.H., Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
Mottonen, R.K.M., Faculty of Psychological Studies
Owen, S.H.E., Faculty of Physics
Roberts, J.R., Graduate Admissions and Funding

Congregation  22 February  2 p.m.

1. Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 14 February, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose one or more of the legislative proposals below, or to speak or ask a question concerning the Annual Review of the University (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposals shall be carried and the Annual Review shall be declared presented, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: quorum of Council and committees of Council

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4-8), proposes the establishment of a quorum requirement for Council, in accordance with the unanimous recommendation made by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in its report to Council (the ‘Governance Report’), prepared in response to eight questions posed by HEFCE (Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 551, 29 January 2009, and published online at www.ox.ac.uk/governance, recommendation 3.8, p. 69). Recognising that the quorum rules were likely to operate infrequently, Council has agreed that the quorum rules should be kept as simple as possible. The corresponding changes in regulations also introduce a quorum requirement for committees of Council.

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish a quorum requirement for Council, NOW THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, in exercise of the powers in that behalf conferred upon it by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923, and of all other powers enabling it, ENACTS, subject to the approval of Her Majesty in Council, AS FOLLOWS.

1. In Statute VI concerning Council (Supplement (1) to the Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), insert new section 19 below and renumber existing sections 19-23 as 20-24:

‘19. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

(2) Council shall lay down by regulation the definition of, and the application of rules governing, its quorum.’

2. This statute shall be effective from the date on which it is approved by Her Majesty in Council.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

1. In Council Regulations 13 of 2002 (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 8 May 2003, 14 and 21 January 2010, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1244, 11 June 2009; Vol. 140, pp. 405 and 444), insert the heading and new regulations 1-2 below and renumber existing regulations 1-11 as 3-13:

Quorum

1. (1) In accordance with section 19 of Statute VI, no business shall be transacted at any meeting of Council unless a quorum is present.

(2) A quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon Council business (rounded to the nearest integer).

(3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

2. If:

(1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting; or

(2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the Vice-Chancellor acting under delegated authority in accordance with Council’s Standing Orders.”

2. In Part I of Council Regulations 15 of 2002 concerning committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), after existing regulation 1.5 insert new regulations 1.6-1.7 as follows:

‘1.6. (1) No business shall be transacted at any meeting of a committee reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees unless a quorum is present.

(2) In the absence of provision in these regulations for a larger quorum, a quorum is one third of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee in question (rounded to the nearest integer).

(3) A member who is participating in a meeting by telephone, video-conference or any other means of communication which permits all members simultaneously to hear one another, shall be considered present and therefore shall count towards the quorum.

1.7: If:

(1) a quorum is not present within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting, or

(2) during a meeting a quorum ceases to be present

the business or remaining business of that meeting shall be deferred to another meeting, whether already scheduled or to be scheduled, or shall be dealt with by the chairman acting under delegated authority in accordance with the committee’s standing orders.’

3. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Finance Committee, after existing regulation 3.60 insert new 3.61 below:

‘3.61. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).’

4. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Socially Responsible Investment Review Committee, after existing regulation 3.109 insert new 3.110 below:

‘3.110. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).’

5. Ibid., in Part 3 concerning the Joint Committee with Student Members, after existing regulation 3.131 insert new 3.132 below:

‘3.132. Regulations 1.6 and 1.7 in Part 1 apply to this committee except that the quorum is one third plus one of those members eligible to vote upon the business of the committee (rounded to the nearest integer).’

6. Ibid., remunerate existing regulations 3.61-3.142.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: removal of Council members

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4-8), proposes that Council is given power to remove a member of Council, in accordance with the unanimous recommendation made by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee in the Governance Report. However, Council has decided that the power to remove a member should also be applicable to ex officio members, as an individual might be removed from Council membership for reasons that would not necessarily cause his or her removal from office.

For the avoidance of doubt, the amendments also transpose to Statute VI provisions concerning membership of committees that are currently in Council Regulations 14 of 2002 but are equally applicable to Council.

A tracked changes version of Statute VI is available online (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/council/CIO191tracked.pdf).

Corrections to be made under the slip rule

Regulation 1.17 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Regulations of Congregation for the Conduct of Business in Congregation) gives the Vice-Chancellor the power, after consultation with the Registrar and the Proctors, to correct any clerical error, slip or omission in the text of a legislative proposal which has been made.

After consultation, the Vice-Chancellor has agreed to the amendment of the legislative proposal below, to correct the following errors, and the text of the legislative proposal has been amended accordingly.

1. In new section 8 (4) of Statute VI, the cross-reference should be to ‘sub-sections (1) or (3)’ not ‘sub-sections (1) or (2),’ and should apply to ‘elected external or co-opted’ members, not ‘elected nominated or co-opted’ members.

2. In new section 9 (1)(b), the cross-reference to section 11 should refer to the determination of the ‘Chancellor’, not the ‘General Purposes Committee of Council’.

3. In new section 12 (2), the cross-reference should be to ‘section 10 (2)(b) and (3),’ not ‘section 10 (2)(b) and (c).’

WHEREAS it is expedient to give Council power to remove members of Council, NOW THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, in exercise of the powers in that behalf conferred upon it by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923, and of all other powers enabling it, ENACTS, subject to the approval of Her Majesty in Council, AS FOLLOWS.

2. Ibid., delete sections 6-10 and substitute:

‘6. Council may, but is not obliged to, co-opt up to three members of Congregation as additional members of Council.

7. The Vice-Chancellor, or, in his or her absence, a member of Council deputed by the Vice-Chancellor, shall take the chair at all meetings of Council and have a second or casting vote in the event of equality of voting.

8. (1) Elected or nominated members of Council Members of Council elected under section 4 (15)- (25) or appointed as an external member under section 4 (7)- (10) above shall serve for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(2) The member of Council elected under section 4 (6) shall serve for such period as may be determined under the regulations of the Conference of Colleges.

(3) Members of Council co-opted under section 6 may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years.
(1) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under sub-sections (1) or (3) above shall not be eligible to serve as an elected external or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(2) Casual vacancies. Vacancies caused other than by expiry of term as a member shall be filled for the remaining period of office of the member replaced in the same manner as that member took up office except on termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) of an ex officio member serving under section 4 (1)–(5) or (1)–(14), when the vacancy shall be filled in accordance with section 10.

(3) A person who is elected or nominated to fill a casual vacancy under sub-section (2) above shall be eligible to serve as an elected or nominated external member of Council after the expiry of the period referred to in sub-section (2) above for a period of four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of four years.

(4) Co-opted members of Council may serve for a period of up to four years and shall be eligible to serve for a second consecutive period of up to four years.

(5) A member who has served two consecutive periods of four years under this section shall not be eligible to serve as an elected nominated or co-opted member of Council earlier than four years after the end of his or her period of service.

(6) This section does not apply to the members of Council referred to in section 4 (1)–(5) or (11)–(14) above.

9. (1) If an elected member of Council ceases to be a member of Congregation, his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

(2) If a nominated member, having been appointed under the provisions of section 4 (7)–(10) of this statute, becomes the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or in any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall, his or her membership of Council shall end immediately.

10. Council may determine by regulation that if an elected, nominated, or co-opted member of Council has attended fewer than a prescribed number of meetings in any academic year, his or her membership of Council shall end at the close of that year.

9. (1) Membership of Council shall terminate:

(a) automatically on disqualification from acting as a Trustee by virtue of section 72 of the Charities Act 1993 or any statutory re-enactment or modification of that provision;

(b) for good cause defined as behaviour incompatible with the member's duties as a Trustee of the University;

(c) automatically at the close of an academic year for absence without permission from a prescribed number of meetings in that year, as determined by regulation;

(d) automatically on a member elected under section 4 (15)–(25) ceasing to be a member of Congregation;

(e) automatically on an external member appointed under section 4 (7)–(10) becoming the resident holder of a teaching, research, or administrative post in the University or in any college, society, or Permanent Private Hall;

(f) automatically for an existing appointed, elected or co-opted member on taking office which entitles him or her to serve as an ex officio member of Council;

(g) in accordance with section 8 above on expiry of term;

(h) in accordance with section 11 below unless the Chancellor shall determine otherwise in an individual case;

(i) on acceptance by Council of the resignation of a member.

(2) The decision to remove a member under sub-section (1)(b) above shall only be made by unanimous ballot of all Council members entitled to vote (not including the member whose removal is the subject of the ballot) in accordance with a procedure laid down by Council by standing order.

10. (1) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of an ex officio member other than the Vice-Chancellor, the appropriate body shall appoint a replacement Council member who shall serve with voting rights but that appointment shall cease automatically on a new appointment to the underlying post.

(2) For the purposes of sub-section (1) above, the appropriate body shall be as follows:

(a) under section 4 (2), the Conference of Colleges;

(b) under section 4 (3)–(4), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Proctor in question, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the vice-regent;

(c) under section 4 (5), a substitute qualified under section 17 of Statute IX shall be appointed by the head of the college or society that elected the Assessor, or, if the head is absent or the headship is vacant, the vice-regent;

(d) under section 4 (11)–(14), the relevant divisional board.

(3) On termination of Council membership under section 9 (1) above of the Vice-Chancellor, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman by the Chancellor or, in default of appointment by the Chancellor, by Council.

11. (1) No person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while holding any academic post of the University or any other of the university, or college posts specified in section 3 (6)–(9) of Statute IV shall continue to serve on Council after having retired from that post or, in the case of a person retiring at different dates from those university and college posts previously held by him or her, after the date of the later of those retirements, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(2) No person who has previously retired from any of the university or college posts specified in section 3 (6)–(9) of Statute IV, and who does not continue to hold another such post, shall be appointed or elected a member of Council, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(3) No other person appointed, elected, or serving as a member of Council while not holding such a university or college post shall continue to serve on Council, and no such person shall be appointed or elected a member of Council, after the 30 September immediately preceding his or her 66th birthday, unless the Chancellor shall otherwise determine in an individual case.

(4) If at any time a vacancy arises through an appointment or electing body having failed to make an appointment or, in the case of an election, through insufficient nominations having been received by the due date or for any other reason, the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors shall appoint a person to the vacancy.

(2) This section shall apply to vacancies arising on termination of Council membership which in the opinion of Council have not been filled within a reasonable time by the appropriate body under section 10(2)(b) and (3), such opinion to be determined by a two-thirds majority of those present and voting.

3. Ibid., renumber existing sections 11-23 as 13-25.

‘(12) ‘ex officio’ means by virtue of office, for example, a person serving on a committee by virtue of his or her office.’

5. In section 2(2) of Statute IV concerning Congregation (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 100, amended with effect from 8 April 2009, Gazette Vol. 139, p. 932, 23 April 2009), delete 'Statute VI (sections 1-18 only)' and substitute 'Statute VI (sections 1-20 only)', in section 1(4) delete 'section 17' and substitute 'section 18', and in section 6(5) delete 'Sections 13-18' and substitute 'Sections 15-20'.

6. In section 19(2) of Statute XVI concerning property, contracts and trusts (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, as amended), delete 'sections 13-18' and substitute 'sections 15-20'.

7. These Statutes shall be effective from a date following their approval by Her Majesty in Council, to be announced by prior notice in the Gazette.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved by Her Majesty in Council

‘1. These regulations shall apply both to Council and to any ‘committee’ of the University as defined in section 6 (3) of Statute 1.’

7. (1) In the event of the incapacity or the initiation of the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII or absence from Oxford of the Vice-Chancellor, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed Acting Vice-Chancellor.

(2) In the event that the Vice-Chancellor's membership of Council is terminated under section 9(1) of Statute VI, one of the Pro-Vice-Chancellors shall be appointed chairman of Council.

(3) The appointment shall be made:

(a) by the Vice-Chancellor in the event of incapacity or absence, if the incapacity or absence is unlikely to be longer than two months;

(b) by the Chancellor if the incapacity or absence is likely to be for longer than two months, or the removal procedure under Part G of Statute XII has been initiated, or membership of Council has been terminated, or after an appointment under (a) has lasted for two months, or in the event of a vacancy in the Vice-Chancellorship;

(c) by Council in default of an appointment under (a) or (b).

One member of Congregation elected by Congregation and from among the members of the Faculty of English Language and Literature.

For further information regarding the board, please contact the Secretary (marie.drummond@humanities.ox.ac.uk).

Nomination received

The following nomination has been received:

Professor V. Gillespie, MA DPhil Oxf, Fellow of Lady Margaret Hall, Faculty of English

Nominated by:

J.D. Bradshaw, Worcester
C.D. Brewer, Hertford

H.D. Moore, Corpus Christi
J. Sloan, Harris Manchester

General notes:

Where it is specified in the above list that the nominee must be from among certain persons ‘working in’ a department or other institution, both the nominee and the nominators must be persons so working at the time of the election.

Nominations in writing for the election on 10 March, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be received by the Elections Office, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 10 February 2011.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are available from the ‘Forms’ section of the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out his or her reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of contested election to the vacancies in question, these statements will be available online and published in the Gazette dated 24 February. Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 10 March 2011.

For further information about the committee or body concerned, please contact the individual Secretary, either via the email links above, or as listed in the University Calendar, 2010–11, or the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.
Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges

Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP) £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see clause 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)

External advertisers £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length

The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment

Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit card or debit card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque

Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following; University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Disclaimer

7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity

13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/terms.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette

16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Undergraduate Funding and Support from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

The following is the text of the Discussion in Congregation on 8 February on the topic of undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from 2012/13 in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow).

VICE-CHANCELLOR: The business before Congregation is the presentation of a Topic for Discussion, on the subject of undergraduate funding and support from October 2012. Would you please be seated.

Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen.

The topic for today’s discussion will be undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the Home/EU undergraduate fee) from October 2012, in the context of the new financial arrangements for higher education approved by Parliament in December 2010 (with further legislative decisions by Parliament to follow).

As noted on the agenda for this meeting in the University Gazette, the University’s Access Agreement for 2012 to 2013 must be submitted to the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) by 31 March, and therefore the timetable within which to decide upon a fee level and the associated student support and access arrangements is tight. Notwithstanding this limitation, Council agreed at its meeting on 17 January that all those within the collegiate University wishing to contribute to the deliberations should be given an opportunity to do so, and so that a Congregation Discussion would be central to this consultation process.

After today’s discussion, the issues will be developed through college and divisional structures. In terms of the fee level, the Conference of Colleges, Divisional Boards and the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee will reflect on the issues in the second half of Hillary term. PRAC will then synthesise the views expressed in each of these fora, and will make recommendations for decision by Council at its meeting on 14 March; and the necessary regulation will be published in the Gazette on 17 March. The Education Committee will undertake a similar exercise in respect of student financial support and widening access arrangements, and will draft the terms of Oxford’s Access Agreement, also for approval by Council on 14 March, and for submission to OFFA by 31 March.

In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken at this meeting, but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made and will do so at Council’s meeting on 14 March.

Before turning to the procedure to be followed at this afternoon’s discussion, I should add that, whilst this discussion is for members of Congregation, the student view on these issues will of course be an important element in Oxford’s deliberations. I have therefore invited three student representatives from OUSU to speak today, and they are accompanied by a group of their student colleagues. Members of the student press have also been invited to attend, so that they can report on the proceedings as soon as practicable.

Furthermore, the student representatives who attend meetings of Council, PRAC, the Education Committee and the Divisional Boards will be able to contribute to the consideration these bodies give to the issues. Finally, for those who are unable to attend today’s meeting in person, an audio broadcast will be available on the University’s website later today; and a transcript of the meeting will appear as a Gazette supplement as soon as possible, and I hope in the issue published on 17 February, but it will be on the University website prior to that.

The procedure for today’s discussion will be as follows. I shall ask Professor Tony Monaco, Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), to introduce the discussion and give an overview of the main factors to be considered. The matter will then be open to the house. At the end of the discussion, I shall ask Professor Monaco to make any final points. I intend to close this afternoon’s meeting at about 4.30 p.m. I would ask all speakers to come forward and to speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the house should please follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. May I draw the attention of speakers to the device positioned to the side of the lectern. This anti-loquitor device has green, amber and red lights to help speakers with the timing of their speeches. The amber light shows one minute remaining and should encourage speakers to begin to wind up their remarks. Red means speakers are out of time and must conclude their remarks. I shall have to ask speakers to bring their remarks to an end if they extend beyond five minutes. A number of members of Congregation have indicated a wish to speak, and I will endeavour to call on all of them, but I cannot guarantee that I will be able to do so. Priority will be given to those who have indicated in advance that they wish to speak, and I would ask that additional speakers rise from their seats to indicate their wish to speak only if they have new points to add which have not already been raised by the other speakers.

In accordance with health and safety guidelines, the stenographer who is helping us to transcribe today’s proceedings is entitled to a break after an hour and a half. Therefore, if speeches are still being made at 3.30 p.m., I shall call for a five-minute break.

I would be grateful if any speaker who uses a written text would afterwards provide a copy of that text to Mrs Benton, the officer who is collecting such speeches, as this will be of assistance in preparing the published record of the discussion in the Gazette.

I would now ask Professor Monaco to introduce the discussion.

Professor Tony Monaco (Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), Merton College)

There are a few points that I would like to make as we discuss the issues around fees and student support. Firstly, all universities are losing a substantial amount of funding from the government for teaching. Because of these cuts in government funding, both for teaching and for capital infrastructure, we would have to charge around £8,000 just to maintain the status quo. Anything else would mean we have to lose money or have to find, with immediate effect, funds from elsewhere. If the latter, those funds would be additional to the roughly £80 million per year we already spend subsidising the undergraduate teaching system from other sources within the collegiate University.

There are three things that we need to consider and that will be talked about today. Firstly, there are the financial considerations. Secondly, there’s Oxford’s commitment to access. A world-leading University must be able to recruit the very best students, regardless of their finances or background. Aiming for that is not just the right thing to do, it is in our own interests.

Thirdly, there are the conditions likely to be demanded by government for any institution charging above £6,000 a year. This is related to Oxford’s commitment to access, but it is not the same.

There are two aspects to consider in setting the fee: financial considerations and Oxford’s commitment to access. Mike Nicholson will address the latter in the next talk. On financial considerations, we have had reductions from HEFCE in the T grant four times over this year and last, for almost £10 million to the collegiate University. Estimates suggest a fee of £7,600 per annum in 2012/2013 prices is required to match the current combination of fee and grant. In addition, HEFCE received a seventy per cent cut in capital funding for the next three years—funding which is vital for our investment in our estate. This amount on average comes to several hundred pounds per student, and brings our stand-still position to almost £8,000 per student per annum. The next factor to consider is the actual cost of delivering an Oxford undergraduate education—estimates based on the TRAC return and a survey of college costs suggests on average £16,000 per student per annum.

In trying to discuss these issues internally in the University, there has been a lack of clarity from government to underpin our decision-making process, particularly on the Access Agreement and the National Scholarship Programme, yet we have been set an aggressive timetable, with decisions required by the end of March. We must also consider the reaction to the fee level that Oxford charges from our actual and potential donors, given what we state about our costs. This will be discussed by Nick Rawlins and others today.

Next I would like to discuss the Oxford bursary scheme for maintenance. Bursaries are to cover living costs. Living costs do not change with the fee levels, but as part of our commitment to access, we must make sure we have got the bursary provision right.

Our aim is to make sure that no student is deterred from coming to Oxford and they can all afford the living costs when here, and without taking a job in term time.

Government guidelines state that bursaries should no longer be top-sliced from fee income. In other words, we should fund bursaries from our own resources. I would agree. The levels of government grants and loans have increased, so a student will be able to cover their costs with a lower Oxford cash bursary. That would allow us to give more students bursaries, extending support to EU students and middle-income families. We are currently reviewing a revised Oxford bursary scheme, with a proposal to split costs equally between the University and its colleges.

I would now like to briefly discuss potential fee waivers. Under the government’s changes, no student pays up front. The education is, in that sense, free to all at the point of entry. So the concern is not whether students from poorer families can afford their fees because of their background—they do not need to pay them until they are earning a salary, and then in an income-linked way. Instead, the concern is about debt aversion—whether debt aversion is more of an issue among students from poorer backgrounds. That is where possible fee waivers come in. Draft guidance from government to OFFA indicates institutions should be required to offer fee waivers. If we raised fees to £9,000 per annum, and we assume £7,600 of that is simply replacing the fee income and direct support from government for teaching, then the effective extra income to the collegiate University at steady state would be around £14 million a year. Schemes have been modelled for fee waivers of £9,000, £6,000 and £3,000 to lower-income students if fees were set at £9,000. For example, a £3,000 fee waiver would charge annual fees of £6,000 for students from lower-income families. The message to them would be: it is no more costly to attend Oxford than any other higher education institution in the UK. This would cost around £4.9 million, over a third of the additional fee income. This would be the equivalent of charging every student, on average, £8,500 instead of £9,000. We would hope to raise a substantial portion of fee waiver support from alumni and friends of Oxford in time, which longer term would reduce the amount of additional fee income used. We would also need to comply with the National Scholarship Programme.

In conclusion, there are various ways of putting in place support for students from lower-income families. Both living-cost bursaries and fee waivers will almost certainly need to play a part. As I said at the beginning, our decisions need to be informed both by financial considerations and by access considerations. Thank you for your attention.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. The discussion is now open to the house, and I will ask Mr Mike Nicholson to speak first.

Mr Mike Nicholson (Director of Undergraduate Admissions)

The University already has significant experience and expertise in undertaking outreach work, and a record of activity which most other universities would envy. In 2010, the college and university staff have had direct contact with seventy-six per cent of all UK secondary schools and colleges with pre-sixteen provision. We have done over 1,550 events and have had contact with 3,005 schools and colleges. Many of those involve students from primary up to eighteen, and also work, of course, with mature students.

The two main areas of activity that we engage in are both efforts to encourage students and support those applying to Oxford, particularly from non-traditional backgrounds, and we also of course have a social responsibility to widen participation in higher education, and we do that particularly by working locally, with pre-sixteen students, including those in upper primary, with no expectation that this will increase our pool of applicants, but it will raise aspirations to participate in higher education, and also encourage social mobility.

We have, however, through OFFA, heard that we will have to give much clearer indications of outcomes and milestones. Activity alone will not satisfy the government or OFFA. We have put in place the necessary monitoring and tracking to satisfy OFFA for 2012/2013, in my opinion, and in the big ticket projects, UNIQ and teacher conferences, which involve staff across the collegiate University, we have a range of material and activity to demonstrate success. We also have local widening participation projects, whether it be the Oxford Young Ambassadors Scheme, Young Carers or the work that OUSU are doing with students in care, which have clear aims and objectives and trackable outcomes. Recent work has included the regionalisation project, where all aspects of the UK are linked to colleges and there is a point of contact for schools who previously have had little experience of Oxford. What marks these initiatives is that they involve collaboration across the University: colleges, departments and central University staff and resources are dedicated to this. Many more schemes and programmes exist across the University and it is incumbent upon us to ensure that, where possible, they have clear aims and objectives and outcomes that can be demonstrated to show that they are meeting with objectives to include students applying to Oxford and develop social mobility.

We therefore, in my opinion, for 2012/2013 shouldn’t feel the need to invest in a whole range of new activity or reinvent the wheel. We have been strongly advised by OFA to let the dust settle and build upon our existing success. The UNIQ summer residential scheme, for example, which this year just took over 500 students from state schools and colleges, had participants for twenty different academic programmes, resulting in 348 applicants to Oxford this year, of whom 137 have had an offer. That’s a success rate of almost double anything we have previously done through the Sutton Trust. Included in that are forty-three students who have had offers from schools where, in any given year, there may be only one applicant to Oxford, and with very little traditional history of successful applications. For 2011, we already have 650 places and an additional five subject areas committed. We obviously do need to think beyond 2012 and already there are discussions being led by the Admissions Executive of the University, and also involving Education Committee, to look at longer-term initiatives. New initiatives will require careful planning and investment, and if they are to be effectively embedded in the University’s activity, we shouldn’t feel we have to compromise the quality or outcomes because of political expediency.

All of this links into the concept of fair admissions. Oxford already has a process that seeks to identify those with the greatest academic ability and potential, irrespective of their background, which is achieved through the close collaboration of colleges and departments, using the Common Framework for Undergraduate Admissions as a point of reference and guidance and in which, each year, involves very active engagement and input from tutors, utilising a considerable range of information to make informed and considered decisions. It is in the University’s best interests that we have the best students, irrespective of background, if we are to be a world-class institution. We are not complacent, and we constantly monitor, scrutinise and look at our admissions processes, and recent innovations, such as use of contextual information, and greater information technology use is all very important in developing our process. This commitment to access and fair admissions doesn’t come cheaply and we are fortunate that we can call upon significant resources from our donors and alumni, but with the reduction in the teaching grant, if we are at least to maintain and preferably grow and develop our access activity, we need to ensure that we have a sound financial base from 2012 onwards. Thank you very much.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Frances Lannon to speak.

Dr Frances Lannon (Principal of Lady Margaret Hall, Chair of the Conference of Colleges)

I thought it might be helpful if I outlined two key issues that have emerged in preliminary discussions about UK and EU undergraduate fees and funding within Conference and its Steering Committee, following the government’s Comprehensive Spending Review, and Parliament’s decision in December on fees. Nothing in our discussions has assumed that government policies are the ones we would have chosen. Nor is there any implication that we cannot argue for different policies in the future, but we have concentrated on the task in hand, which is working out how best to respond to the reality of government policy and parliamentary legislation as they are today.

The first issue for Conference is ensuring that Oxford is open to the most able students, regardless of their financial situation. The second, just as important, is sustaining excellence in research-informed teaching and learning. We are passionate about both. The current debate in Oxford is of singular importance to colleges. Colleges rely heavily, though not exclusively, on academic income to support teaching and learning. Colleges also contribute directly to supporting students from lower-income families, by funding just over half of the Oxford Opportunity Bursary Scheme and providing additional bursaries and hardship payments.

Conference representatives are actively engaged with the academic divisions and University officers in preparing the most generous possible new scheme of bursaries and fee waivers. We are fully committed to supporting these. It would be abhorrent to us to create an Oxford that was accessible only to those with the ability to pay or that unintentionally dissuaded some able students from applying. We are equally committed to sustaining the kind of undergraduate education that is characteristic of Oxford, and here the strains are already showing rather badly. Many of the academic departments with large numbers of undergraduate students are in deficit. There is a substantial cross-subsidy from research to teaching that is simply not sustainable indefinitely. Also, an alarmingly large number of what should be joint posts between departments and colleges that are absolutely crucial for undergraduate teaching are frozen on the University side. In these circumstances, colleges have taken on extra burdens to keep teaching provision going, and this has been very challenging. Many colleges are struggling to avoid deficits, and have adopted coping mechanisms, such as under-spending on infrastructure. These also cannot continue indefinitely. We need more income, not less, to ensure excellence in teaching and learning.

I think everyone here is well aware that the actual cost of an Oxford undergraduate education is substantially greater than the highest fee level permissible for universities in England from 2012. Even at that level of £9,000, Oxford would continue to provide a universal subsidy to all UK and EU undergraduates of several thousand pounds per annum, regardless of income or need. If we were to extend that universal subsidy by charging a fee lower than £9,000, our ability to sustain academic excellence and provide fee waivers and bursaries would be proportionately lessened. It seems clear that we need to target additional resources where they are most needed. We cannot choose a lower fee income and, at the same time, support excellence and access in the way we passionately wish to do.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Mr David Barclay.

Mr David Barclay (President of the Oxford University Student Union, Worcester College)

It’s a great honour to be asked to address you today as the representative of Oxford students. My intention is nothing less than the total recasting of the debate around undergraduate funding and support through a new understanding of the true nature of the crisis that we confront today. The tone that I have heard in committees so far on this issue has cast the crisis as one of regulation and finances. I can’t tell you of the numbers and acronyms that I have heard: £16,000; seventy per cent; OFFA, BIS and TRAC. We all know that this University is not rolling in cash, but the bottom line is this: the idea that, by playing the new system right and maximising our resources from students we can bring back the economic good times, is a total chimera. Our margin for new action may not be great, but it is real, and by restricting ourselves to just jumping through the HEFCE hoops, we are giving in to the comforting myth that the only crisis we face is one of securing our current way of life against stricter rules and tighter budgets. No, the real crisis Oxford faces is one of community, and by that I mean two things: firstly, how our community is understood and accessed by those outside it; and secondly, how the key relationship within our community—that between tutors and students—is being undermined.

On the first issue of access, let’s not be mistaken. Oxford’s image amongst young adults in Britain is nowhere near what we need it to be. The status quo is simply not good enough, and the status quo has gone forever. We all know that this new system, through poor design and shocking PR, will put the poorer students off applying to university. The argument I keep hearing is that those students who will no longer come to university will never be Oxford’s problem, because they would never have the brains to come here anyway. That argument sickens me to the core. The day we give up on students who would never have before thought of coming to university, coming here to Oxford, is the day we abandon any pretense of seeking academic talent wherever it may be found. Can’t every single person in this room think of someone who has come to Oxford as the first member of their family to have accessed higher education? This is a time when image really matters. Oxford must phase in any fee rises to shield its students and tell the world that we will not let them suffer the full consequences of this unprecedented change. We must put in place an extraordinary fee waiver scheme that allows us to say to the poorest students that we value your academic talent so much we will make it free for you to study here, and we must increase spending on bursaries and peg it to the most expensive college, so that we can assure every student, wherever they are in the collegiate University, that they will be able to live comfortably in Oxford during term time without having to find employment.

That is the bare minimum that this University must do and that’s not the full story. I’m sure many of you will have seen the news last week of the student who is suing Oxford over our teaching. This is a clear sign of the fundamental danger of the new system in turning this place into one of consumers and producers of knowledge. I believe we are not consumers and producers but a community of intellectuals, engaged in the common task of investigating the world around us and understanding the human condition. The only way to avoid a transactional and confrontational relationship between students and tutors is to engage whole-heartedly in a co-operative and co-equal one. Again, we cannot pretend that status quo is good enough; not when colleges try to sneak student charges in the back door to make ends meet, and not when senior University appointments are made with no student representation whatsoever. OUSU and the Common Rooms across Oxford are ready to take our seats at the table, to face the big issues that affect us all, but until the colleges and the University are ready to listen to our voice, and sacrifice to turn it into action, the seats at the negotiating tables will become the pews of the courts, to the detriment of us all.

So, Congregation, please don’t allow University Council to be wooed by the proud and miserly voice which says we must charge what we can and spend only what we have to. The real crisis we face has got very little to do the University’s wallet and everything to do with how our community draws in talent from every background and gives them real power over their experience here. The students of Oxford have sent me here today to ask some of the greatest minds in the world to set themselves to the task of answering that challenge, and to answer the question which the whole nation will be asking: what will Oxford do now?

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Professor Susan Cooper.

Professor Susan Cooper (Department of Physics, St Catherine’s College)

In the Browne report, and in the ensuing discussion, there have been a lot of very emotional words that have little to do with the actual numbers proposed. When it comes to paying, it’s the numbers that matter. The graduate payments are a requirement to pay an additional income tax of nine per cent above a personal exemption of £21,000 for up to thirty years. This adds a tax band between the standard twenty per cent above £7,000 and forty per cent above £43,000, so that it becomes twenty, twenty-nine and forty-nine.

No-one likes paying more tax, but it is a far cry from the claimed ‘risk of having a large debt hanging over your head.’ It is not a risk to students. Risk means you don’t know what will happen. Students can conservatively plan on paying nine per cent of their income above £21,000 for thirty years. In this one place, the government does use the proper word—the loan is forgiven after thirty years, without the bad connotation of defaulting on a loan. The risk is to the government in not knowing how many loans they will need to forgive. It is not pushing graduates into higher-earning careers, any more than income tax does. Nor does it interpret the benefits of a university education only in terms of personal economic benefit—personal benefit, yes, and paying for it if it also brings economic benefit. Since the nine per cent tax is only on income above £21,000, it’s a smaller percentage of total income.

Graduates only need to earn slightly more as a result of their university education to come out ahead in financial terms. Unless they earn significantly more, the government will pay much of the cost. It isn’t even a cut in government funding; it just comes to students in a different guise of forgiving loans after thirty years, depending on their earnings. Since the government will pay the fees up front in full for everyone, the flow of government funding into universities doesn’t change; it just comes under a different label. It may even be a bit more, reducing somewhat the deficits we already have in many of our academic departments. This is not a harm to the Humanities. Their real problem is in the reduction to their research funding. What it is, is financial hocus-pocus that turns the government support into loans that sit on a different balance sheet. I do not approve of such financial tricks, but in the context of the government’s insistence on reducing the national debt, if they hadn’t done this, universities would have been hard hit by cuts. Students would suffer, as the quality of education would decline sharply. It is more progressive than the current flat subsidy to everyone. It is not a pure and simple tax, as high-earning graduates stop paying nine per cent to the government when they have paid off their total; the government only gets back what it paid the university in the first place. Not that we intend to let our high earners off scot-free afterwards—we will try to persuade them to make donations to Oxford to support the next generation of students. It is a clever graduate tax.

The scrapping of the EMA and Aim Higher are real blows to access. The new scheme of fees only harms access because the government has done such an appalling job of explaining it. Apparently spin doctors only know how to obscure the truth, not reveal it. Oxford needs to do better, first, in understanding it ourselves, and then explaining it to prospective students. After such a bad start, it isn’t easy. I have already put in a lot of effort, and I’m still finding bits of brainwashing left in my head that I need to throw out.

Once we can see the scheme for what it really is, we can think constructively about how to deal with it. Fee waivers are an inefficient use of our funds, as they just subtract from the government’s forgiveness after thirty years. What students from disadvantaged backgrounds most need, after a decent explanation of the scheme, is sufficient maintenance support, so they can devote themselves to their studies, rather than needing to earn money in every spare minute. We could also do more to support students with extra tuition before their first year at Oxford, allowing us to take more of a risk on admitting students who are obviously bright, but somewhat lacking in preparation. That costs money and effort, but could yield real benefits. If we apply our brains to it as a community, some good could even come out of this. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Professor David Norbrook.

Professor David Norbrook (English Faculty, Merton College)

I have been a member of this University for most of the last forty years, and this is the first time I have felt impelled to speak in Congregation. I have been disturbed and perplexed by the gap between the dismaying philistinism of the Browne review and the enthusiasm with which Russell Group universities have rushed to praise and accept it. As a parent, in contact with parents of vehement young opponents of the spending review, I have been equally perplexed to explain my University’s position to outsiders. Susan Cooper’s work suggests there’s less cause for alarm than I’d feared, but the higher education settlement is still in progress, and as we head into further phases, we can use this occasion, as our colleagues at Cambridge are also trying to do, to take stock of some larger goals of higher education that are maybe getting lost along the way.

I would like to start with a thought experiment. Suppose a representative of British universities defended them in these terms: universities form part of a network of public services, ranging from the NHS through libraries to the BBC which, for all their faults, make Britain a civilised place to live. The universities foster critical and independent-minded debate and scrutiny of the evidence, whatever the particular subject matter. Academics generally get on with doing their work, without needing to be babied and coddled with perks and bonuses. In proceeding through co-operation as well as competition, they bring together key qualities of public and private enterprises. These qualities of critical independence are valuable at every level of society, as the foundations of a strong democracy, but universities offer spaces where they can be cherished and a bulwark against strong counter-forces. The strong public interest in their continuance means they need strong and secure public funding. I framed that as a thought experiment because people tend not to talk like this, because it seems embarrassing and self-aggrandising, and when neither the public nor the politicians are receptive, spokespersons for universities tend to fall into apologetic mode. But years of having to translate our own values into those which we think our audience hold have led to a kind of atrophy. Universities see themselves as a drain on public finance, despite the relatively low level of government spending on higher education in this country. As far as I can tell, Oxford’s official position is that taxpayers will never, under any circumstances, think it worthwhile to fund higher education to a higher degree than now. We are sorry, we cost too much; our salvation must come from fees and private donors.

These positions are routinely presented as something that barely needs arguing, bowing to the inevitable, but they involve unacknowledged choices and priorities. Yes, we do have an economic crisis; yes, widening numbers of students have placed new strains on the system, but the new higher education settlement, as is by now emerging, rests on imperfectly argued assumptions about market dynamism in education, and won’t ease public spending nearly as much as is claimed. What it will do is further the perverse combination of a marketising rhetoric and heightened state control that characterises a welfare state that dare not speak its name. Access, of course, is a major problem, and it’s good to hear how much is being done in this University, but it does seem clear that the rhetoric of access is, to a large degree, being used as one more stick to beat universities with. Closing down large numbers of public libraries in socially deprived areas will have major consequences for admissions, but we are the ones who will be saying sorry. The questions of fees and admissions are linked with wider patterns in our academic culture—the constant mechanism of prods and pushes that’s deemed necessary to force universities into market models. On the Browne review’s model, universities transmit narrowly defined skills but don’t need to encourage a passion for truth, honesty, or independent-mindedness. It’s far from clear these are qualities that governments of any colour actually want, since they involve values inimical to top-down government. Democracy simply doesn’t figure anywhere in the Browne committee’s deliberations. A body like Congregation is clearly inimical to its core values.

We are now seeing worrying signs of new top-down pressures on scholarship. Traditionally there have been recognised constraints on government control of research through the Haldane principle, but BIS has recently declared that this principle needs diluting. In the same document it lists ‘communities and big society’ as an urgent strategic priority for Humanities research. With breathtaking speed, a slogan for one political party has become translated into a central intellectual agenda for the academy. As far as I can see, this has passed without protest—after all, we are used to apologising that our research doesn’t serve politicians’ needs. Now we are happy to oblige. Well, let’s not be. Let’s stand up for what a university should be and let’s stop apologising.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Roger Boden, please.

Mr Roger Boden (Bursar of Keble College, Chair of the Estates Bursars’ Committee)

As the Chair of the Conference of Colleges has said, the colleges are committed both to ensuring that Oxford is open to the most able students, regardless of their financial situation, and to sustaining excellence in teaching and learning. I should like, as Chair of the Estates Bursars’ Committee, to say something about the financial challenges confronting colleges as they try to honour both commitments.

In the 2009/2010 financial year, external funding to support college teaching and research—that is, income from the HEFCE grant and from tuition fees—amounted to £75 million, but in that year, the direct academic costs of the colleges totalled £91 million, of which three-quarters were for salaries, pensions and National Insurance. To this £91 million, we must add a share of premises and administration costs. The exact share is a matter for each college to decide—typically it’s about a third, or £25 million across all colleges—so the total cost to colleges of teaching, research and student support amounted, last year, to £116 million, whilst the funding colleges received from grants and fees was £75 million. The £41 million shortfall was funded from college resources: endowment income, conference surpluses, donations from alumni. Across all activities, colleges made an operating surplus last year of £3 million on revenues of almost £300 million. So, even with our substantial endowments, our thriving conference businesses, and our energetic fundraising activities, we are just about breaking even.

We all know about the higher pension contributions we face, the soaring food and fuel bills, the higher VAT charges. What is perhaps less apparent is the significant under-provision for the maintenance of our stock of buildings—of the order of £20 million a year, according to a recent estimate. Oxford will need a tuition fee, as we have heard, of £7,600 just to offset the proposed reduction in the teaching grant. If the fee went to £9,000, that would amount to a net increase in funding of about £14 million in total. Of this, roughly half would flow to the colleges. £7 million is not a lot of money in the context of the £16 million bill for academic activities or, indeed, in the context of the further increase in costs that colleges are now facing.

The real issue, it seems to me, is not whether we should charge £9,000, but how we should allocate the additional money. How much of the £7 million flowing to the colleges should be used as additional support for needs-blind admission, and how much should be employed to maintain the excellence of our academic provision? As Professor Monaco has reported, work is already under way on this very important question. The one certainty is that £7 million will not be nearly enough, and we, the colleges, will need to redouble our efforts, both to build our endowments, to grow our conference businesses, and to stimulate even greater philanthropy on the part of our alumni.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Jeff Tseng.

Dr Jeff Tseng (Department of Physics, St Edmund Hall)

This may be a slight and possibly temporary change of gear. I would like to make some comments about the nature and scope of access in the context of the national conversation on education, as it seems likely we will be subject to additional measures in this area.

I’ll begin though with a brief story. Now, when I was in graduate school, I attended a lively multi-ethnic church in a rather poor neighbourhood in Baltimore, the kind of neighbourhood where you would find children playing with hypodermic needles on the front porch because there were no other toys available. Now, we had an after-school programme for the local children, and I tried to help out, but I quickly found out that playing with small children is not actually one of my strengths, although I did do a little bit better when we all sat down for a homework session. Overall, however, it was actually a fairly disheartening experience, and at one point I asked a church elder, who had grown up in a similar neighbourhood, whether he thought it was at all useful for me to be there. ‘Well,’ he replied, ‘for some of the children, you may be the only young man that they have any contact with who values education.’

So what I learned from this, relevant today, was that access, even looking forward as far forward as university, begins at an early age, well before secondary school, where most access programmes are targeted. Secondary school is important, of course, but it builds on a foundation laid in primary school, not only in basic academic disciplines, but also in aspirations to excel, to break down barriers, even to withstand the onslaughts that often come with just being different. It was encouraging, therefore, to find out last year that some of the undergraduates of my college, on their own initiative, started visiting a local primary school to help pupils with their reading. The college has been supportive and the students were also grateful to the Student Union for paying for the required Criminal Records Bureau checks so they could continue volunteering. I’m told by, and we have heard from, Mr Nicholson, that there are of course other activities directed towards primary schools and we should make more of this.

We see, in this kind of work, education at the service of the public. It crosses cultural and other boundaries, and it potentially makes a difference early in the lives of those who could attend university years later. Of course it can’t be focused on just potential Oxford students, but perhaps it’s good that this sort of activity is not so narrow. It sidesteps the charges of favouritism, cronyism, or even just overt social engineering which can plague direct outreach to secondary schools. It benefits education in general, and this benefit can only help all of us. Moreover, reaching out to primary schools is something open to students, staff and faculty, across all disciplines, rather than it being yet another burden on overstretched academics or the duty of someone hired in to ‘do’ access.

So I would like to make three suggestions to my colleagues and to our representatives in the imminent national conversations about access and funding. First, we should encourage our own community generally in the University and colleges to serve in our local primary schools. We will make a difference in the lives of young people near to us. It will help overstretched teachers, and it will be a visible manifestation of scholarship as a public good. Second, we should encourage our universities to do the same, not just in teacher training programmes, but generally. Scholarship as a public good is not just our own vision. Third, we should urge that, in the national conversation, access should be construed more broadly than it often is at present. Outreach to secondary school students is undoubtedly important and necessary to help students to consider an Oxford education, or at least to penetrate what Professor Cooper calls the ‘financial hocus-pocus’ of attending any university, but access begins early, and activities across the sector among young people should be recognised alongside outreach to older students.

Ultimately, what we need is to reclaim the conversation on education, so that it can accommodate a more comprehensive and, indeed, civilised view. For too long we have let others define the terrain for us and we see the results. At the same time, it would be difficult to make this change if our only strategy is to try to shout louder. Instead, we may have to put our own hands to the plough and reclaim it in pieces, action backing up words. Service in primary schools represents a small corner in this conversation, but I believe it may actually help us to grow our voice again. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Professor Paul Madden.

Professor Paul Madden (Provost of Queen’s College, Deputy Chair of the Conference of Colleges)

I would like to return to the technical and outline the type of plan being formulated for fee waivers and bursaries to mitigate the impact of a fee increase. Plans are being worked out by a group of University officers and college representatives. It’s expected that the full proposals will be finalised soon and made widely available in good time to inform the crucial decisions at the end of term. The current Oxford Opportunity Bursaries are funded by top-slicing fees. Government guidance makes it clear that, in the new regime, funding bursaries from fees will no longer be acceptable. If an institution charges a higher fee in order to cover bursaries, they place a higher burden on the student loan book, the projected cost of which has become a matter of anxiety to the government. A fee waiver, on the other hand, means that the student receiving the waiver is not assigned a loan to cover the fee forgone by the institution. A fee waiver would reduce the level of debt which a student is taking on, which is expected to be a major deterrent to those from lower-income backgrounds.

I'll describe one model for fee waivers, predicated on the £9,000 fee, to illustrate the scale of what's being contemplated. Students from the poorest background, with less than a £16,000 family income, would receive a fee waiver of £3,000 in each year of study, thus reducing the fee charged to them in Oxford to the national minimum. The £3,000 would taper off to zero by a £30,000 family income. Using the financial backgrounds of our current students as a baseline, this would mean that the collegiate University would forego £4.9 million of fee income.

The working group has also looked at bursaries, meaning monies provided to offset maintenance and living costs. Looking across the sector, the government has expressed scepticism about the contributions that bursaries make to access. However, given the public perception of the character and cost of Oxford, it's hard to believe that bursaries do not have a role to play here. Given the strictures about the use of fees, any bursary scheme would have to be funded from the collegiate University's endowment. Under the government's proposals, students with less than a £25,000 family income will receive a mixture of a maintenance grant and a loan which will add up to £7,125. The average cost of term-time living in college accommodation is slightly less than £7,000. The support taps down to a pure loan of £3,500 for a greater than £60,000 family income. The lesson learned from the Oxford Opportunity Bursaries is that the real pinch point here is in the family income range from about £30,000 to £60,000. Rather than targeting the very lowest income cases, then, the group has been examining schemes in which a flat bursary of about £1,500 would be provided up to a family income of £42,000, and taper off to zero at £60,000. The projected cost of this is about £5.5 million.

A broad scheme of this type will not hit the cases of real hardship, which could arise, for example, if family income is £60,000, if three children are simultaneously at university. A top-down scheme to cope with these cases individually would be a bureaucratic nightmare, and would, in any case, be impossible to describe to potential applicants in the hope of aiding broadened access. However, colleges have bespoke hardship schemes for dealing with these particular cases. The discussion in the Steering Committee of Conference has therefore favoured a modest general bursary, of the type outlined above, to be supplemented by the type of needs-determined, internal schemes which the colleges already make available.

How would all this be funded? The cost of what has been described above is £10.4 million, against which should be set the £6.6 million already spent on the Oxford Opportunity Bursary, and the projected additional fee income of £14 million if the University adopts the £9,000 fee. The £4.9 million cost of the fee waiver would, through the JRAM, effectively be split on an equal basis between the University and colleges. It's proposed that the remaining £5.5 million for bursaries would be funded on a 50:50 basis, with the college component met by establishing a central pot funded by a flat per capita charge on the colleges. Mr Vice-Chancellor, the models I have described are illustrative; they demonstrate that an affordable student finance package can be managed with a fee of £9,000. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Mr AlexBulkin.

Mr Alex Bulklin (Vice-President (Access and Academic Affairs) at Oxford University Student Union, University College)

Student choices will shape the landscape of higher education. Lord Browne's message is one that has been taken to heart by the coalition government, but to many of us in Oxford this appears to be the first step on the slippery slope to student consumerism. As David has outlined, Oxford is in a unique position to make a bold statement when it comes to deciding a fee level and Hannah Cusworth will later go on into greater depth on the essential requirement for fee waivers and generous bursaries for students. Yet, whether we like it or not, any choices we make in the new market-driven funding system will still leave us facing a fundamental challenge to prevent an Oxford education becoming a financial transaction. I believe this challenge demands us to undertake three things: increase transparency, guarantee minimum levels of provision, and establish in stone the position of students as key stakeholders in the University.

Oxford already undertakes a great deal of work to inform applicants about the realities of applying and studying here, but we can do much more. That is not simply a matter of increasing the amount of access we do. It means working even harder to inform prospective students about the repayment system and how it works. It means ensuring that we have a bursary system that is as easy to comprehend as it is generous, and that requires us to design and aggressively promote a fee waiver scheme that will make students from non-traditional backgrounds sit up and take Oxford seriously. If we are not up front with this information, we will be confronted with disappointed and disillusioned applicants and a growing number of undergraduate voices complaining that this is not what they signed up for. The need for increased information for applicants also demands more transparency from across the University. By way of example, last week I received an email on the subject of college accommodation costs. 'Oxford is', the message began, 'obviously very expensive when compared with other universities.' Such a statement is guaranteed to incite untold fury in most college bursars. What was more worrying was that the email was not from a confused prospective applicant, but a second year undergraduate, who went on to ask whether I thought that the high accommodation costs here deter potential applicants. No, I do not think Oxford's generously subsidised accommodation costs should deter any prospective student from applying. Oxford has amongst the cheapest accommodation in the country, but most universities in possession of living costs and charges as reasonable as ours would put the information front and centre in their pitch to applicants. Why are ours tucked away in the darkened recesses of college websites? In holding back vital information such as this, the University and the colleges are doing themselves a massive disservice, while reinforcing the misconception held by some applicants that Oxford is simply not a financially viable option.

If Oxford is to survive intact in the new consumer-led world of student choice, this transparency will have to be matched with greater equity of provision. With so much money at stake, students are no longer going to settle for anything less than excellence, particularly when the greener grass is only on the other side of the street. We must now begin to ask, is it right that a student in one college can be disciplined for gaining a 2ii in prelims while another is offered extra tuition? Can it be fair that one undergraduate is denied any student representation in a hearing, while another has student representatives on the adjudicating panel? These students pay the same money. In many cases, they didn't even choose their college, and yet they can be subject to an incomprehensible array of different procedures, expectations and rights, despite all nominally being students of Oxford University.

And it's not just students who are increasingly noticing these imbalances. In the latest QAA audit, Oxford was told that it must give further consideration to equity of practice across colleges, especially where this affects student progression. In priority areas such as academic provision, discipline and complaints, college autonomy can no longer mask the rank disparities that exist across the University. To that extent, it is critical that we continue to build an open and frank dialogue between Oxford students and those running the collegiate University, and work together to ensure Oxford’s standards of teaching and support are consistently upheld. In a year’s time, with escalating cuts to the teaching grants and a likely increase in fees, some undergraduates in the Humanities and Social Sciences will be covering most, if not all, of the cost of their degree. If we are to avoid a culture of complaint in the University, students must be welcomed into frank and open discussions on the state of their colleges and the challenges facing us all. The landscape of higher education in the UK is changing and we must choose our path. Will we stumble blindly into a world of consumer culture and market-driven improvement, or will we stake out a path as the leaders in our sector, with open information, guaranteed standards of provision, and a true place for student representatives in our governance? Let us ensure that together we choose the right way forward. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Rowan Tomlinson.

Dr Rowan Tomlinson (New College, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages)

My focus today is a key term of the Browne review—not the horribly redefined ‘value’, robbed of all its value by absorption into a rhetoric of the market, but the apparently more innocent, positive term: ‘access’. In the section entitled ‘How would it benefit me?’, the Browne review reasserts prospective students that its proposals will mean ‘no barriers to access’. It takes some gall to declare this in a document that justifies a tripling in fees as a solution to its decimation of higher education funding.

The government claims to cherish social mobility, but few of us doubt that raising fees so much will do anything but damage social mobility. Those from lower socio-economic groups are traditionally debt-averse, understandably, and the deferred gratification of a degree is something that one needs to be confident—socially, financially, in terms of life prospects—in order to contemplate, let alone take on. Moreover, it’s a fact that social mobility that’s meaningful can’t be achieved through provision of a limited number of bursaries. The government’s enthusiastic promotion of apprenticeships reads, meanwhile, as a tacit admission that university is for certain types of people, from certain social backgrounds. Cameron and Clegg are not, I would bet, envisaging that their own children will be donning overalls. It’s okay, it seems, for a working class kid to be a plumber or an electrician, but don’t dream of being a scientist, philosopher, engineer or writer.

I don’t, as I have been encouraged to do so by the rather narrow framing of this discussion, wish to consider how to implement tokenistic mechanisms to ease the new regime and the political connotations there are intended. I want to remind us of what our guilt-tinged obsession with access actually says about equality in higher education, and by so doing, urge us to think bigger and act more boldly. After all, amidst all this talk of access, the ever-present yet ever-neglected fact is that the very term is predicated on a gross inequality, namely that there’s still a barrier between top universities and students who attend standard, non-selective state schools, be these FE colleges or the much-maligned comprehensive, whose model of socially and academically inclusive education, as a former ‘comp’ student myself, I strongly defend. We have all absorbed this term ‘access’, and use it rather transparently, but isn’t there something wrong when a word that suggests a barrier to be crossed is used to talk about the school origin of over ninety per cent of the population? What is more, the state school percentage, of which some of us seem bafflingly proud, is deceptive. We need to stop hoodwinking ourselves and others, and admit publicly that many of those who make up the intake from state schools are actually from selective schools, which operate not through some kind of pure academic meritocracy, but through social and cultural exclusion and elitism; or if they are from non-selective schools, they tend to be from a particularly happy few, those fed by atypical constituencies or which have longstanding relationships with Oxford; or else they are students who attend comprehensives, but who do so armed with the cultural capital, and subsequent confidence and sense of entitlement, that one gets from being the child of a university-educated professional.

But we are already doing a lot for access, I hear you say, £1.8 million worth. Look at the many schemes. Look at UNIQ. Look at the Young Ambassadors. Heavily involved in these activities myself, I’ve witnessed first-hand the passion of those working for access, though I have also heard talk recently of concerns about the ‘conversion rate’ and anticipation of the kinds of quantitative assessment the government wants to impose. This is both undesirable and unworkable, since how can we measure inspiration, boosting motivation and changing horizons? These simply cannot be quantified, just as the value of a degree, which Browne wants to compute, resists measurement. A second response/defence/easy way out is to say that we come too late and can do too little; that the roots of outperformance by those from selective schools lie far back in early childhood; that it’s a regrettable fact of life, but a fact nonetheless, that in wanting to recruit the brightest students, we end up admitting more from fee-paying and selective schools.

I reject this counsel of despair and contend that, as gateholders for the precious Oxford education, we can and must do something to dismantle divisions entrenched by earlier inequalities, divisions which selective schools endorse and solidify. If we’re to salvage anything from this attack on education, then let’s make access meaningful by being honest about inequalities in education and reflecting this in our policies. Let’s stop judging with blunt instruments of grading, when we all know that an ‘A’ can be bought. Let’s have differential offers, explicit use of contextual data, supported entry routes, intensive pre-sessional courses, foundation years. Our access work to date has been laudable, and we must certainly fight the temptation to jump through OFFA’s hoops. But I urge you too to consider that the time is right to move away from tokenism, and to take very much more radical steps. By so doing, I believe we can use our privileged position as a top university to attenuate the devastating impact of what clearly amount to ideological attacks by the current government on the public sector. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Mr Tim Gardam, please.

Mr Tim Gardam (Principal of St Anne’s College, Chair of the Undergraduate Admissions Committee)

I would like to address the question of the conditions attached to any access agreement that the University may face in return for a fee of over £6,000. I’m the Chair of the Undergraduate Admissions Committee (AdCom), where the colleges and the University, working as one, have spent much time refining and strengthening our admissions system, and every decision that we have taken has been to ensure that, whoever they are, and wherever they come from, the candidates with the greatest potential are encouraged to apply and, having done so, are not mistakenly overlooked. As a starting point, Oxford should resist any idea that there should be some trade-off between the setting of an undergraduate tuition fee and our agreement to conditions aimed at socially defined outcomes that are not rooted in independent academic judgment.

Oxford, in contrast to practically all other universities, weighs each potential undergraduate as an individual. The offer of a place reflects a personal contract which will be later made real in the tutorial relationship between student and tutor. So whatever we agree with OFFA, we must not budge from our position that academic judgment or the potential for academic excellence—the sole criterion on which we admit a student—should be left to academics. However, we should also interrogate ourselves to be sure that the way we conduct admissions does indeed measure up to our principles. More people are applying to Oxford than have ever done before, over 17,000 last year, up from 9,500 ten years ago. In these circumstances, it is all the more necessary for us to demonstrate that those we admit are indeed those most deserving of a place. In recent years, the introduction of the Common Framework for Admissions has very largely removed the vagaries of college choice affecting an applicant's chance of success. In some subjects the way we do things could still be clearer. Even so, these are fine judgments, and no tutor I have ever met will deny that each year there will be candidates rejected who could well be as good as some of those accepted.

Whereas some universities have adopted selection policies that do make differentiated offers according to social background, we have not, and I don't think we should. We have, however, introduced, with some care, elements of contextualisation to guide tutors' choices. We can judge how a candidate's GCSE grades compare with their school average. A candidate with four A* at GCSE from a school in special measures, where few students ever achieve an A, may well have more potential than one with five A* from a school where the average is ten. We can identify, with individual postcodes, those candidates from disadvantaged backgrounds and we identify applicants who have been in care. Through a series of flags, we ensure that those who meet such criteria, and who are within range of their aptitude tests, now taken by over eighty per cent of all candidates, are called for interview.

So we select through a range of measures, and in the national obsession over A-level grades, it is so often forgotten that for us these are merely a final condition after the offer has been made. We do not reduce the A-level conditions to some candidates on the basis of their background. I don't see how we could, when last year over 1,400 candidates from state-maintained schools whom we rejected went on at A-level to attain two A* or more. But that figure should make us think, because we cannot avoid the fact that, though the number of applicants from state schools has dramatically grown from 4,400 to 7,600 in ten years, the ratio between private and state-maintained applicants who are admitted has changed only very slightly, and we do need to understand why. The increase in applicants in recent years is a tribute to our open days, our school visits, contacts with teachers, many of whom are alumni. As Mike Nicholson said, in the last year each college has agreed to become the first point of contact for schools in designated regions of England and Wales, and in this way we are beginning to talk to schools that for too long have been completely overlooked by us. The growth of our summer schools is attracting seventeen-year-olds from backgrounds where we have failed until now to find sufficient applicants and they are gaining places. All this should give us pause for thought, because why have we not garnered as many candidates such as these before now? And what more will we have to do, when government expects us to increase their numbers, even as it puts in place a funding mechanism that is likely to deter them further, a point well made today by the President of OUSU?

If I may speak for a moment on behalf of my college, St Anne's, for some reason we attract more students on Oxford Opportunity Bursaries than any other college, 132 this year. Not one of them would have wanted to have been admitted except on merit. Many of them returned to their old schools, where few pupils, if any, can imagine Oxford as a destination, and they are our best advocates. Many tell me that their teachers told them that Oxford would never look at them. They are really remarkable people. Some by eighteen have travelled further in their lives than ever I will in mine. But the gulf in experience that they have determined to cross in coming here is far deeper than often we here in Oxford appreciate. We will need to do far more to help those that follow them to bridge it. So once a fee is settled, we have to guard against being judged on crude metrics that may suit political shorthand, but will fail to address what is our real responsibility. That responsibility, I would suggest, must be, above all, to those whose potential for excellence is disguised by their experience and their background, by the image they have of themselves and that which they have of us. An effective access policy can't be settled in a few weeks. This will require careful and sustained planning between colleges and the University, and we should be unafraid to set out our own criteria by which we believe we should be judged, and unafraid too to identify what we must do further to meet them. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Dr Andrew Timms.

Dr Andrew Timms (Director of Development at Queen's College, Chair of the College Development Directors' Group)

I have come here today to urge the University to align its core fundraising messages with its forthcoming policy on tuition fees. I'm sure it will do this without me needing to listen—without needing to listen to me—that's a Freudian slip—but the points are worth making nonetheless. I spend a lot of time talking to successful and prosperous old members of my college. I find that they are surprisingly engaged by the tuition fee debate, and many of them respond to it with a very simple argument. They say that we can, and we should, charge the highest fee possible because we are offering the best education possible. They then urge us to fundraise vigorously for student support, to offset the increases in fees. The point that such people are trying to make is that if we believe in what we are offering at Oxford, perhaps we should unashamedly charge a premium for a premium product—and by 'product' I mean, or they mean, the tutorial system—and then campaign relentlessly to augment the pool of resources available to those who are otherwise deterred by tuition fees.

So that's what the rich and successful alumni tend to say in my experience, and I suspect that the model they advance is the model that we are going to have to live with. In my own opinion it has significant pitfalls. An aspect that worries me in particular is how we are supposed to retain the engagement of the vast majority of our alumni who are neither great nor good, nor even filthy rich. The silent majority of our members will be too busy saving to pay their kids' tuition fees to care much about us. These people don't run banks. They're not trust fund babies. They're not poor, but neither are they really rich. Most of them do not support us financially at all at the moment. Is it going to be easier or more difficult to win their backing in the years ahead? I think we know the answer, and it's a real problem if we are to increase substantially the philanthropic support base of the University.

There are bigger concerns too. Typically, in life, one has to dance to the tune of whoever pays the piper. We know there are people who will try to buy places for their children. We know that second-rate fundraising can land you with things you neither need nor want. We know that corporate funding can, when it goes wrong, compromise values and principles that are fundamental to the academic democracy and freedoms that we are fortunate to enjoy here in Oxford. But the answer to all of that is: let's make it absolutely certain we get it all right. Let's concentrate our energies on getting very, very good, very, very quickly, at coping with life in our brave new world.

I say all of this with a heavy heart. Five years ago I was a young academic in Oxford, and back then I think probably would have been appalled by what I'm saying today. In my old age, however, I'm coming to the conclusion that it is time to swing the fundraising behind the model that we are being forced to accept, and that last point is really why I have chosen to speak. It has proven exceptionally difficult to get a coherent and unified Oxford fundraising campaign going. I very much hope that the impending change in funding arrangements will provide a salutary spur to our efforts. What I mean is that I hope that we shall all realise that the changes we are discussing today reinforce the need to fundraise much more coherently and powerfully for the funding of access work and for the support of our superlative students. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you, Professor Nick Rawlins.

Professor Nick Rawlins (Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Development and External Affairs), University College)

My name is Nick Rawlins. I have been the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Development and External Affairs) for almost exactly three and a half months, but I was also the Development Fellow at University College for nearly seven years, ending in 2007. I'm currently a Professorial Fellow of Wolfson, but I was a Tutorial Fellow at Univ for over twenty years. I asked to speak in this discussion because I want to set out a possible link between the fee level that the University sets and our prospects for philanthropic donations in the future. If I'm correct, then this link would constitute a reason for setting a fee at £9,000 per year, rather than choosing a lower figure.

My thinking is as follows. If we set a fee level below £9,000, then we'll be foregoing income that would have helped to reduce the gap—already clearly described by earlier speakers—between the costs of an undergraduate education at Oxford and the contribution that fees make towards those costs. I believe there is a significant risk that benefactors would become more reluctant to help us if we were to do this because they will perceive us as having added to the burden that we are asking them to shoulder. I think it important that we should be seen to be doing what we can to help ourselves in this, as well as in other ways. But it is equally important, if we do this, that we should at the same time find the resources to help the individual students of the future.

I would very much hope, and I would expect, that if the University does decide to set the fee at £9,000 per year, then both our existing and our future benefactors, and I think at all levels, would join us in our efforts to provide generous student support for Oxford. If we do it. We know that in the United States, whose university system can have much higher fee levels, philanthropic participation rates and levels of donation far outstrip ours, but we also know that's a system with different cultural traditions. So I think we and our supporters must aim to ensure that, despite the introduction of a higher fee level, no-one is deterred from applying to Oxford, nor from accepting a place if offered, in virtue of the cost of studying here. I want us to be able to continue to deliver an educational premium, but, where necessary, without an accompanying financial premium. Student support must surely be a key feature of the next phase of the Oxford Thinking campaign, and I want to add that that campaign must equally surely, and very clearly, feature not only access work and undergraduate bursaries, but also graduate support. Let me add to that. If the potential graduate students of the future will be carrying very substantially increased loans from their years of undergraduate study, then it will be a lot tougher than at present for them to take the decision to continue their studies at a graduate level. We have to find the resources to meet this challenge. We need to put those in place early enough to ensure that outstanding undergraduate students can plan and work towards a graduate career here. If they know that we can provide the resources they will need then, as their aspirations and ambitions develop, Oxford could be a part of their planning. If we don't, it may not.

I have a son who is likely to apply this September for a university place somewhere, and I have spent my entire adult life teaching other people's children here. It does seem a little ironic to me that my own child's university education will now take place under such a different funding system. Nonetheless I think that we and other universities must aim to set our fees at levels that will sustain us and the outstanding education that we provide for our students into the future. I think that's a key public responsibility. My own personal goal, given that, is to find the resources to ensure that those fee levels don't deter anyone from following the educational path that they choose for themselves.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Ms Hannah Cusworth.

Ms Hannah Cusworth (Vice-President-elect (Access and Academic Affairs) at Oxford University Student Union, Brasenose College)

Before I begin, I suppose I should declare my interest. I'm a third year from Brasenose, studying History and Politics. Next year I will be the Vice-President (Access and Academic Affairs) at OUSU, the Student Union, and I currently receive a full Oxford Opportunity Bursary.

‘Debt aversion’ is a phrase I have heard thrown around a lot recently. For me, although I never called it that when I was applying, I felt it–this nervous feeling I still get today when I look at the letters from the student loan company telling me how much I owe. But I decided that, since I was clearly smart enough to go to university, I should go and should apply to the best ones to make sure that getting in at all that debt was worth it.

Coming to Oxford has made things I never even considered seem possible. When I was little, I doubt many people would have bet that at twenty-one I would be speaking to a room full of the brightest minds in the academic world. But now applicants face £40,000 of debt after £9,000 tuition fees and living costs. If I had been facing that at seventeen, I don't know if I could have justified it to myself—if I could have justified that to my mum. When I was little and my mum wasn't earning very much, the council paid for my school dinners. When, because of the estate that I lived on, my secondary school place was at a school where only one in ten pupils got five GCSEs A* to C, financial assistance meant that I could go to the local girls’ school because there was a bursary for those who couldn't otherwise afford it. Without financial assistance, I would not be at Oxford, and nor would countless others, both here and at universities up and down the country. People say that bursaries haven't improved access to universities in the last five years. I would hate to see what the figures would look like if we hadn't had a bursary system as generous as we do. With fees of £9,000, not coming to university can be a rational choice, whatever the repayment system, if avoiding huge debt is your preference. I don't believe we should raise fees to £9,000. Oxford's own research from 2007 showed that sixty per cent of OOB recipients only knew about it after applying. The headline fee matters. We don't know how many students won't apply because they think the fees are too high. The OOB made me feel confident that I could go to university and not be overwhelmed by debt when I left. Others don't manage to navigate the overly complex bursary system. I only found out exactly what financial support I would receive after I had already got a place, because of the intricacies of the means testing. We need to be clearer and, with higher fees, send a stronger message. To tell an uncertain applicant that they will have their fees waived is so much more powerful than a vague statement that they will have enough to live on because of the bursary Oxford provides. It isn’t just the three of us student representatives who are saying this. Last week the students of Oxford at OUSU Council decided that Oxford should have a lower than £9,000 fee level, so that everyone knows we mean business on access; a generous fee waiver, so that Oxford can say ‘we understand’; and bursaries, so that those who live at the most expensive colleges and can’t write home for cash, won’t ever have to. Given the shock of the new funding system, we need to take drastic action.

As students, we understand that access can’t be improved by pressing just one button. We need a coherent system of financial support to break down those barriers. We are desperate not to miss out on the best students, to be left behind by universities offering more. We have the unique power at Oxford to give an unbeatable package of financial support, to save hundreds of conversations over the kitchen table that end with, ‘You will get into more debt than I earn in two years, it’s not worth it.’ It was only because of the brave decision on financial support that I’m here today. Without the same bravery, and new commitment on fee level, fee waivers and bursaries, I doubt people from backgrounds like mine will even pick up our prospectus. And more selfishly, it will mean that when I’m working for the Student Union next year, encouraging applicants from low-income backgrounds to apply, I can tell them that their debt won’t be any more than mine is, and that it’s definitely worth it. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. The next speaker will be Dr Conrad Leyser. After he has spoken, we will then take a five-minute break, and after the break, we will recommit with Mr Robin Briggs as speaker.

Dr Conrad Leyser (History Faculty, Worcester College)

Normally it’s a good thing when students speak to you in an argument. But here we have a situation where students, not the ones out there, but some of them, doubtless our own students, now occupy positions of high public office, and they are creaming us in this particular argument. For a brief measure of this, we might compare the following two passages, both from the documents posted for consultation prior to this meeting. The first from the executive summary of Oxford’s submission to the Browne report in May 2010: ‘Given the uncertainty of future public funding and the urgent investment needs of higher education, we propose a system of funding UK universities which would require no additional money from the public purse and would be affordable for the individual, the institution and the nation.’ And this second from the timetable for approval of Home/EU fees, the final point, number eighteen: ‘And finally, it should be noted that institutions are being expected to deliver strategies in an environment of considerable uncertainty.’

All these two texts have in common is the element of the noun ‘uncertainty’. The first is a document with a vision, whatever we may think of it, for national higher education. The second, the eighteen-point document, is a document on the run. We have been routed. We know we are losing the argument. To compare these two may be to compare apples and oranges. They come from totally different contexts. But the question is: precisely how did the apple turn into the orange? Where did the vision for national education go in the discussion?

If the second were an essay, we would be writing on it that it’s lost sight of the original question, and we know that its analysis must therefore be flawed. The original question, put with more eloquence by many speakers than myself, what happens when you sever the connection between taxation and higher education? We don’t yet know and we haven’t yet had the discussion. Even the authors of the Browne report who accept the market model say that its mangling in the political process means that we will have to do all of this again within five years. We should start now. It would save time.

I urge Council to consider the costs of compliance with the government timetable—the full costs, reputational as well as financial—and also the benefits of non-compliance, and specifically the benefits of looking to establish across the whole higher education sector that this particular group of students, also known as the coalition government, need to think again. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: We will now have a five-minute break.

[break]

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you all. Could I call on Mr Robin Briggs?

Mr Robin Briggs (All Souls College, History Faculty)

I fear that, as many speakers have already shown, the University is caught in a trap over fees. At the basic level we are just going to have to charge something like the top fee, and it won’t cover more than half our true teaching costs. In addition, I do think one should stress that, from the point of view of future students, precise fee levels within the permitted band are less important than they seem because, as Susan Cooper has shown, this is really much more a graduate tax than a proper loan scheme, and desperate confusions are arising from this muddle that they have made. All but the very highly paid will end up paying the tax for at least twenty years, and perhaps half our students will pay for the full thirty years and be forgiven the balance of their debt. It may be fairer than present arrangements even. I do think it’s going to be pretty tough, and we shouldn’t underestimate that. But ultimately it’s a political issue, and responsibility for funding arrangements in higher education does, I suppose, rest with the government, however angry many people may feel.

Congregation can’t simply defy Parliament. In addition, I’m arguing, I think, that the loan scheme isn’t quite as bad a financial deal for graduates as it appears, though it does look crazy as an economy measure in hard times and may never save the government a penny. It does seem a very strange choice. Its inept presentation suggests that the elites who formulated the scheme have no conception of the psychological effect on the more ordinary people who are going to confront it, and I do indeed fear that it will have some of the highly unfortunate effects on student choices we have already heard about. Some broader dangers are outlined in the excellent article by the University’s Careers Director in today’s Education Guardian, which I commend to everyone.

The claim that this is going to create a market through which student choice will drive up standards is surely preposterous nonsense. The Browne report offers neither evidence nor arguments to justify its ridiculous assertions on this front.

That intellectually vacuous report espouses a pure market ideology, in which everything is reduced to the lowest common denominator of money. Universities are only worth supporting because they help increase national prosperity, and their graduates must apparently be trained so that they emerge to fit a template set by businessmen. There’s nothing—absolutely nothing—in that report to indicate that proper universities are centres of higher learning, with a mission to pursue truth across the whole range of human endeavour. That omission is profoundly stupid, even in the materialistic commodified world of Browne and his accomplices. It’s open-minded free enquiry which generates the most important of productive innovations, just as it is the precondition for educating the most adaptable and useful graduates.
So the greatest problem is not with the financial arrangements, serious though their implications are, but with the philosophy behind them. There is a great danger for the long-term future of British universities when politicians of all parties repeat the same foolish potentially destructive mantras and go virtually unchallenged. Surely we have reached the point where it’s our duty to make a stand, not, I fear, by what I think would be pointless defiance on fees, but by making an intellectual case for an alternative vision. I urge Council to consider that urgent need, and not to acquiesce feebly in every new government initiative that threatens our central essential purposes and values. We have already been far too supine over the utterly misconceived impact agenda. The whole of Western culture as we know it, including the scientific advances essential to our well-being, only exists because past generations of intellectuals repeatedly challenged received opinion in the pursuit of truth. That is the tradition we must defend, and it’s high time we started to do so. I think the policies with which we are repeatedly threatened seem to want us all to think the same, which I find a terrifying development.

Briefly, on the familiar problems of access, many of us might favour a major shift towards recruitment from the state sector. I agree with many of the excellent points made by earlier speakers, and I hope we are going to do much more. I do think, however, it’s quite right to insist on the vital principle. We can’t abandon merit and ability as the conditions of entry to achieve that shift in some dishonest fashion. What terrifies me there is I think I have seen too many cases to illustrate that it’s fatally easy to ruin the lives of young people if you place them in a demanding environment where they feel failures. So we do have a danger that we must guard against there too. But in this field, too, we ought to fight our corner. We certainly need, I think, to hammer away at the obvious truth that neither universities nor schools can create equity in a country where government policy is actually increasing social inequality. So my central message is that we really need to take the fight into the public domain.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Kate Tunstall.

Dr Kate Tunstall (Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, Worcester College)

Kate Tunstall, University Lecturer in French, Fellow of Worcester, and part of the Oxford Education Campaign and of the Free University at Oxford. I would like to begin by saying that I hope that in future any student wishing to speak will be allowed to do so, as is the case in Cambridge. The topic set by Council for discussion today is ‘undergraduate funding and support (including the level of the undergraduate fee)’. This is embarrassingly narrow. Were we to say nothing about the grotesque and poisonous vision of education as a means to maximise earnings that is contained in the Browne report? A report written, it cannot be said too often, by a former CEO of an oil company [...]. A serious educational disaster is looming out there and Council suggested we debate how best to facilitate it. No way. The University of Oxford—we, students included—should be using our considerable intellectual resources and energies, some of which we heard outside, along with the media attention we invariably attract, to formulate and publicise a robust and compelling case for the continued public funding of universities. It is not unaffordable; this country is richer than it has ever been, and that’s true even in the recession. We must not allow ourselves to lose sight of the real possibility of free education for all—after all, it is available not so very far from here, in Scotland, in France. It is only by continuing to fund the universities publicly that they can continue to rival their counterparts in the US, not by subjecting them to market forces, nor by turning students into customers, teachers into service providers, and researchers into product developers. The universities are already no longer in the Department for Education, but in the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills. How would we feel if the NHS was transferred to the Department for Fitness, Reproduction and Pils? Moreover, this government wants to make Oxford revisit Brideshead Revisited.

We have come a long way since then. There are women, but there are still not very many students—indeed I have few colleagues—who were, like me, comprehensively educated, there are few non-whites, there are few who were in receipt of free school meals or of the much regretted but not forgotten EMA. It is because of this that Oxford is always compromised in its ability to adopt a robust and non-defensive position in national debates about education. The most recent issue of the Oxford Magazine referred to ‘the often embarrassing theme of elitism’, and it is embarrassing, not because we are unable to defend academic elitism, but because the elitism we too, too often represent is not academic, but socio-economic. If we are going to become a university that can honestly say it selects on academic merit alone, we cannot remain silent about socio-economic inequalities. The Oxford Magazine also said: ‘Given the educational system in the UK, it is a fact of life that Oxford will end up admitting a disproportionately high intake from independent schools.’ Such resignation—‘given’, ‘fact of life’, ‘end up admitting’—is simply no good. We must also propose a different educational system. The current one, with its private education for less than ten per cent who, on so-called ‘academic’ merit, occupy up to fifty per cent of university places is only a given or fact of life in the way apartheid was. Simon Hughes’ supposedly radical idea of quotas will not do. It dresses the window, while leaving the background discriminatory structures in place.

Oxford must formulate a response to the cuts in public funding that is unembarrassed and unembarrassing. Our ability to command respect, as an institution with intellectual and moral integrity, will depend far less on our student funding packages and access schemes, than on a stubborn refusal to be silent about, and thus complicit with, the gross inequalities this institution still reflects in spite of those schemes. Indeed, we should allow ourselves to wonder about the extent to which access schemes, and the annual heart-warming success story they provide, do not also function to divert attention away from the causes of those inequalities, which ought also to be our target. I am loath to use the word, but they said they wanted impact. Let’s give it to them.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Mr Bernard Sufrin, please.

Mr Bernard Sufrin (Worcester College, Computing Laboratory)

The Congregation that is meeting inside this building is the sovereign body of the University, and we are apparently here to discuss how the University should respond to the draconian cuts in the higher education budget. On the face of it, this requires us to do no more than consider the nuts and bolts of the response. Earlier speakers began that task, and I confess that I’m glad that someone is paying attention to that, but there was another Congregation meeting outside this building as we came in. They believe that the University is in a position to make significant choices about the nuts and bolts questions. They want the University to make a stand against higher fees, and I think they need the University to speak truth to power. I think we need that too.

We have been publicly timid on today’s questions for a bit too long. At each stage in the deterioration of the financial climate for universities, or for students, we seem to have accepted the assumptions made in Whitehall, without public demur, prayed that the consequences of the decisions wouldn’t be too dire for Oxbridge, and then gotten on with business as usual. Perhaps this has been with the goal of maintaining good working relationships with our Whitelhall masters, but if our officials have argued with them, it’s been in private, or from behind the smoke screen of the Russell Group, or from within the sheepfold of Universities UK. We have missed some important opportunities to provide moral and intellectual clarity. One exception to this was Congregation’s revolt in 1985 against Council’s proposal of an honorary doctorate for Mrs Thatcher, a different Council. I still meet colleagues who think that this was a political mistake, but I agree with Denis Noble that the ‘mammoth majority against the degree demonstrated the seriousness of Oxford’s purpose in protesting against the damage inflicted by government policy on science, education and health.’

What we should be challenging now is the idea that higher education is no more than a private benefit, and that the only beneficiaries of a university education are the higher-earning graduates. We should be articulating a different vision, based on the principle that higher education contributes to the greater well-being of society at large, independently of the increased earning power of its graduates, or the short-term impact of its research. We should take seriously the call by Professor Sretzer of Cambridge for free post-secondary education and training for all. Higher education should no longer be the exclusive preserve of the children of the upper and middle classes, and the very few underprivileged who can win scholarships or bursaries that take them into private education. I think we should challenge publicly the false nostrum of ‘access’—the myth that the universities can make up for the malign effects of the UK’s caste systems of primary and secondary education by admitting a proportion of state-educated students that some secretary of state or access czar mandates from time to time. This has been as effective as putting elastoplast on a gangrene. Something more radical is needed.

I want to close with an uncomfortable truth about the proposed new system of loans. Susan Cooper did her usual meticulous job in the last Oxford Magazine explaining it. I wish more people did their homework as effectively as she does ours for us. On the face of it, the system will provide more money for universities, while at the same time costing some lower-paid graduates less than the current system, but these days, especially these days, we need to look behind the face, and two of the system’s aspects pose big risks for graduates, and for the taxpayers thirty years out. First, the legislation calls for a real rate of interest of at least three per cent to be charged to the better-off graduates for their loans, but did you notice the clause that permits this three per cent to be increased, and did you notice that there’s no upper bound? Second, Cooper has shown that even at three per cent real interest, it’s inevitable that a large proportion of graduates will not have paid off the full amount of their loan at the thirty-year write-off point. Thus, as she says, ‘The old system of the government paying up front and able to see its costs as they are incurred is replaced by unknown losses that will appear thirty years later.’ I don’t think it takes too much imagination to see the dangers of cash-strapped and ideologically-driven governments playing fast and loose with the real interest rate on loans or simply privatising the loan books and giving the plutocrats a further cohort of hostages.

We need look no further than the US to see what the consequences of that step would be. If you want to look, just Google ‘Sally Mae, Citigroup and student loan default’. If the UK is destined for plutocratic governance for a while, then there’s certainly something for an aspiring student to be anxious about here, for the idea that we are all in this together has already been tested to destruction.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr John Parrington.

Dr John Parrington (Department of Pharmacology, Worcester College)

Oxford graduate Oscar Wilde once talked of people who ‘know the price of everything but the value of nothing’. I believe this is an accurate description of those in power at the moment in Britain, and no doubt could be applied to many in the previous government. The reason I believe we should be opposed to an increase in student fees and the proposed cuts to higher education—the two being, in my mind, intimately connected—is that those trying to impose this change know nothing of the true value of what we are engaged upon here in Oxford; and because we, in contrast, do know the value of our teaching and research, we have a duty, both to our students and to our research, to oppose these measures with all the means at our disposal.

I’ll start with the proposed increase in fees. I’m sure we all agree that Oxford should be attracting the students with the most talent. However, given that only six per cent of children in this country attend private schools, yet around fifty per cent get into Oxford, it also seems clear, as other speakers have said, that we are failing to select a huge amount of gifted students. I was shocked to read in the Guardian recently that last year Oxford and Cambridge accepted more students from one private school—Westminster—than from the entire population of children eligible for free school meals. Can anyone here in Oxford really justify such a state of affairs?

Actually, as people have said, we do try hard at Oxford to reach out to students from less privileged backgrounds. I have been involved with various access programmes taught in state primary schools in Oxford, and I’m also pleased that in Medicine, we now have a change in the selection for interview procedure which means that we take into account an applicant’s performance at GCSE A* compared to their school average, which positively favours academically gifted students in low-achieving schools. I fear that all this will be nothing compared to the negative impact huge fees will have in deterring less privileged students from applying here. I think I can speak with some authority here, having got into Cambridge from a Bradford comprehensive school that never sent students to Oxford and not only did it not help me, but was so freaked out by the idea of one of their students applying to Oxbridge that they actively tried to sabotage my application. I realised my dream through bloody-minded determination and a sympathetic admissions tutor, yet I really think that if I’d been faced with the proposed fees, I’m sure this would have been one obstacle too many to contemplate and, although I accept some of the arguments about student bursaries, I think the problem is that those underprivileged students that need these bursaries most of all are the ones who are least likely to be informed about how to apply for them. Instead they will see universities that appear to be just for the rich and be put off from applying to such places, as I’m sure I probably would have been.

Of course, supporters of the higher fees say these are needed because of the massive cuts in funding that we face, which are justified by the government by the argument that universities need to start paying their way. Yet an Imperial College report published this January calculated that universities generate anything from £30 billion to £60 billion per year, or two to four per cent of UK GDP. Yet it’s the universities that face huge cuts while the banks have billion-pound bailouts and bankers continue to rake in their obscene bonuses, despite having almost brought the world economy to a state of total meltdown.

In summary, what I would say we need to be arguing for, and as strongly as possible, is that, given what we contribute to the wealth of this country, we should be demanding a higher tax on businesses to pay for both our student fees and also our research.
Of course, as other people have said, to measure our value only in these terms is to fall into the trap I warned against at the start, which is believing that something is valuable only insofar as one can put a price on it. Actually, I believe that our most lasting contributions to society are those that are most difficult to quantify in purely monetary terms. Thus, while my work is leading to new diagnoses and treatments for infertility and other medical disorders, far more important to me are the fundamental insights it reveals about the workings of the human body. Actually it’s such fundamental studies that often lead to medical and technological advances in the most unexpected ways. Anyway, why judge the value of academic work only by its potential practical application? How can monetary values be used to assess the importance of a valuable new insight into what was going on in Shakespeare’s head as he wrote one of his plays or the social changes that led to the first flowerings of democracy in Ancient Greece? Surely only a philistine would try. Actually I think there are philistines in government who do try and do these things, yet it is areas like this that are being cut.

Because I feel so passionately about these things, I have been concerned by what I see as the passivity and apparent impotence of the leaders of our academic institutions and research councils. Why, for instance, did the Medical Research Council greet the announcement that funding into medical research was to be cut by ten per cent in real terms as ‘better than expected’ at a time when countries like China are putting billions into their science budgets? If I worked in the Arts and Humanities, where even more severe cuts are planned, I would be even more angry about the failure of our representatives to mount any effective resistance. You know, there’s one thing in my struggle to get a Bradford sink school to one of the greatest universities in the world [taught me], and that’s if you are not happy with a situation, you try and change it. That’s why I lobbied the demonstration in London in November where lecturers and school students and university students marched together. What struck me most about the demonstration was the vibrancy and creativity of the young people, but also the points they were making about how there was plenty of money going into Afghanistan, or Trident missiles or going to the bankers, and how this could go to universities.

Just to finish, to talk about what we could be doing to help these young people, in the 1960s, another period when young people were marching in the streets, Bob Dylan famously sang: ‘Your sons and your daughters are beyond your command.

Your old road is rapidly ageing. Please get out of the new one if you can’t lend your hand.’ At the very least, I would suggest, we shouldn’t stand in the way of those young people protesting against the cuts, and that means doing our best not to block or sabotage their actions, but do we really want to be remembered as the generation that stood aside and let our children fight our battles for us? I suggest that we should be marching alongside the students and the most obvious place to do that is the TUC demonstration on 26 March.

Of course, there are people who say the cuts are inevitable, and we can’t do anything to stop them. I imagine there were similar arguments in Egypt a month ago and yet now we have seen what’s happened in that country. We have seen what ordinary people can do when they decide enough is enough. Well, I say, and I’ll finish on this, that enough is enough when it comes to these attacks on our centres of teaching and learning. If you agree with me, I hope you will join with people like me who want to try to do something about it.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Dr Stuart White please.

Dr Stuart White (Jesus College, Department of Politics and International Relations)

I want to start by addressing those who say that we should consider the issue of cuts and fees in higher education as settled. These colleagues are, to coin a phrase, confusing the end with what is only the end of the beginning. In a democracy, no policy is ever set in stone. Change is always possible and if we think change is right, we should say this, and campaign for it. Let’s recall that the government has no electoral mandate for its hiking of tuition fees. Indeed, one of the two coalition parties won seats on the basis of a pledge to do the very opposite. The government won a uniquely anguished vote in the House of Commons, but was genuinely worried it would lose the vote in the Lords.

Let’s look at what is happening in other areas. Look at the protests over the privatisation of forests. Look at the wonderful readings across this country, the past weekend, to protest closures of public libraries. Look at the opposition gathering to the government’s proposed NHS reforms, or at the revolt brewing in the charitable sector over local government spending cuts. Not least, look at the government’s falling approval ratings. What we are seeing in this country is the emergence of a broad popular movement against cuts and the marketisation of our public realm, a movement that stands for values of humanity and decency against what Philip Pullman has identified as the greedy ghost of market fundamentalism. In this situation, where the public is increasingly sceptical of the free market ideological thrust of government policy, it would be odd, indeed, for Oxford University to meekly acquiesce to this ideology in higher education. Oxford University should have the courage of the forest protesters, the library protesters, the students protesting out there. It should say, clearly and loudly, that it does not view the new fees regime as an acceptable settlement for higher education.

But if we really believe in equality of opportunity, and equality of access to higher education, we must say more than this, for equality of opportunity is threatened, perhaps more threatened, by a whole range of other government policies. It is threatened by the abolition of the Education Maintenance Allowance, a policy with a proven track record of assisting children from poorer backgrounds to stay on in school after sixteen. It is threatened by the closure of public libraries. As the first person in my family ever to enter higher education, I know how important ready access to a public library was to me as a child, in raising my intellectual horizons and setting me on the path to university. How will equality of opportunity be affected by the abolition of the Independent Living Fund, which currently assists young disabled people to put together care packages to support their life at university? What will be the effect of abolishing the Child Trust Fund, a policy which would have helped ensure that all citizens reach adulthood with the financial liquidity that middle-class parents and their children take for granted? Equality of opportunity is threatened by the cuts to Sure Start programmes, which provide essential help in early years development. It all adds up.

If we really believe in equality of opportunity, then as a university we must be clear and loud in saying we oppose the fees regime in higher education and the wider cuts agenda of the coalition government. This, and this alone, is the starting point for a meaningful discussion of equality of opportunity. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Professor Patrick McGuinness please.

Professor Patrick McGuinness (Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, St Anne’s College)

I spoke at the debate here in March 2003 about what we then called, but were told not to call, top-up fees. I was on the side that lost, and it’s a habit I’m unlikely to be breaking today. We opposed fees then for the sake of the intellectual health of the University as a place of learning, where the only transaction should involve knowledge and understanding, and where the community was bound together by ideals of education, and not a flawed business model of customers and service providers. This debate isn't just about money, costs, educational opportunity, but about how we frame to ourselves and to the world outside how we think about our work and the values that we are trying to pass on. I remember being told in that debate, and it's available in the Gazette online, that fees would improve academics' conditions, that access would be ensured, that the fee cap would be enough. I haven't really seen access improve in Oxford. I have seen access schemes, but I haven't seen access itself improve. This is a really big distinction and we need to understand it. I haven't seen it improve either, actually, at any comparable universities in Britain, so it's not just us. This happens against a background, which is not our fault, of governments of right and pseudo left that have presided over an increase, not a drop, in inequality in this country.

I haven't seen much by way of better conditions for academics, especially not for fixed-term, short-term people we employ to teach, let alone—people we always forget—the admin staff, the people who run the infrastructure of the universities. We never talk about them and we should. These people keep the institution running behind the scenes. And, as we know—and we knew it at the time, but we pretended we didn't so we could vote for the £3,000 fees—we knew at the time that £3,000 wasn't enough, and we have known today, we have heard, that £9,000 isn't enough. We are locked into this. I accept that, but I don't think that with all our status, all our world-leading cultural capital, our intellect and our talent, we should be so fatalistic and so supine and so meek about what's happening to us. It's actually the lack of fight that really depresses me and is reflected at the absolute top echelons of this University. It is the lack of fight that depresses me, more than the fact that we have already lost, and by losing, I mean that the people who think they are winning are also losing.

Numerous speakers today have rightly questioned the basis of the Browne review as well as the fundamentally crass and materialistic values it displays. It's also, we should remember, riven with contradictions, and it's written in the kind of jargonised newspeak that I like to think universities were set up to oppose. It's written in a species of English that can only be described as post-literate. It's a type of dark ages of language that seems to have leapfrogged from pre-literacy to post-literacy without passing through that all-important intermediate stage, which is the one we are meant to be dealing in. It's also, actually, a kind of tick box service industry English that I notice being employed more and more by University top brass to communicate with each other, and with politicians, over and above the heads of the people who teach and learn here.

We have spoken about undergraduates. What I want to raise is the knock-on impact on our graduates. At a time when grant-giving bodies are slashing their studentships, we are increasing the debt which potential new graduates start out with. Our potentially best graduates are already burdened by a debt that in some cases is higher than an academic starting salary. Are they going to stay on, to take out a loan perhaps for a Masters, or for an extra six months of DPhil, against a background of £30,000 debt? Where are the researchers and the tutors of the future going to come from? What are the implications for our own profession? I keep thinking turkeys and Christmas here. How many of us, how many of you sitting here today, would have stayed on to do research in the face of a £30,000-odd debt and almost no graduate funding? Are we pricing ourselves out of a profession? Are we pricing the profession out of our own reach? Debt deters. More debt deters more and for longer. It's not rocket science.

When all this started, back, I guess, in the 1980s, only two things in Britain worked. Only two things had international reputations. They were the envy of the world: our NHS and our universities. British business was, however, dysfunctional and mostly in the doldrums. What baffles me is why successive governments decided to take our universities and our health system and submit them to the same values, and too often, sadly, those very same people, that had so royally messed up in their own backyards. They are still doing it and they are not going to stop, because what's happening, and no-one has said it yet, is the privatisation of British universities. So I want us to think and feel like a university, to speak and behave like one, and not like some ill-rigged-out and confused institution, amateurly implementing flawed business values. Business models don't work for education. Actually, looking around me, they don't seem to have worked that well for business either. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Is there anyone else who wishes to speak? Do come to the microphone.

Ms Megan Edwards (MCR President, Lady Margaret Hall)

We have heard an awful lot about fees, figures, statistics, but the question that I would like to pose to you is of a different kind, a philosophical one, if you will. Do we want a future educated workforce that will be saddled with debt and is required to manage debt before they even begin a career? It is estimated that in severe cases in which the debt is not paid back quickly, the debt will be substantial and may continue for many years. Does this mean that we will have a generation of people who are still paying off their own debt when their children are eligible for university entrance? Clearly this would build family debt further. Another question: we are told by the government repeatedly that the economic problems that we face arise, at least largely, from spiraling national debt. Why, then, does the government design an increasing debt burden to pay for a fundamentally necessary provision for a future society, that not only future economic health is dependent upon, but also that all members of society will benefit from? Now, there is a counter argument of course. If students are not charged a 'contribution', who will pay for the cost of tertiary education? The government again says that the future of UK economy depends upon an educated workforce, a 'knowledge-based' economy. I have heard that phrase a number of times. Future economic health requires well-trained young people. Thus university-educated students are imperative in order to provide a successful future economy which generates wealth and income, so why should this income not pay for the cost of education, at least in part? Question: covering the cost of tertiary education by taxation requires all income earners to pay, including those that do not go through university. Is this unfair for those who do not benefit directly from a university education? Again, the government says that a well-educated workforce contributes towards a healthy economy. All members of society benefit from a healthy economy, including those that do not go to university. Thus the educated workforce provide significant indirect benefit to those that do not go to university, but the government expects students to pay increasingly higher proportions of that cost. There's something wrong. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Do come forward and identify yourself.

Ms Rebecca Sparrow (Student member, Wadham College)

I have quite a simple point to make here. We can’t talk about all this as if it is inevitable and it’s actually been a really wonderful surprise coming here and realising how many people haven’t been doing that. Discussing fees is like saying we accept the cuts, which affect both your research, our tuition fees—it’s accepting they are going to happen. It’s simply not true that it’s inevitable. All over the country, people are finding ways to stand up to these cuts. Oxford has a responsibility not to be pressured by impending deadlines into promising to make the virtually irreversible change, and before it’s attempted to stop it happening, as if the battle has already been lost. You have heard warnings today about what will happen within universities and society if we do. People in universities all over the country look to Oxford and its members as acting as part of a leading academic institution. These members’ reaction to what the government is trying to impose on them is more likely than most to have an impact on policy. Oxford’s involvement in the national campaign will immeasurably add to the power of everyone standing up against these cuts, but importantly, this University is also special because academics have a sovereign right over the administration and the power to call a vote in Congregation. Like other workers, you also have the right and the power to strike, and the students would support you in that. We, as members of this University, students, staff together, have a responsibility to education in this country to object from the root to what is threatening it. We have the power to do so. So let’s, before it’s too late.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Is there anyone else who wishes to speak? Please come forward.

Mr Christopher O’Connor (JCR and MCR President, St Benet’s Hall)

I’m speaking to you in two different capacities today. I am the JCR and MCR President of St Benet’s Hall, and I am also a member of the part-time executive of the Student Union as the Common Room Support Officer, and I think I would like to move the conversation on a little bit from what some of my colleagues have been talking about and talk about the contribution that we all need to make to access. The debate, certainly within government, on this issue, is moving on and I think it’s irresponsible of the University not to do the same. As much as we do need to convince the government of the value of education, I don’t think the Liberal Democrats and the Conservatives are too keen to have another vote on it in Parliament. I think it is better for the Student Union and representatives of the University to move on to minimising the impact that this issue has on access. First of all, I will talk about my own experience in college. At St Benet’s Hall, I’m very lucky, as JCR President, to sit on the College Council, to talk to members of the college, about all sorts, including financial issues. I think that’s very important. The JCR Presidents went to McKinsey at the weekend for our training day, so forgive me for a bit of management speak here, but we are stakeholders in every college, and I think it’s important that we do have that access to decisions that are made, especially when the fee level increases as it looks to. I also think that there’s a contribution that students can make across the University with access. A lot of speakers before me have spoken about the fantastic stuff that students have done off their own bat, going back to their schools, talking about access, going into primary schools, talking about the value of education. I really urge everyone in this room to use students as a resource in this sense. Use us to help your access campaign—build the student involvement, which is happening already on a voluntary basis, into the University’s official response to these changes. And that way, I think, we can maximise the impact we can have on this issue, we can minimise the damage that these changes are going to make to access, and we can continue to allow students from all sorts of backgrounds to come here. Thank you very much.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Any further comments?

Ms Beth Evans (Vice-President (Graduates) at Oxford University Student Union, Wadham College)

I’m here from the OUSU Executive, and also as a member of Oxford Education Campaign.

On 9 December, the day of the vote on fees, I stood in a police kettle in Parliament Square. I stood with young people, fifteen-year-old children who were desperate. That one vote meant for them that they were never going to university. They were never becoming teachers or doctors, or whatever they dreamed of. They were never going to have the opportunity to think and explore ideas in the way that we value so greatly. I cannot describe to you the feeling in that space after we heard how those politicians voted. The only sustainable way of funding education in my opinion—education and research—is through taxation, is through public funds, and it’s through fighting these devastating cuts. Education must be free and accessible to all. When even the worth of our public libraries, that we hold so dear, is questioned, who is going to make the point of the value of publicly funded education in this country? If we don’t make those arguments, who will? Who will speak out for those kids whose futures were taken away with that one vote while I stood next to them? Students are angry. They are angry with the government. They are angry at those people in universities who so far, they feel, haven’t done enough, haven’t said enough, or haven’t said it publicly enough. We know that universities are chronically underfunded, but we don’t feel that this is the answer. There are students outside right now who are asking you to fight. They are saying that they will support you, if you fight. They will support you in strikes and industrial action, and when you tell this government that closing down public libraries, that taking away Education Maintenance Allowance and destroying access to education will not stand. Thank you.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Could I now call on Professor Tony Monaco to add some final points?

Professor Tony Monaco (Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), Merton College)

We started this afternoon with a discussion on fee levels which I said would require us to consider the financial aspects as well as the access issues. The financial considerations have been rehearsed this afternoon, including the cost of an Oxford undergraduate education, its current subsidy from other sources in the collegiate University, and the current and future cuts coming our way from government. If we increase student fees, it would allow extra funding to go towards our teaching provision, maintaining our infrastructure, and enhancing academic excellence. However, it would also allow us to provide generous fee waivers and fund our growing access activities, as you have heard from various speakers. We also heard how we need to increase transparency and information to applicants. It is this balance that the collegiate University needs to consider, and the discussion today has contributed immensely to that process. So thank you very much.

VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. That now concludes this afternoon’s discussion. I would like to thank everyone who contributed to the discussion and to thank you all for coming.

General Notices

Consultation on maintaining an Employer Justified Retirement Age on the abolition of the Default Retirement Age

The Government has announced its intention to phase out the Default Retirement Age (DRA) of sixty-five from 1 October 2011. Transitional arrangements have been published which will enable retirements due before 1 October 2011 to proceed as planned. From October 2011, employers will not be able to require an employee to retire (leave employment on reaching a particular age), save where they decide to apply an Employer Justified Retirement Age (EJRA).

During Michaelmas term 2010, the Personnel Committee and Council considered the potential impact of the abolition of the DRA in the context of the government consultation on these proposed changes. Those bodies agreed that maintaining predictable retirement ages was desirable, not least in relation to academic staff, in order to assist academic and financial planning, to maintain opportunities for career progression, to promote diversity in the workforce, and to avoid invidious performance management processes where members of staff did not wish to retire. Council therefore asked the officers to develop proposals that might enable the University to continue to implement a normal retirement age, for some categories of staff at least, once the DRA was phased out, and to seek legal advice as appropriate on this matter. It was recognised that, in respect of joint appointments in particular, close liaison with the colleges would be essential as the situation developed. The Conference of Colleges was therefore invited to nominate representatives to work with representatives of the Personnel Committee on this issue.

The Personnel Committee is now consulting divisional and college bodies, as well as the joint committees with staff representatives, on a proposal to maintain an EJRA of sixty-seven for all academic and academic-related staff, for an initial period of ten years, which would be coupled with a process under which requests from staff to continue employment beyond the EJRA would be considered against agreed criteria, and with a right of appeal where such requests were turned down.

Further details of the proposals and the consultation exercise may be found in the 'Update on Major Issues' section of the Staff Gateway at: www.ox.ac.uk/staff/staff_communications/update_on_major_issues.

Any individuals who wish to comment on the proposals are welcome to do so. The consultation closes on Friday 18 March 2011.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.
   Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
   (i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

   (ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

   (iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Curators of the University Libraries
The Bodleian Libraries: Annual Report
August 2009–July 2010

1. Summary and introduction
The Bodleian Libraries continued their accelerated pace of change in 2009–2010. Having outlined their academic strategy of increasing user access to information through direct access to collections and by increasing electronic access, the Libraries advanced their complex estates initiatives, focusing especially on the creation of secure storage and a reading room in the Radcliffe Science Library to house and serve rare books over the coming four years, the construction of the Book Storage Facility in Swindon to accommodate much of the Libraries' print collections, and the planning of the Humanities and Mathematics Library on the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter.
A guiding principle was to maintain a high quality of service even in a prolonged and intense period of reform and displacement. Thus the Radcliffe Science Library continued uninterrupted service even while much of its collection was boxed up and stored underground in the caverns of salt mines, and while Special Collections prepared to relocate the rare books and manuscripts collections and reading room to the Library. Similarly, staff and readers of the New Bodleian and Duke Humfrey endured with patience and even good cheer the disruption of the successive closing of reading rooms and shifting of materials to their new locations. There were trade-offs.
Room to spread out at reading tables was at a premium, and some users were advised to sign up for desks in advance. On the other hand, requested materials could be delivered quickly when requested from the RSL Rare Books vault. Perhaps the ultimate consolation was that materials in transit were only out of circulation for days and weeks, rather than for months and years, as has been the case at other repositories undergoing renovation.
The scale of the Bodleian's undertakings exceeded that of any other library in the world. Over 6.5 million items were to be barcoded, and every item being prepared for transfer into the Book Storage Facility required a record in the online catalogue. Teams of people had to be hired for this work as well as for the book moves themselves. One of the most remarkable accomplishments was the development of a plan to employ and train over ninety people in a brief period of time to inventory and barcode the collections. In the Long Vacation a special effort was made to recruit Oxford students in order that they might be the beneficiaries of funds in an economically difficult environment. As planning and implementation progressed, it became apparent that conventional management approaches were inadequate for such a complex series of estates and infrastructure projects. Leaders of the various intersecting programmes came together in a group known as the BodSquad. Communications improved, problems were nipped in the bud, and best practice was shared. As a consequence of this tempering, the team leaders and managers have grown in their capacity to generate business plans, identify and manage risks, and to move decisively and rapidly to overcome obstacles and meet targets.
The positive investments in the capital programme and the supporting elements provided a forward momentum that counteracted the sobering news of the impending budget reductions that were to beset higher education. Because the Bodleian was finally, after years of demoralising delay, building its long-awaited storage facility and moving ahead on its exciting plans to renovate the New Bodleian Library, it responded creatively and constructively to a request from the University to model a ten per cent reduction in its PRAC funding over the coming three fiscal years. The Libraries decided to protect the budget for collections and access to online information because this is the area perceived to be of highest value to students and researchers. With inflation in the price of periodicals far outstripping the Retail Price Index, our purchasing power for periodicals, particularly in scientific subjects, is eroding, and the prospect of journal cancellations looms large. Although the decision had the effect of shifting the burden of reduction chiefly to staff costs, the Libraries resolved to sustain this position.
In the end, the University’s Planning and Resource Allocation Committee recommended savings that added up to 8.4 per cent over three years. However, almost one-third (approximately £600,000) of this is projected to come from increased revenue, which will take the burden off the Divisions’ substantial contribution to the maintenance of the Libraries. For example, Sunday tours of the Bodleian, increased sales from Bodleian Publishing and the shop, and endowments of positions are expected to make solid contributions to the Bodleian’s bottom line. Taking advantage of OMIS, the Oxford Mobility Incentive Scheme, the Libraries will use voluntary departures to lessen salary costs. In order to manage with fewer staff, the Libraries are rethinking workflows, increasing automation, eliminating products such as printed guides (now moving to the web) and making other changes.
The maturity of the university library system created as Oxford University Library Services in 2000 was such that in 2010 the Libraries discontinued the use of the institutional name OULS and were renamed by University statute as the Bodleian Libraries, taking advantage of the world-recognized status of the Bodleian.

The Libraries advanced their reputation as they celebrated, along with the museums and collections of the University, the award of the Queen’s Anniversary Prize, given in recognition not only of the distinctive collections, but for widening access to them. In April the Bodleian experienced an unexpectedly high profile when, after taking an engrossment of Magna Carta to New York for the North American reunion, Bodley’s Librarian and the Keeper of Special Collections were stranded with the priceless document following the eruption of Eyjafjallajökull in Iceland. Lightning-quick discussions ensued, with the result that Magna Carta was displayed, with much publicity, in J. Pierpont Morgan’s Library in the Morgan Library and Museum until it was safe for it to travel onward to Winnipeg, where Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II was laying the cornerstone of a Human Rights Museum. After remaining in Oxfordshire for almost 900 years, Magna Carta was racking up frequent flyer miles and reaching out on behalf of the Bodleian, Oxford, and the UK.

2. Service to readers

A. LIBRARY RESOURCES

a. Improving direct access to materials

A major element of the Bodleian Libraries’ strategy is to bring collections closer to readers by reorganizing and redesigning spaces, analysing usage statistics and coordinating with our subject librarians to make high-use materials—housed until now in closed stacks—directly available to our readers. A key component of the strategy is the refurbishment of the Underground Bookstore located beneath Radcliffe Square. The Bookstore was opened just one hundred years ago and is filled by high-density shelving, some of which was inspired by a design by William Gladstone.

The early part of the year was focused on the development of the design for the work. In March 2010 a public exhibition of the proposals was held, and by July 2010 planning permission and listed-building consent had been granted. The renovation will open the underground area to readers for the first time, allowing direct access to materials, and over 100 reader spaces. It is envisaged as a more informal study area, keeping the utilitarian design of the original space but updating it for readers’ use.

In preparation for the removal of books from the Underground Bookstore, over 11,000 high-use items in it were identified. These have been retained in the centre of Oxford, and will move back into the Underground Bookstore upon the completion of its refurbishment in summer 2011. They will be joined in these open stacks by another 240,000 items for readers to browse directly.

In other initiatives, an additional 350 high-use titles in the Social Science Library can now be consulted on open shelves, while in a similar exercise the Education Library relegated materials not consulted for several years to the stacks, making room for high-demand items. Within the various Humanities libraries, a number of projects helped to identify and move low-usage material from reading rooms.

Planning was carried out in preparation for the move of materials from the New Bodleian Reading Room to various destinations, including Duke Humphrey’s Library and the Oriental Institute Library, so as to keep these high-demand items close at hand while the New Bodleian is undergoing its refurbishment.

All such moves are planned so as to minimize disturbance to our readers. A comprehensive book moves plan has been created to assist in the management and financial costing of the entire programme. A summary chart is being developed to help in providing information for staff and readers about the progress of the project.

b. Online access

Our readers continued to benefit from direct access—in the case of University members, direct to their desktops—to thousands of electronic resources. Many new full-text databases and e-books were added to our collections during the year. Notable among these were:

- Mass Observation
- Oxford Handbooks (OUP)—Philosophy, Political Science, and Religion
- Oxford Medical Handbooks (OUP)
- Several hundred individual e-books in the Humanities and Social Sciences
- Several hundred science e-books from Springer
- An additional 1,000 Chinese-language e-books
- Over 40,000 e-books on Judaism
- The Making of Modern Law (over 20,000 eighteenth- and early nineteenth-century works on law)
- US Congressional Serial Set 1817–1994 (including American State Papers)
- Confidential Print North America 1824–1961
- Colonial State Papers

The ongoing provision of access to a wide range of electronic resources accounted, from the e-journals collections alone, for over 6.8 million downloads. As readers switch from print to electronic access, the Libraries have been able to cancel the print equivalent, saving the costs of duplication, storage, and handling. These key e-resources are now central to the requirements of our readers.

c. Digitization

The Bodleian Libraries have many hundreds of thousands of digital master images of items from their holdings that have been created over the past two decades, and numbers are increasing dramatically in response to emerging technologies and the changing expectations of readers from around the world (more than 15TB of image data were added in the last year alone). To date, these digital image assets have been held on a variety of systems within the Bodleian, with the most important items also being copied to the central back-up facilities operated by Oxford University Computing Services. With the creation of the Bodleian Libraries’ own Digital Asset Management System (DAMS), which will offer a robust and professionally managed digital preservation environment, work began during the year to consolidate our holdings of digital images and migrate these collections to the DAMS.

The advent of the Bodleian DAMS allows us to investigate ways to separate digital data (for example, a collection of digital images and their associated metadata) from the applications used to deliver them to end users. The DAMS has been designed to encourage the adoption of open standards for both data and applications, so that both we and our readers will be able to realize the full potential of our digital assets.

Using the DAMS the Libraries built the digital infrastructure and systems for the international Mellon-funded ‘Cultures of Knowledge’ programme to build a union catalogue of seventeenth-century intellectual correspondence (http://www.history.ox.ac.uk/cofk/infrastructure). Similar systems were also developed this year to give access via the internet to digital images and descriptions of the Bodleian’s collections of block books, wood- and metal-cut single sheets (http://wwwodi.ox.ac.uk/digitalimagelibrary/blockbooks/home. html).

The sheer depth and breadth of the Bodleian Libraries’ holdings, set against the costs of creating high-quality digital surrogates, mean that we always have to be selective in our approach to digitization. Materials are usually chosen for digitization in response to the interests of a particular donor or funding body, or because we have identified an emerging demand from a group of readers. However, the Libraries began work in the year to develop a short list of items from each area of our collections that should be considered priority candidates for digitization, so that we can be more proactive and strategic in our approach as new opportunities to create digital surrogates emerge.

Thanks to the generosity of donor David Rumsey, the Libraries now also have access to the LUNA software suite to deliver some of our most important digital image collections over the web. Over the past twelve months the Libraries worked with materials on such themes as ‘Early Printing in Europe’, ‘Medieval and Renaissance Manuscripts’, ‘Masterpieces of the non-Western Book’, and the poster collection of the Conservative Party Archives—over 27,000 images in all. Similarly, material that was previously available on hand-built websites (e.g. Celtic Manuscripts) has also begun to be migrated to the LUNA platform, so that it can be managed and delivered more cost-effectively in the long term. The possibilities of linking the search and delivery functions of LUNA to the recently launched SOLO search interface that has proven so popular with readers are particularly exciting.

d. Online catalogues

Building on developments in 2008–2009, for the first time all legal deposit materials began to arrive with an accompanying machine-readable catalogue record, so that all materials acquired by the Libraries through legal deposit are visible to readers immediately in the catalogue. Those records which are identified as substantially enhanced by running them against externally available databases and are automatically overlaid where a fuller record is available. Quality control of records is carried out using error-checking software. This method was also applied retrospectively to books received before this system was implemented and further reduced the backlog of uncatalogued, or only partially catalogued, legal deposit materials.

Bibliographic data in the Libraries’ resource discovery tool, SOLO (Search Oxford Libraries Online), was enhanced with cross-reference information. This enhancement means that readers can search on the ‘wrong’ form of name, or a non-standard subject term, but still retrieve all the items in the catalogue related to query. (For example, a search for ‘Peter Ilyitch Tchaikovsky’ will retrieve all the records related to the composer, the form of whose name in the catalogue is Peter Illich Tchaikovsky.)

During the year a number of smaller projects allowed older records to benefit from incorporation into SOLO: the Refugee Studies Centre’s collections were loaded in January 2010, and work began to make available via OLIS the records of special-format titles produced for the visually impaired by our Accessible Resources Acquisition and Creation Unit.

In Special Collections during the last year the Libraries completed the arrangement, cataloguing and conservation (where appropriate) of three major literary collections: the Abinger papers of Shelley and Godwin materials (funded for three years by the John R. Murray Charitable Trust); the letters of Philip Larkin to Monica Jones (part-funded by the Strachey Trust); and the papers of Owen Barfield (funded by the Barfield family). Substantial progress was also made on the cataloguing of the Alan Bennett archive (through the Vaisey Fund), with completion anticipated soon; the Clutag Press papers (under the aegis of the futureArch Project); the Anthony Sampson Papers (various funders); the papers of Bruce Chatwin (initial research, funded by Elizabeth Chatwin), and the Dallingridge papers (on deposit, through the work of a volunteer). In addition, work was completed on the capture of various born-digital literary materials, including the Clutag Press and Alan Garner papers, and a number of smaller but high-profile items were catalogued and made available, including the original manuscript of Philip Pullman’s short novel Lyra’s Oxford. Work continued on the intensive cataloguing of the papers of J.R.R. Tolkien (funded by the Tolkien Trust), and funding sources were identified for the cataloguing of the Stephen Spender archive, due to come to the Bodleian on deposit. Significant progress was made on cataloguing the archive of the Gehenna Press.

Significant progress was also made in reducing the cataloguing backlog in the Conservative Party Archive. The addition of 1.25 full-time staff has meant that well over half of the eight-year backlog has been dealt with and put into the public domain in the past year. This is despite the continued accrual of new material from all branches of the Party. Collections catalogued include priority collections—such as Conservative Research Department papers from c.1960–1990 and International Office papers c.1950–2000—and extensive use is already being made of them by readers in advance of the catalogues’ going online.

B. THE LIBRARIES’ ESTATE

a. Book Storage Facility

The key to the transformation of the Bodleian Libraries over the next five years will be the ability to provide secure storage for our collections and room for growth. In September 2009 a groundbreaking ceremony was held at the site of the Bodleian Libraries’ new high-density Book Storage Facility in South Marston, twenty-eight miles from the centre of Oxford at the edge of Swindon. With handover of the completed Facility due just under one year later in September 2010, much activity during the year was focused on delivering the building, its fitting out, the computer system interfacing it with our catalogues, and on planning the delivery service to the libraries in Oxford.

An important aspect of organizing the mass storage of library materials in the Book Storage Facility is the detailed layout of materials on the shelving units of the facility, known as the Planogram. This is key to maximizing the efficiency of the Facility as a whole, but also an essential part of the separation of legal deposit materials from non-legal deposit materials. The definitive Planogram was completed in April 2010 and supplied to the contractors supplying the shelving units in the Facility. The Planogram was, however, just one part of a complex build project; the most technically sophisticated element of the building was, in fact, the super-flat floor—cement laid with laser accuracy to ensure that the high shelving units remained stable.

The high-density storage facility at Swindon will operate through the enabling infrastructure of a dedicated IT system to manage the ingest, location, and retrieval of items stored there. During the year SERS staff scoped and appraised several different potential systems, chose a successful supplier, GFD of Boston, USA, and completed a contract for them to supply their software, which is already used in over forty high-density library storage facilities in the USA. The team has planned, configured, and installed the software, and has trialled it in use. It will be installed in the BSF in September and October 2010 and will begin to be used on a daily basis in November.

This Book Storage Facility Information System (BSFIS) will be the principal IT system that will manage the storage and retrieval of items. The Libraries’ strategic initiatives therefore include the Inventory Control Project to barcode all the materials which will be moved there (approximately 6.5 million items) by December 2011. Books and periodicals stored in the Facility will be retrieved for use by readers by means of the barcodes, rather than by the shelfmark currently in use in the Libraries’ bookstacks and stores. This is the first time that barcodes have been used across the Libraries for inventory control and, once the project is completed, we will be able to know with much greater accuracy than before how many items we hold.

Locations for books and periodicals which will be included in the barcoding are the Underground Bookstore, New Bodleian bookstack, Law Library basement, Radcliffe Science Library (including the Zoology and Plant Sciences libraries), Nuneham Courtenay Repository, DeepStore (the temporary remote storage location in Cheshire), and various special collections stores.

A detailed methodology was developed alongside the development of the BSFIS to create minimal records for items that currently have no inventory on the OLIS catalogue, so that they can be stored in the Facility. By the end of the year items were being barcoded by teams of staff at the rate of 75,000 items a week, and the first 1.5 million items had been barcoded.

A comprehensive book moves plan was created to assist in the management and financial costing of the entire book moves programme, and a special team of staff recruited to implement it. As some collections will move more than once (for example, temporarily to DeepStore and back), the entire programme envisages over 12 million moves during the next five years.

The first stage of the life of the Facility will be to ingest over 6.5 million items in its first year, with delivery starting within a few weeks of the first items being moved to it. The book moves out of the closed stack areas in the centre of Oxford that are undergoing refurbishment are critical to the timing of success of the overall set of estates projects. The combined barcoding, book moves and service delivery teams are working together to ensure we have a smooth transition from barcoding materials to moving them to the Facility and ingesting them. At the Oxford end, planning for the delivery of materials during all of the project phases was undertaken and was near completion at the end of the year. The Book Storage Facility Project demonstrated the importance of the BodSquad to synergise these complex and interacting programmes.

b. New Library

The year 2009–2010 was an important one for the development of the New Bodleian Library, as during the year the project completed its planning documentation for Stage D in the RIBA buildings scheme, and was granted ‘Amber Light’ approval to proceed to the completion of Stage E by the relevant committees of the University. The work towards completing Stage E Design commenced in May 2010 and is due for completion in December 2010. In addition the Project was granted both Planning Permission and Listed Building Consent by Oxford City Council, after the submission of the relevant documentation, an extensive series of consultations with stakeholder groups, neighbours and members of the local community, and a formal public exhibition of the plans.

A key enabling work was to relocate one of the main University communication switchboards for central Oxford from the New Bodleian building. Work on this commenced in January 2010 and was completed in August 2010, with minimal disruption to telephone and data networks.

c. Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

The Radcliffe Observatory Quarter project, which will bring together up to fifteen of the Humanities libraries, received planning permission in Spring 2009. However, because of the economic retrenchment, the overall project has been suspended for the time being, although planning continues. The Libraries have maintained some of the preparation activities, including implementation of the Library of Congress Classification scheme for all newly acquired materials.

d. Other estates projects

As part of the preparation for the refurbishment of the New Bodleian Library, a major refit of the Lankester Reading Room and associated bookstack in the Radcliffe Science Library was undertaken and opened to readers in December 2009. About 300,000 of the Bodleian’s most valuable items and those in highest demand were transferred to these new premises, which meet the relevant British Standard for archival collections. In addition to providing longer hours for readers, the move has also increased the speed of delivery from the now adjacent stack. Staff at the Science Library were able to accommodate the new collections and colleagues, adopting a thoroughly flexible approach to their working arrangements.

The Taylor Institution Working Party also continued planning efforts for modest refurbishments that will have some benefits for library users in the building.

C. WIDENING ACCESS

a. Tours and events

During the course of the year an Events Committee was formed to improve communication between the various parts of the Bodleian which stage public events. The group has taken on responsibility for developing an Events plan, and to communicate this through web and print publications. This will be trialled in Michaelmas term 2010.

b. Website

The Bodleian Libraries website (www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk) provides information for readers, external researchers and visitors to our historic buildings. It collects many different websites into its infrastructure, including physical library sites (managed by librarians), digitization project websites, library information services, and the main website. Over 2.5 million visits were made to the main site and almost 10.5 million pages viewed.

Central website improvements this year were overseen by the newly appointed Web Co-ordinator (later Web Projects Manager). This coincided with the appointment of a Head of Communications to oversee all communications activities for the Libraries.

The Libraries’ central content management system was upgraded this year. An increasing number of library personnel have been trained to edit content online and the number of web authors is now over 140, and additional training has been introduced for more experienced web editors. A monthly bulletin to web authors provides information on web activities and best practice. A presentation by the Web Projects Manager on writing for search engines at the annual Staff Conference received the highest attendance rate of the day, demonstrating the level of staff interest in developing online skills.
The renaming of the Libraries resulted in a new URL for the main website as www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk and intense activity to update content, update URLs and put redirects in place.

New resources in the central website this year included the Science Portal, the Medicine Portal, and the Bodleian Oriental Institute Library, Bodleian Japanese Library, and Taylor Institution Library Portals.

The development of the portal pages—for example ‘Science at Oxford’, which provides an ‘entry page’ for scientific, medical and health care information, including electronic and printed resources, and library services—was an important development for the Libraries’ websites. These pages offer users a more integrated entry point than one defined by a physical library. Such portal ‘entry pages’ will become increasingly important as more inter-disciplinary research is undertaken.

An image gallery template was created to allow more visual coverage of Bodleian activities online. Image galleries were created for estates projects, the Science Portal, Friends of the Bodleian, the staff intranet and digital project pages. An image gallery created for the ‘Crossing Borders: Hebrew Manuscripts as a Meeting-place of Cultures’ exhibition generated 318 visits (797 views) in May 2010. One hundred and eighty-eight visits entered directly to the page, suggesting that the link is being shared on other internet sites. Building on these first steps, a more comprehensive image gallery was created for the John Aubrey exhibition ‘My Wit was Always Working’.

Over the last year, social media have become as deeply embedded in library activities as elsewhere in daily life. They offer the Libraries the opportunity to enter a dialogue with readers, provide instant updates on our services and to communicate worldwide with our supporters. Those who are interested to learn more about the Bodleian Libraries can choose to subscribe to various RSS, Twitter and Facebook feeds. This allows our communication to become a powerful two-way dialogue. The website now has a Social Media directory on the home page which brings together social media initiatives by a range of library staff and includes over fifty blogs, social bookmarks, Facebook pages and Twitter accounts. The main Bodleian Libraries Twitter feed was launched in May 2010 and already has over 1,000 followers. The increasing importance of social media in driving traffic to the Bodleian Libraries sites is highlighted by the fact that over 785 visits in one month were referred by Facebook and, in the same month, 4,216 visits were referred by the University podcast site.

BODcasts, the Bodleian’s own podcast series, continued to attract interest with nearly a thousand visits to the BODcasts landing pages during the year. BODcasts this year included a review of Crime Day at the Bodleian (a special one-day event celebrating the publication of P.D. James’s book, Talking about Detective Fiction) and recordings from the opening of the Spring exhibition ‘Crossing Borders: Hebrew Manuscripts as a Meeting-place of Cultures’ with contributions from Dr Sarah Thomas, Vice-Chancellor Professor Andrew Hamilton and the Libraries’ curator for Hebrew, Dr Piet van Boxel.

During the year a commercial analytics programme was used to analyse usage of the website. An increased emphasis on the importance of web analytics led to involvement in a project with SERS to find a more accurate, accessible and cost-effective solution, with the result that Google Analytics was implemented in June 2010. Analysis of the web usage statistics led to a project to improve the accessibility of the main Bodleian website. The homepage layouts for the Bodleian Libraries and Bodleian Library were adjusted during May 2010 to distinguish more clearly between information for readers and information for external visitors to our exhibitions and historic buildings. This has contributed to reducing the abandon rate from these homepage.

Library staff participated in a ‘23 Things’ programme, an online course designed to introduce the participants to using a variety of web 2.0 tools. The level of participation was extremely high, with over 100 members of staff participating from throughout the Bodleian Libraries and from college libraries. The application of these web skills will enhance our ability to provide services and information via the web to users wherever they are located and via many kinds of devices.

c. Exhibitions/Events

The Exhibitions Committee worked through the academic year 2009–2010 to develop a comprehensive plan for major exhibitions for 2010–2015. This has now been completed and although there may be changes, it takes the exhibitions programme through to the opening exhibition for the Weston Library in 2015.

The main exhibitions during the year were ‘An Artful Craft: Historic Bookbindings from the Broxbourne Library and Other Collections’, featuring masterpieces from two of the greatest bookbinding collections of the eighteenth century, the Broxbourne Library collected by Albert Ehrman (1890–1969) and the Wormsley Library formed by Sir Paul Getty (1932–2003); ‘Crossing Borders: Hebrew Manuscripts as a Meeting-place of Cultures’, telling the story of how together Jews, Christians and Muslims have contributed to the development of the book; and ‘My Wit Was Always Working’: John Aubrey and the Development of Experimental Science’. The two last also have online versions (http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/about/exhibitions).

A major musical event for the Bodleian Libraries was the staging on 10 July 2010 of a performance of the seventeenth-century opera Erismena by Francesco Cavalli, based on a recent acquisition of a contemporary manuscript of the English score, which has been turned into a modern performing edition by Michael Burden, Reader in Music and Fellow in Opera Studies at New College. The performance was undertaken by New Chamber Opera. Other areas of promotion of music during the year included a special exhibition to commemorate performance in the Sheldonian Theatre by the Berlin Philharmonic conducted by Daniel Barenboim, and several collaborations with Oxford Philomusica.

The Taylor Institution Library presented an exhibition on ‘100 Years of Romance Linguistics in Oxford’, while an exhibition of materials from the Philip and Rosamund Davies US Elections Campaign Archive took place at the Vere Harmsworth Library in Michaelmas term 2009.

The Continuing Education Library organized book displays each term, including one in March that tied into the Universities’ Association for Lifelong Learning conference being held in the Department. Also included was a display of the travelling book boxes that were used in the past to move materials to various locations where non-University students were taught in the University’s pioneering outreach activities that began over a hundred years ago.

d. Publications

Seven books were published by the Bodleian Library during the year. Two of these accompanied exhibitions: Piet van Boxel and Sabine Arndt (eds.), Crossing Borders: Hebrew Manuscripts as a Meeting-place of Cultures; and Will Poole, John Aubrey and the Advancement of Learning. A third, Nicolas K. Kiessling (ed.), The Life of Anthony Wood in his own Words is a scholarly edition of one of the major sources for the history of Oxford, the Civil War in the area, and the scientific revolution of the seventeenth century.

3. Responding to our users

Although we may be best known for our curation of special and unique materials and historic buildings, our users are at the centre of what we do in the Bodleian Libraries. The major initiatives under way, described above, will realize significant service benefits to our users in the near and longer term, particularly related to access to information. We continue to use a variety of methods to collect information about our readers and to communicate and clarify their needs and expectations. We are investing heavily in modernizing our procedures and making our physical operations fit for purpose. While implementing technological improvements and building renovations, we continue to deliver excellent services, updating and upgrading them as needs are understood and expressed. Included throughout this section are examples of specific ways in which we have delivered these benefits to readers.

A. INNOVATION

Several key technological improvements were implemented or piloted during 2009-2010. The software and resources on the desktop were standardized across all of the Bodleian Libraries. The upgrade included improved security as well as providing enhanced and updated applications. This significant project made a difference on a daily basis to users who need to use the computer workstations located in each library.

New hardware was installed across all of the libraries in 2009-2010 for photocopying and scanning, using new multi-function devices. A pilot for a software-based approach for fees for this service was conducted in several locations, and final procedures and pricing were agreed with a roll-out planned for Michaelmas term 2010. A key benefit is that we shall be able to reduce prices for colour copying, add capabilities in many places that did not have colour printing or scanning before and provide readers with an up-to-date method of payment.

The Bodleian Libraries moved forward in creating a new generation of online library guides and pathfinders which build on the success of our earlier printed guides. These can be found at http://libguides.bodleian.ox.ac.uk and provide guidance on key resources by subject as well as introducing libraries, collections and services.

Readers benefited from the move online because we are now able to provide:

- greater currency (due to the ease of updating online materials)
- up-to-the-minute news, publications and events delivered by RSS feeds
- direct links to electronic books and journals and to real-time availability information for printed materials
- multimedia content including video tutorials and podcasts
- improved accessibility for readers with disabilities.

Over the summer, readers were involved in usability testing the new guides. Working with readers in this way was very positive, and led to improvements in the layout and online signposting of guides.

As well as benefiting readers, the online guides bring significant benefits to the Libraries’ staff and in particular make it much easier and quicker to update the guides and to share core information between guides. In addition, moving online has brought significant budgetary savings when compared with the high cost of large print runs.

Another example where librarians are applying new methods to presenting information and supporting the development of information skills is the creation of podcasts on using library services. Plans to create content that will be available at the point of need will be further developed in the coming months.

The current flagship IT development in the Bodleian is the replacement of our main Integrated Library System (ILS), and throughout 2009–2010 Bodleian staff worked hard to complete the contract negotiations with Ex Libris, the systems supplier identified in the previous year, and to develop a business case that would receive University support. This was done in Michaelmas term and the process of working with Ex Libris on the implementation began on schedule in January 2010. An ILS Steering Committee is responsible for the implementation, and staff across the collegiate University have been involved. The project is currently on schedule for completion of the main implementation phase by January 2011 with a further phase of training and data migration in advance of go-live in the Summer Vacation 2011.

Since SOLO was released in 2008, it has become the primary resource discovery service for the Oxford Libraries (http://solo.bodleian.ox.ac.uk). Of great value to our readers is its ability to integrate searches across different resources, e.g. OLIS, ORA, electronic journals and databases, and our Chinese and Japanese catalogues. During the year we continued to add more of Oxford’s catalogues and finding aids to SOLO, most recently the Refugee Studies Centre’s catalogue of grey literature.

Other methods of enriching the SOLO database were developed by the Libraries’ staff, and it is now possible to import tables of contents, summaries and annotations for many items held in Oxford. As well as presenting this additional information to users, this data can also be indexed to provide extra points of access to our bibliographic records.

B. SCIENCE AND MEDICINE

The Radcliffe Science Library undertook a programme to raise awareness about e-readers and associated technologies. The programme involved events, formal training, and lending of Sony and Amazon e-readers. The scheme was launched at ‘Digital Darwin’ day, which generated fifty expressions of interest in borrowing an e-reader and attracted high-profile academics, such as Richard Dawkins, who would normally access our services remotely.

‘Road Test an E-reader’ lunchtime sessions ran over three weeks at a specially designed stand in a prominent position in the Science Library entrance hall. Following the programme of events the e-readers were integrated with Science Library standard circulation procedures. All members of the University can borrow equipment and explore the technology both in and outside the Library.

The majority of feedback was gathered anonymously through an online questionnaire. Not all comments about the equipment itself were favourable but all respondents were happy to have the opportunity to engage with the technology.
The project was successful in setting up the Science Library as a centre for information exchange about these devices, their potential, and what others are doing with them. Over half the respondents had never read an e-book, so the scheme provided the first opportunity to explore the new technology and assess potential value.

The Science Library’s work with e-readers was recognized by its receiving an internal award from the Bodleian Libraries Awards Scheme for the Support of Teaching and Learning. The prize money will be re-invested in related events for the forthcoming academic year.

C. SOCIAL SCIENCES

A high ranking is crucial to the future of a business school and the Said Business School represented the University well with a continual and rapid move upwards (FT Global MBA rankings 2010). As with the Research Assessment Exercise, information about faculty publications and the ranking of the journals is crucial to the process, and the Said Business School Research Administrator asked the Library how she might find out who on the staff had published articles in the Financial Times list of forty ranked business journals. The Library was pleased to respond immediately using a database that had recently been set up by the new Librarian. The database, which currently contains over 6,500 entries, tracks all authors from all institutions (including SBS) who had published in this FT list of journals since March 2009.

The Department for Continuing Education lived up to its name this summer with the enrolment of a student of ninety-three years on one of its courses. Although physically frail and accompanied by his daughter to help him, his mind was keen and he was a very valuable member of the class. At the end of his library induction tour he said that he wished to research medieval Oxford for his assignment. A staff member instantly recalled that the Library holds an MSt Local History dissertation on this very topic. At the end of the week his daughter told us that her father had had a wonderful time, and said that the service he had received from the Library was exemplary and had far exceeded expectations.

The Continuing Education Library also developed its information skills training and support programme by launching a ‘Help Centre’ area on the library website to include links to database guides and tutorials; completing a new range of leaflets on basic skills such as ‘Interpreting your reading list’, and ‘Finding and using e-Journals’.

D. HUMANITIES

The Humanities libraries offer a range of services and collections in many buildings and locations around Oxford. Much of the coordinated effort this past year centred on the comprehensive planning for consolidated services to be delivered via the planned Radcliffe Observatory Quarter building. A number of user-group meetings were held in conjunction with the architect’s design meetings including representative groups of students.

Hosting many groups and visitors is part of the normal activity of the libraries and Jill Hughes, Assistant Librarian for German languages and literatures since 1970, organized an event for group of year-twelve students from state schools who visited the Taylorian. The group had a guided tour and ‘show and tell’ session with the senior tutor from Trinity College, Dr Valerie Worth, herself a modern languages graduate. The students enjoyed careful hands-on experience of incunabula and sixteenth-century French texts by Pierre de Ronsard.

The students were participating in a new, week-long, subject-focused summer school funded by the Helsingford Foundation, which aims to reach out to schools and colleges with little history of application to Oxford. The scheme, a successor to the Sutton Trust programme, had received recent publicity in the News of the World and other press. This year, it attracted over 3,600 applicants from around the country.

E. BODLEIAN READER SERVICES

Bodleian Reader Services carried on with a very busy year with non-stop foot traffic and several major moves of materials in reading rooms and stacks which affected where stock was located and where readers could use materials. Additionally, key staff were deeply involved in planning the services which will be implemented alongside the future estates projects already described above. A key challenge for the Bodleian Library is to manage the scale of activities and volume of people and books that need to move throughout the facility. Reader services staff were also key to the launch of the new reader PCs and the photocopying and scanning service described above.

F. SPECIAL COLLECTIONS

During the year 2009–2010 Special Collections offered a range of innovations in response to user demands. Most visible was the decision to allow hand-held digital photography by users in Special Collections Reading Rooms, which has been very well received. Special Collections staff continued to pursue joint projects with academic users both within the University—such as creating an XML dataset based on the card catalogue of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century correspondence (part of the ‘Cultures of Knowledge’ project)—and in developing an online version of the major reference work known as ‘Medieval Libraries of Great Britain’. Special Collections has also offered an expanded series of the highly successful Masterclasses to a range of academic departments across the University. Events during the year included a Curators’ round table on broadsides coupled with a symposium on the history of broadsides; the seminar series on the ‘History of the Book 1450–1830’ at All Souls College; a special lecture by Peter Stallybrass (University of Pennsylvania), on ‘What is a Book? Shakespeare Unbound, and Bound’, and a symposium on Provenance’ at Magdalen and Merton colleges.

The Bodleian Libraries have been working with Oxford University Computing Services and the Careers Service to develop subject-focused ‘Skills Toolkits’ for research students. These build on the success of the earlier ‘All-subjects Toolkits’ which were very popular with research students and which received an Oxford Teaching Award in December 2009. The ‘Toolkits’ are workshops in which students complete short practical tasks designed to introduce them to key resources, skills and services for research. They benefit students by providing opportunities for them to experience a wide range of key resources and skills in a single session and by introducing them to Library and IT staff. The first subject-focused toolkit, for the Medical Sciences Doctoral Training Centre, took place in October 2009 and was very well received. Toolkits for a further ten subjects will take place in Michaelmas 2010 with further roll-out in 2011.

One of the most significant service improvements implemented across the Social Sciences group was the integration of the Refugee Studies Centre Library into the Social Science Library. Longer opening hours and access to a wider social science collection has been appreciated by refugee and migration studies researchers. As part of the move, over 28,000 bibliographic records for the grey literature collection on forced migration were successfully transferred to SOLO with the able assistance of SERS staff. Not surprisingly, use of the grey literature documents has increased and around 100 documents are being fetched for consultation each month.
4. Content and service provision

A. COLLECTION BUILDING

During the year 2009-2010 the Bodleian acquired several major archives, including the Bruce Chatwin Papers, the archive of the Banbury-based printers Cheney and Sons (from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries), and the remaining portion of the archive of the poet Walter de la Mare. The archive of the Gehenna Press of Leonard Baskin was acquired by the Library partly as a purchase and partly through donation. Philip Pullman kindly presented the manuscript of Lyra’s Oxford following his Masterclass in April 2010.

The Latin American Centre Subject Consultant was delighted to receive a valuable collection of nineteenth-century Colombian newspapers, donated to the Bodleian Library by Dr Alvaro Holguin, grandson of Carolos Holguin, President of Colombia 1888-1892. The newspapers formed part of the President’s private collection. This was a significant donation as collections of Colombian newspapers from this period come onto the market infrequently and are rarely found in European libraries. Newspapers were central to the political and cultural life of the time, because Colombia was not yet able to sustain a major book publishing industry. Dr Eduardo Posada Carbo, Lecturer in Politics, explained that ‘newspapers were often the most important outlets for authors—certainly for those writing about politics. Indeed, some important nineteenth-century books were published first as series of newspaper articles, which were then later collected in book form.’

The creation of electronic Set Texts for History students benefited History undergraduates and History course conveners. A team of two Bodleian History Faculty Library staff, led by Isabel Holowaty (History Librarian), was primarily responsible for the scanning and uploading of more than 10,000 pages onto the Library’s Weblearn site. Staff selected and sourced appropriate material, checked for copyright compliance, scanned the pages, edited the scans, added descriptive data and advertised available course packs via the blog and twitter.

A rapidly changing research environment means that academic researchers are employing new models for publishing and disseminating their research. Research funding agencies require open access to research outputs, and technological developments offer innovative ways to disseminate and share research. As part of their research support, Bodleian Libraries staff are developing services and activities to assist and inform researchers about these new developments. In addition to the ongoing provision of the Oxford University Research Archive (ORA, http://ora.ouls.ox.ac.uk), a scholarly communications blog was established (http://www.osxivcholcomms.blogspot.com), and innovative web technologies were implemented to increase research visibility and dissemination.

The Bodleian Libraries Scholarly Communications Group was convened in June 2010 to monitor and engage with scholarly communications developments and to advise library staff on matters such as sharing, publishing, and disseminating scholarly outputs. ORA falls under its remit. The group arranges events in the Bodleian Libraries/ORA scholarly communications series. Three events were held during year: two lectures (by John Willinsky (Stanford) and Martin Richardson (OUP)) and a seminar (Dissemination of research: developments at Oxford, with speakers Paul Jeffreys (Director of IT), Dr Anne Bowtell (Medical Sciences Division Web Manager) and Sally Rumsey (ORA Manager)). Bodleian Libraries staff were actively involved with staff in other departments such as OUCS and Research Services, participating in projects and discussions about research dissemination, including research data management, and the storage and dissemination of Oxford research publications.

During the year the long-awaited first consultation document on the extension of legal deposit to non-print publications was issued by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. The Secretary of State was given powers to make regulations governing the deposit of non-print publications by the Legal Deposit Libraries Act of 2003, and the consultation proposed how this should be done. If the regulations are passed by Parliament (and this is looking likely for 2011), the legal deposit libraries as a whole will use the facilities of the British Library to provide access to electronic legal deposit materials. The Libraries submitted a response to the consultation.

As reported last year, the Agency for the Legal Deposit Libraries, which claims legal deposit materials from publishers on behalf of Cambridge, Oxford, Trinity College Dublin and the national libraries of Scotland and Wales, moved to a new location in March 2009 and the number of items received dropped at this time and remained low during the year. However, there was a slight increase in receipts when measured against 2008-2009, and the appointment of a Systems Librarian at the Agency has brought some improvements to the service the Agency provides, in particular for claiming monographs. Serials claiming is currently an area of focus for the Agency.

The Legal Deposit Libraries Committee Collection Development Sub-group has agreed a target reduction of ten per cent, planned as a collaborative reduction in print intake based on the presumption that the British Library will continue to take everything. A ten per cent reduction for this year was the result of the unplanned fall-off in receipts from Agency following its relocation.

B. PROTECTING THE COLLECTIONS

The transfer of the high-risk collections to the new temporary premises in the Radcliffe Science Library was managed by a joint team of staff from Conservation, Special Collections and Research and Learning Services. The transfer was made possible following the emptying of the Science Library basement stack of books, and the upgrading of environmental conditions and fire-safety systems.

As part of the planning for the new Book Depository in Swindon a strategy for the safe, secure and timely retrieval of items to be delivered to reading rooms in Oxford was under development during the year, a strategy commensurate with the great care taken of the material in the new high-standard storage conditions. While we are of course concerned with the preservation of all of our collections, of special interest is the rare, sometimes unique and sometimes extremely vulnerable material in our Special Collections. During the last year there has been extensive investment in giving the most vulnerable material its own individual enclosures (boxes) made of conservation-grade material which will give immediate protection for current transport needs, but will also provide continuing protection for centuries to come. On top of this individual protection for items, the transport totes (plastic boxes) to be used will be padded with conservation-grade soft material to prevent movement within the totes during transport.

Much was achieved in the last twelve months to raise the profile and awareness of conservation in the Libraries. Of particular note was a new training initiative, ‘Handling Library Materials’, in which conservation staff gave practical advice to library staff on the best ways of moving, stacking and generally preserving collections during use. While this was mainly aimed at Special Collections material there was also a regularly held course on how library staff can carry out 'safe' repairs on lending stock and other highly used material where intervention by a trained conservator is not necessary.

Conservation staff also made major contributions to encouraging an ethos of care by contributing an awareness session at the Bodleian Libraries Staff Conference, by being strongly represented in the planning of the Weston Library and Book Storage Facility, and by undertaking emergency planning training to all library staff. The conservators have also provided a very visible and practical conservation presence during the moves to and operation of the Radcliffe Science Library stack and reading rooms and will continue to do so in the many other changes in the Libraries.

The commissioning of the Bodleian Libraries’ Digital Asset Management System (DAMS) has also highlighted the need to develop a range of policies and procedures to support the robust digital preservation strategy that we envisage. We sought advice from several internationally recognized experts in the field of digital preservation and, in particular, were able to build upon the Bodleian’s close relationship with the UK’s Digital Preservation Coalition (Associate Director, Richard Ovenden, was recently elected as Chair of the DPC Board). A new internal committee was established to provide oversight of the development of the DAMS and the associated digital preservation policies, and to ensure that these integrate effectively with the Bodleian Libraries’ wider technical infrastructure.

During the course of the year, the DAMS infrastructure layer was developed to the point of enabling major projects to move forward. The dual site and resilient link were established, additional hardware acquired and installed, and major software developed. Further enhancement and testing will take place with the arrival of additional staffing support. The project will secure the long-term preservation and accessibility of our digital collections.

C. COLLECTION MANAGEMENT

The CroBar (Copyright Receipt Office Barcoding) workflow for the processing of legal deposit material went live in November 2009. This workflow automates the receipt, barcoding and streaming of legal deposit monographs received in the Copyright Receipt Office. Almost all the items received from the Agency for the Legal Deposit Libraries are now represented by a catalogue record as soon as they arrive in the Bodleian, and a complete inventory of each weekly delivery is now possible.

The data that underpin the CroBar process are also being leveraged to offer a new service to subject librarians and readers. At the end of the year in review the Virtual Book Display (VBD) of academic legal deposit and material purchased by the Bodleian went live on SOLO, the Bodleian Libraries’ resource discovery tool. The VBD replaced the weekly physical display of this material which allowed subject specialists to select material for their reading rooms and libraries, and anticipated the move of the CRO to Osney in September 2010.

The VBD uses many of the standard features of the Primo software that underlies SOLO to enable subject librarians to find out more about recently received books. Enrichment features such as the ability to link out to tables of contents, summaries, sample pages and reviews can be used. Although the VBD was developed for the subject librarians, anyone who has access to SOLO can see this weekly list of new books received.

In 2009 the Bodleian took the momentous decision to barcode the entire stock prior placing it into the new Book Storage Facility. The project is moving ahead rapidly and has been aided by cataloguing staff who worked on reports of incomplete holdings information to ensure every item had a record in the catalogue. Their staying ahead of the barcoding staff as they move through the stack greatly speeded up the latter’s progress. Cataloguing staff also dealt with uncatalogued and wrongly catalogued books identified by project staff.

The slightly weaker Euro over the last financial year meant that we were able to maintain our spending power for foreign materials at a level similar to previous years for monograph acquisitions.

Much work was done with the book supplier Dawson on implementing electronic ordering and invoicing for books, and this will go live in the new academic year. Lessons learned and problems solved from the testing process over the last year will aid implementation of this facility in the new library system in the summer of 2011. The benefit for readers will be that books will be ordered much more quickly than with the current processes.

We continued, across the Bodleian Libraries, to encourage shelf-ready participation, whereby booksellers supply the Libraries with books with shelf numbers and other information already added. This enables books to get to the shelves and be available to readers faster. During the year Chinese Studies, Oriental Institute, Rhodes House, the Staff Library and Sackler participated in the scheme.

In addition to the routine processing of legal deposit and purchasing new materials for Maps and Music, significant progress was made in processing Special Collections acquisitions. Work on the Abinger Collection was completed in an externally funded project lasting three years, and significant progress was made on the first two tranches of the Alan Bennett papers. Through the future Arch project (funded by the Mellon Foundation), excellent progress was made in processing both paper and electronic materials in the papers of Edmund Dell, Baroness Nicholson of Winterborne (thanks to a grant from the European Parliament), Lord Howe of Aberavon, and the Clutag Press. The processing of the archive of the Gehenna Press was begun, and further additions were made to the Ryecote Papers cataloguing project, including the completion of the first phase of the Harcourt Papers (funded by the Marc Fitch Fund). Thanks to funding from the Strachey Trust, the correspondence between Philip Larkin and Monica Jones was catalogued, and further progress was made in the cataloguing of the Latin medieval manuscripts from German-speaking lands (funded by the Fritz Thyssen Stiftung).

The Medieval Psalters Project was almost concluded (funded by a private donor). In Rare Books the second phase of cataloguing the Opie Collection was completed, adding 1,020 items to the catalogue, in addition to the completion of cataloguing 509 recent acquisitions. Significant support was provided to All Souls, the Queen’s College, Christ Church, St John’s, Merton, Exeter and Harris Manchester colleges by Rare Books staff for the Early Printed Books Project managed by the Section. Staff on the Project catalogued a total of 5,143 new bibliographic items and added 6,799 pieces.

Work was undertaken and completed to transcribe the printed catalogue of the Colonial Office Confidential Prints, consisting of approximately 500 documents, dating from the 1840s to 1916, in the same way as the Foreign Office Confidential Prints catalogue, to enable cross searching over dates, country and subject and to act as an inventory giving a detailed description the contents (http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/official_papers/colonial-office-confidential-prints).

5. Staff talent

A. HUMAN RESOURCES AND STAFF DEVELOPMENT

During the year the Human Resources team focused on several initiatives, in particular the full launch of the new Annual Review scheme and the launch of a new Employee Assistance Programme for all staff. A successful staff conference, opened by the Vice-Chancellor, was held on ‘Empowering Staff to Support the Academic Enterprise’.

Work proceeded on skills required to deliver the strategic plan, and on mapping and managing career paths in the Libraries. Support for staff undertaking CILIP Charterhip, for professional qualification in library and information skills, was analysed and refined. Other initiatives included supporting several teams through change programmes, enabling the Libraries to adjust their structures to deliver new or refined services in the same or new locations.

During the period of transition when the Libraries’ collections are being moved it will be particularly important for all staff to be able to help readers to find online texts as alternatives to print. With this in mind, the Libraries ran a series of staff workshops aimed at increasing staff skills in the use of online resources. The workshops emphasised the importance of providing excellence in customer service by helping readers to find available copies of texts whether these are online, in print in the local library or in print in another library in Oxford.

Staff were supported to attend forty-nine conferences and courses during the year, on subjects as diverse as International Law Librarianship and Digital Humanities.

B. PUBLICATIONS

The following staff publications were recorded in the year (with links to the Oxford University Research Archive where relevant):

Heaney, M. (2010), ‘Copyright’s balancing act and the role of the library’, Copyright in the Digital Age: still the bedrock of creativity and the creative industries (http://copyright-debate.co.uk/), http://ora.ox.ox.ac.uk/objects/uuid:e4622e00-2841-4e45-89bc-64fd892e2e58.

Honey, A. and A. Velios (2009), ‘The repair and re-use of Byzantine wooden bookboards in the manuscript collection of the monastery of St Catherine, Sinai’, Holding It All Together: Ancient & Modern Approaches to Joining, Repair and Consolidation (London: Archetype in association with the British Museum), 68-77.

C. STAFF CHANGES

Laurence Benson resigned as Head of Administration and Finance in September 2009. Interim arrangements were put in place during the year, and moves to appoint his successor were under way at its close.

Alice Keller, Assistant Director, Collections and Resource Description, also resigned in September 2009 after six very active and successful years. Arriving from the Eidgenössische Technische Hochschule in Zürich to take up the post of Head of Collection Management in 2003, in her time at the Bodleian she transformed our way of working, introducing new methods of budgetary control, unifying disparate practices, and after her promotion to the Assistant Directorship, bringing together acquisitions and cataloguing units. She was succeeded from the beginning of 2010 by Catriona Cannon, coming to us from King’s College, London, where she was Head of Information Resources.

In the Collections and Resource Description Department, Rosemary Pyke retired after thirty-seven years of service and Elizabeth Moriarty after twenty-five, while Gill King retired from the Radcliffe Science Library after nearly thirty-five years. Tom Stableford, a mainstay of the Bodleian and then the Taylor-Bodleian Slavonic Library, retired after twenty-two years.

Sarah Henderson took up the new post of Head of Communications in November 2009 and Virginia Lladó-Buisán joined as Head of Book and Paper Conservation in January 2010. Bruce Wainwright joined as Book Moves Manager at the same time.

6. Leadership

While configuring their academic strategy to respond to the situation following the city council’s rejection of the plans for a repository at Osney, the Libraries were simultaneously developing the overall strategic plan to take us through to 2015. The plan focused on quality of service, communication, collection building and preservation, staff development, leadership and collaboration. At the beginning of the year these overall aims were developed into a series of specific goals, whose outcomes are reflected in the pages of this report.

Much effort was devoted to management of the Libraries’ complex finances and to ensuring that staff developed proficiency in project management, creating business plans, and assessing risk. The Libraries continued to track the budget closely and to prepare for the transition to the JRAM (the resources allocation system determining the financial relation between University and colleges) and the application of the 1–2–3 library charges (a new University system for funding library services), leading them to prepare for 2010–2011 as the first balanced budget in a decade.

The Libraries benefited from a number of research and project grants during the year. The projects ‘Mapping Crime: Beyond the John Johnson Collection’ and ‘Digging into the Enlightenment’ attracted £114,000 in funding from JISC. The Libraries also participated in the AHRC-funded project ‘Digital Image Archive of Medieval Music’ led by the Faculty of Music, and the ‘Cultures of Knowledge’ and ‘Medieval Libraries’ projects, funded by the Mellon Foundation and led by the Faculty of History. The Gough Map was the focus of the ‘Linguistic Geographies’ project funded by AHRC and led by Queen’s University, Belfast, with significant input from Bodleian staff.

Almost £6.6 million was received or pledged in donations from forty-seven different donors during the year. Dr Leonard S. Polonsky generously pledged to support the number of digital initiatives and the provision of digitization facilities in the refurbished New Bodleian, while George and Charles David endowed its penthouse reading room in honour of their father, a 1908 Rhodes Scholar, medieval historian, and librarian.

Alice G. Strauss was better known to generations of scholars as Georgina Warrillow, the mainstay of Bodleian reference services at the Main Enquiry Desk. In her will she left over £155,000 to the Bodleian, which was received in 2008, but also the proceeds from the sale of her house; these finally came to us in April 2010, as an unrestricted gift of over £425,000. This was added to the newly established Bodleian Bequests Fund. The Lisbet Rausing Charitable Fund also made a generous unrestricted donation in support of the Libraries.

Numerous donors supported the endowment of the Music Curatorship named for Alfred Brendel, including the Dunard Fund, Richard L. Brown, and Valerie Flint.

We are very grateful that Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer and Baker & Mackenzie have continued their support for the Bodleian Law Library in IT provision and collection building respectively.

In the field of Oriental Studies the JJC Foundation and Nicholas J. Coulson provided substantial support for Sanskrit and pre-modern Chinese cataloguing respectively.

The Fritz Thyssen Foundation made an award of £80,000 for the cataloguing of an important group of medieval manuscripts from Germany including volumes from the library of the Cathedral of St Klyian in Würzburg. The Bodleian’s Würzburg manuscripts contain some great treasures, including Oxford’s most important biblical manuscript, the Acts of the Apostles’ in Latin and Greek, believed to have been produced in Sardinia in the late-sixth or early-seventh century. The collection also includes many manuscripts which are much less studied.

Modern archives were supported by the Tolkien Trust and by the Rothschild Foundation, which enabled work to be done on the Roy Jenkins archive. The Museums Libraries and Archives Council helped in the acquisition of the Erismena manuscript.

One of the more unusual acts of generosity came from the author P.D. James. After nearly fifty years writing detective novels, her Talking about Detective Fiction is an engaging ‘personal history’ of the genre of detective fiction, peppered with examples from the author’s own writing experience. She has generously pledged all the royalties from the hardback edition of the book for the benefit of the Bodleian, in support of the library’s activities. The book was published by the Bodleian in October 2009.

7. Collaboration

The Bodleian Libraries joined the UK Research Reserve (UKRR) at the end of 2009. This national initiative provides facilities for sharing titles and a mechanism to deduplicate journal titles. The Plant Sciences and Zoology collections were analysed and some materials contributed to the UKRR as they moved to the Radcliffe Science Library.

The Bodleian’s contribution in its exhibition programme to displays in other institutions was increased during the year. A collaboration with the Folger Shakespeare Library was concluded through the award of an NEH grant to bring the Bodleian’s summer 2011 exhibition to Washington DC (and a reduced version to the Ransom Center at the University of Texas at Austin). The Bodleian’s Winter 2010–2011 exhibition will travel to the Wordsworth Trust’s exhibition space at Dove Cottage, and to the New York Public Library, and agreement was also reached with the State Library of Victoria, Melbourne, for a travelling major exhibition on Persian Romance. Further planning was devoted to taking the Bodleian exhibitions ‘Medieval Views of the Cosmos’ and ‘Crossing Borders’ to other venues. Planning for the opening exhibition for the Weston Library continued, with plans for a travelling version being also being considered.

Whenever possible, the Bodleian Libraries seek to coordinate their digitization efforts with those of other world-class institutions and organizations. For example, we have been working with colleagues at the Wellcome Trust to ensure that materials digitized during our collaboration with Google are not captured for a second time as part of the Wellcome's own plans to digitize its library holdings. We have also set up a working party with the Wellcome Trust, British Library, JISC and others, to examine the advantages, challenges, and opportunities that might arise were we all to adopt the JPEG2000 file format for our digital image master files.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 11 March.

(a) Health and Safety Management Committee

Explanatory Note
The Review of the Leadership of Health and Safety (as published in the Gazette on 23 September 2010 (Supplement (2) to no. 4927)) recommended that an elected member of Council be appointed as an additional member of the Health and Safety Management Committee, in addition to the Pro-Vice-Chancellor already serving on the Committee as an appointee of Council. Council has agreed that the Committee should be strengthened by the appointment of a second member of Council but has left it open to Council to appoint from among its members, after taking into account the overall balance of the committee’s membership. Council has also added a membership slot for one of the Proctors and the Assessor to provide an independent perspective. The opportunity is also taken to permit each Head of Division to nominate a representative to attend in his or her stead.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), delete existing regulation 3.61, concerning the membership of the Health and Safety Management Committee, and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

3.61. The Health and Safety Management Committee shall consist of:

(1) a member of Congregation appointed by the Vice-Chancellor as chairman of the committee;

(2) one of the Proctors and the Assessor as may be agreed between them;

(3) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor with responsibility for Academic Services and University Collections;

(4)–(6) the heads of each of the divisions or his or her nominee;

(7)–(11) the Directors of each of the Recognized Independent Centres; and

(12)–(23) those University members serving on the Governing Body of each of the Recognized Independent Centres.

(b) Recognized Independent Centres

Explanatory Note
These changes amend the membership and terms of reference of the Joint Committee for the Co-ordination of the Recognized Independent Centres (JCRIC).

It is proposed that: (i) the number of members appointed to JCRIC by the General Purposes Committee be increased from one to three; (ii) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Development and External Affairs) be an ex officio member of the JCRIC; (iii) the three members appointed by the General Purposes Committee to the JCRIC, together with the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Development and External Affairs) and the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education) review compliance with the terms of the agreement between the University and each Recognized Independent Centre; and (iv) the Directors of the Recognized Independent Centres become members of the committee.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 2 of 2004 concerning other University bodies (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4702, 30 June 2004, p. 1237), delete existing Part 12 and substitute:

Part 12: Joint Committee for the Recognized Independent Centres

12.1. The Joint Committee for the Recognized Independent Centres shall consist of:

(1)–(3) three members appointed by the General Purposes Committee, none of whom shall have any prior interest in or involvement with the Centres, of whom at least two shall be members of Council, and one of whom shall be appointed to act as chairman by the General Purposes Committee;

(4) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Development and External Affairs);

(5) the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education);

(6) one of the Proctors or the Assessor as may be agreed between them;

(7)–(11) the Directors of each of the Recognized Independent Centres; and (12)–(23) those University members serving on the Governing Body of each of the Recognized Independent Centres.

Explanatory Note

Members appointed under regulation 12.1(1)–(3) shall be appointed for a period of three years, and shall be eligible for reappointment.

12.3. Members appointed under regulation 12.1(12)–(23) shall be appointed for a period of two years, renewable for one further and final term of two years.

12.4. The committee shall have powers to co-opt up to two additional members for periods of two years, renewable for one further and final period of two years.

12.5. The committee shall act to ensure consistency in the relationships with, and the application of University policies towards, the Recognized Independent Centres.

12.6. The committee shall conduct regular reviews of the activities of each Centre in so far as they relate to the University and report upon them to Council. Each Centre shall be reviewed at least once in every five years.

12.7. A sub-group of the committee, consisting of members appointed under regulation 12.1(1)–(5), shall:

(1) meet separately from the full committee, and review the Centres’ compliance with the terms of the Agreement between the University and each Recognized Independent Centre;

(2) keep under review the University’s relationships with the Centres under the principles and protocol agreed by Council from time to time;

(3) report to Council accordingly.

(c) Newton Abraham Visiting Professorship

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Board of Electors to the Newton Abraham Visiting Professorship with the agreement of the Trustees of the E.P. Abraham Research Fund, enable the... electors to apply any surplus income to uses apart from expenses connected with annual visiting professorships for the furtherance of research in the medical, biological, and chemical sciences, with the prior agreement of the Trustees of the E.P. Abraham Research Fund. The opportunity has also been taken to amend outdated references.

Text of Regulations

1 In Section III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002 (Statutes, 2000, p. 512, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette Vol. 132, p. 1461), in §322 delete existing regulation 2 and substitute (new text underlined):

‘2. The professor shall be elected by a board of electors consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor;
(2) two persons appointed by Council, one of whom shall be external;
(3)–(6) two persons appointed each by the Medical Sciences Division and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division;
(7), (8) two persons appointed by the Governing Body of Lincoln College.

Council shall have power to alter the composition of this electoral board by regulation, provided that no alteration in the representation of Lincoln College shall be made without the consent of that college.’

2 Ibid., delete existing regulation 6 and substitute (new text underlined):

‘6. The income from the endowment remaining after the stipend of the professor and the costs of administration have been met shall be applied by the electors at their discretion towards:

(1) the research expenses of the professor, including the costs of secretarial and technical assistance, the amount required for these purposes being fixed in consultation with the head of the department in which the professor is to work;
(2) the travelling, accommodation, and other expenses of the professor;
(3) other uses agreed with the Trustees for the time being of the E.P. Abraham Research Fund for the furtherance of research in the medical, biological, and chemical sciences, if at any time the electors consider that the income from the endowment is more than sufficient to provide for (1) and (2) above.’

3 Ibid., delete regulation 9 and in regulation 8 delete ‘cl.’ and substitute ‘regulations’.

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The Planning And Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 11 March.

Professor of Environmental Science

Explanatory Note

The following change amends the title of the Professorship of Environmental Science to the Professorship of Geosystem Sciences to reflect the nature of the work of the Professor to be undertaken in the School of Geography and the Environment.

Text of Regulations

1 In SCHEDULE A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, delete ‘Professor of Environmental Science’ and after ‘Savilian Professor of Geometry’ insert:

‘Professor of Geosystem Sciences’.

2 In Section III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 432, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), delete existing §92, insert new §108 below (new text underlined, deleted text struck through) and renumber existing §§93–108 as §§92–107.

§108. Professor of Geosystem Environmental Sciences

1. The Professor of Geosystem Environmental Sciences shall undertake research in Geosystem Environmental Sciences and shall lecture and give instruction in that subject. Geosystem Sciences is taken to mean those areas of geography and physical science concerned with the quantitative analysis of how the earth’s surface reservoirs (the land, oceans, cryosphere and atmosphere) respond to change, together with the predictable impacts of these changes upon society.

2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in paragraph (2) below is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;
(2) the head of Linacre College, the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council, under any regulation in that behalf, or, if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college;
(3) a person appointed by the governing body of Linacre College, the college specified in paragraph (2) above;
(4), (5) two persons appointed by Council;
(6)–(9) four persons appointed by the Life and Environmental Sciences Board.

(7)–(9) three persons elected by the School of Geography and the Environment.

3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.’

Statute approved by Her Majesty in Council

Mr Vice-Chancellor has received a communication from the Clerk of Her Majesty’s Privy Council, stating that on 9 February 2011 Her Majesty was pleased to approve the Statute concerning the Michael Davys Professorship of Neuroscience, amending the Schedule to the Statutes, approved by Congregation on 1 June 2010 (Gazette, Vol. 140, p. 1123; Vol. 141, p. 4, 23 September 2010).

Safe cycling seminar

12.45-1.45 p.m., 1 March, Sheldonian Theatre. Presented by Oxford cyclists and road traffic experts. Learn how to efficiently negotiate traffic, manage the pedestrian/tourist threat, work around other cyclists and get where you want faster. The first 250 attendees presenting their University or college photo ID card at the end of the seminar will receive the Institute of Advanced Motorists essential guide How to be a better cyclist.

CHAT TO A LORRY DRIVER AND SIT IN A CAB

8 a.m. - 5 p.m., 1 March, Radcliffe Square. Cyclists are invited to enter the cab of an LGV, see what visibility is like from the inside and learn about potential hazards.

Changes to employer National Insurance contribution rates from 6 April 2011 affecting inventors of/ contributors to University intellectual property

In the June 2010 emergency budget, the Treasury confirmed that the rate at which Employee’s and Employer’s National Insurance contributions are calculated will go up by one per cent over the current year, subject to the relevant thresholds. Table 1 summarises the changes.

Table 1

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Employee (Class 1 primary)</th>
<th>Earnings per week</th>
<th>April 2010-11</th>
<th>April 2011-12</th>
</tr>

<td>13.8%</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

While these changes will affect the majority of us as employees, a further indirect consequence of the increase in Employer’s NIC rate is that the distribution of Intellectual Property (IP) income to individuals involved in its creation will slightly change. Table 2 illustrates the current policy on the allocation of income from IP received by the University, as established by Council Regulations 7 of...
2002 (Regulations for the Administration of the University's Intellectual Property Policy) and subsequent amendments. Also quoted is the reason behind the need for a General Revenue share up to £50,000.

</table>

The percentage asterisked above is intended to put the University in funds to pay the employer’s National Insurance Contributions(s), but otherwise to leave the General Revenue Account out of the allocation of the band in question: the percentage shall be adjusted to match this intention, as and when the rates of National Insurance Contribution vary.

The increase by one per cent of the share of income transferable to the General Revenue account will have the effect of reducing the overall percentage of income available for distribution to researchers by one per cent.

This notice is intended to give advance warning on the impact of these changes to those of you who are involved in the creation of IP at the University.

Further information on royalties and their distribution can be found on the tax pages of the Finance Division website or by contacting royalties@admin.ox.ac.uk.

*These measures are part of a wider package which, relative to previous plans, reduces the burden of taxation on labour in a way which benefits low earners. The package achieves this by increasing thresholds rather than cancelling the planned rate rises (from www.hmrc.gov.uk/budget-updates/nsc-bill.htm).

Elections

Congregation

10 March

Contested Election

Curators of the Sheldonian Theatre

Vacancy: One

Current/retiring member: To hold office until 2011

One member of Congregation elected by Congregation.

Nominations received

The following nominations have been received:

Chris Ballinger, MA MSc DPhil Oxf, Social Sciences Division

Nominated by:

- F.A. Cairncross, Exeter
- K.L. Blackmon, Merton, Faculty of Management
- L.D. Cluver, Wolfson, Department of Social Policy and Social Work
- N. Bowles, St Anne’s, Faculty of Social Studies

Candidate statement: I have been using the Sheldonian for its full range of activities (University ceremonies, Congregation debates, lectures, conferences, concerts, and functions), both as an attendee and an organiser, for fourteen years. Most recently, in addition to enjoying concerts and recitals in the Sheldonian, I assist with 2-4 degree ceremonies each year. Having used the Sheldonian in these ways for some considerable time, I am now offering myself to be involved with helping the Sheldonian itself. By joining the committee of Curators, I have gained some experience of ensuring the good working of institutions through my membership of committees, including the appointment of good staff, the support and challenge of these staff, and the inspection of tight budgets. I have also gained a broad appreciation of many different aspects of the life of the Collegiate university, which I would bring to the role.

D.P. Hyland, BMus Royal College of Music, Medical Sciences Division

Nominated by:

- E.F. Clarke, Wadham, Faculty of Music
- J.S.H. Taylor, Pembroke, Faculty of Physiological Sciences
- D.A. Terrar, New College, Faculty of Physiological Sciences
- R.J. Wilkins, St Edmund Hall, Faculty of Physiological Sciences

Candidate statement: I have worked in Oxford since 2000, initially at the Bodleian Library and then, after 2003, within the Humanities Division. I have served as departmental administrator for the faculties of Theology and Music, in which latter role I had charge of the Music Faculty’s 1930s premises on St Aldate’s (also housing the Bate Collection of Musical Instruments) and oversight of the hire and use during term-time of the 18th-century Holywell Music Room, under agreement with Wadham College. I am currently responsible for the running of the Medical Sciences Teaching Centre in the South Parks Road area, coupled with responsibility for the academic administration of all pre-clinical courses and management of the faculty offices. I have practical experience of managing a variety of buildings, and good working relationships with relevant staff in the University Estates Directorate. I would be happy to represent Congregation as a member of the Curators of the Sheldonian Theatre.

S.J. Payne, MEng DPhil Oxf, Fellow of Keble, Faculty of Engineering Science

Nominated by:

- M.A. Chappell, Faculty of Engineering Science
- R.A. Saunders, Faculty of History
- P.H. Taylor, Keble, Faculty of Engineering Science
- S.R. Whalley, Keble, Faculty of Music

Candidate statement: What skills are required of someone wishing to become a Curator of the Sheldonian Theatre? It seems to me that what is needed is an appreciation of what the Sheldonian is used for, how it is maintained and cared for, and how its future can be secured through careful long-term management.

I came to Oxford in 1993 as an undergraduate at Trinity, graduated (twice) in 1997 (MEng) and 2001 (DPhil), and after short visits to a number of other colleges, have been a University Lecturer in Engineering Science and a Tutorial Fellow of Keble for the last five years.

Over this time I have learnt about how the building is used at matriculations and graduations (as my college’s Dean of Degrees for three years) and for concerts (as a professionally qualified organist playing the Sheldonian organ). I have gained an understanding of its structure and function are interlinked and how inventive was the architecture in its day (through the work of one of my nominators, who has built a model of the roof). In addition, through sitting on numerous college committees and my Parish Church Council, I have started to understand how good governance and management underpin every successful organisation.

I hope that these skills would enable me to act in the best interests of the University through being a Curator of the Sheldonian Theatre. If you think that I am the most suitable candidate, then I would ask you to vote for me.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 10 February 2011.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 22 February. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 10 March 2011.

For further information on the Board, please contact the Secretary, Ms L. Hofen (lisa.hofen@admin.ox.ac.uk, tel. Oxford (2)70129).

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee: changes in regulations

Regulations on Financial Matters
With effect from 1 September 2011

1. In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 3100, l. 37, after ‘in part:’ insert:
   ‘For the purposes of determining the appropriate fee level, the student will usually be deemed to have commenced the programme of study in the term to which their admission has been antedated.’

2. Ibid., delete from p. 1102, l. 11 to p. 1114, l. 24 and substitute:
   ‘4. (i) For 2011–12 composition fees payable under cl. 1 above shall be of the following amounts, and those payable under cl. 2 and 6 shall be at the following annual rates:*

   (a) for members of the University (other than part-time students) entitled, in accordance with the Special Appendix to this subsection, to be charged fees at the appropriate ‘home’ rate the fee shall be £3,375 for those who commenced the programme of study on or after 1 September 2006 and £1,345 for those who commenced the programme of study before 1 September 2006, except that for those working for an honour school requiring the study of one or more languages for an academic year outside Oxford, or for Law with Law Studies in Europe, and where the period of full-time study in Oxford is not more than ten weeks in total in the year, the fee, during that year, shall be £1,680, unless they started the programme of study before 1 September 2006 in which case the fee shall be £665, and except that those who commenced the programme of study on or after 1 September 2009 and where that programme of study leads to a qualification that is of an equivalent or lower level to one the student has already been awarded shall pay fees at the appropriate ‘island’ rate as described in (g) below unless the programme of study has been designated a strategically important and vulnerable subject or is otherwise exempt from having a higher fee charged, as determined by Council’s Planning and Resource Allocation Committee from time to time;

   (b) for members of the University working for the degree of BTh or for the Diploma in Theology, and who commenced the programme of study on or after 1 September 2006 but before 1 September 2008, the ‘home’ fee rate shall be £1,680;

   * The fee payable each term will be one-third of the specified figure.

(c) for members of the University working for the degree of BTh or for the Diploma in Theology, and who commenced the programme of study on or after 1 September 2008 but before 1 September 2009, the ‘home’ fee rate shall be £2,150;

(d) for members of the University working for the degree of BTh or for the Diploma in Theology, and who commenced the programme of study on or after 1 September 2009, the ‘home’ fee rate shall be £3,375;

(e) for members of the University working for the Certificate in Theological and Pastoral Studies or for the Certificate in Theology who commenced the programme of study on or after 1 September 2010, the ‘home’ rate shall be £3,375 and the ‘overseas’ rate shall be £12,700;

(f) for members of the University entitled, in accordance with the Special Appendix to this subsection, to be charged fees at the appropriate ‘home’ rate and liable to pay a composition fee under cl. 6 above, the rate specified in (a) above;

(g) for Visiting Students, fees shall be payable at 50% of the ‘overseas’ undergraduate fee rate specified for the relevant subject area in the Schedule below, in cases where the subject is not offered at undergraduate level, fees shall be payable at 50% of the ‘overseas’ graduate research fee rate as specified for the relevant subject area in the Table of Fees or Schedule below; in cases where a Visiting Student is studying across subject areas in different categories of the Schedule, the applicable fee rate shall be that which applies to the larger portion of their studies;

(h) for Recognised Students, fees shall be payable at 50% of the ‘overseas’ graduate research fee rate specified for the relevant subject area in the Table of Fees or Schedule below; in cases where a Recognised Student is studying across subject areas in different categories of the Table of Fees or Schedule, the applicable fee rate shall be that which applies to the larger portion of their studies;

(i) for members of the University resident in the Isle of Man or the Channel Islands, fees in one of four bands, details of which may be obtained from the University Offices (Planning and Resource Allocation Section), or from College offices;

(j) for all other members of the University, the appropriate amount or rate as specified in the schedule below.

(i) For 2011–12, composition fees payable under cl. 3 above (other than those admitted by the Continuing Education Board or by any other Board to undertake a programme with a modular fee and assessment structure) shall be at the following annual rates:*

   (a) for members of the University entitled, in accordance with the Special Appendix to this subsection, to be charged fees at the appropriate ‘home’ rate, c£3,800, or half that rate if part-time students for Degrees, Diplomas or Certificates not specified in items (b) to (c) below; except that those who commenced the programme of study on or after 1 September 2009 and before 1 September 2011 and where that programme of study leads to a qualification that is of an equivalent or lower level to one the student has already been awarded shall pay fees at the appropriate rate as determined by Council’s Planning and Resource Allocation Committee on the basis of the relevant ‘island’ rate as described in (ii)(d) above or at the rate specified in the table below whichever is the higher unless the programme of study has been designated a strategically important and vulnerable subject, is a research programme of study or is otherwise exempt from having a higher fee charged, as determined by Council’s Planning and Resource Allocation Committee from time to time.

* A student shall be deemed to have commenced a programme of study on commencing study towards any new qualification aim (Until 1 October 2011, except when progressing to DPhil or MPhil study in the term following completion of a graduate taught programme in the same subject area, in which case the student shall be deemed to have commenced on admission to their previous term.)

Student Numbers 2010–2011

Introduction

Student statistics tables for 2010–11 are now available on the Academic Administration Division (AAD) website: http://www.admin.ox.ac.uk/ac-div/resources/statistics/student/. The statistics provide an overview of the student body based on a snapshot taken on 1 December 2010 and allow comparison with the previous three years. The same snapshot forms the basis of the Higher Education Student Early Statistics return (http://www.hefce.ac.uk/learning/datacoll/heses/) and the Student Number Planning Exercise, but with some small criteria differences. These are explained on the website.

This supplement contains only high-level overviews of the student population. A complete set of tables and charts is on the website. Six different views are available:

- ‘Timelines’—trends of different categories, by division, over time
- ‘One-year summary’—high-level overview of one year’s snapshot
- ‘Detail table’—complete details by programme/programme type for any single year
- ‘Nationality/Domicile details’
- ‘College populations over time’—see total student numbers for four years
- ‘College details’—table with filters that allow different views of the college populations in any given year.

A complete set of terms, definitions, abbreviations and notes on exclusions/inclusions can also be found on the website.

The data are prepared by the Student Data Management and Analysis team. Questions concerning the content or format of these tables should be directed to sdma@admin.ox.ac.uk.

Professor of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Foreign Member of the Royal Society, Honorary Fellow of Balliol College, be approved.

(7) That the conferment of the Degree of Doctor of Music, honoris causae, upon Sir George Martin, Guildhall School of Music, Music Producer, former Head of Parlophone Records, Founder and Chairman of the Associated Independent Recording Studios, be approved.

¶ If the resolutions are approved, the honorary degrees will be conferred at the Encaenia on 29 June.

2 Voting on Resolution approving the conferment of Degree by Diploma

That the conferment of the Degree of Doctor of Civil Law by Diploma upon His Excellency Giorgio Napolitano, President of the Italian Republic, be approved.

¶ If the resolution is approved, the degree by diploma will be conferred at the Encaenia on 29 June.

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space in Beaver House, Hythe Bridge Street

Explanatory Note

On 14 December 2010, Congregation authorised the use of sites at the Old Road Campus for the construction of the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine. The sites were noted to be in the area where the original NHS buildings are located. For these projects to proceed, the demolition of three of these buildings (namely, the Badenoch Building, the Richards Building and the Management Building) will be required. A decent strategy for occupants of those buildings has therefore been devised.

As part of that strategy, it is proposed that the Department of Primary Care should be allocated space in Beaver House, Hythe Bridge Street. This move has the benefit of bringing the department closer to the centre of Oxford prior to its longer-term relocation to the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter (approved by Congregation on 1 December 2009).

Text of Resolution

That approximately 1500 sq. m. net usable area on the second floor of Beaver House, Hythe Bridge Street, be allocated for use by the Department of Primary Care from 1 April 2011 until the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter is available for occupation, or until 31 March 2013, whichever is the sooner.

4 Voting on changes to Congregation Regulations 3 of 2002

Explanatory Note

The following changes remove a reference to the amount paid as a fee for late entry of a candidate’s names for degree days and instead make reference to the authority for setting the level of fee and the place in the Examination Regulations where the amount of the fee is recorded.

Text of Regulations

In regulation 3.3 of Congregation Regulations 3 of 2002 (Supplement I) to Gazette No. 4612, 13 February 2002, Vol. 132, p. 776, as amended on 11 February 2003, 11 March 2003, 2 November 2004 and 11 October 2005, delete existing paragraphs (3)-(4) and substitute (inserted text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'(3) candidates who being qualified at the time have nevertheless failed to have their names so entered on the fifteenth day before the degree day shall be at liberty to have them entered in the prescribed manner not later than 5 p.m. on the day preceding the degree day on payment of a late fee, as determined from time to time by Fees Policy Group and set out in Appendix 1 of the Examination Regulations of 2002 in addition to the degree fee;

(4) candidates who have become qualified for their degree by passing an examination on any of the fifteen days preceding the degree day may have their names entered in the prescribed manner not later than 5 p.m. on the day preceding the degree day, but such candidates shall not pay any additional late fee.’

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Notices

Consultative notices

Proposals for Honorary Degrees to be conferred at the Encaenia in 2012, and for Degrees by Diploma

Members of Congregation are encouraged to suggest the names of people on whom such degrees might be conferred. Degrees by diploma are conferred on heads of state and royalty, and Encaenia honorary degrees are conferred at the University’s annual ceremonial event. When considering possible honorees, the Honorary Degrees Committee will focus on individuals in the following categories:

1. those of high academic distinction in the fields of research and scholarship of specific interest to the University of Oxford;
2. those distinguished in the visual, literary, musical, and performing arts;
3. those distinguished in business and industry;
4. those who have played a distinguished role in public life, for example in contributing to progress and change in society;
5. those who have made a significant contribution to the activities of the University of Oxford—such individuals would normally also fall into one of the categories above.

Within these categories, the committee will aim to produce a balanced list which takes account of the international dimension which characterises this University’s activities.

Honorary degrees will not be conferred on anyone who holds, or who has retired from, a resident teaching, research, or administrative post within the University or in any college or other society, except in exceptional circumstances such as distinguished service outside the terms of his or her paid service.

Nominations should be sent on the approved application form, which is available from Mrs C. Benton (telephone: (2)80107, email: ceri.benton@admin.ox.ac.uk) or can be downloaded by staff accessing the University website from the Oxford University Network (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/councilsec/hondegs/). The completed form should be sent to Mrs C. Benton, University Offices, Wellington Square, by Friday, 6 May, under ‘Strictly Confidential’ cover.

While informal soundings within the University will often be desirable, every effort should be made to ensure that publicity is not at any stage given to any specific proposal for the conferral of an honorary degree. All nominations will be considered in strict confidence by the Honorary Degrees Committee, which submits its report to Council at the beginning of Michaelmas term. After discussion, Council will report back to the Honorary Degrees Committee, which will arrive at a list of honorees to put to Congregation.

The names of people on whom degrees by diploma and honorary degrees have recently been conferred may be found in the University Calendar 2010–11, pp. 535–40.

Resolutions proposing this year’s honorees are set out on p. 484.

General notices

Gazette publication arrangements

The final Gazettes of Hilary term will be published on 10 and 17 March. An issue of the Gazette will also be published on 24 March, but will be limited to Council and Congregation business and examination regulations.

Publication for Trinity term will begin on 28 April. The deadline for receipt by the Gazette office of items for publication in the Gazettes of 28 April and 5 May will be brought forward because of the Easter office closure and the bank holidays on 29 April and 2 May:

- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 28 April: noon on Wednesday, 13 April
- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 5 May: noon on Wednesday, 20 April

Digitisation of Oxford DPhil theses for alumni

Theses in digital format are rapidly becoming ubiquitous, as scholars want to make their research widely available and easily find the work of others. Thanks to the generosity and vision of Dr Leonard Polonsky, the Bodleian Libraries are able to offer to digitise a number of Oxford DPhil theses. This opportunity enables us to add to the growing Oxford digital thesis collection, and should result in new citations to your work.

Because only a limited number of authors are able to take advantage of this opportunity, theses will be digitised on a first come, first served basis. Digital copies will be made available online in ORA (Oxford University Research Archive: http://ora.ouls.ox.ac.uk/).

ORA is the university’s principal online collection of research outputs produced by Oxford scholars. It offers high visibility for Oxford research. Wherever possible, the full text of research is made freely available for easy online access. You can find out more about Oxford digital theses at www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/ora/oxford_etheses.

If you would like the Bodleian Libraries to digitise your thesis and make it available in ORA, please contact thesis-digitisation@bodleian.ox.ac.uk as soon as possible, providing the information below:

- your name (as it appears on your thesis);
- the title of your thesis;
- the year of your thesis;
- if possible, the Bodleian shelfmark of your thesis on OLIS (e.g. MS.D.Phil. d.2804) (you may be able to find this at www.lib.ox.ac.uk/olis/); and
- an email (or postal) address where we can contact you. You will be informed if your thesis is included in this digitisation and the URL will be sent to this address.

Also, please indicate your responses to the following questions:

- Do you grant the Bodleian Libraries permission to digitise the print copy of your thesis and make the digital copy available online in ORA? YES/NO
- To the best of my knowledge, making my thesis available on the internet will not infringe copyright or any other rights of any other person or party, nor contain defamatory material (please be particularly aware of material where copyright is held by third parties, such as photographs). I AGREE / I DISAGREE

If you already have a digital copy of your thesis which you would like to deposit in ORA, please contact ORA@bodleian.ox.ac.uk.

MASTERSHIP

The Mastership of Trinity College will become vacant not later than 30 June 2012 with the retirement of Lord Rees of Ludlow. In recent times appointees have been persons of the highest academic distinction. At present the Master must retire or seek reappointment on reaching the age of seventy. The position is open to both men and women.

The Mastership is a Crown appointment and the process by which a nomination is submitted to the Crown is in the hands of a College Committee (the Magisterial Appointment Committee), which has now begun its work to identify suitable candidates.

Elections

Congregation

10 March

CONTESTED ELECTION

Curators of the Sheldonian Theatre

Vacancy: One

Current/retiring member: To hold office until

Dr P Coones, Hertford, MT 2011

One member of Congregation elected by Congregation.

Nominations received

The following nominations have been received:

Chris Ballinger, MA MSc DPhil Oxf, Social Sciences Division

Nominated by:

F.A. Cairncross, Exeter
K.L. Blackmon, Merton, Faculty of Management
L.D. Cluver, Wolfson, Department of Social Policy and Social Work
N. Bowles, St Anne’s, Faculty of Social Studies

Candidate statement: I have been using the Sheldonian for its full range of activities (University ceremonies, Congregation debates, lectures, conferences, concerts, and functions), both as an attendee and an organiser, for fourteen years. Most recently, in addition to enjoying concerts and recitals in the Sheldonian, I assist with 2–4 degree ceremonies each year. Having used the Sheldonian in these ways for some considerable time, I am now offering myself to be involved with helping the Sheldonian itself by joining the committee of Curators.

I have gained some experience of ensuring the good working of institutions through my membership of committees, including the appointment of good staff, the support and challenge of these staff, and the inspection of tight budgets. I have also gained a broad appreciation of many different aspects of the life of the Collegiate university, which I would bring to the role.

D.P. Hyland, BMus Royal College of Music, Medical Sciences Division

Nominated by:

E.F. Clarke, Wadham, Faculty of Music
J.S.H. Taylor, Pembroke, Faculty of Physiological Sciences
D.A. Terrar, New College, Faculty of Physiological Sciences
R.J. Wilkins, St Edmund Hall, Faculty of Physiological Sciences

Candidate statement: I have worked in Oxford since 2000, initially at the Bodleian Library and then, after 2003, within the Humanities Division. I have served as departmental administrator for the faculties of Theology and Music, in which latter role I had charge of the Music Faculty’s 1930s premises on St Aldate’s (also housing the Bate Collection of Musical Instruments) and oversight of the hire and use during term-time of the 18th-century Holywell Music Room, under agreement with Wadham College. I am currently responsible for the running of the Medical Sciences Teaching Centre in the South Parks Road area, coupled with responsibility for the academic administration of all pre-clinical courses and management of the faculty offices. I have practical experience of managing a variety of buildings, and good working relationships with relevant staff in the University Estates Directorate. I would be happy to represent Congregation as a member of the Curators of the Sheldonian Theatre.

S.J. Payne, MEng DPhil Oxf, Fellow of Keble, Faculty of Engineering Science

Nominated by:

M.A. Chappell, Faculty of Engineering Science
R.A. Saunders, Faculty of History
P.H. Taylor, Keble, Faculty of Engineering Science
S.R. Whalley, Keble, Faculty of Music

Candidate statement: What skills are required of someone wishing to become a Curator of the Sheldonian Theatre? It seems to me that what is needed is an appreciation of what the Sheldonian is used for, how it is maintained and cared for, and how its future can be secured through careful long-term management.

I came to Oxford in 1993 as an undergraduate at Trinity, graduated (twice) in 1997 (MEng) and 2001 (DPhil), and after short visits to a number of other colleges, have been a University Lecturer in Engineering Science and a Tutorial Fellow of Keble for the last five years.

Over this time I have learnt about how the building is used at matriculations and graduations (as my college’s Dean of Degrees for three years) and for concerts (as a professionally qualified organist playing the Sheldonian organ), I have gained an understanding of its structure and function are interlinked and how inventive was the architecture in its day (through the work of one of my nominators, who has built a model of the roof). In addition, through sitting on numerous college committees and my Parish Church Council, I have started to understand how good governance and management underpin every successful organisation.

I hope that these skills would enable me to act in the best interests of the University through being a Curator of the Sheldonian Theatre. If you think that I am the most suitable candidate, then I would ask you to vote for me.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 10 February 2011.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 22 February. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 10 March 2011.

For further information on the Board, please contact the Secretary, Ms L Hofen (lisa.hofen@admin.ox.ac.uk, tel Oxford (2)70129).

For more information on this election, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Advertisement enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 280548
Fax: 01865 270178
Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)
External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.
For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stand/aboutads.htm.
Note: Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.
Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency: If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.
Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.
2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.
3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.
4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.
5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stand/aboutads.htm.
For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.
You are advised to view our Full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stand/cond.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.
Gazette publication arrangements
Advertisers are asked to note that the remaining Gazettes of Hilary term will be published on 10, 17 and 24 March. Please note, however, that the 24 March issue will be limited to University business only, so will not contain classified advertisements.

Publication for Trinity term will begin on 28 April. The deadline for receipt by the Gazette office of advertisements for publication in the Gazettes of 28 April and 5 May will be brought forward because of Easter and the bank holidays on 29 April and 2 May:

• deadline for receipt of items for issue of 28 April: noon on Wednesday, 13 April
• deadline for receipt of items for issue of 5 May: noon on Wednesday, 20 April

General Purposes Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations
The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 25 March.

Establishment of McDonald Agape Fund

Explanatory Note
These regulations establish the McDonald Agape Fund to support the activities of the McDonald Centre for Theology, Ethics and Public Life and a Postdoctoral Fellowship.

Text of Regulations

§ 232. McDonald Agape Fund
1. The University receives with gratitude the sum of £150,000 from The McDonald Agape Foundation to be held on the trusts declared in this regulation. Further money or property may be paid or transferred to the University to be held on the same trusts. The assets so held will be known as the McDonald Agape Fund (the Fund).
2. The University shall retain as permanent endowment those of the assets in the Fund which are contributed on the express understanding that they are to be treated as permanent endowment (the Permanent Endowment).
3. The University shall (a) apply the income of the Permanent Endowment; and (b) apply the income and, in its discretion, the capital of the remainder of the Fund, in support of the McDonald Centre for Theology, Ethics and Public Life and the McDonald Fellowship in Ethics and Public Life.
4. The administration of the Fund, and the application of its income, shall be the responsibility of the Humanities Board.
5. The University may in its absolute discretion in the period ending 21 years from the date of this regulation, instead of applying the income of the Fund in any year, accumulate all or any part of such income by investing it, and holding it as part of the capital of the Fund. The University may apply the whole or any part of such accumulated income in any subsequent year as if it were income of the Fund arising in the then current year.
6. The University shall have power to pay out of the capital or the income of the Fund all costs of and incidental to the creation of the Fund, and the management and administration of the Fund.
7. The University may exercise any of its corporate powers in the management and administration of the Fund in so far as those powers are not inconsistent with these regulations.
8. These regulations shall be deemed to be Trust Regulations under the provisions of Part D of Statute XVI.
9. Subject to regulation 10, Council may amend, repeal or add to these regulations in accordance with Part D of Statute XVI but no amendment is valid if it would cause the Fund to:
   (i) cease to be exclusively charitable according to the law of England and Wales; or
   (ii) be outside the objects of the University.
10. Any amendment to regulation 3 is an amendment to the main objects of the Fund for the purposes of Part D of Statute XVI and must be approved both by Congregation of the University and subsequently by Her Majesty in Council:

Register of Congregation
Mr Vice-Chancellor reports that the following names have been added to the Register of Congregation:

Asoni, A., Worcester
Wakeham, C.R., St Hugh's

For changes in regulations for examinations see ‘Examinations and Boards’ below.

Congregation

Election

(5) That the conferment of the Degree of Doctor of Science, honoris causa, upon Dame Linda Partridge, BA DPhil Oxf, Geneticist, Director of the Institute of Healthy Ageing and Weldon Professor of Biometry, University College London, Director of the Max Planck Institute of the Biology of Ageing, Cologne, Member of EMBO, FRSE, FRS, FMedSci, Member of AAAS, be approved.

(6) That the conferment of the Degree of Doctor of Science, honoris causa, upon Oliver Smithies, MA DPhil Oxf, Geneticist, Weatherpoon Eminent Distinguished Professor of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Foreign Member of the Royal Society, Honorary Fellow of Balliol College, be approved.

(7) That the conferment of the Degree of Doctor of Music, honoris causa, upon Sir George Martin, Guildhall School of Music, Music Producer, former Head of Parlophone Records, Founder and Chairman of the Associated Independent Recording Studios, be approved.

¶ If the resolutions are approved, the honorary degrees will be conferred at the Encaenia on 29 June.

2 Voting on Resolution approving the conferment of Degree by Diploma

That the conferment of the Degree of Doctor of Civil Law by Diploma upon His Excellency Giorgio Napolitano, President of the Italian Republic, be approved.

¶ If the resolution is approved, the degree by diploma will be conferred at the Encaenia on 29 June.

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space in Beaver House, Hythe Bridge Street

Explanatory Note

On 14 December 2010, Congregation authorised the use of sites at the Old Road Campus for the construction of the Kennedy Institute and a new building for the Nuffield Department of Medicine. The sites were noted to be in the area where the original NHS buildings are located. For these projects to proceed, the demolition of three of those buildings (namely, the Badenoch Building, the Richards Building and the Management Building) will be required. A decent strategy for occupants of those buildings has therefore been devised.

As part of that strategy, it is proposed that the Department of Primary Care should be allocated space in Beaver House, Hythe Bridge Street. This move has the benefit of bringing the department closer to the centre of Oxford prior to its longer-term relocation to the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter (approved by Congregation on 1 December 2009).

Text of Resolution

That approximately 1500 sq.m. net usable area on the second floor of Beaver House, Hythe Bridge Street, be allocated for use by the Department of Primary Care from 1 April 2011 until the Primary Care Trust building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter is available for occupation, or until 31 March 2013, whichever is the sooner.

4 Voting on changes to Congregation Regulations 3 of 2002

Explanatory Note

The following changes remove a reference to the amount paid as a fee for late entry of a candidate’s names for degree days and instead make reference to the authority for setting the level of fee and the place in the Examination Regulations where the amount of the fee is recorded.

Text of Regulations

In regulation 3.3 of Congregation Regulations 3 of 2002 (Supplement 1 to Gazette No. 4612, 13 February 2002, Vol. 132, p. 776, as amended on 11 February 2003, 11 March 2003, 2 November 2004 and 11 October 2005), delete existing paragraphs (3)-(4) and substitute (inserted text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘(3) candidates who being qualified at the time have nevertheless failed to have their names so entered on the fifteenth day before the degree day shall be at liberty to have them entered in the prescribed manner not later than 5 p.m. on the day preceding the degree day in payment of a late fee as determined from time to time by Fees Policy Group and set out in Appendix I of the Examination Regulations, of £17 in addition to any degree fee;

(4) candidates who have become qualified for their degree by passing an examination on any of the fifteen days preceding the degree day may have their names entered in the prescribed manner not later than 5 p.m. on the day preceding the degree day, but such candidates shall not pay any additional late fee.’

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (telephone: 270193; email: sarah. cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: 280463; email: elections. office@ox.ac.uk).
Notice

Consultative notice

Proposals for Honorary Degrees to be conferred at the Encaenia in 2012, and for Degrees by Diploma

Members of Congregation are encouraged to suggest the names of people on whom such degrees might be conferred. Degrees by diploma are conferred on heads of state and royalty, and Encaenia honorary degrees are conferred at the University’s annual ceremonial event. When considering possible honorees, the Honorary Degrees Committee will focus on individuals in the following categories:

1. those of high academic distinction in the fields of research and scholarship of specific interest to the University of Oxford;
2. those distinguished in the visual, literary, musical, and performing arts;
3. those distinguished in business and industry;
4. those who have played a distinguished role in public life, for example in contributing to progress and change in society;
5. those who have made a significant contribution to the activities of the University of Oxford—such individuals would normally also fall into one of the categories above.

Within these categories, the committee will aim to produce a balanced list which takes account of the international dimension which characterises this University’s activities.

Honorary degrees will not be conferred on anyone who holds, or who has retired from, a resident teaching, research, or administrative post within the University or in any college or other society, except in exceptional circumstances such as distinguished service outside the terms of his or her paid service.

Nominations should be sent on the approved application form, which is available from Mrs C. Benton (telephone: (2)80107, email: ceri.benton@admin.ox.ac.uk) or can be downloaded by staff accessing the University website from the Oxford University Network (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/councilsec/hondeggs/). The completed form should be sent to Mrs C. Benton, University Offices, Wellington Square, by Friday, 6 May, under ‘Strictly Confidential’ cover.

While informal soundings within the University will often be desirable, every effort should be made to ensure that publicity is not at any stage given to any specific proposal for the conferment of an honorary degree. All nominations will be considered in strict confidence by the Honorary Degrees Committee, which submits its report to Council at the beginning of Michælmas term. After discussion, Council will report back to the Honorary Degrees Committee, which will arrive at a list of honorees to put to Congregation.

The names of people on whom degrees by diploma and honorary degrees have recently been conferred may be found in the University Calendar, 2010–11, pp. 535–40. Resolutions proposing this year’s honorees are set out on p. 483 of the Gazette of 3 March 2011 and repeated on pp. 496–7 of this issue.

General Notices

Gazette publication arrangements

The final Gazette of Hilary term will be published on 17 March. An issue of the Gazette will also be published on 24 March, but will be limited to Council and Congregation business and examination regulations.

Publication for Trinity term will begin on 28 April. The deadline for receipt by the Gazette office of items for publication in the Gazettes of 28 April and 5 May will be brought forward because of the Easter office closure and the bank holidays on 29 April and 2 May:

- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 28 April: noon on Wednesday, 13 April
- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 5 May: noon on Wednesday, 20 April.

Joint Division/Education Committee Review of the Faculty of Law

TERMS OF REFERENCE FOR THE REVIEW

1. To review the quality of academic activities in the faculty, by reference to:
   - international standards of excellence;
   - action taken since the last review of the faculty;
   - planning statements at faculty and divisional level, and in the context of the University’s mission statement and corporate plan.

   In particular:
   (a) the quality of the research of the faculty, including its participation in inter-departmental, inter-divisional and inter-disciplinary activities, its research profile and strategy, and future challenges and opportunities;
   (b) the quality of undergraduate and graduate programmes and their delivery and related issues, including:
      - access and admissions;
      - curriculum design and programme structure;
      - teaching, learning and assessment;
      - the relationship between teaching and research;
      - academic and pastoral support and guidance;
      - the provision and use of learning resources (including staff resources);
      - specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies (including research degrees and research training and provision for part-time study);
      - relationships with colleges;
      - quality assurance mechanisms;
   (c) the organisation of the faculty, its management structures and the relationship between the faculty and the Division, including such matters as:
      - strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plans and the University’s Corporate Plan);
      - academic and non-academic staff planning and recruitment;
      - student number planning;
      - terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issues;
      - accommodation and future space needs;
      - fundraising;
   (d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the faculty, and between the faculty and cognate subject areas and colleges to which it is linked in teaching and research.

2. To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, the faculty, and its financial strategy.

The review committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference. These should be sent to the secretary of the review committee, Jane Dale (jane.dale@socsci.ox.ac.uk), Social Sciences Division, Hayes House, 75 George Street, Oxford OX1 2BQ, by Friday, 13 May.
Review of the Professorship of Poetry

Council has authorised a review of the Professorship of Poetry. The review will take place during Trinity term 2011 with a view to reporting to Council during Michaelmas term. The membership and terms of reference of the review committee are as follows:

MEMBERSHIP

Professor Paul Slack (former Principal of Linacre)
Dr David Bradshaw (chair of the English Faculty Board)
Professor Sally Shuttleworth (head of the Humanities Division)

TERMS OF REFERENCE

Taking into account previous elections, and in particular the report on the 2010 election, to review all aspects of the professorship, including:

(i) the electorate;
(ii) the method of nomination of candidates;
(iii) eligibility for the post;
(iv) duties;
(v) remuneration;
(vi) funding for the post;
(vii) academic ownership;
(viii) college association; and
(ix) period of office.

Submissions to the review are invited, to be sent to the secretary to the review, Charles Shaw, at the University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford, OX1 2JD (email: charles.shaw@admin.ox.ac.uk) by Friday, 13 May.

Clubs Committee: Annual Report for 2009-10

1. During the academic year 2009-10, under the chairmanship of the successive Assessors (The Revd Dr John Muddiman and Dr Eric Eve), the Clubs Committee continued to provide a variety of support for student clubs and societies registered with the Proctors under Rules Committee Regulations. This support was directed primarily towards non-sports clubs and publications, as sports clubs can look to the Sports Department for assistance.

2. Funding for the Committee’s activities was provided in the usual way, mainly from two sources: an allocation from PRAS via the Committee for the Council Departments (£9.5k) and a share (£10.79k) of the proceeds of a per-capita levy paid by colleges to support both sports and non-sports clubs at university level.

3. The Committee continued to operate a Clubs Office (co-located within the Proctors’ Office in Wellington Square) staffed by a part-time Clubs Officer. In addition to being available to provide secretarial services on request to student organisations, the Clubs Officer advised on and assisted with registration procedures, in particular clubs’ accounts.

4. The Committee also continued its cooperation with the Sports Department over the Driver Assessment and Vehicle Hire Scheme (administered from the Sports Department but open to use by any club registered with the Proctors). This important scheme enables students to drive good-quality hired vehicles safely, insured by the University, when taking part in bona fide club activities such as travelling to sports fixtures or events outside Oxford. Although twenty-three reportable incidents occurred during the year, these resulted in mainly minor damage to vehicles and no personal injuries were sustained. A total of 172 people were assessed to drive vehicles under the scheme, while 1,025 vehicle hire days were funded (986 for sports clubs, 39 for non-sports clubs), using minibuses (82%), people-carriers (9%) and cars (9%). The Committee has noted that increased costs were incurred as a result of changes to the University’s insurance arrangements.

5. Financial support was provided direct to clubs in the form of grants and interest-free loans. During the year the Committee received some twenty-two applications, representing about 10% of non-sports clubs and publications on the Proctors’ Register. Of these, thirteen applications were supported. Start-up awards (up to £200) were made to organisations as diverse as the Oxford Society of Afghan Students, the Persian Society, the Media Society, the Advertising and Marketing Society, the Private Equity Society, the Stubbs Society, and BRX (a break-dancing club). Other recipients were the long-established Oxford Gargoylesingers (who needed support for a tour in the USA), the OU Jazz Orchestra, the Biomedical Engineering Society, the Alternative Singing Society, the OU Russian Society (to support an ambitious programme of events to introduce and promote Russian culture to a wider audience), and the OU Quiz Society (to support participation in a tournament in the USA where the team achieved notable success). In the case of the OU Russian Society and the OU Quiz Society, awards were made under the Committee’s recently introduced scheme to make major grants (up to £1,000) available for exceptional projects. The reports back to the Committee show that its funding, although often comparatively modest, makes a considerable difference to the viability of new clubs and to the nature of the activities of those which have been in existence longer. The Committee was nevertheless somewhat disappointed about the number and quality of applications received; steps were taken, for example through publishing new information on its website, to publicise the availability of funds and provide guidance on preparing good-quality applications.

6. As always the Committee benefited from the keen interest and lively contributions of its student members and welcomed news of the appointment by Oxford University Student Union of a Clubs and Societies Officer with effect from Hilary term 2011. The Committee believes that student clubs contribute hugely to the University’s sporting, social, cultural and charitable activities and is pleased to be able to help to promote and support these.

Elections

Congregation 10 March

CONTESTED ELECTION

Curators of the Sheldonian Theatre

Vacancy: One

Current/retiring member To hold office until

Dr P. Coones, Hertford MT 2011
One member of Congregation elected by Congregation.

Nominations received

The following nominations have been received:

Chris Ballinger, MA MSc DPhil Oxf, Social Sciences Division

Nominated by:

- F.A. Cairncross, Exeter
- K.L. Blackman, Merton, Faculty of Management
- L.D. Cluver, Wolfson, Department of Social Policy and Social Work
- N. Bowles, St Anne's, Faculty of Social Studies

Candidate statement: I have been using the Sheldonian for its full range of activities (University ceremonies, Congregation debates, lectures, conferences, concerts, and functions), both as an attendee and an organiser, for fourteen years. Most recently, in addition to enjoying concerts and recitals in the Sheldonian, I assist with 2–4 degree ceremonies each year. Having used the Sheldonian in these ways for some considerable time, I am now offering myself to be involved with helping the Sheldonian itself by joining the committee of Curators.

I have gained some experience of ensuring the good working of institutions through my membership of committees, including the appointment of good staff, the support and challenge of these staff, and the inspection of tight budgets. I have also gained a broad appreciation of many different aspects of the life of the Collegiate university, which I would bring to the role.

D.P. Hyland, BMus Royal College of Music, Medical Sciences Division

Nominated by:

- E.F. Clarke, Wadham, Faculty of Music
- J.S.H. Taylor, Pembroke, Faculty of Physiological Sciences
- D.A. Terrar, New College, Faculty of Physiological Sciences
- R.J. Wilkins, St Edmund Hall, Faculty of Physiological Sciences

Candidate statement: I have worked in Oxford since 2000, initially at the Bodleian Library and then, after 2003, within the Humanities Division. I have served as departmental administrator for the faculties of Theology and Music, in which latter role I had charge of the Music Faculty's 1930s premises on St Aldate's (also housing the Bate Collection of Musical Instruments) and oversight of the hire and use during term-time of the 18th-century Holywell Music Room, under agreement with Wadham College. I am currently responsible for the running of the Medical Sciences Teaching Centre in the South Parks Road area, coupled with responsibility for the academic administration of all pre-clinical courses and management of the faculty offices. I have practical experience of managing a variety of buildings, and good working relationships with relevant staff in the University Estates Directorate. I would be happy to represent Congregation as a member of the Curators of the Sheldonian Theatre.

S.J. Payne, MEng DPhil OxF, Fellow of Keble, Faculty of Engineering Science

Nominated by:

- M.A. Chappell, Faculty of Engineering Science
- R.A. Saunders, Faculty of History
- P.H. Taylor, Keble, Faculty of Engineering Science
- S.R. Whalley, Keble, Faculty of Music

Candidate statement: What skills are required of someone wishing to become a Curator of the Sheldonian Theatre? It seems to me that what is needed is an appreciation of what the Sheldonian is used for, how it is maintained and cared for, and how its future can be secured through careful long-term management.

I came to Oxford in 1993 as an undergraduate at Trinity, graduated (twice) in 1997 (MEng) and 2001 (DPhil), and after short visits to a number of other colleges, have been a University Lecturer in Engineering Science and a Tutorial Fellow of Keble for the last five years.

Over this time I have learnt about how the building is used at matriculations and graduations (as my college's Dean of Degrees for three years) and for concerts (as a professionally qualified organist playing the Sheldonian organ). I have gained an understanding of its structure and function are interlinked and how inventive was the architecture in its day (through the work of one of my nominators, who has built a model of the roof). In addition, through sitting on numerous college committees and my Parish Church Council, I have started to understand how good governance and management underpin every successful organisation.

I hope that these skills would enable me to act in the best interests of the University through being a Curator of the Sheldonian Theatre. If you think that I am the most suitable candidate, then I would ask you to vote for me.

General notes:

The nomination period for this election closed at 4 p.m. on Thursday, 10 February 2011.

All members of Congregation are entitled to vote in this election. Ballot papers were sent out to voters during the week of 22 February. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 10 March 2011.

For further information on the Board, please contact the Secretary, Ms L Hofen (lisa.hofen@admin.ox.ac.uk, tel. Oxford (2)70129).

For more information on this election, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 280548
Fax: 01865 270178
Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University, college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see c.l. in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)

External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit-card or debit-card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

Note: Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at http://www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/aboutads.htm.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:

(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/stdg/conds.htm, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.
Gazette publication arrangements

Advertisers are asked to note that the remaining Gazettes of Hilary term will be published on 17 and 24 March. Please note, however, that the 24 March issue will be limited to University business only, so will not contain classified advertisements.

Publication for Trinity term will begin on 28 April. The deadline for receipt by the Gazette office of advertisements for publication in the Gazettes of 28 April and 5 May will be brought forward because of Easter and the bank holidays on 29 April and 2 May:

- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 28 April: noon on Wednesday, 13 April
- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 5 May: noon on Wednesday, 20 April.

Rules Committee Regulations 1 of 2011

Published on 17 March 2011

In accordance with Statute XI (Part A, section 5) and Council Regulations 42 of 2002, the Rules Committee has agreed that the following regulations shall be in force for the year beginning on 1 October 2011.

PART 1

CLUBS, SOCIETIES AND PUBLICATIONS

1.1. Student members of the University who form a club or society, or an organisation for whatever purpose (including one for the publication of a journal, newspaper, or magazine, whether in hard copy or electronic format), and who wish to use the name and/or Arms of the University in its title or the word ‘Oxford’ in the title of a journal, newspaper, or magazine, shall:

1.2. The Vice-Chancellor will not consider applications for consent until the club, society, or organisation has been registered with the Proctors for two consecutive terms, and consent may be withdrawn as he or she thinks fit. Any consent granted by the Vice-Chancellor shall be withheld or withdrawn if the registration of the club, society, or organisation concerned lapses or is withdrawn or withheld by the Proctors.

1.3. A club, society, or organisation which does not wish to use the name of the University in its title may also register with the Proctors if it conforms with regulations 1.10-1.12 below.

1.4. The Proctors may not unreasonably withhold or withdraw registration.

1.5. (1) Failure to comply with these regulations may result in the club, society, or organisation being deregistered and/or fined an amount not exceeding £500 by the Proctors.

1.6. No member of the governing committee of a club, society, or organisation shall in organising an event or function, or otherwise, encourage or incite a breach of Statute XI or any regulation made under it.

1.7. (1) Each club, society, or organisation which registers with the Proctors shall be designated, as the Proctors see fit, to be:

(a) a non-sports club, society, or organisation (‘non-sports club’); or

(b) a club, society, or organisation for sport (‘sports club’); or

(c) an organisation for the publication of a journal, newspaper, or magazine, whether in hard copy or electronic format (‘publication’).

(2) Each such non-sports club and publication shall register with the Proctors through the Clerk to the Proctors, and each such sports club shall register with the Proctors through the Head of the Sports Department.

(3) In this regulation, ‘non-sports club’, ‘sports club’, and ‘publication’ mean the members of the club, society, or organisation concerned.

1.8. Each club, society or organisation which registers with the Proctors shall be entitled to apply to Oxford University Computing Services (‘OUCS’) to use Information Technology (‘IT’) facilities (e.g. email and web publication) in the name of the club, society or organisation. Where relevant facilities are allocated by OUCS it shall be the responsibility of the club, society or organisation concerned to:

(1) designate not more than one person entitled to a university email account (as defined by OUCS rules) to act as its IT Officer, whose duties shall include liaising with OUCS about the use of facilities allocated and passing on to his or her successor in office all records (in whatever format held) relating to the use of the facilities allocated;

(2) designate one of its members (who shall be either a student member or, exceptionally, a member of Congregation; and who may be, but need not necessarily be, the same as its IT Officer) as its principal Webmaster, whose duties shall include maintaining an awareness of the University Guidelines for Web Information Providers and co-ordinating and regulating access to the web facilities used by the club, society or organisation;

(3) comply with regulations relating to the use of IT facilities provided by OUCS and with the guidelines published from time to time by OUCS for the use of IT facilities by student clubs, societies and organisations (including those guidelines relating to the operation of electronic mailing lists);

(4) ensure that all designated persons responsible for the IT resources of the club, society or organisation are competent to deal with the requirements of this section, and where necessary undertake training under the guidance of OUCS.

1.9. Each student organisation registering with the Proctors shall include in its constituted a clause affirming that its activities will be conducted in accordance with the following University policies and codes of practice in force from time to time: Integrated Equality Policy, Code of Practice on Harassment and Bullying, and Code of Practice on Freedom of Speech.

Non-sports clubs

1.10. (1) Each non-sports club which registers with the Proctors shall:

   (a) establish a constitution and deposit a copy of it with the Proctors: the Proctors may require that the constitution take a form prescribed by the Proctors in order to ensure that the administration of the club applies with applicable law;

   (b) act in accordance with the constitution established under (a) above;

   (c) advise the Proctors promptly of any changes in the constitution established under (a) above;

   (d) notify to the Proctors not later than the end of the second week of every Full Term the programme of meetings and speakers which has been arranged for that term (e.g. by sending them a copy of its term-card);

   (e) appoint a president (or similar principal officer) who shall be a student member or a member of one of the other institutions listed in (f) below attending the institution for the purpose of undertaking a course of study (subject in the latter case to the member’s signing, on election to office, an undertaking to abide by the provisions of these regulations and to accept the authority of the Proctors on club matters);

   (f) appoint a secretary who shall be a student member or a member of one of the other institutions listed in (f) below attending the institution for the purpose of undertaking a course of study (subject in the latter case to the member’s signing, on election to office, an undertaking to abide by the provisions of these regulations and to accept the authority of the Proctors on club matters) and who shall keep a proper record of its activities;

   (g) appoint a treasurer who shall be a student member or a member of one of the other institutions listed in (f) below attending the institution for the purpose of undertaking a course of study (subject in the latter case to the member’s signing, on election to office, an undertaking to abide by the provisions of these regulations and to accept the authority of the Proctors on club matters) and who shall keep a proper record of its activities;

   (h) not appoint several individuals jointly to hold any of the offices specified in (e), (f), and (g) nor allow any individual to hold more than one of these offices at a time;

   (i) appoint a member of Congregation as Senior Member who shall, by virtue of holding that office, be a member of the non-sports club’s committee;

   (j) notify the Proctors by the end of the second week of each Full Term the names of the members of its committee;

   (k) notify the Proctors immediately of any changes in holders of the offices specified in (e), (f), and (g);

   (l) admit to membership only members of the University, those whose names are on the Register of Visiting Students, and, at the discretion of its committee, students registered to read for diplomas and certificates in the University, student members of Permanent Private Halls who are not student members of the University, members of Ruskin College, of Ripon College, Cuddesdon, and of the Oxford Institute of Legal Practice, and members of the Westminster Institute of Oxford Brookes University who are registered to read for degrees or other qualifications validated by the University of Oxford;

   (m) admit to membership, if it so wishes, other persons not being members of the University, or one of the institutions listed in (f) above, on condition that students of Oxford Brookes University (other than members of the Westminster Institute) shall not constitute more than one-fifth of the total membership and in addition other non-university members shall not constitute more than one-fifth of the total membership;

   (n) if having a turnover in excess of £15,000 in the preceding year, or if owing to a change in the nature or scale of its activities confidently expecting to have such a turnover in the current year, submit its accounts (the format of which the Proctors may prescribe) for independent professional inspection and report by a properly qualified person approved in advance by the Proctors; accounts shall be ready for independent professional inspection and report within four months of the end of its financial year and the costs of the inspection and report shall be borne by the non-sports club; if requested by the person approved by the Proctors the non-sports club shall submit accounts and related material as a basis for a review of accounting procedures, the cost likewise to be borne by the non-sports club;

   (o) maintain a register of members as specified by the club’s constitution who shall elect or appoint the officers (including those specified in (e), (f), and (g)) and who shall have ultimate responsibility for the activities of the non-sports club; this register must be made available for inspection by the Proctors on request;

   (p) notify the Proctors if the non-sports club ceases to operate or is to be disbanded, and at the same time submit a final statement of accounts (the format of which the Proctors may prescribe).

(2) Each officer of a non-sports club must, on relinquishing his or her appointment, promptly hand to his or her successor in office (or to another member of the club nominated by its committee) all official documents and records belonging to the club, together with (on request from the club’s committee) any other property of the club which may be in his or her possession, and must complete any requirements to transfer authority relating to control of the club’s bank account, building society account, or other financial affairs.

(3) In exceptional circumstances, at the request of a non-sports club, the Proctors shall have discretion to dispense from any of the requirements in (e)–(j) and (l)–(n) of paragraph (1) above, subject to such terms and conditions as they may from time to time see fit to impose.
Sports clubs

1.11. (1) Each sports club which registers with the Proctors shall:

(a) establish a constitution and deposit a copy of it with the Director of Sport; this constitution must include provisions approved by the Proctors on advice from the Area Safety Officer (Sport) relating to safety and insurance matters and must provide for the sports club to appoint a president (or similar principal officer), a secretary, and a treasurer as required by regulation 1.10 (1) (e), (f), (g), and (h) above; must provide for the club to admit members as in regulation 1.10 (1) (i) and (m) above (except that non-university members may not constitute more than one-fifth of the total membership); must maintain a register of members as specified by the club's constitution; must notify the Proctors, through the Director of Sport, if the club ceases to operate or is to be disbanded, and at the same time submit a final statement of accounts (the format of which the Proctors may prescribe); and must provide for the club to be run by a committee on which members of the University, both student and other, are in a majority; the Proctors may require that the constitution take a form prescribed by the Proctors in order to ensure that the administration of the club applies with applicable law;

(b) act in accordance with the constitution established under (a) above;

(c) advise the Proctors promptly, through the Director of Sport, of any changes in the constitution established under (a) above;

(d) be designated or redesignated by the Proctors, as they see fit after consulting the Sports Strategy Committee, to be a 'foundation sport', 'development sport', 'established sport', or 'recognised sport';

(e) appoint to its committee a Senior Member (who shall be a person who is a member of Congregation) through whom the club is accountable to the Proctors; in exceptional circumstances (e.g. if no suitable member of Congregation can be found), a recognised sports club may request that the Director of Sport be appointed as its Senior Member ex officio;

(f) present to the Proctors, through the Director of Sport, annual accounts together with a copy of the club's current constitution and list of officers (such accounts to be submitted not later than one month after the end of the financial year to which they relate), subject to the following conditions:

(i) during the first year of registration, a club may be required by the Proctors to submit termly accounts;

(ii) if having a turnover in excess of £40,000 in the preceding year, or if owing to a change in the nature or scale of its activities confidently expecting to have such a turnover in the current year, a sports club must submit its accounts (the format of which the Proctors may prescribe) for independent professional inspection and report by a properly qualified person approved in advance by the Proctors;

(iii) accounts shall be ready for audit within one month of the end of its financial year and the costs of the inspection and report shall be borne by the sports club; if requested by the person approved by the Proctors, the sports club shall submit accounts and related material as the basis for a review of accounting procedures, the costs likewise to be borne by the sports club;

(g) ensure that all paid and unpaid club administrative and coaching appointments are ratified by the Sports Strategy Committee and that all coaches are accredited where appropriate by the relevant national governing body;

(h) operate and keep updated a suitable club webpage displaying (as a minimum) current club contacts, constitution and approved Code of Conduct on Safety Matters and Risk Assessment.

(2) The organisers of any event or competition that is approved or advertised by a sports club as being an official event of the club concerned (other than such events already included in the club's approved code of conduct on safety matters and risk assessment) must submit to the Proctors not less than twenty-one days before the date of the proposed event an event plan and risk assessment, together with documentary evidence of appropriate insurance cover. The organisers shall observe such conditions relating to the running of the event as may be specified by the Proctors (who shall take advice from the University Marshal and the Area Safety Office (Sport)).

(3) Each officer of a sports club must, on relinquishing his or her appointment, promptly hand to his or her successor in office (or to another member of the club nominated by its committee) all official documents and records belonging to the club, together with (on request from the club's committee) any other property of the club which may be in his or her possession, and must complete any requirements to transfer authority relating to control of the club's bank account, building society account, or any other financial affairs.

(4) Any registered sports club may apply to the Proctors, through the Sports Strategy Committee, for permission to co-operate in the establishment of a federal structure or representative team.

(5) There shall be only one registered club for each sport, with the possibility of the club being federal in nature.

(6) In exceptional circumstances, at the request of a sports club submitted through the Director of Sport, the Proctors shall have discretion to dispense from the requirements of any of (a)-(g) of paragraph (1) above, subject to such terms and conditions as they may from time to time see fit to impose.

Publications

1.12. (1) a publication which registers with the Proctors shall:

(a) notify to the Proctors by the end of the second week of each Full Term the names of its editor or editors and the names of any other persons who have agreed to assume financial responsibility, and shall promptly notify to the Proctors any changes in its editor or editors;

(b) appoint a member of Congregation as its Senior Member who shall be kept informed of the activities of the publication;

(c) keep a proper record of its financial transactions which shall be available for inspection at the request of the Senior Member or the Proctors; and forward to the Proctors by the end of the second week of each Full Term a copy of the accounts (the format of which the Proctors may prescribe) for the preceding term signed by the Senior Member for retention on the Proctors’ files;

(d) inform the Proctors when publication ceases and in doing so present a financial statement; and

(e) in the event of having a turnover in excess of £15,000 in the preceding year, or if owing to a change in the nature or scale of its activities confidently expecting to have such a turnover in the current year, shall submit its accounts (the format of which the Proctors may prescribe) for independent professional inspection and report by a properly qualified person approved in advance by the Proctors; accounts shall be ready for independent professional inspection and report within four months of the end of the financial year of the publication; if requested by the person approved by the Proctors the publication shall submit accounts and related materials as a basis for accounting procedures, the cost likewise to be borne by the publication.

(2) In exceptional circumstances, at the request of a publication, the Proctors shall have discretion to dispense from the requirements of (b) and (c) of paragraph (1) above, subject to such terms and conditions as they may from time to time see fit to impose.

PART 2
DEFACEMENT OF PROPERTY AND UNAUTHORISED ADVERTISEMENTS

2.1 No student member shall intentionally or recklessly and without lawful authority, within six miles of Carfax:

(1) deface any building, wall, fence, or other structure by inscribing on it any writing or posting on or attaching to it any bill;

(2) display any advertising material in a public place.

PART 3
BEHAVIOUR AFTER EXAMINATIONS

3.1 Student members must familiarise themselves with the Proctors’ guidance on Statute XI published on the Proctors’ Office website.

3.2 (1) No student member, other than a candidate presenting himself or herself for examination, shall, at any time between the hours of 12.15 and 1 p.m. or 5.15 and 6 p.m., or between fifteen minutes before and thirty minutes after the scheduled time for the completion of a Public Examination of the University for ten or more candidates, in the company of one or more other persons either:

(a) gather without the prior permission of the Proctors in a public thoroughfare within 300 metres of any place where such an examination is being, or has just been, held; or

(b) having gathered in a public thoroughfare within one mile of any such place, fail to disperse after having been requested to do so by one or more of the Proctors, the Marshal, or their staff.

(2) For the purpose of this regulation, persons shall be regarded as having gathered if they assemble, or form part of an assembly, in such a way as to cause, or to be likely to cause, obstruction of a public thoroughfare.

3.3 (1) No student member shall, in any place or thoroughfare to which members of the general public have access within six miles of Carfax, throw, pour, spray, apply, or use anything or substance in a way which is intended, or is likely, (a) to cause injury to any person, or (b) to cause damage to, or defacement or destruction of, any property, or (c) to cause litter.

(2) No student member shall be in possession of any thing or substance with intention to commit an offence under paragraph (1) above.

PART 4
OVERSEAS ACTIVITIES

4.1 (1) No student member shall participate in any sports tours which involve overseas travel during Full Term or the Thursday and Friday immediately preceding Full Term without the prior permission of:

(a) the Senior Tutor of that member’s college, society, Permanent Private Hall, or other designated institution; and

(b) the Proctors.

(2) The written permission of the Senior Tutor shall accompany any request to the Proctors.

4.2 No student member shall organise any activity overseas on behalf of any club, society or other organisation registered with the Proctors, whether during term-time or vacation, without applying to the Proctors for permission before any firm commitments are entered into and in any case not less than one calendar month in advance of the proposed date of departure from the United Kingdom. The application for the Proctors’ permission must be accompanied by details of the plans for the activity concerned, including finances. When considering applications the Proctors may take advice as appropriate from the Area Safety Officer (Sport), the Director of Sport, the University Marshal, and committees of the Conference of Colleges.

4.3 Each student member participating in such activities overseas for which permission has been given by the Proctors in accordance with section 4.2 above shall observe any conditions imposed by the Proctors, e.g. relating to the deposit of contact addresses, fulfilment of health, safety, and insurance requirements, and stipulation of coaches, trainers, or Senior Members to accompany the trip.

PART 5
ROWING ON THE RIVER

5.1 No student member (other than a student member currently in residence at All Souls College, Green Templeton College, Kellogg College, Linacre College, Nuffield College, St Antony’s College, St Cross College, or Wolfson College) shall participate in rowing on the river except in a single scull between the hours of 8.30 a.m. and 1 p.m. from Monday to Friday inclusive during Full Term without the prior permission of the Proctors.

5.2 No student member shall knowingly breach any regulation or instruction made by or on the authority of the Director of Sport or the Area Safety Officer (Sport), by Oxford University Rowing Clubs with the consent of the Proctors, or by a responsible external body such as the Environment Agency or Amateur Rowing Association, relating to safety on the river.

5.3 The organisers of any rowing competition for any college, society, Permanent Private Hall, or other designated institution (or between a number of such foundations) which is to be held within six miles of Carfax shall submit to the Proctors not less than twenty-one days before the date of the proposed competition an Event Plan and Risk Assessment, together with documentary evidence of appropriate insurance cover, and shall observe such conditions relating to the running of the competition as may be specified by the Proctors (who shall take advice from the University Marshal and the Area Safety Officer (Sport)).

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 1 April.

THE HOLDING OF OUTSIDE APPOINTMENTS AND CONDUCT OF OUTSIDE WORK

Explanatory Note

The following changes (i) confirm that the approval line for the holding of outside appointments and conduct of outside work by senior officers is established by Council by standing order; (ii) clarify that the head of department’s approval is required to hold directorships in spin-off companies and University subsidiaries; (iii) make reference to the University’s Consulting Policy and Procedures; and (iv) narrow the requirement to seek the consent of the Conflict of Interest Committee only to the holding of executive directorships, not to the holding of non-executive directorships. Other minor changes have been made for clarification.

Text of Regulations

1. In Council Regulations 5 of 2004 (Supplement (i) to Gazette No. 4703, 14 July 2004, as amended on 22 July 2010, Gazette, Vol. 141, p. 130, 21 October 2010), delete existing regulation 1 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text struck through):

(i) All university employees, with the exception of CUF lecturers, shall obtain approval from their head of department, (or equivalent), faculty board chairman, or head of division as appropriate for the holding of any outside appointment (including directorships on the boards of external organisations, spin-off companies and, for this purpose, University subsidiaries), and for undertaking other outside activities (including consultancies).

(ii) If the head of department (or equivalent) has an interest in the appointment or activity under paragraph (i), the application for approval shall be made to the person at the next higher level of authority. In most cases this will be the head of division.

2. Ibid., in regulation 3 insert new paragraph (6) below and renumber existing paragraphs (6) and (7) as (7) and (8):

‘(6) the employee shall comply with the University’s Consulting Policy and Procedures’.

3. Ibid., delete regulation 5 and substitute:

Degree Days 2011-12

Degree ceremonies shall be held in the Sheldonian Theatre for the purpose of granting graces and conferring degrees on the days shown in this notice. These are in addition to those already published for 2011 and 2012 (www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/degredays/).

The purpose of these degree ceremonies is to provide additional opportunities for graduands on waiting lists and old members to graduate at a ceremony. The dates are as follows:

- 11 a.m., Friday, 14 October 2011
- 11 a.m., Friday, 20 April 2012
- 11 a.m. and 2.30 p.m., Friday, 4 May 2012
- 11 a.m. and 2.30 p.m., Saturday, 12 May 2012

Colleges will be contacted by the Degree Conferments Office regarding the procedures for allocating graduands to these ceremonies.

Congregation 22 March 2 p.m.

¶ The meeting of Congregation is cancelled. The sole business comprises questions to which no opposition has been notified and in respect of which no request for adjournment has been received, and Mr Vice-Chancellor will accordingly declare the resolutions carried without a meeting under the provisions of Sect. 7(i) of Statute IV (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, p. 100).

1 Voting on Resolutions approving the conferment of Honorary Degrees

(For explanatory note and text of resolution, see Gazette No. 4946, 3 March 2011, p. 484.)

2 Voting on Resolution approving the conferment of Degree by Diploma

(For explanatory note and text of resolution, see Gazette No. 4946, 3 March 2011, p. 485.)

3 Voting on Resolution authorising use of space in Beaver House, Hythe Bridge Street

(For explanatory note and text of resolution, see Gazette No. 4946, 3 March 2011, p. 485.)

4 Voting on changes to Congregation Regulations 3 of 2002

(For explanatory note and text of resolution, see Gazette No. 4946, 3 March 2011, p. 485.)

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80-463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Consultative notices

Proposals for Honorary Degrees to be conferred at the Encaenia in 2012, and for Degrees by Diploma

Members of Congregation are encouraged to suggest the names of people on whom such degrees might be conferred. Degrees by diploma are conferred on heads of state and royalty, and Encaenia honorary degrees are conferred at the University’s annual ceremonial event. When considering possible honorands, the Honorary Degrees Committee will focus on individuals in the following categories:

1. those of high academic distinction in the fields of research and scholarship of specific interest to the University of Oxford;
2. those distinguished in the visual, literary, musical, and performing arts;
3. those distinguished in business and industry;
4. those who have played a distinguished role in public life, for example in contributing to progress and change in society;
5. those who have made a significant contribution to the activities of the University of Oxford—such individuals would normally also fall into one of the categories above.

Within these categories, the committee will aim to produce a balanced list which takes account of the international dimension which characterises this University’s activities.

Honorary degrees will not be conferred on anyone who holds, or who has retired from, a resident teaching, research, or administrative post within the University or in any college or other society, except in exceptional circumstances such as distinguished service outside the terms of his or her paid service.

Nominations should be sent on the approved application form, which is available from Mrs C. Benton (telephone: (2)80107, email: ceri.benton@admin.ox.ac.uk) or can be downloaded by staff accessing the University website from the Oxford University Network (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/ councilsec/hondegrees). The completed form should be sent to Mrs C. Benton, University Offices, Wellington Square, by Friday, 6 May, under ‘Strictly Confidential’ cover.

While informal soundings within the University will often be desirable, every effort should be made to ensure that publicity is not at any stage given to any specific proposal for the conferral of an honorary degree. All nominations will be considered in strict confidence by the Honorary Degrees Committee, which submits its report to Council at the beginning of Michaelmas term. After discussion, Council will report back to the Honorary Degrees Committee, which will arrive at a list of honorands to put to Congregation.

The names of people on whom degrees by diploma and honorary degrees have recently been conferred may be found in the University Calendar, 2010–11, pp. 535–40.

Resolutions proposing this year’s honorands are set out on p. 464 of the Gazette of 3 March 2011.

General notices

Gazette publication arrangements

This is the last full issue of the Gazette in Hilary term. An issue of the Gazette will be published on 24 March, but will be limited to Council and Congregation business and changes to Examination Regulations.

Publication for Trinity term will begin on 28 April. The deadline for receipt by the Gazette office of items for publication in the Gazette is 28 April and 5 May will be brought forward because of the Easter office closure and the bank holidays on 29 April and 2 May:

• deadline for receipt of items for issue of 28 April: noon on Wednesday, 13 April
• deadline for receipt of items for issue of 5 May: noon on Wednesday, 20 April.

Counselling Service: relocation and Easter closure

The Counselling Service will be relocating on 14 and 15 April to 3 Worcester Street, Oxford, OX1 2BX. The office will be closed for business from the end of the day on Wednesday, 13 April. The service will remain closed for the Easter vacation and will reopen for appointments on Wednesday, 27 April.

The Counselling Service will endeavour to respond to email correspondence during the move as quickly as possible, although it will have a more limited capacity during this time.

Childcare Voucher Scheme

The University’s Childcare Voucher Scheme enables parents employed by the University to save money on tax and national insurance by having money deducted from their salary and paid directly to their childcarer. The scheme is operated by Kidunlimited and can be used for registered childcare facilities, such as childminders and créche facilities, as well as after-school clubs and holiday play schemes.

Currently, basic-rate taxpayers who use the scheme can save £933 per year, while higher-rate taxpayers can save £1,225 per year. However, from 6 April 2011, changes in tax and national insurance mean that this extra saving for higher-rate taxpayers will no longer apply— the amount they can save will drop to £623 per year. Higher-rate taxpayers should therefore register for the scheme before 6 April if they want to benefit from the higher level of savings.

These changes only apply to parents joining the scheme on or after 6 April 2011. They do not affect parents already participating in the scheme.

Further information is available on the Childcare Services website at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/eop/childcare/voucherscheme.

Examinations and Boards

Regulations on Financial Matters

With effect from 1 September 2012

Explanatory Note

Following the delivery of the Browne Review in October 2010 and the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review later that month, the government announced its plans for the reform for higher education and student finance on 3 November 2010. In essence, from 2012/13, it is understood that the basic level of HEFCE support for teaching will be removed, with residual HEFCE funding focused on certain high cost or vulnerable subjects; and the government will instead provide student loans to cover the up-front cost of increased tuition fees. In December 2010, Parliament voted in favour of raising the cap on tuition fees to £9,000 for home/EU undergraduate entrants in 2012. Any university wishing to charge £6,000 or more (up to the £9,000 maximum) must have in place an Access Agreement approved by the Office of Fair Access (OFFA). To assist with the drafting of Access Agreements, guidance was published by OFFA on 8 March 2011. Universities must submit their proposed Access Agreements to OFFA by 19 April 2011; the final versions are due to be published on the OFFA website by 11 July 2011.

As a consequence of these decisions, the funding environment for higher education has shifted significantly, particularly for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13, and the collegiate University has been deliberating its response over the last three months. This process has involved wide consultation across Oxford, including a Congregation Discussion, and careful consideration by a number of bodies, including Divisional Boards, Governing Bodies, the Conference of Colleges and the jointly constituted Joint Teaching and Student Funding Review Group. The results of these debates have fed into the University’s formal decision-making structure, led by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) and the Education Committee.

Council considered the recommendations of PRAC and the Education Committee at its

1 See www.offa.org.uk/publications meeting on 14 March 2011. Before turning to the specific issues before it, Council reasserted Oxford’s fundamental belief in the public benefit of higher education and the need for public funding at a level which would allow the UK’s universities to thrive in a globally competitive context. Notwithstanding the significant challenges arising from the changes in the funding of higher education, Council affirmed its adherence to the principles articulated in its Strategic Plan and restated in its submission to the Browne Review; namely to continue to recruit the very best students nationally and internationally through an equitable process based on achievement and potential; and to provide an exceptional education for both undergraduates and graduates, characterised by the close contact of students with distinguished scholars in supportive collegiate and departmental communities. Oxford will not compromise on its admissions standards: the guiding principle is, and will remain, that admissions decisions will be made by the academics who will teach the candidates they admit, and that their decisions will be based on academic factors with the aim of admitting the best candidates in each subject, not meeting pre-determined quotas. It is fundamental to Oxford’s approach that all candidates who successfully apply to Oxford should know that they have been admitted on the basis of their academic merit and their potential to benefit from the highly intensive undergraduate courses which Oxford offers. Nor will Oxford compromise on the quality of its teaching; the collegiate University will continue to strive to optimise the benefits to students of studying within a dynamic research environment, the active participation of senior research-active academics being an integral feature of the Oxford undergraduate experience. To remain true to these principles, despite the cuts in funding, is to act in the interests of the individual, of the collegiate University and of the economy and society at large.

The primary challenge facing Oxford as a result of the recent funding decisions is to sustain the quality of its teaching following the removal of the HEFCE funding, whilst at the same time continuing to encourage able students from disadvantaged backgrounds to apply to Oxford, and providing those admitted with the financial support to enable them to apply themselves to academic work without having to take employment during term time. To seek to meet this challenge, Council:

(i) approved a fee of £9,000 for home/EU undergraduates commencing study in 2012/13, as recommended by PRAC, together with the associated amendment to the regulations (see further below);
(ii) approved in principle the draft Access Agreement for 2012/13, delegating authority to a small group of Council members to finalise its terms before submission to OFFA by 19 April 2011. Approval of the draft Access Agreement included, in addition to the fee level, the following elements:
(a) on PRAC’s recommendation, a bursary model which preserves the highest level of maintenance support from the University currently available to students in the lowest category of residual household income\(^*\) (RHI) (£3,300 for students with an RHI of less than £16,000 p.a.); after this point, bursary support would be stepped down in £500 bands to an RHI of £42,600. It is proposed to enhance slightly the University’s current overall spend through the extension of the scheme to medical students in their NHS-funded years and to other EEA students. In addition, all students from households with an RHI below £42,600 would receive a start-up bursary of £1,000 or £500;
(b) on PRAC’s recommendation, a programme of partial fee waivers as follows:
- students from households with an RHI below £16,000 would receive a fee waiver of £5,500 in the first year of study, falling to £3,000 in subsequent years. Together with the bursary, this means that the first year of study will be no more expensive for these students than it is now;
- students from households with an RHI between £16,001 and £20,000 would receive a waiver of £2,000 p.a.; and
- students from households with an RHI between £20,001 and £25,000 would receive a waiver of £1,000 p.a.
It is proposed that the programme of waivers for first year students would be supported by the University’s National Scholarship Programme allocation, directed towards those from households with an RHI below £16,000;
(c) on PRAC’s recommendation (subject to approval through the University’s budgeting process for 2012/13), additional spend of up to £1.5m, to support access and outreach work aimed at meeting the targets set in the draft Access Agreement, and to support student retention and support measures. Details of this spending have yet to be finalised, and, as stated, would have to go through the usual budgetary approvals process, but are likely to include up to £750,000 on access and outreach work, and up to £750,000 on additional student services, including induction, financial advice and guidance, counselling, provision for students with disability and careers advice; and

(d) on the Education Committee’s recommendation, the four targets set out in the draft Access Agreement. These relate to increasing the number of UK undergraduate students at Oxford from schools and colleges which historically have had limited progression to Oxford; increasing the number of UK undergraduate students at Oxford from disadvantaged socio-economic backgrounds; increasing the number of UK undergraduate students at Oxford from neighbourhoods with low participation in higher education; and meeting the HEFCE benchmark on disabled students at Oxford.

Effective communication will be critical to the successful implementation of these decisions; potential applicants will need to be informed promptly and, above all, clearly about the support that will be available to them should they be admitted. In addition, Oxford needs to consider in more depth exactly how to take these decisions forward, for example the mechanisms for co-ordinating the access and outreach work of the colleges and the University. Furthermore, as the Access Agreement applies only for one year, its terms will need to be revisited through a process of ongoing review. To assist in examining the next stages in the process—both in the short and medium term—a Congregation Discussion for Tuesday, 10 May (week 2, Trinity term) is planned. Further details will be issued in the Gazette of 24 March.

More information about the implications of the new funding arrangements for Oxford, and for its future students, can be found at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/vc/news/studentfunding and, for the University community, at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/council/Agenda/40311.pdf.

As a consequence of these decisions, the following change to the University’s regulations has been approved by Council. It indicates that the composition fee for 'home' (including EU) students will be £9,000 for the 2012/13 academic year. Further changes to the regulations will be made nearer the time to confirm full details of the fees with effect from 1 September 2012. This change in regulations will come into effect on 1 April 2011 and will be in force from 1 September 2012.

Text of Regulations

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 1102, l.6, as amended by Gazette Supplement 2 March 2011, p. 471, 2., delete ‘£3,375’ and substitute ‘£9,000’.

Oration by the demitting Proctors and Assessor

The following Oration was delivered in Congregation on Wednesday, 16 March, by The Revd Colin Peter Thompson, MA DPhil Oxf, Fellow of St Catherine’s, on demitting office as Senior Proctor.

Senior Proctor: Insignissime Vice-Chancellor: licetne Anglice loqui?

Vice-Chancellor: Licet

Senior Proctor: Colleagues

You may not know that the Elizabethan businessman and MP Richard Watts founded in his will of 1579 a charity in Rochester for six poor travellers, who, ‘not being ROGUES, or PROCTORs’, were to receive gratis for one Night, Lodging, Entertainment, and Fourpence each. Sir Richard was silent on the subject of Assessors. I hasten to add, lest my successors charge me with reckless or deliberate plagiarism, that my source for this information is Wikipedia. This year’s Proctors assumed office already battle-scarred by involvement in University politics, and were no doubt deemed ROGUES by some for that. The Assessor, on the other hand, would have emerged entertained and fourpence richer (index-linked to RPI, one hopes). That this juxtaposition of nouns was no oxymoron was confirmed by the reaction of one of my undergraduate contemporaries at a gaudy party to convocation house down Bath Place, past the Turf Tavern and into St Helen’s Passage. Last March he insisted on doing the same for the new one, to the collective astonishment of a group of overseas tourists loitering there. Goodness knows what they told the folks back home about the episode of Morse into which a rift in the time-space continuum had transported them. Only if they are avid readers of the Gazette will they ever discover whodunit and how.

For those unfamiliar, as our successors may currently be, with the language of committees, the first months in office may make them wonder whether they too have been transported, in their case to a land where plain English is not spoken. An example may help explain this. Those gathered in the Convocation House today may have thought they were present to witness the admission of the Proctors and Assessor. However, in committee-speak, such simplicity is not fit for purpose. Instead, today’s ceremony is a roll-out, for scrutiny by attendees and other stakeholders, of a joined-up suite of Proctors and Assessor. This iteration is to be rolled out robustly and transparently, benchmarked in line with best-practice BIS guidance and embedded for the fulfilment of the student experience, but since this morning’s circular mandates with less of a headline outcomes-focus that this is now to be prioritised as the student journey, of travel with a roadmap comprising a series of steps or actions to progress change management, involving shifts in orientation, cumulative learning outcomes and key performance indicators. In case our successors are now about to turn tail, shed their robes and run (or ‘take the iteration offline’), this is our way of encouraging colleagues with an addiction to what Janet Street-Porter described in a recent Sunday newspaper as Official Bollocks to make a solemn Lenten resolution to give it up, for ever.

The Proctors and Assessors form a Trinity distinct in Persons but one in substance; or, to put it another way, three silos but one synergy. For that reason, though I speak as one I do so (except where noted otherwise) for the three together, each having contributed to the whole. In recent Orations Proctors have sometimes attempted to answer the question ‘What do Proctors do?’ To commemorate the fact that this year, unlike last, we succeeded in electing a Professor of Poetry, I offer this definitive verse summary (though not in the style of Professor Hill). Colleagues who recognise its origin and wish to hum the tune may not do so without written permission from the Proctors.

Going forward in the morning we proceed our bands to tie, thus, Proctorial selves adorning minds to business we apply, and depart without a care to the Kremlin in the Square.

First we sit on some committees where we doodle and pen ditties and learn a dozen acronyms a day. FRAS, PRAC, JRAAB and the JRAM, we know all about the RadCam and we positively love the OIA. Then we sally forth to luncheon, where we thrive on prodigious quantities of ninety-five, after which it’s time to have a little rest because by then we’re feeling very stressed. Then we put on gowns luxurious and issue warnings spurious the last-minute publication of the guidance was intended when announced to lead to a consensual and secure funding future for Higher Education, has merely provided a pretext for political manoeuvring on all sides concerning the future of the sector. We are appalled that public funding is to be removed for the teaching of the humanities and social sciences, as though their contribution to human civilization were some kind of luxury rather than its lifeblood. Institutions which make long-term investments in people, students, tutors and researchers alike, deserve to be treated better by government, not for reasons of self-interest and self-preservation but because they cannot become the liberating, life-enhancing, creative and innovative communities they are intended to be in the face of constantly shifting government directives and ever-growing bureaucratic impositions. Many of us protested about the weighting given to impact in the REF and much good did it do us. There it stands, at twenty per cent, across the board. We believe it is time for universities to stop being so supine in their compliance with the latest poorly thought out mantra from Whitehall and to start explaining their principles and values to the public in a positive sense. We have weathered storms in the past by sticking to our principles, and it is those principles which must pilot us through this one.

Because these woes are weighing heavily on us, we think it the more important in this Oration to draw attention to the achievements we may justly celebrate and to affirm the values we embody. One of the greatest of the former must surely be the transformation of the Bodleian on a scale exceeding that of any other library known in the world. The first manifestation of this, the new Book Storage Facility, was opened last October. I shall not forget the epiphanic moment when the Vice-Chancellor and Bodley’s Librarian appeared together in a hoist on high, like some theatrical dei ex machina descending to sort out the tangled affairs of mortals. The bar-coding of the collection and the transfer of books to the Swindon outpost and back to Oxford when readers request them are proceeding apace. And, like the Windmill Theatre in the Second World War, with which it may otherwise have not too much in common, the Bodleian may boast ‘We never closed’. The Proctors and Assessor were suitably awed by their ascent to the Gormenghastian fastness of the Archive Room in the Great Tower and by their Orphanean descent into the nether world of strange contraptions below Radcliffe Square and the Broad. We suffered our own minor disruption in the summer, when we were carted off to Babylonian exile in New Barnet House before returning to our newly refurbished offices. Our successors will have to live with our choice of artwork, but at present, it’s still a case of bare ruin’d walls where late sweet pictures hung.

It has been a great pleasure to work with Andy Hamilton during the early period of his Vice-Chancellorship. You should see him working the crowds as he emerges from degree ceremonies. His firmly rooted academic values and his belief in consensual decision-making have been very welcome. We have said farewell to our much-admired and loved Registrar, Julie Maxton, and welcomed a former PVC, Ewan McKendrick, to follow in her steps. PVC, incidentally, stands for photovoltaic cells as well as for polyvinyl chloride. There have been other photovoltaic developments, some in the form of musical chairs, some by infusion of new blood. Tony Monaco will leave us in the summer, as he takes up his new post as President of Tufts University. Tony has been a fine servant of the University, assiduous in his attention to an extremely demanding portfolio and always sensitive to the needs of the whole institution, not just those parts of it which current funding arrangements favour. My predecessor expressed some frustration with the slow pace of SPRIG. We are pleased to report that SPRIG has now sprouted. We have heard a number of complaints that the considerable resources of the Development Office have not always been used to best effect in support of the University’s priorities, particularly at divisional level, and we know that our new PVC (Development), Nick Rawlins, is committed to the recalculation of the Campaign. We would like to encourage our academic colleagues to consider service on University committees when vacancies arise, so that the culture of the usual suspects, among whom we must now number ourselves, may be tempered and refreshed by the kind of questioning which is the natural way for academics to assure themselves that possible flaws in the argument are being addressed. The tick-box culture which we all rightly deplore is not sufficient to guard the University against risk or bad decision-making. A truly participatory democracy such as ours makes demands on time and energy. But without the commitment of colleagues to serve it will not flourish as it should.

Another great success story is the Press, the contribution of which to our common endeavour has been especially munificent. We wish to pay tribute in this House to all those who have made this possible. We have seen something of the workings of the Press from within, and are full of admiration for the energy and vision of those who lead it and the commitment of all who work for it. We were privileged to join the Delegates’ visit to New York last July. In the evenings the Junior Proctor was able to display his detailed knowledge of New York night life and the Senior Proctor found himself in establishments which no Nonconformist clergyman ought ever to visit. enjoyed a first-rate working relationship with successive officers of OUSU and are full of admiration for their willingness to engage with us positively over a wide range of issues and for their commitment to the values we share, of which more shortly. We turn now to some matters which have given us cause for concern over the year. The occupation of the Radcliffe Camera at the end of November proved to be a testing time. The University’s security service, the Proctors’ Officers and the library staff acted well beyond the call of duty and we wish to record our appreciation of their contribution to what in the end proved to be a less disruptive experience than in many other universities. Why, even we had a visit from the Cambridge Proctors to seek enlightenment on what might be termed protest management. Those who breach Regulations would be advised to remember that the outgoing Senior Proctor has specialist knowledge of the techniques of the Spanish Inquisition, and will be available at normal consultancy rates. No sooner had we entered office than ash clouds spewed forth from an Icelandic volcano and wrought havoc with planned doctoral vivas. The snows of early winter had a similar effect. We brought a paper to the Education Committee about broadening the permission for vivas to be held by video conferencing in certain circumstances, rather than each request requiring separate Proctorial permission. We have been concerned to note that a growing number of examiners have sought dispensation from attendance at examiners’ meetings—even final meetings—on non-urgent grounds. We remind colleagues that the formal responsibilities they undertake as examiners must be treated with the utmost seriousness; otherwise, the integrity of the whole examination process becomes exposed to challenge. We are worried that the number of plagiarism cases referred to us may only be the tip of the iceberg, because it is essential that the reputation of the degree this University confers be jealously guarded. The great majority of these cases come from international students at the Said Business School. The School has worked very hard, with some Proctorial prodding, to ensure that students are fully informed of what is expected of them, but we have still had to deal with too many pieces of submitted work which are seriously plagiarised or show only the barest grasp of good practice in the citation of source material. Our year’s experience dealing with plagiarism cases has also suggested to us, as it did to our immediate predecessors, that serious consideration needs to be given to the operation of the system as a whole. With this in mind, we presented as part of our annual report to the Education Committee a series of specific recommendations and more general questions concerning the future operation of the University’s regulations on plagiarism. We hope that our successors will be able to work with the Committee on these points. A summary of the disciplinary cases and complaints we have handled will be appended to the published version of this Oration. Any university works at its best when it is an academic democracy, and one of the key aspects of Oxford as a democracy is its federal nature. Like all federal structures—think of the United States or the European Union—there are sometimes tensions between the component parts. Frequently, these are beneficial, but sometimes they go too far. We say this to explain why, as Proctors who are strong believers in the central importance of colleges within Oxford, we have nonetheless been disturbed by the attitude now adopted by a few colleges in the area of so-called student ‘complaints’. Like most UK universities, Oxford does not permit challenges to examiners’ academic judgement about the quality of candidates’ work. However, in a tiny range of cases (generally, where a candidate is absolutely on a borderline) we allow for examiners to be asked to check that there has not been a technical error in compiling the overall mark in a paper or determining the overall classification of a degree. Such requests are made to the Proctors by candidates’ colleges, and colleges are told each year that requests will only be allowed in the very few cases where genuinely plausible grounds are shown. In consequence, College Offices need to make clear to disappointed candidates that they cannot demand marks checks willy-nilly. Most colleges quite properly do this, but we have noticed that a small minority now seem content to pass to the Proctors almost every request they receive, regardless of its plausibility. The result is a huge expenditure of time in the post-examination period responding to a deluge of groundless requests. In one afternoon in late July, for example, the Junior Proctor received from one college eight identically worded requests for different candidates’ marks to be checked because their ‘expectations’ had not been met. No detail was supplied and no borderline was involved. Colleges play a crucial role in defending the interests of their junior members. In this case, as in many others, however, it is hard to tell whether the college was just passing the buck in an attempt to calm an upset student who might better have been told that unmet performing at such a high level, clearly is the discovery of so many of our students. The heart-warming smile of the few truly outstanding ones is more than amply compensated by the fierce competition. The heart-breaking disappointment of most of them has, however, attracted little advocacy on behalf of their examination candidates and unjustifiable or frivolous appeals which should be disposed of at local level.

While the Proctors sometimes see students at their worst, the Assessor reports that he is privileged to see them at their best, for part of his role is sit on, and frequently chair, a number of panels and committees handing out awards for a variety of achievements. 2010 was the first year of the Vice-Chancellor’s Civic Award Scheme. While Oxford has long rewarded academic and sporting achievement, little had been done until recently to recognize students who put time and effort into volunteering. The Civic Award Scheme was set up to recognize ‘exceptional and inspirational individual achievement and personal commitment to improving the state of society and our world’. The Oxford Hub, which coordinates charitable activity among students, did most of the hard work of devising the scheme and shortlisting the nominees; the Assessor’s role was merely to chair the committee that selected the winners, all of whom were alarmingly impressive, dedicated huge amounts of time to local and global causes ranging from education and the environment to healthcare and international development. The selflessness, dedication, drive and initiative of some of our students in these areas is truly humbling. The Proctors intend the fines they have extracted from naughty students to be recycled back into the good works sponsored by the Hub.

Equally impressive are the many applicants for the various competitive academic awards and bursaries the Assessor has to judge. The University of Oxford Gazette • Supplement (I) to No. 4948 • 23 March 2011 support services, to ensure that they are adequately resourced to meet growing demands. One such area, childcare, is already expanding, through its ability to generate revenue. The much-needed provision of a fourth nursery is not the only welcome development. One anomaly in childcare services has been that the salary sacrifice scheme available to staff has not been available to students, since they don’t have any salary to sacrifice, with the perverse result that student parents, usually the least able to pay, end up having to pay more than staff for their childcare. This is now being addressed through a scheme to recycle some childcare funds into support for student childcare. Equally welcome is the decision to make students a priority group on the waiting list for childcare places. It would also be good if before long it also proved possible to give some priority to early career women academics with childcare needs.

The University faces a quite different challenge in environmental sustainability. Here the issue is not only our moral responsibility towards the environment, but the security of our energy supply. An ambitious Carbon Reduction Commitment has been actively discussed in Council and its committees. But in 2010 the University ranked only eighty-ninth out of 104 higher education institutions in the Green League—a league table of universities according to environmental performance published by the student environmental organisation People and Planet. Our new buildings may be more energy-efficient, but the greater amount of research which happens in them means that we are using more energy and emitting more carbon. These issues will need to become more central to our strategic thinking, particularly with the risk of a hike in both energy prices and carbon tax over the next decade. The nature of the carbon tax has already changed so that it’s no longer partly recycled as a reward for good performance. In the future what government short of funds will long be able to resist the temptation to increase carbon taxes in the name of green politics? We need to consider possible investment in generating renewable energy that could lead to substantial savings for the collegiate University. We hope the University will not be deterred from pursuing these ideas by the perversity that doesn’t allow HEIs to enjoy the full financial benefit of such investments while counting them against their carbon reduction commitment.

The Proctors and Assessor have been well supported all year by the members of their office staff. Linda Mason and Ilaria Gualino keep careful watch over examination matters and their advice has been invaluable. Cecilia Neilson has been tenacious in her pursuit of evidence in plagiarism cases, and Clare Brennan has dealt with a wide range of Clubs matters. Caroline Barnes has handled the administration of the office with great aplomb. There is a lot of laughter in the office, not least at the Friday morning staff meetings. Then there is Dr Gasser. What can we say about the rock on which the whole operation is founded which has not been said before or is entirely inadequate for the purpose? If in the realm of Platonic Forms or Ideas there be such a thing as the very essence of Clerkship to Proctordom, then Brian is its living manifestation. Not only do we but the whole University owe a great debt of gratitude to Brian and his colleagues.

Without his extraordinary dedication, Proctors—even the Assessor—would quickly revert to Roguary and the whole operation dissolve back into primeval chaos. If you find these allusions to Platonic and Biblical myth too arcane, then let me simply say, he is legend. We are also very grateful to our Pro-Pros, Angela Brueggemann, Karl Sternberg, Peter Southwell and Andrew Timms, who have cheerfully and willingly assisted us across the full range of our duties, ceremonial, investigatory and disciplinary.

We have done a little gazing into the crystal ball. The JRAM is the mechanism by which we understand how money comes into the University. We are then supposed to ensure that income is distributed according to our academic priorities, but we do not properly know what these cost, because there is no corresponding mechanism for calculating this. Without that, it is hard to begin the debate we need to have, about how much we think we should be spending on what. The devolution of budgets down to departmental and faculty level undoubtedly encourages ownership and responsibility, but it has the unfortunate consequence that some come to believe that ‘this money belongs to us because we have earned it’.

Some of the money we earn is, for example, the result of grant applications, but some comes to us to distribute more broadly as we see best. Because we are a university rather than a collection of competing bodies, a more appropriate attitude would surely be: ‘this money has come to us and our collective enterprise has earned it for those purposes which we shall determine’. We must then find an answer to who is that ‘we’ and where that determination shall be made. Valuable work has begun, notably by SPRIG, in finding more effective mechanisms to align income streams with academic policy. SPRIG was invented to plug a perceived gap in our ability to develop strategic proposals, and it is time to think seriously about the shape and composition of a successor, because that work needs to continue. It is in areas like this, rather than the composition of Council, which still seems to preoccupy HEFCE, that our governance structures might most usefully continue to evolve.

The closing remarks of this Oration are in the first person, though the essence of them is shared by both other members of this demitting Trinity. My first experience of this University was to sit the entrance examination in Keble Hall in 1963 and my subsequent life has been spent and shaped here, save eleven years among the flesh-pots of the south coast. I end, therefore, by reflecting on the best part of half a century of involvement with it. I have in my hand the Proctors’ Memorandum given to me when I came up to Trinity from my provincial grammar school the following year, all twelve pages of it. Those were the days when undergraduates with cars were required to attach green lamps to them, when Junior Members were required to ascertain from the keeper of any lodging-house the latest hour at which they could receive into, or entertain in, their lodgings a member of the opposite sex (diversity in such matters was but a distant dream), and when Cherwell published at the start of each academic year the climbing-in routes to the various colleges at night. O tempora, o Procuratores. I can think of no greater privilege than the opportunity to help fine young minds develop their full potential. We call it teaching, but it is much more than that. In the new funding dispensation, our teaching will come under greater scrutiny, and we must strive to ensure that what we claim for it is demonstrably true. Whether we are beginners in our first tutorial or internationally recognised for our research, all members of the University are united by a disinterested commitment to search out the truth and to understand all that we can about the complexities of human life and of the universe in which it has evolved. We are emphatically not a service provider dispensing ready-made products to consumers so that their private earning power will be enhanced. We do what we do in order to contribute to the public good. The benefits are not measurable in any intelligent way, though they are incalculable. We will inevitably have internal arguments and disputes, but we should never lose sight of what binds us together. When we face governmental pressures born not of principle but of short-term expediency, we must not be afraid to let our voice be heard, because we must not risk selling this birthright for the ephemeral pleasures of a mess of pottage. In a political climate obsessed with targets, league tables and compliance with bureaucratic norms we need to speak up for the old virtues of trust, decency, loyalty and commitment. They bring out the best in all of us. I for one am fed up with being treated as if I could not be trusted to do my best and had to be persuaded to do so by the demands of compliance with this, that or the other. It’s the wrong way round. Universities have their part to play in increasing social mobility, and the government’s overall aim is laudable. But we are at the end of a process which begins even before children enter the educational system at all, and to expect universities to remedy the failures of successive governments to address the origins of social deprivation is the wrong way round.

We could say much more, but will trespass on your patience no longer. We shall not miss the burden of office but we shall miss the companionship, and the privilege of poking our academic noses for just one year into the wonderful variety of activities which inhabit these ancient and modern stones and of getting to know and appreciate those who work so hard across every part of our common life to make everything tick. So, to adapt words we have uttered often enough during our period of service, suppliant venerabili Congregati et Doctorum et Magistrorum Regentium Procuratores et Assessor, qui reperam et dum eram in Universitatis Ephemerides admittatur.1

1The Proctors and the Assessor, who will indeed have fulfilled almost everything that is required by the Statutes, ask the venerable Congregation of Doctors and Regent Masters to admit this Oration to the University Gazette.

Summary of Disciplinary Cases

(Where students were charged with more than one offence relating to the same incident, the case is reported under the most serious of the charges.)

BREACH OF STATUTE XI CODE OF DISCIPLINE

Forgery/falsification of university document and/or dishonest behaviour: 2 (4)

The Student Disciplinary Panel imposed a fine of £200 on a student who had engaged in dishonest behaviour towards the University.

A further case has been referred to the Student Disciplinary Panel.

Misuse of Property (Information Technology facilities): 2 (3)

In one case, the Student Disciplinary Panel imposed a fine of £400 and ordered that restrictions be placed on the offender's access to the University's IT network and facilities.

In one case, the Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing imposed a written warning as to the offender's future conduct.

Engaging in activities likely to cause injury or impair safety and/or disorderly behaviour: 3 (3)

In one case, the Student Disciplinary Panel imposed a written warning as to the offender's future conduct.

In one case, the Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing dismissed the charges brought against a student member of the University.

In one case, the Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing imposed a fine of £300 on an offender.

Inciting or conspiring with other persons to engage in any of the conduct prohibited under the Code of Discipline: 2 (0)

In one case, the Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing imposed a fine of £100 on the offender.

In one case, the Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing imposed a fine of £75 on the offender.

BREACH OF RULES COMMITTEE REGULATIONS

Behaviour after examinations: 8 (5)

The Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing imposed one fine of £250 on one offender who incited or conspired with other student members to breach the Regulations of the Rules Committee.

The Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing charged a further seven offenders and imposed fines as follows: a fine of £230 on one offender who was also found guilty of failing to disclose his/her name; a fine of £100 on one offender who was also found guilty of obstruction; four fines of £80; one fine of £20.

In one case, the Proctors gave the offender a written warning about his/her future conduct.

Immediate Fines: 23

Twenty-three Immediate Fines were imposed—one fine was later withdrawn: one fine of £120; eighteen fines of £80; one fine of £40; one fine of £30; two fines of £20.

In one case, a student who appealed to the Student Disciplinary Panel against the imposition of an Immediate Fine had his/her appeal dismissed.

BREACH OF THE PROCTORS' DISCIPLINARY REGULATIONS FOR UNIVERSITY EXAMINATIONS

Academic misconduct: (including plagiarism): 7 (12)

In two cases, the Student Disciplinary Panel ordered that the offender should be failed in the examination and expelled from the University with immediate effect.

In two cases, the Student Disciplinary Panel ordered that the Examiners should fail the pieces of work concerned. The offenders were permitted to re-submit work on a different topic.

In one case, the Student Disciplinary Panel ordered that the Examiners should fail the piece of work concerned. The offender was permitted to re-sit the examination on a different topic. The Panel also imposed a fine of £250.

In one case, the student was found not guilty.

One further case is pending.

In a further seven cases which were investigated, the Proctors were satisfied that candidates did not intentionally or recklessly breach the Proctors' Disciplinary Regulations for University Examinations in respect of work which they submitted for examination. The Proctors decided that these cases could be dealt with more appropriately within the normal academic process.

In one case carried forward from the previous Proctorial year the Student Disciplinary Panel ordered that the offender be failed in the examination and expelled from the University with immediate effect. The offender applied for but was refused leave to appeal to the Student Appeal Panel against penalty of expulsion imposed by the Student Disciplinary Panel.

Unauthorised materials in an examination room: 2 (7)

The Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing imposed a fine of £30 on one candidate who took a mobile phone into a University examination.

In a further case, the Proctors' Disciplinary Hearing imposed a fine of £40 on a candidate who took a Blackberry into a University examination.

Total cases where charges were brought: 26 (41)

OTHER MATTERS

A student member of the University's appeal to the Student Disciplinary Panel was not upheld. He/she applied for but was refused leave to appeal to the Student Appeal Panel against an ongoing Suspension Order.

Two further cases concerned students who appealed to the Student Disciplinary Panel against the imposition of Suspension Orders. These cases are ongoing.

The Proctors dealt with 208 (266) new cases of students reported by libraries for non-payment of fines and/or non-return of books. Replacement costs recovered for non-returned books: £2,055.52; library fines imposed: £5,203.29. Total amount recovered: £7,258.81.

No fines were imposed on student organisations registered with the Proctors for failing to comply with administrative provisions in part 1 of the Regulations of the Rules Committee.

Summary of Complaints Cases

During 2010–11, the Proctors received a total of 124 complaints for investigation under the provisions of Statute IX and the relevant Council Regulations, compared with 152 the previous year. In addition, they completed the investigation of complaints left over from the previous Proctorial Year. In four of the new cases where the Proctors had prior involvement or other potential conflict of interest, the Vice-Chancellor appointed other members of Congregation to deal with the matter in their place. In summary:

_Taught-course examinations (undergraduate and postgraduate): 105 (131)_

Of these new cases, nineteen involved a straightforward marks check and did not lead to further action. The Proctors upheld a total of thirty-four complaints relating to new cases, in whole or in part. Twenty-one cases remain under consideration.

_Research student matters: 8 (8)_

The Proctors upheld three of these complaints, in addition to three complaints from previous years or continuing previous complainants’ claims. Three cases remain under consideration.

_Equal Opportunities: 0 (0)_

_Harassment: 6 (2)_

Three cases remain under consideration. One case is being dealt with under the Proctors’ disciplinary procedures.

_Maladministration: 2 (4)_

The Proctors upheld one of the complaints and although the second complaint was dismissed they made separate arrangements to put the complainant back in touch with the University department concerned for an alternative resolution of the problem. One case carried forward from the previous year was upheld.

_Quality of/access to teaching, learning, support facilities: 0 (3)_

Some of the cases reported elsewhere include representations about matters such as quality of supervision.

_Suspension/rustication: 0 (0)_

_Student Union: 1 (3)_

The complaint remains under consideration.

_Other: 2 (1)_

The complaints are still under consideration.

_Total new complaints: 124, of which 38 were upheld in whole or in part, with appropriate redress being provided; 56 were dismissed, withdrawn, or required no further action; and 30 remain under consideration._

Congregation 10 May 2 p.m.

The further consideration of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 10 May, in the Sheldonian Theatre. The topic will be the further consideration of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13. In light of the decisions taken by Council on 14 March (see Gazette No. 4948, 17 March 2011, p. 515 for more information).

The topic of the Discussion is cast in deliberately broad terms to allow members of Congregation to express their views on the range of issues that fall under this head. However, Congregation is invited in particular to consider how access and outreach work across the collegiate University might best be co-ordinated, how to reach and explain to potential students and their families the consequences of the new arrangements; the nature of the support to be provided to students on course from 2012/13; how to engage the donor community effectively; and what the aims of Oxford’s access and outreach activities beyond 2012/13 might be. Prefatory remarks will be made by senior officers to explain, inter alia, the implications of the new arrangements and to highlight the issues that Oxford will need to address in the longer term.

Further information to facilitate the Discussion, including a summary of the Access Agreement as submitted to OFFA, will be provided on the Congregation website at www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting in due course (it is understood that the Agreement itself will be published on the OFFA website by mid July 2011 once it has been approved by OFFA). In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 6 May, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 19 May and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting).

As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 11 May.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to nominated representatives of OUSU as agreed in advance by the Vice-Chancellor. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of a valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.45 p.m. The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

Note on procedures in Congregation

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/212-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463; email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
Notices

Industrial action
A number of academic and academic-related staff may have participated in the strike action organised by the UCU on 22 and/or 24 March 2011.

Any such member of staff is asked to complete the payroll deduction form provided at www.ox.ac.uk/staff/staff_comms/industrialaction and send it to the Payroll Office. The form provides authorisation for the deduction of one day's pay (calculated on the basis of 1/345 of annual salary) for each day of strike action taken.

Gazette publication arrangements
This is the last Gazette of Hilary term. Publication for Trinity term will begin on 28 April. The deadline for receipt of items for publication in the Gazettes of 28 April and 5 May will be brought forward because of the Easter office closure and the bank holidays on 29 April and 2 May:

- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 28 April: noon on Wednesday, 13 April
- deadline for receipt of items for issue of 5 May: noon on Wednesday, 20 April

Appointments

Regius Professorship of History
Her Majesty the Queen has approved the appointment of Lyndal Anne Roper, BA Melbourne, PhD London, Fellow and Tutor in History, Balliol College, to the Regius Professorship of History with effect from 1 October 2011.

Professor Roper will be a fellow of Oriel College.

Corrigendum:

Chichele Professorship of Economic History
Kevin Hjortshøj O’Rourke, BA Dublin, MA PhD Harvard, Professor of Economics, Department of Economics and IIS, Trinity College, Dublin, has been appointed to the Chichele Professorship of Economic History-elect within the History Faculty with effect from 21 March 2011, initially on a part-time basis. He will take up the Chichele Professorship of Economic History full time with effect from autumn 2011.

Professor O’Rourke will be a fellow of All Souls College from 1 October 2011.

Subject: 'The relationship between religious experience and religious belief: Essentialism, scholarly vaivety, or logical positivism?'

MAJESKIL LECTURE

Dr James Hegarty will lecture at 5 p.m. on Monday, 16 May.
Subject: 'Telling the world: exploring the cultural and intellectual agenda of the Sanskrit Mahabbhārata.'

---

BAMPTON LECTURES

God's presence: a contemporary recapitulation of early Christianity

Frances Young, Emeritus Professor of Theology, Birmingham will deliver the Trinity Term Bampton Lectures at 5 p.m. on the following Tuesdays in the University Church of St Mary the Virgin.
3 May: 'From Adam and Eve to Mary and Christ: in, redemption, atonement.'
10 May: 'From inspiration to sanctification: the spirit of wisdom and holiness.'
17 May: 'From the Church to Mary: towards a critical ecumenism.'
24 May: 'From dogma to Theoria: God as Trinity.'

SPEAKER'S LECTURES IN BIBLICAL STUDIES

New Testament hermeneutics

Ulrich Luz, Professor Emeritus of New Testament, Bern, will deliver the Speaker's Lectures at 10 a.m. on the following dates in the Examination Schools.

Mon. 2 May: 'My hermeneutical situation and the task of a theological hermeneutic of the New Testament.'
Tues. 3 May: 'Modern and postmodern pluralities and their limits.'
Wed. 4 May: 'Painting biblical texts: interpreting the New Testament through visual arts.'
Mon. 9 May: 'Chances of a hermeneutic of effective history.'
Tues. 10 May: 'Perspectives of the New Testament for a biblical hermeneutic.'
Wed. 11 May: 'Guidelines for truth in interpretations of New Testament texts.'

HUSSEY LECTURE ON THE CHURCH AND THE ARTS

Melissa Raphael, Professor of Jewish Theology, Gloucestershire, will deliver the annual Hussey Lecture at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, 11 May, in the Examination Schools.

IAN RAMSEY CENTRE FOR SCIENCE AND RELIGION SEMINAR SERIES

The following seminars will be given at 8.30 p.m. on Thursdays in the Old Dining Room, Harris Manchester College. Free and open to the public. Drinks reception at 8.15 p.m.

Dr Fraser Watts, Cambridge

12 May: 'Evolutionary theology without the concept of “progress”.'

Dr Stephen Clarke

26 May: 'Morality, neuroscience, and religion: the sacred rites in Kant’s soul.'

Professor Peter J. Hampson, West of England

9 June: 'Theology and academic psychology.'

Theology/English/Music/History of Art

TEXTS IN TRANSIT: THE CULTURAL AFTERLIFE OF THE KING JAMES BIBLE

A day conference to mark the 400th anniversary of the King James Bible will take place on Saturday, 25 June, at Rewley House. Speakers include Gordon Campbell, Andrew Gant, David Norton, Christopher Rowland, Ellie Bagley and Carol Jacob. Further information is available at www.conted.ox.ac.uk. To book, call 01865 270380 or email ppdayweek@conted.ox.ac.uk.

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

WELDON MEMORIAL PRIZE LECTURE

Professor Russell S. Lande, Royal Society Research Professor at Imperial College, London, Division of Biology, Section of Ecology and Evolution, will deliver the Weldon Memorial Lecture at 5 p.m. on Monday, 9 May, Lecture Theatre A, Tinbergen Building, Department of Zoology.

Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences

WELDON MEMORIAL PRIZE LECTURE

Professor Russell S. Lande, Royal Society Research Professor at Imperial College, London, Division of Biology, Section of Ecology and Evolution, will deliver the Weldon Memorial Lecture at 5 p.m. on Monday, 9 May, Lecture Theatre A, Tinbergen Building, Department of Zoology.

Subject: 'Inheritance, selection and evolution of correlated characters.'

Maurice Lubbock Memorial Lecture

Professor Thomas Hofmann, Director of Engineering, Google Zurich, will deliver the Maurice Lubbock Memorial Lecture at 4.45 p.m. on Tuesday, 7 June, in Lecture Room 1, Department of Engineering Science. For further information contact Sara Kingsbury: head@eng.ox.ac.uk.

Subject: 'Google—one billion searches a day and counting.'

ZOOLOGY DEPARTMENTAL RESEARCH SEMINAR

The following seminars will be given at 4 p.m. on Mondays in Lecture Theatre B, Department of Zoology.

Professor Nicola S. Clayton, Cambridge

16 May: 'The ape on your bird table.'

Professor Samir Okasha, Bristol

23 May: 'Veil-of-ignorance arguments in evolutionary genetics, economics, and political philosophy: Mendel meets Rawls and Harsanyi.'
Department of Materials weekly colloquia

The following colloquia will be given on Thursdays at 4 p.m. in the Hume Rotbery Lecture Theatre preceded by tea at 3.30 p.m.

Dr Alexandra Porter, Imperial, London
5 May: ‘Imaging the structural degradation of carbon nanomaterials in the brain at high resolution.’

Professor Michiel Sprik, Cambridge
12 May: ‘Thermochemical and electronic analysis of hydroxyl formation at the rutile TiO2(110)-water interface.’

Professor Gerhard Dehm, Erich Schmid Institute of Materials Science and Montanuniversität, Leoben, Austria
19 May: ‘Towards a quantitative understanding of deformation behaviour at the micro- and nano-scale.’

Professor W.I. Milne, Cambridge
26 May: ‘Carbon nanotubes for electronic applications?’

Theoretical Physics Colloquia Seminars

Seminars are given at 2.15 p.m. on Fridays on odd weeks of term in the Dennis Sciama Lecture Theatre. You are encouraged to bring your lunch to the Discussion Room of the Rudolf Peierls Centre for Theoretical Physics from 1 p.m. onwards and meet the speaker. Organiser: John Wheater.

Ray Goldstein, Cambridge
6 May: ‘Physics of multicellularity.’

Ed Copeland, Nottingham
20 May: ‘Models of dark energy.’

David Shelton, BAML
3 June: ‘An introduction to the mathematics of financial derivatives and the problem of counterparty risk.’

Udo Seifert, Stuttgart
17 June: ‘Stochastic thermodynamics.’

Theoretical Chemistry Group Seminars

The following seminars will be given on Mondays at 4.45 p.m. in the John Rowlinson Seminar Room (20.12) in the John Rowlinson Main Lecture Theatre. All welcome. Convenor: Dr M. Wilson.

Dr Carmen Domene
9 May: ‘Computer simulation and modelling of biological systems.’

Professor Adrian Mulholland, Bristol
23 May: ‘Computational enzymology: insights into biological catalysts from modelling.’

Physical Chemistry Seminars

The following seminars will be given on Mondays at 2.15 p.m. in PTCL Large Lecture Theatre, unless otherwise stated. All welcome. Convenors: Professor F.J. Hore and Dr S. Mackenzie.

Professor Eleanor Campbell, Edinburgh
2 May: ‘Fullerenes and nanotubes: from photoionisation to NEMS.’

Dr Philip Kukura
9 May: ‘New adventures in ultrafast and single molecule optics.’

Soft Matter, Biomaterials and Interfaces Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4 p.m. in the John Rowlinson Seminar Room (20.12) opposite the PTCL Main Lecture Theatre. All welcome. Convenors: Dr R.P.A. Dullens and Professor R. Golestanian.

Christoph Schmidt, Göttigen
3 May: ‘Active biomaterials: from model systems to cells.’

Peter Lenz, Marburg
17 May: ‘How a bacterial cell organizes its interior—a theoretical physics approach.’

Albert Philipse, Utrecht
24 May: ‘Cubic crystals from cubic colloids.’

Josef Kaes, Leipzig
31 May: ‘Are biomechanical changes necessary for tumor progression?’

Sarah Harris, Leeds
7 June: ‘Molecular mayhem! Dynamics, defects and disorder: modelling biomacromolecules with supercomputers.’

Oxford Physics Colloquia

The following lectures will be given at 4.15 p.m., unless stated otherwise, on Fridays in the Martin Wood Lecture Theatre, Clarendon Laboratory, Tea in the Common Room at 3.45 p.m. Conveners: J. March-Russell, R. Davies and P. Radaelli.

Professor David Gross
20 May, 4.30 p.m.: Cherwell Simon Lecture 2011: ‘The frontiers of fundamental physics.’

Professor Kip S. Thorne
27 May, 5 p.m.: Dennis Sciama Memorial Lecture: ‘Black-hole research: a new golden age.’

Professor Lawrence Hall
3 June: ‘Dark matter at the Large Hadron Collier.’

Professor Douglas Finkbeiner
17 June: ‘Giant gamma-ray bubbles in the inner galaxy: AGN activity or bipolar galactic wind?’

Solid Mechanics and Materials

Engineering Group Seminar Series

The following seminars will be given at 2 p.m. on Mondays in LR8, IEB Building, Department of Engineering Science.

Dr Adrian Thomas, Siemens
9 May: ‘Superconducting magnets for MRI: technology developments and challenges.’

Professor John Yates, Manchester
16 May: Title to be confirmed.

Dr Ettore Barbieri
23 May: ‘Meshfree methods for computational fracture mechanics.’

Dr Pedro Baiz Villafranca, Imperial College, London
6 June: ‘Advanced numerical techniques for modelling of thin walled structures.’

Dr Jason Foley, Air Force Research Laboratory Munitions Directorate, Eglin AFB, FL
13 June: ‘Broadband mechanics of structures under shock.’

Daniel Mulvihill
20 June: ‘On the behaviour of frictional interfaces: experiments and modelling.’

Strachey Lecture in Computer Science

Linda Northrop, Director of the Research, Technology and Systems Solution Program at the Software Engineering Institute (SEI), Carnegie Mellon University, will deliver the Trinity Term Strachey Lecture in Computer Science at 4.40 p.m. on Tuesday, 10 May, in Lecture Theatre B, Computing Laboratory. Subject: ‘The impact of scale.’

Particles and Fields Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 4.15 p.m. on Thursdays in the Dennis Sciama Lecture Theatre, Department of Physics. Conveners: Professor Subir Sarkar and Dr Stefan Zohren.

Dr Ulrich Haisch
5 May: ‘Flavour physics.’

Dr Luis Fernando Alaiday
12 May: ‘Ads/CFT integrability.’

Dr Christopher Luhn, Southampton
19 May: ‘Tri-bimaximal mixing from discrete symmetries.’

Dr Philippe Di Francesco, CEA Saclay
26 May: ‘Solution of the quantum 11T-system.’

Professor Kelly Stelle, Imperial College, London
2 June: ‘Maximally supersymmetric Yang-Mills theories.’
Professor John Cardy
9 June: ‘Conformal field theory.’

Professor Chris Sachrajda, Southampton
16 June: ‘Phenomenology on the lattice.’

Dr Nabanita Bhattacharyya, IISER
Kolkata
23 June: ‘SUSY signals at the LHC 7 TeV runs.’

Computational Mathematics and Applications Seminars
The following seminars will be held on Thursdays at 2 p.m. in Seminar Room R10.48, Gibson Building, Maths Institute, except for 12 May and 23 June, which will be held at 2 p.m. at the Rutherford Appleton Laboratory near Didcot. For updates please see our seminar website: http://www.maths.ox.ac.uk/events/seminars/upcoming/PIOYID/4/877. For further information: lotti.ekert@maths.ox.ac.uk. Conveners: Professor Nick Trefethen and Dr Sue Thorne, RAL.

Professor Bob Russell, Simon Fraser

Dr Shahrokh Shahpar, Rolls-Royce
5 May: ‘SOHY: An automated, Aerothermal Design and Optimisation System for Aero-Engine Components.’

Professor Andrew Cliffe, Nottingham
12 May (at RAL): To be announced.

Dr Maciek Korzec, Weierstrass Institute Berlin
19 May: ‘Modelling and simulation of the self-assembly of thin solid films.’

Dr Jens-Peter Zemke, Hamburg-Harburg University of Technology
26 May: To be announced.

Professor Assyr Abdulle, École polytechnique fédérale de Lausanne
2 June: ‘Analysis of a multiscale method for nonlinear nonmonotone elliptic problems.’

Dr Daan Huybrechs, Catholic University of Leuven
9 June: ‘Several kinds of Chebyshev polynomials in higher dimensions.’

Speaker to be announced (this date might be cancelled)
16 June: To be announced.

Dr Heather Tewkesbury, Smith Institute (to be confirmed)
23 June (at RAL): To be announced.

Department of Earth Sciences
SEMINAR SERIES
The following seminars will be given on Fridays, except where noted, at 4 p.m. in the Seminar room, Department of Earth Sciences.

Professor Raul Madariaga, Ecole Normale Superieure

Professor Charles Langmuir, Harvard
13 May: (Leverhulme Lecture) ‘Insights from ocean ridges on the composition and melting of Earth’s mantle.’

Professor Peter Kelemen, Columbia / LDEO
16 May (Monday): ‘In situ mineral carbonation (and hydration) in peridotite for CO2 capture and storage.’

Professor Dan McKenzie, Cambridge
20 May: Title to be confirmed.

Professor Andy Jackson, Swiss Federal Institute of Technology/ETH
27 May: ‘Geomagnetic secular variation as a window on the dynamics of Earth’s core.’

Professor Alex Rogers, Zoological Society of London/Oxford
3 June: Visit and title to be confirmed. Please check beforehand.

Professor Peter Molnar, Colorado/CIRECS
10 June: ‘The gradual closing of the Indonesian Seaway, El Niño, and the onset of Northern Hemisphere ice ages.’

GEOBIOLOGICAL SEMINAR SERIES
The following seminars will be given during May at 1 p.m., when the Department of Earth Sciences welcomes international speakers on a range of geobiological topics.

Professor Nora Noftke, Old Dominion, VA
6 May: ‘Turbulent Lifestyle: Cyanobacteria on Earth’s sandy beaches – today and 3 billion years ago.’

Professor Martin Brasier
9 May: ‘Pumice as a remarkable substrate for the origin of life.’

Profess Lynn Margulis, Massachusetts
10 May: ‘Pectinatella magnifica and its photosynthetic bacteria: implications for Palaeozoic bryozoan reefs.’

Mathematical Biology and Ecology Seminars
The seminars are held on Fridays, at 2 p.m., in Lecture Room 2 (unless otherwise stated) at the Mathematical Institute. Convenor: Sara Jolliffe (email: cmb@maths.ox.ac.uk).

Dr J. Krishnan, London
6 May: ‘Modelling and analysis of cellular signal processing underlying attractive and repulsive gradient sensing in eukaryotic systems.’

Professor Bingham, London
20 May: ‘Dynamics of persistent infection with the human leukaemia virus, HTLV-1.’

Professor K Foster
3 June: ‘Social evolution in microbes.’

Professor S. Gupta
17 June: ‘Using multi-locus models to understand pathogen evolution.’

Department of Plant Sciences research seminars
The following seminars will be given at 4 p.m. on Thursdays in the Large Lecture Theatre, Department of Plant Sciences. Convenor: Professor N. Harberd.

Professor E. J. C. Mellor
5 May: ‘Defining dynamic transcription units in yeast – does it make sense or antisense?’

Professor D. Lawrence Venable, Arizona
12 May: ‘Ecological population and community dynamics: long-term data from desert annual plants.’

Dr Paula X. Kover, Bath
19 May: ‘Evolutionary genetics of flowering time in Arabidopsis thaliana.’

Dr Philip Wigge, John Innes Centre
26 May: ‘Temperature Sensing in Plants.’

Professor Alex Halliday
2 June: ‘The origin of Earth-like planets.’

Professor Elliot M. Meyerowitz, California Institute of Technology (GE Blackman Lecture)
9 June: ‘Plant computational morphodynamics: predictive modelling of plant development.’

Professor Kathy Willis
16 June: ‘Using the past to predict the future: disentangling the complexity of plant community responses to intervals of rapid environmental change.’

Professor Keith Gull
23 June: ‘Insights to function and evolution of the microtubule cytoskeleton: from trypanosomes to plants.’

Medical Sciences
Neuroscience Grand Round Guest Lectures
The following lectures will be given at 11.30 a.m. on Fridays in Lecture Theatre 1, Academic Block, John Radcliffe Hospital.

Professor Irene Tracey
8 Apr: ‘Imaging pain and its relief in the human brain.’

Dr Jeremy Rees, Institute of Neurology, London
20 May: ‘Advances in neuro-oncology—a neurologist’s perspective.’

Professor Bengt Linderoth, Karolinska University Hospital, Sweden

27 May: ‘Spinal stimulation for pain: what happened after the Gate Control Theory?’

Professor Siddharthan Chandran, Edinburgh

10 June: ‘The future of stem cell therapy in neurodegenerative disorders.’

Mok Hing Yiu Memorial Lecture

Professor Joseph Sung, Mok Hing Yiu Professor of Medicine and Vice-Chancellor, Chinese University of Hong Kong, will deliver the Mok Hing Yiu Memorial Lecture at 5.15 p.m. on Thursday, 12 May, in Lecture Theatre 1, John Radcliffe Hospital.

Subject: ‘From SARS to influenza: reflections of a physician on leadership.’

Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics seminar series

The following seminars will be given at 1 p.m. on Fridays in the Library, Sherrington Building, Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics. Convener: Dr D. Goberdhan.

Professor Rick Born, Harvard

6 May: ‘The role of cortical feedback in shaping centre-surround interactions in primate visual cortex.’

Professor Ajay Shah, Kings College, London

13 May: ‘Isoform-specific roles of Nox family oxides in the heart.’

Professor Lucilla Poston, Kings College London (G. L. Brown Prize Lecture)

20 May: ‘Born to be big? How early life environment may ‘programme’ obesity.’

Professor Paul Riley, University College, London (Jenkinson Seminar)

27 May: ‘Activating the adult epicardium towards DIY heart repair.’

Dr Rick Livesey, Cambridge

3 June: ‘Stem cell models of human cortical development and disease.’

Professor Shihab Shamma, Maryland

10 June: ‘Role of coherence and rapid cortical plasticity in active perception of complex auditory senses.’

Professor Peter Cullen, Bristol

17 June: ‘Phosphoinositides and the regulations of the endo-lysosomal network.’

Professor Christian Aalkjaer, Aarhus

24 June: ‘Biocarbonate and Chloride transport in vascular smooth muscle—importance for vascular function.’

Pharmacology, Anatomical Neuropharmacology and Drug Discovery Seminars

The following seminars will be given at 12.30 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Lecture Theatre, Department of Pharmacology. Convener: Professor Antony Galione.

Professor Peter Jonas, Institute of Science and Technology (IST), Vienna

3 May: ‘Functional properties of fast-spiking GABAergic interneurons in the hippocampal network. (David Smith Lecture)

Martin Bootman, Babraham Institute, Cambridge

10 May: ‘Why, where and when do cardiac myocytes express inositol 1,4,5-trisphosphate receptors?’

Dr Jeff Dalley, Cambridge

17 May: ‘Neural vulnerability mechanisms underlying stimulant addiction.’

Dr Ed Boyden, MIT

24 May: ‘Optogenetics: controlling brain circuits with light.’

Professor Xin Lu

31 May: ‘From cell death to sudden death: an iASPP story that connects p53 to cardiomyopathy.’

Dr Stephanie Schorge, UCL

7 June: ‘Lentiviral-mediated over-expression of the potassium channel Kv1.1 as a treatment for focal neocortical epilepsy.’

Professor Michael Duchen, UCL

Professor Dimitri Kullmann, UCL

21 June: ‘Computations in interneuron circuits.’

Sir William Dunn School of Pathology departmental research seminars

The following seminars will be held on Thursdays at 4 p.m. in the Medical Sciences Teaching Centre Lecture Theatre, unless otherwise indicated.

Professor Stephen Brimijoin, Mayo Clinic

5 May: ‘Mid-stream interception: progress towards a treatment for cocaine abuse by gene-transfer of engineered, cocaine-destroying enzymes.’

Dr Ervin Fodor

12 May: ‘Influenza virus RNA polymerase: from transcriptional control to innate immunity.’

Professor Nick Proudfoot

19 May: ‘Gene punctuation in eukaryotes: R-loops, gene loops and non-coding RNA.’

Professor Neil Barclay, EPA chair of Chemical Pathology, Sir William Dunn School of Pathology

5 p.m. Thurs. 26 May, Natural History Museum: ‘Leukocyte membrane proteins and control of the immune system.’

(Inaugural lecture)

Professor Tony Green

Tues. 31 May: ‘Human myeloproliferative neoplasms—JAK/STAT signalling and stem cell subversion.’ (Newton Abraham Lecture)

Dr David Greaves

6 June: ‘Regulation of inflammation and new approaches to the development of anti-inflammatory drugs.’

Professor Steve P. Watson, Birmingham

23 June: ‘The platelet C-type lectin receptor GLEC-2 and lymphatic development.’

Ludwig Institute for Cancer Research

SIGNALLING PATHWAYS AND GENETICS OF CANCER SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given at 11 a.m. on Wednesdays in the Ludwig/Jenner Seminar Room, Level -1, Old Road Campus Research Building. Convener: Dr G. Bond.

Professor Hagan Bayley

15 June: ‘Engineered protein pores in biotechnology: from cell permeabilisation to single-molecule DNA sequencing’

Professor Charles Streuli, Manchester

13 July: ‘Title to be confirmed.

Special Seminar

Professor Sir Alan Fersht, Cambridge, will give the following seminar 2 p.m. on Friday, 3 June, in the Lecture Theatre, Richard Doll Building, Old Road Campus, Headington.

Convener: Professor X. Lu.

Subject: ‘The tumour suppressor p53: from structure to drug discovery.’

Oxford Centre for Diabetes, Endocrinology and Metabolism

The following seminars will be given at 12.45 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Robert Turner Lecture Theatre at OCEMD, Churchill Hospital

Professor Graham Williams, Imperial College, London

11 May: ‘Regulation of skeletal development and bone mass by thyroid hormones.’

Host: Professor Raj Thacker

Professor John Danesh, Cambridge

18 May: To be confirmed.

Host: Professor Rury Holman
Professor Nancy Manley, Georgia
25 May: ‘Strange bedfellows: organogenesis and function of the thymus and parathyroids.’
Host: Professor Raj Thacker

Professor Colin Baigent
1 June: ‘Should we lower LDL cholesterol in patients with kidney disease?’
Host: Professor Jonathan Levy
8 June: To be confirmed.
15 June: To be confirmed.

Professor Ashley Grossman
22 June: ‘Pituitary tumours: where do they come from?’
Host: To be confirmed.

Social Sciences
Astor Visiting Lecturer

Professor Richard Reynolds, United States Geological Survey, Denver, will deliver a lecture at 4 p.m. on Monday, 9 May, in the Halford Mackinder Lecture Theatre, School of Geography and the Environment. Subject: ‘Earth system dynamics—linking atmospheric dust, landscape change, and bio-dynamics in North America.’

Said Business School

NOVAK DRUCE CENTRE FOR PROFESSIONAL SERVICE FIRMS SEMINAR SERIES

Paula Jarzabkowski, Aston Business School, will lecture at 4.30 p.m. on Thursday, 5 May, in the Boardroom, Said Business School. Subject: ‘Grasping risk: models, materials and judgment in reinsurance trading.’

Markus Reihlen, Leuphana, Lüneburg, will lecture at 2.30 p.m. on Friday, 3 June, in the Andrew Cormack Seminar Room, Said Business School. Subject: ‘Governance of professional service firms: a configuration theory.’

DISTINGUISHED SPEAKER SEMINARS

Dr Richard Ward, Chief Executive Officer, Lloyd’s of London, will deliver a Distinguished Speaker Seminar at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, 4 May, in the Edmond Safra Lecture Theatre, Said Business School, followed by a drinks reception. To register: www.sbs.oxford.edu/events/ward. Subject: ‘Risk management—a journey from the merely unlikely to the totally unpredictable’

Mr Justin King, Chief Executive, J. Sainsbury plc, will deliver a Distinguished Speaker Seminar at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, 24 May, in Lecture Theatre 4, Said Business School, followed by a drinks reception. To register: www.sbs.oxford.edu/events/king. Subject: ‘Fair trade.’

NearEastMed (NEM) Archaeology Group Seminar Series

The following seminars will be given at 1 p.m. on Thursdays of weeks in the Lecture Room, Institute of Archaeology. Refreshments follow. Conveners: Dr Jack Green, Dr Catherine Draycott, Dr Anja Ulbrich and Dr Yannis Galanakis.

David Blackman
12 May: ‘Minoan seafarers, Egypt and the Levant.’

Lindy Crewe, Manchester
26 May: ‘Community interaction in Bronze Age Cyprus: global to local and back again, at Kissonerga.’

Wolfgang Zinkel, Mainz

Environmental Law Discussion Group Event

Professor Jane Cohen, Edward Clark Centennial Professor, Texas, will lecture at 12.30 p.m. on Thursday, 5 May, in the Seminar Room, Corpus Christi. Light lunch provided. Subject: ‘The changing domain of water wisdom: supply, demand, and so much else?’

Bapsybanoo Marchioness of Winchester Lecture

Professor J.D.Y. Peel, Professor Emeritus, SOAS, London, will deliver the Bapsybanoo Marchioness of Winchester Lecture at 5 p.m. on Thursday, 19 May, in the Examination Schools. Subject: ‘Nigerian religious movements and the anthropology of world religions.’

Department of Education

PHILOSOPHY OF EDUCATION SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN (OXFORD BRANCH) SEMINARS

The following seminars will be given from 5-6.30 p.m. at 15 Norham Gardens. Conveners: Dr Alis Oancea, Dr Lorraine Foreman-Peck, Janet Orchard (Bristol).

Dr Andrew Davis, Durham
10 May (Seminar Room D): ‘Religious pluralism for religious education.’

Professor David Bridges, Cambridge
16 May (Seminar Room A): ‘Widening participation for what? Equality and quality in the higher education access debate.’

Professor Gert Biesta, Stirling
23 May (Seminar Room A): ‘The future of teacher education: competence, evidence or wisdom?’

Dr Graham Haydon, Institute of Education, London
1 June (Seminar Room D): ‘Values education and wellbeing: the current state of play (internationally):’

Dan Moulin
7 June (Seminar Room D): ‘The untold story of Tolstoy’s educational thought.’

Department of Social Policy and Intervention

ZOLA SKWEYIYA LECTURE ON SOUTH AFRICAN SOCIAL POLICY

Dr Zola Skweyiya, South African High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, will deliver the first Zola Skweyiya Lecture on South African Social Policy at 5 p.m. on Tuesday, 17 May, in the Department of Social Policy and Intervention, Barnett House, 32 Wellington Square, Oxford. Provisional subject: ‘Current issues in South African Social Policy.’

Unit for Biocultural Variation and Obesity seminar

The seminars will be given at 1 p.m. on Thursdays, except the final one, which will be on Tuesday, in 61 Banbury Rd. Convener: Professor Stanley Ulijaszek.

Dr Caroline Potter
5 May: ‘Predictable obesity? An ecological approach for identifying future health risk.’

Dr Tenna Jensen, Copenhagen

Dr Anna Lavis, Goldsmiths
19 May: ‘Dialectical engagements: exploring relationships between pro-anorexia and the clinic.’

Dr Abdulrahman El-Sayed

Israel: Historical, Political and Social Aspects lecture series

The following lectures will be given at 8 p.m. in the Lower Lecture Room, Lincoln College, and followed by a drinks reception. Convener: Peter Oppenheimer.

Professor Colin Schindler, SOAS
5 May: ‘Trotskyists and Zionists—the path to Utopia.’
Dr Roni Shweka, Hebrew University 9 May: ‘The journey of Israeli rock in search for a Jewish identity.’

Professor Benny Morris, Ben Gurion University 16 May: ‘Israel and Palestine—is it too late for the two states solution?’

Annual Elizabeth Colson Lecture Professor Didier Fassin, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton; Director of Studies, École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales, Paris; and President, French Medical Committee for Exiles, will deliver the annual Elizabeth Colson Lecture at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, 15 June, at the Refugee Studies Centre, Oxford Department for International Development.

Subject: ‘The vanishing truth of refugees.’

Oxford Transitional Justice Research (OTJR) Seminar Series

The following seminars will be given at 5 p.m. on Tuesdays in Seminar Room D, Manor Road Building except for Week 2, which will take place on 12 and 13 May at St Anne’s College. Convenor: emily.braid@all-souls.ox.ac.uk.

Dr Nathalie Nguyen, Melbourne 3 May: ‘Memory in the aftermath of war: Australian responses to the Vietnamese refugee crisis of 1975–76.’

Various guest speakers, please see www.csls.ox.ac.uk/otjr.php

12 and 13 May: ‘Symposium: Beyond Kampala—the ICC, the crime of aggression and the future of the Court.’

Dr Francesca Lessa 17 May: ‘Nunca Más: the politics of transitional justice in Argentina and Uruguay, 1983–2010.’

Professor Stephan Parmentier, Leuven Institute of Criminology 26 May: ‘Reparation and reconciliation in post-conflict Bosnia and Serbia: what role for socio-legal studies?’

Emily Winterbotham, Afghanistan Research and Evaluation Unit (AREU) 31 May: ‘Legacies of conflict: healing complexes and moving forwards in Afghanistan.’

Dr Melanie Klinkner, Bournemouth 7 June: ‘The role of physical evidence from Cambodia’s killing fields in the quest for justice.’

Peter Manning, LSE 7 June: ‘Complementary knowledges: the therapeutic and legal governance of memory at the extraordinary chambers in the courts of Cambodia.’

Professor Paul Gready, York 14 June: ‘Aftermaths: South Africa after transitional justice.’

Dana Mills 21 June: ‘Between collectivism and individualism: the reflection of the Israeli-German relationship in Israeli dance from the 1970s till nowadays.’

Oxford Poverty and Human Development Initiative (OPHI) and Oxford Network of Peace Studies (OxPeace) joint lecture Steve Killelea, Australian entrepreneur, philanthropist and founder of the Institute for Economics and Peace, will deliver a lecture at 5 p.m. on Thursday, 19 May, in Seminar Room 3, Queen Elizabeth House.

Subject: ‘Economics, business development and metrics: the Global Peace Index.’

Oxford Poverty and Human Development Initiative (OPHI) lunchtime seminar series

The following seminars will be given at 1 p.m. on Mondays or Tuesdays in Seminar Room 3, Queen Elizabeth House. Complimentary sandwich lunch available (first come, first served). Convenor: Dr Gaston Yalonetsky.

Dr Sabrina Alkire 9 May: Title to be confirmed.

Dr Suman Seth 16 May: ‘What explains the redundancy of the Human Development Index?’

Professor Thomas Pogge, Yale 24 May: ‘Tracking poverty and gender equity.’

Dr Sebastian Silva-Laender 6 June: ‘Revealed preferences in Amartya Sen’s framework.’

Cecilia Tinoinin, Bologna 13 June: ‘Constructing validation for agency data. A micro-case study from a field of one’s own and others.’

Professor Cesar Gallo, Central University of Venezuela, and Dr Jose Manuel Roche 20 June: ‘Multidimensional poverty in Venezuela during 1997–2010: a proposal of a national adapted measure for monitoring purposes.’

St John’s College Research Centre Legalism Seminar Series

The following seminars will be given at 4.30 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Research Centre’s Seminar Room, 45 St Giles’ (tea served from 4 p.m.). Convenor: Judith Scheele (judith.scheele@all-souls.ox.ac.uk).

Anastasia Piliavski, Cambridge 4 May: ‘On oaths, truth and trust in the adjudication process among professional thieves in Western India.’

Elizabeth Ewart 11 May: Title to be confirmed.

Vladimir Bobrovnikov, Russian Academy of Sciences 18 May: ‘Adat codes of village leagues between shari’a and Imperial law in pre-colonial Daghestan.’

Bettrine Birge, Southern California 25 May: ‘Philosophy, politics, and law in the age of Khubilai Khan: competing visions and moral dilemmas in the application of marriage law in Mongol-Yuan China (1260–1368).’

Malcolm Chapman, Leeds 1 June: Title to be confirmed.

Matthew Sommer, Stanford 15 June: ‘Codified law, social reality, and judicial practice: the adjudication of illegal wife sales in Qing county courts.’

Jérôme Bourgon, ENS, Lyon 22 June: ‘Is the “principle of legality” a Chinese invention?’

FLJS/CSLS Workshop

THE FOUNDATIONS OF LAW: LEGALISM IN THE ANCIENT WORLD, EUROPE AND ASIA

This two-day workshop will take place on 6 and 7 June at St John’s College and will explore the foundations of law and legalism through the comparison of anthropological and historical case studies. Participants: Georgy Kantor, Donald R. Davis, Paul Dresch, Thomas Lambert, Judith Scheele, Paul Brand, Andrew Huxley, Sarah Womack, Malcolm Vale, Hannah Skoda. Registration: admin@csls.ox.ac.uk.

LECTURE

Professor Bruce W. Frier, Professor of Classics and Roman Law, Michigan, will lecture as part of the above FLJS/CSLS workshop at Jesus College.

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations
The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 13 May.

(a) Laudian Professor of Arabic
Explanatory Note
The following change amends the composition of the electoral board of the Laudian Professor of Arabic to comply with the regulations, and to those particular provisions of the same regulations as to residence which are applicable to this chair. He or she shall give not less than thirty-six lectures or classes in the year, provided that this obligation may be reduced in exceptional circumstances with the approval of the faculty board concerned.

(b) Shaw Professor of Chinese
Explanatory Note
The following change amends the composition of the electoral board of the Shaw Professor of Chinese to comply with the regulations, and to those particular provisions of the same regulations as to residence which are applicable to this chair. He or she shall give not less than thirty-six lectures or classes in the year, provided that this obligation may be reduced in exceptional circumstances with the approval of the faculty board concerned.

(c) Establishment of Professorship of Geophysics
Explanatory Note
These changes, made on the recommendation of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council, establish a Professorship of Geophysics held in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division. The Professor will teach and undertake research in Geophysics and will be on the establishment of the Department of Earth Sciences in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division.

Text of Regulations
In Sect. III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 408, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), in § 11 delete existing regulations 2 and 3, and substitute:

‘2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the President of St John's College is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;
(2) the President of St John's College, or, if the President is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the Governing Body of St John's College;
(3) a person appointed by the Governing Body of St John's College;
(4), (5) two persons appointed by Council;
(6) the Head of the Humanities Division, or his or her nominee;
(7)–(9) three persons appointed by the Board of the Faculty of Oriental Studies.

3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those particular provisions of the same regulations as to residence which are applicable to this chair. He or she shall give not less than thirty-six lectures or classes in the year, provided that this obligation may be reduced in exceptional circumstances with the approval of the faculty board concerned.’

§109. Professor of Geophysics
1. There shall be a Professor of Geophysics, who shall undertake research in and shall lecture and give instruction in that subject and generally promote its study in the University.

2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in (2) of this clause is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;
(2) the head of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulations in that behalf, or if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college;
(3) a person appointed by the governing body of the college specified in (2) of this clause;

(4) (5) two persons appointed by Council;

(6) (9) four persons appointed by the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Board.

3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.

Degree by Resolution

This content has been removed as it contains personal information protected under the Data Protection Act.
all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 6 May, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 19 May and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 11 May.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to nominated representatives of OUSU as agreed in advance by the Vice-Chancellor. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of a valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.45 p.m. The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

*The transcript may be edited for legal reasons.

Consultative notices

Review of St Benet's Hall by PPH Supervisory Committee

The PPH Supervisory Committee, which is appointed by the Education Committee, has regulatory, monitoring and reporting functions in relation to the Permanent Private Halls. As part of an ongoing process in which each Hall is to be reviewed in turn over a period of six years, the committee is shortly to conduct a review of St Benet's Hall during Trinity term. The review will focus on issues coming within the PPH Supervisory Committee's terms of reference. These may be seen on the Education Committee's website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/epsc/pphtrmsref.shtml).

The PPH Supervisory Committee would welcome for its review written comments on any matters falling within the terms of reference. Written comments should be sent to the Secretary to the Supervisory Committee, Dr Michael Redley, Education Policy Support Section, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JF (email: michael.redley@admin.ox.ac.uk), by Friday 20 May.

Worcester College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment of the statutes of Worcester College, approved by the Governing Body on 26 January 2011, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment of the statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution signed by at least twenty members of Congregation, calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 9 May.

The main objective of the changes is to update the 1966 statutes (including the introduction of gender-neutral language) without altering their basic structure. It has also been necessary to address two substantial issues which are consequential on the need for the college to register with the Charity Commission. These are the objects of the college and arrangements for paying fellows as trustees.

General notices

Vice-Chancellor’s Question Time

Professor Andrew Hamilton will be holding a ninety-minute Question Time session in the Blue Boar Lecture Theatre in Christ Church on Thursday, 26 May. The event is open to members of Congregation, University and college staff, and students, who are invited to discuss issues with the Vice-Chancellor. The session starts at 4 p.m., with refreshments available from 3.15 p.m. To reserve a place or submit a question in advance, please email internal.communications@admin.ox.ac.uk. An audio recording will be available after the event at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/vc/news.

Updating of University Calendar for 2011-12

The updating of the University Calendar for 2011-12 is now underway, and all departments, institutions, colleges, and halls should have been contacted with respect to the revision of their entry. The updating of entries for faculties and academic departments is arranged through divisional offices. Enquiries can be made to the Gazette (email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk).

ERRORS OR OMISSIONS IN THE CURRENT EDITION OF THE CALENDAR

Senior members of the University who wish to check any entry in the Calendar may do so by contacting the Gazette, preferably by email (email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk). Any errors or omissions should also be reported to the Gazette.

LISTING OF PROFESSORS AND READERS EMERITUS

Current or retired members of Congregation are invited to report any errors or omissions in the lists of Professors and Readers Emeritus in the Calendar. Any omissions or errors will be corrected in the 2011-12 edition.

Under Council Regulations 3 of 2004, cll. 9 and 10 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/185-084.shtml), any person who has retired over the age of sixty from a professorship or readership, including a personal or titular professorship or readership, is entitled to hold the title of Professor Emeritus or Reader Emeritus, as appropriate.

The current lists of Professors and Readers Emeritus may be seen in the University Calendar 2010, pp. 199–210. They may also be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/calendar/, at which the provisional lists of new additions may also be found. Copies of these lists will be sent to any current or retired member of Congregation who applies to the Gazette (email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Reports issued by the Internal Auditors

The following reports issued by the Internal Auditors were accepted by the Audit and Scrutiny Committee at its meeting on 14 March 2011:

General notes:
Nominations in writing for the elections on 16 June, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be accepted by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday 19 May.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the ‘Forms’ section of the Elections Office website.

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out their reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 2 June.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 16 June.

For further information, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

The further consideration of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 10 May, in the Sheldonian Theatre. The topic will be the further consideration of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13, in light of the decisions taken by Council on 14 March (see Gazette No. 4948, 17 March 2011, p. 515 for more information). The topic of the Discussion is cast in deliberately broad terms to allow members of Congregation to express their views on the range of issues that fall under this head. However, Congregation is invited in particular to consider how access and outreach work across the collegiate University might best be co-ordinated; how to reach and explain to potential students and their families the consequences of the new arrangements; how to engage the donor community effectively; and what the aims of Oxford’s access and outreach activities beyond 2012/13 might be. Prefatory remarks will be made by senior officers to explain, inter alia, the implications of the new arrangements and to highlight the issues that Oxford will need to address in the longer term.

Further information to facilitate the Discussion, including a summary of the Access Agreement as submitted to OFA, will be provided on the Congregation website in due course (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made.

Those wishing to speak in the Discussion will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. As the Discussion will close at 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak in the Discussion, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if you also explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues you wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting) as they are received. This sharing of information may be of use to both other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide structure to the order in which speakers are called. Speakers are asked to provide their information as soon as possible, and by noon on Friday, 6 May, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) to speak.

It is intended that a transcript of the Discussion will be published in the Gazette on 19 May and, as soon as practicable after the Discussion, on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). As a result of time constraints, it will not be possible to check the report of the proceedings with individual speakers before publication. Speakers are therefore asked to provide their written texts, if available, to Mrs Ceri Benton, Council Secretariat, on the day of the Discussion, or to email them to her (congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk) by 5 p.m. on 11 May.

Attendance at the Discussion is open to members of Congregation and to nominated representatives of OUSU as agreed in advance by the Vice-Chancellor. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of a valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.45 p.m. The wearing of gowns is optional on this occasion.

1The transcript may be edited for legal reasons.

Consultative notices

Worcester College: revised statutes

The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment of the statutes of Worcester College, approved by the Governing Body on 26 January 2011, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7(2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendment of the statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 16 May.

The main objective of the changes is to update the 1966 statutes (including the introduction of gender-neutral language) without altering their basic structure. It has also been necessary to address two substantial issues which are consequential on the need for the college to register with the Charity Commission. These are the objects of the college and arrangements for paying fellows as trustees.

Review of the Oxford Centre for Hebrew and Jewish Studies

The Joint Committee for the Coordination of the Recognised Independent Centres has responsibility for overseeing the operation of agreements the University has with each Recognised Independent Centre. As part of an ongoing process in which each Centre is to be reviewed in turn over a period of years, the Committee is to conduct a review of the Oxford Centre for Hebrew and Jewish Studies during Trinity term. The review will focus on issues covered by the agreement. The standard form of the agreement is available on request from the Secretary to the Joint Committee, Dr Michael Redley, Education Policy Support Section, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD (email: michael.redley@admin.ox.ac.uk). The Joint Committee would welcome for its review written comments on any matters falling within the terms of the agreement. Written comments should be sent to the Secretary to the Joint Committee, Dr Michael Redley, by no later than 31 May 2011.

General notices

CLAROS launch

The University of Oxford is proud to announce the launch of CLAROS. Please see the ‘Lectures’ section below for details of the launch event.

CLAROS developed from discussions between European university research centres held in Oxford in 2000, but the concept dates back to the early 1990s, when the Beazley Archive participated in the EU R&D project RAMA (Remote Access to Museum Archives). CLAROS is using Semantic Web data integration technologies and state-of-the-art image recognition algorithms to bring classical art to anyone, any time, anywhere. This is made possible thanks to a grant from the University of Oxford’s Fell Fund and to collaboration with the OeRC, Image Bioinformatics Research Group (Department of Zoology), Visual Geometry Group (Department of Engineering Science), and Beazley Archive (Faculty of Classics).

Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge MASTERSHIP

The Master of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, Sir Christopher Hum, has announced his intention to retire in September 2012. Fellows of the College would welcome any early expressions of interest from men and women who feel they may be suitably qualified for the Mastership. Suggestions of the names of persons who might be qualified would also be welcome. The College is a self-governing academic institution, governed by the Fellows through the College Council and the General Meetings, and presided over by the Master. Contact the President, Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge CB2 1TA, or email president@cai.cam.ac.uk; for general college information see www.cai.cam.ac.uk.
Oxford University Pocket Diary 2010–11

Corrigendum: The short matriculation ceremonies in Trinity term 2011 and Michaelmas term 2011 have each been erroneously listed twice in the Pocket Diary for 2010–11. Please note that the correct dates for the short matriculation ceremonies are as follows:

- Trinity term 2011: Thursday, 23 June
- Michaelmas term 2011: Thursday, 1 December

The correct date for Michaelmas term 2011 will be included in the Pocket Diary for 2011–12, which is currently being compiled.

General notes:
Nominations in writing for the elections on 16 June, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be accepted by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday 19 May.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the ‘Forms’ section of the Elections Office website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/elections.shtml).

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out their reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 2 June.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 16 June.

For further information, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 (2)80548
Fax: 01865 (2)70178
Web: www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising

Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.
(For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in 'Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements' below.)
External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.
For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit card or debit card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.

Note: Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency: If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers' Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 27 May.

(a) University Discipline
Explanatory Note
Following the report of the Working Group to Review University Disciplinary Procedures (for a fuller note, see p. 603), these changes amend the terminology used in the regulations concerning the University’s disciplinary procedures and are part of a set of changes designed to make these procedures less daunting for students. In order to avoid confusion it has been agreed that the changes should not be introduced mid-year but instead take effect from 1 October 2011. The opportunity has also been taken to correct some cross-references and remove outdated information.

Text of Regulations

‘1.1. In these regulations, unless otherwise stated:

(1) references to sections are to sections of Statute XI unless otherwise stated;
(2) references to colleges shall include colleges, societies, Permanent Private Halls, and other institutions designated by Council by regulation as being permitted to present student members for matriculation; and
(3) ‘the Panel’ means the Student Disciplinary Panel;

(4) references to breaches or alleged breaches are to breaches or alleged breaches of the Disciplinary Code under sections 2 and 3;

(5) ‘student’ means the student member or members of the University alleged to be in breach of the Disciplinary Code, or making an appeal against a decision concerning such a breach.’

2 Ibid., delete Parts 2 and 3 and substitute:

Part 2
Sittings
2.1. The Panel shall sit on at least three fixed occasions in each Full Term and once during the Long Vacation and on such other day or days as the Chairman or a Vice-Chairman in consultation with the Secretary deems to be necessary.

2.2. The Secretary shall be responsible for making such arrangements as are necessary for each sitting.

2.3. The Secretary shall invite three members of the Panel to constitute a sitting for the purpose of these regulations, which members shall include at least one of the Chairman or Vice-Chairmen.

2.4. If the Secretary has not received notification of any business for consideration by the Panel seven days before a listed hearing, then he or she shall notify the Panel and the Clerk to the Proctors that the date has been vacated.

2.5. All hearings shall normally be in private. The Panel shall have the power to determine that a hearing be held in public in the light of submissions from both parties.

2.6. All evidence or material submitted as part of the investigation shall be regarded as strictly confidential unless, following consideration of submissions, the Panel decides otherwise.

Part 3
Consideration of Charges alleged breaches referred by the Proctors under section 23
Preparation
3.1. On delivery to the Secretary of a summons: notice of hearing stating by reference to the relevant provisions of Statute XI:

(1) the act or acts or omission or omissions alleged to constitute the offence breacne;

(2) the date or dates or approximate date or dates on which or between which each offence breach is alleged to have been committed;

(3) where relevant, the time and place at which each offence breach is alleged to have been committed;

(4) where relevant, the person or property alleged to have been affected by each offence breach.

3.2. The Secretary shall annex to the summons: notice of hearing:

(1) copies of all statements and any other evidence obtained in the course of the investigation on which the Proctors intend to rely;

(2) a copy of Statute XI and any regulations made under it which are relevant to the charge; and

(3) a copy of these regulations.

3.3. The Secretary shall set the date of the hearing and shall give interested parties at least seven clear days notice in writing of the date, time and place appointed for the hearing.

3.4. Notice under regulation 3.1 above shall be addressed to the student charged and sent to the student’s college or his or her last notified address (if different).

3.5. At least three clear days before the date set for the hearing, the student charged shall forward to the Secretary copies of the evidence (including, if appropriate, witness statements) on which he or she intends to rely at the hearing. The Secretary shall send a copy of this material to the Proctors.

3.6. The Proctors or the student charged may at any time apply in writing to the Secretary for an adjournment of the hearing and the Chairman or a Vice-Chairman may accede to or refuse an adjournment.
3.7. The Chairman or a Vice-Chairman shall have power, if he or she judges it to be advisable, to cancel a proposed hearing at any time before it has begun and substitute alternative arrangements.

3.8. The Chairman or a Vice-Chairman shall have power to strike out proceedings on the grounds of non prosecution.

3.9. Any hearing shall take place within one month of the date of the summons notice of hearing referred to in regulation 3.1 above unless the Chairman or a Vice-Chairman is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for further delay.

3.10. A party who intends to be represented by another person shall as soon as possible inform the Secretary of the name and contact details of the representative appointed. The Secretary shall then pass the information to all other interested parties.

3.11. (1) It shall be open to any party to apply in writing to the Chairman for directions on matters of procedure including:

(a) the provision by the Proctors of further information concerning the alleged breach;
(b) disclosure by the student charged of the evidence (including, if appropriate, witness statements) on which he or she intends to rely at the hearing; and
(c) amendment of the summons notice of hearing to add, omit, or vary a notice of hearing on such terms as are fair and reasonable in the circumstances.

(2) Any application shall be made in the first instance to the Secretary, and the party applying shall at the same time give notice of it to the other parties.

(3) If there is no objection from the other parties, the Chairman or a Vice-Chairman may make the required order without an oral hearing.

(4) If the application is contested, or if the Chairman or a Vice-Chairman believes that the circumstances justify a hearing, he or she may refer the application to a hearing by the Panel.

3.12. The Panel may direct that allegations against more than one person shall be heard together, due regard being given to the principles of justice and fairness. The students charged shall be invited to make observations which the Panel shall take into account before proceeding.

3.13. The case against the student or students charged shall be presented by one of the Proctors or another person as provided in section 24.

3.14. (1) If the Proctors are of the opinion that the case should be presented by a solicitor or barrister who is not a member of Congregation, they shall consult with the Legal Services Office.

(2) In making their decision, they shall take into account all relevant factors including:
   (a) the nature and complexity of the case; and
   (b) whether the student charged is represented and if so by whom.

3.15. References in these regulations to the Proctors shall include, where the context so requires, any other person appointed to present the case.

3.16. The student charged shall be entitled to be represented by another person, who need not be legally qualified, and in that case references to the student charged shall include, where the context so permits, the student’s representative.

3.17. (1) The onus of proof shall be on the Proctors.

(2) The standard of proof shall be the civil standard, namely the balance of probabilities.

3.18. The charge alleged breach or breaches of the Disciplinary Code shall be read by the Secretary, and the student charged shall be asked to state whether he or she admits the offence, accepts that he or she has committed the breach or breaches.

3.19. The written statements of the student charged and of any witness called shall stand as that individual’s evidence in chief. The Panel may allow supplementary questions to be put at its discretion.

3.20. The Secretary shall keep sufficient record of the proceedings.

3.21. If the student charged accepts that he or she has committed the breach of the Disciplinary Code, then

(1) the Proctors shall provide a brief summary of the case including their submission as to the appropriate level of penalty;

(2) the student charged shall be entitled to call witnesses whose evidence is relevant to penalty and the Proctors may call evidence in reply;

(3) the student charged shall be entitled to make a plea statement in mitigation of penalty and the Proctors shall be entitled to reply, following which the student charged shall have an opportunity to reply; and

(4) the Panel shall adjourn to determine the appropriate sentence penalty by reference to its powers under section 11 and announce the penalty at the hearing.

3.22. If the student charged does not admit the offence or accept that he or she has committed the breach the procedure adopted shall be as follows.

3.23. (1) The parties to the proceedings shall be entitled to give evidence at the hearing, to make an opening speech, to call witnesses, and to question any person (including a party) who gives evidence.

(2) The case for the Proctors shall be presented first.

(3) Unless the Panel otherwise permits:

(a) the Proctors shall not be entitled to call any witness whose statement evidence has not been previously disclosed to the student charged; and

(b) if the Panel has made an order under regulation 3.11 (1) (b) above, the student charged may not present evidence beyond the scope of the evidence disclosed as a result of that order.

(4) Closing statements may be made, with the student charged being given the opportunity to speak last.

(5) The Panel may proceed with a hearing in the absence of the Proctors or the student charged except where, in the case of the student charged, it considers that his or her absence is due to circumstances beyond his or her control.

(6) The Panel may at any stage during the hearing, if it is just to do so, permit the Proctors to amend the summons notice of hearing by adding, omitting, or varying a charge or the terms of an alleged breach on such terms as it considers to be fair and reasonable.

3.24. At the conclusion of the hearing the Panel or the parties shall withdraw while the Panel considers its findings.

3.25. Where the case is found proved, the Panel shall announce its decision and then

(1) invite the Proctors to make a submission as to the appropriate level of penalty;
(2) the student charged shall be entitled to call witnesses whose evidence is relevant to penalty and make a plea in mitigation of penalty;

(3) if the student charged calls witnesses, the Proctors may call evidence in reply; and

(4) the Panel shall adjourn to determine the appropriate penalty by reference to its powers under section II and announce the penalty at the hearing.

Adjournments

3.26. The Panel may adjourn any proceedings from time to time, if it is just to do so, on such terms as it thinks fit.

Payment of fines and compensation

3.27. Where a fine or compensation is ordered to be paid, it shall be paid to the Clerk to the Proctors within seven calendar days of the date of the Panel’s decision in writing unless the Panel permits payment by instalments at times and in amounts fixed by the Panel.

Costs

3.28. (1) Where the student is charged with an offence for which he or she is found not guilty the Panel finds that the student has not committed the alleged breach or breaches of which he or she has been accused, the Panel shall have a discretionary power to order the University to pay his or her student costs or part of them.

(2) In the absence of such an order, the student charged shall be responsible for any costs incurred in preparing and presenting his or her case.

Decision

3.29. (1) The Panel shall supply a reasoned decision in writing, normally within two weeks of the conclusion of the hearing.

(2) The Secretary shall provide copies of the decision to the Proctors and to the student charged.

3.30. The Chairman may, by an appropriate certificate in writing, correct any accidental errors in documents recording decisions of the Panel.

3 Ibid., in the heading to Part 5 delete ‘Appeals made under section 34 (2), 36 (2), 38 (2) or section 41 (5)’ and substitute ‘Appeals made under section 34 (2), 36 (2) or section 41 (5)’.

4 Ibid., in regulations 5.2 (2) and 5.3 delete ‘section 35 (2)’ and substitute ‘section 34 (2)’ and in regulation 5.1 delete ‘38 (2)’.

5 Ibid., delete Parts 6 and 7 and substitute:

---

Part 6

Ancillary Powers

Non-payment of fines and compensation

6.1. If a student who is ordered to pay a fine or compensation by the Proctors, the Disciplinary Panel, or the Appeal Panel under the provisions of Statute XI or any regulations made under it fails to do so within the time for making payment, the Proctors shall prepare and deliver to the Secretary a notice of hearing stating:

(1) the date on which the order for payment was made;

(2) the amount of the payment;

(3) the date or dates by which payment should have been made;

(4) the amounts (if any) which have been paid and the date of payment; and

(5) the amount due.

6.2. The Secretary shall send to the student the summons notice of hearing, and the procedure for disposal of the summons considering the matter shall be the procedure set out in Part 3 of these regulations so far as applicable.

6.3. If the Panel is satisfied that any amount due has not been paid within time, it may, if it is just and reasonable in the circumstances to do so, rusticate the student who is in default.

6.4. A penalty of rustication shall take immediate effect or may be postponed or suspended on such terms as the Panel thinks fit.

Students convicted of serious criminal offences

6.5. If the Proctors receive information that a student member has been convicted in a court of law in any jurisdiction of a serious criminal offence, they may prepare and deliver to the Secretary a notice stating:

(1) the date of the conviction;

(2) the offence for which the student was convicted;

(3) the court by which the student was convicted; and

(4) the sentence imposed.

6.6. The summons notice shall have annexed to it a certificate of conviction or other official document confirming the accuracy of the particulars referred to in regulation 6.5 above.

6.7. The Secretary shall send to the student the summons notice and the document annexed to it under regulation 6.6 above, and the procedure for disposal of the summons considering the matter shall be the procedure set out in Part 3 of these regulations so far as applicable.

6.8. The Panel shall be entitled to take into account any credible written or oral evidence in determining whether the facts alleged in the summons notice are true.

6.9. If the Panel is satisfied that the student has been convicted of an offence as alleged, it may, if it is just and reasonable to do so, expel the student from membership of the University or impose such lesser penalty or other conditions as it thinks fit.

6.10. A penalty of expulsion shall take immediate effect unless there are special circumstances justifying the postponement of the expulsion.

Part 7

Disruption of Panel Proceedings

7.1. If during the course of proceedings before the Panel the conduct of any member of the University, whether as a party, as a witness, or otherwise, is disorderly or is otherwise in breach of section 2 or section 3, the Panel shall direct the Secretary forthwith to record the conduct complained of, with full particulars.

7.2. If the member whose conduct is complained of is a student member, the Secretary shall send the record to the Proctors who shall prepare a summons notice giving details of the alleged breach or breaches to be sent by the Secretary to the student charged.

7.3. Part 3 of these Regulations shall apply so far as appropriate to the disposal of the summons. The procedure for considering the matter shall be the procedure set out in Part 3 of these regulations so far as applicable and, if the Panel finds the complaint proved, it shall have the powers referred to in section 39(2).

7.4. If the member whose conduct is complained of is not a student member, the Secretary shall refer the complaint to the Registrar who shall investigate it under Statute XII or otherwise as he or she thinks fit.’

'7.2. The Secretary shall send the record to the Proctors who shall prepare a summons notice giving details of the alleged breach or breaches to be sent by the Secretary to the student charged.

7.3. Part 1 of the regulations for the Student Disciplinary Panel shall apply so far as appropriate to the disposal of the summons. The procedure for considering the matter shall be the procedure set out in Part 3 of these regulations so far as applicable and, if the Panel finds the complaint proved, it shall have the powers referred to in section 39(2) of Statute XI.

7.4. No member of the Panel before whom the conduct alleged in the summons notice took place shall sit at the hearing of the complaint made in the summons notice: '1. In these regulations, unless otherwise stated:

(1) references to sections are to sections of Statute XI unless otherwise stated;

(2) references to colleges shall include colleges, societies, Permanent Private Halls, and other institutions designated by Council by regulation as being permitted to present candidates for matriculation;

(3) references to breaches or alleged breaches are to breaches or alleged breaches of the Disciplinary Code under sections 2 and 3;

(4) student or students' means a student member or members of the University alleged to be in breach of the Disciplinary Code;

(5) where notice has to be given a specified number of ‘clear days’ before an interview or hearing, the day of receipt of the notice and the day of the interview or hearing shall be excluded from the calculation;

(6) any notice sent by the Proctors shall be deemed to arrive on the day after dispatch, unless the contrary is proved.'

8. Ibid., delete regulations 9–11 and substitute:

9. Where the Proctors intend to interview a student who is suspected of committing an offence, a breach they shall, except in urgent cases, send a notice to the student at least two clear days before the date of the interview stating the date, time, and place and sufficient other particulars to identify the alleged offence.

10. At the start of the interview the student shall be advised:

(1) that he or she does not have to answer any questions, but that anything that he or she does say may be used by the Proctors in evidence against him or her;

(2) that any refusal to answer a question may be taken into account in determining his or her guilt or innocence of the offence of the breach alleged.

11. If, in the course of an interview, a student who was not a suspect discloses evidence of an offence, the Proctors shall adjourn the hearing to consider whether that is indeed the case, and if so shall caution the student as in regulation 10 above before proceeding further:

9. Ibid., delete regulations 13–15 and substitute:

Exercise of Summary Jurisdiction under section 25

13. In any case in which the Proctors consider that it may be appropriate to exercise their powers under section 25, they shall send a notice to the student:

(1) informing him or her of the alleged breach, charge against him or her, identifying by reference to the relevant provision in Statute XI the act or omission alleged to constitute the offence;

(2) giving full particulars of the alleged breach or breaches, including the date or dates or approximate date or dates on which or between which each offence is alleged to have been committed and the place at which the offence is alleged to have taken place;

(3) explaining to him or her the powers of the Proctors under section 26, including the penalties sanctions available, and the right of appeal;

(4) explaining to him or her the alternative procedures of referral to the Student Disciplinary Panel, the penalties sanctions available, and the rights of appeal;

(5) asking the student whether he or she wishes the matter to be disposed of dealt with by the Proctors under section 26 instead of being referred to the Student Disciplinary Panel;

(6) asking the student to reply to the Proctors in writing within seven days of the sending of the letter; and the Proctors shall annex to the notice a copy of these regulations unless previously provided by the Proctors.

14. Where a student has agreed in writing to the matter being disposed of dealt with by the Proctors under section 25, the procedure shall be as follows:

(1) the Proctors shall notify the student in writing of the date of the hearing, giving at least two clear days’ notice;

(2) the student shall be entitled to be accompanied or represented by a member of Congregation;

(3) the student may apply for an adjournment of the hearing, which the Proctors may grant if they consider it reasonable to do so;

(4) the Proctors may proceed with a hearing in the absence of the student charged, except where they consider that his or her absence is due to circumstances beyond his or control;

(5) the Clerk to the Proctors shall read out the charges details of the alleged breach;

(6) the Proctors shall ask the student whether he or she understands the charge and, if he or she does not understand it, the Proctors or a person appointed by them shall provide a brief summary of the case and ask the student whether he or she admits the offence.

(7) if the student confirms that he or she understands the charge, the Proctors or a person appointed by them shall provide a brief summary of the case and ask the student whether he or she admits the offence.

(8) if the student admits the offence, accepts that he or she has committed the breach:

(a) he or she shall be invited to make a plea statement in mitigation of the offence and may call witnesses relevant to any findings and penalty sentence;

(b) if the student charged calls witnesses, the Proctors may call evidence in reply;

(9) if the student does not admit the offence, accepts that he or she has committed the breach:

(a) the Proctors or a person appointed by them and the student charged shall be entitled to give evidence at the hearing, to make an opening speech, to call witnesses, and to question any person (including a party) who gives evidence;
(6) the Proctors shall present their case first;
(c) closing statements may be made, with the student charged being given the opportunity to speak last;
(10) the student shall be asked to withdraw while the Proctors consider their findings and any penalty;
(11) the Proctors shall announce their findings and any penalty;
(12) where a fine and/or compensation is to be imposed, it shall be paid within seven calendar days to the Clerk to the Proctors;
(13) if the student appeals to the Student Disciplinary Panel, he or she may apply to the Proctors or to that Panel under section 40(1) for an order suspending or deferring postponing the payment of such a fine;
(14) the Proctors shall be responsible for ensuring that a written record of the proceedings is made;
(15) the Proctors shall send to the student and the Dean of the student’s college a written record of their findings and any penalty imposed.

Referral of Charges for Consideration by the Student Disciplinary Panel under section 23

15. In any other case, proceedings shall be instituted by the Proctors by delivery to the Secretary to the Student Disciplinary Panel of a summons notice giving details of the alleged breach or breaches which shall include, by reference to the relevant offence or offences of the Disciplinary Code specified in sections 2 or 3:

(1) the act or acts or omission or omissions alleged to constitute the offence;
(2) the date or dates or approximate date or dates on which or between which each offence is alleged to have been committed;
(3) where relevant, the time and place at which each offence is alleged to have been committed;
(4) where relevant, the person or property alleged to have been affected by each offence;
(5) copies of all statements and any other evidence obtained in the course of their investigation.

10 In Council Regulations 5 of 2006 concerning appeals to the Appeal Court, delete regulations 6.2–6.3 and substitute:

6.2. If the member whose conduct is complained of is a student member, the Secretary shall send the record to the Proctors who shall prepare a summons notice giving details of the alleged breach or breaches to be issued in the Student Disciplinary Panel and sent by the Secretary of that Panel to the student charged.

6.3. Part III of the Regulations for the Student Disciplinary Panel shall apply so far as appropriate to the disposal of the summons.

The procedure for considering the matter shall be the procedure set out in Part III of these regulations so far as applicable and, if the Student Disciplinary Panel finds the complaint proved, it shall have the powers referred to in section 39(2) of Statute XI.

11 These regulations shall be effective from 1 October 2011.

(b) Investment Committee and Financial Regulations

Explanatory Note

The following changes clarify the extent of the Investment Committee’s responsibility for University investments. Specifically, changes are required: (a) to ensure that the Investment Committee’s responsibility extends beyond endowed funds (to cover, for example, the University’s Capital Fund); (b) to clarify that the Investment Committee’s responsibility does not extend to all University funds; (c) to clarify that the Investment Committee’s remit does not extend to decisions as to whether University funds are placed within (i) the Oxford Endowment Fund; (ii) the Oxford Capital Fund; (iii) another University collective investment scheme; or (iv) the Deposit Pool.

Consequential changes to the Financial Regulations are also required to clarify the responsibilities of various bodies in relation to investments. The opportunity has also been taken to amend the Financial Regulations to reflect the establishment of the Property Management Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC).

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4634, 16 October 2002, p. 226), delete existing regulation 3.71 and substitute:

‘3.71 The committee shall be responsible for the strategic oversight and supervision of all funds invested by, or for the benefit of, the University (including any funds placed with the University by external bodies), except:

(1) those investments which Council determines to be the responsibility of the Finance Committee or other bodies;
(2) those held by Societies or the Press.’

2 ibid, amend regulation 3.72 as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘3.72 In particular, the committee shall be responsible for:

(1) defining and agreeing investment objectives for the investments covered by 3.71 above with Council;
(2) setting and monitoring performance against guidelines and will benchmark(s) in order to meet those objectives;
(3) the effective management and control of investment risks;
(4) recruiting, supporting and appraising and monitoring of the Chief Investment Officer and monitoring his or her performance;
(5) advising on matters relating to asset allocation and manager selection;
(5) reporting to Council.’

3 In the Financial Regulations (Council Regulations 1 of 2010, Supplement (i) to Gazette No. 4923, 25 June 2010), add new regulation 6.2(i), concerning Bank accounts, and renumber existing 6.2 as 6.2(i):

‘(i) The Finance Committee is responsible for the approval of the University’s banking and treasury arrangements.’

4 ibid, amend regulations 6.3 and 6.4 as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘6.3 Investment

(I) The Investment Committee is responsible to Council for the strategic oversight and supervision of all funds invested by, or for the benefit of, the University as set out in Council Regulations 15 of 2002, except those held by societies or the Press, and for the effective management and control of investments. No budgetary unit or trust fund of the University may invest independently in any securities or other investments.’
6.4 Oxford University Endowment Management Limited

(1) All other University investments other than those specified in 6.2 and 6.3 above are managed by Oxford University Endowment Management Limited ("OUEM"), a subsidiary company. For the management of certain investments of the University, in accordance with a strategy determined from time to time by the Investment Committee. These investments are managed within the University Endowment Fund, and the Oxford Capital Fund. OUEM may delegate its authority to identified fund managers. The financial limits applicable are shown in Table D, above.

5 Ibid., in regulation 1.5(2) amend Table C as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

1 Delegated authority given to divisional boards and heads of unit is subject to the overall budgetary limits approved by PRAC (see regulation 1.4(1) above).

2 For UAS capital projects, the Budget Subcommittee of PRAC is required to receive all proposals from review. In addition, for information technology proposals, the Information and Communications Technology Subcommittee of PRAC is also required to receive and review such projects. University capital funding is defined as those funds set out in the University's Capital Plan submitted to PRAC and includes funds from the Press and HEPCE as well as the University Capital Fund.

3 The Property Management Subcommittee of PRAC has a delegated authority level for sales and purchases involving amounts of up to £2m that are for property not held as an investment and are unrelated to capital projects.

(c) Oriel and Laing Professor of the Interpretation of Holy Scripture

Explanatory Note

These changes, approved by the Humanities Divisional Board, amend the regulations to reflect the research focus of the Professorship, and to enable the chief benefactor to the Professorship, the Kirby Laing Foundation, to suggest the names of suitably qualified scholars for the consideration of the electoral board of the Professorship. The opportunity has also been taken to amend outdated references and to include representation on the electoral board by two persons appointed by the divisional board.

Text of Regulations

In Section III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002 (Statutes, 2000), p. 441, as redesignated by regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette Vol. 132, p. 1461), delete existing § 141 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

§141. Oriel and Laing Professor of the Interpretation of Holy Scripture

1. The Oriel and Laing Professor of the Interpretation of Holy Scripture shall undertake research, lecture and give instruction in the Interpretation of the Old Testament Scriptures.

2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the Provost of Oriel is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council on the occurrence of a vacancy to act as an elector on that occasion;

(2) the Provost of Oriel College, or, if the Provost is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the Governing Body of Oriel College on the occurrence of a vacancy to act as an elector on that occasion;

(3) a person appointed by the Governing Body of Oriel College;

(4), (5) two persons appointed by Council, where, in relation to those appointments, the Kirby Laing Foundation may suggest names of suitably qualified scholars for consideration by Council;

(6) a person appointed by the General Board, the Head of the Humanities Division, or his or her representative;

(7), (8), (9) three persons elected by the Board of the Faculty of Theology.
3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.

General Purposes Committee Of Council

Changes in Regulations
The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 27 May.

(a) Establishment of Catherine Oppenheimer Prize

Explanatory Note

These regulations establish the Catherine Oppenheimer Prize for outstanding performances in Psychiatry during the Second BM.

Text of Regulations

In Part 2 of Council Regulations 25 of 2002, concerning trusts (Statutes, 2000, p. 608, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), insert new §266 as follows, and renumber existing §§266–392 as §§267–393:

§266. Catherine Oppenheimer Prize

1. The University receives with gratitude the sum of £16,000 from Dr Catherine Oppenheimer to be held on the trusts declared in this regulation. Further money or property may be paid or transferred to the University to be held on the same trusts. The assets so held will be known as the Catherine Oppenheimer Prize in Old Age Psychiatry Fund ("the Fund").

2. The University shall retain the assets in the Fund as permanent endowment.

3. The University shall apply the income of the Fund towards an essay prize in Old Age Psychiatry (the "Prize").

4. The administration of the Fund, and the application of its income, shall be the responsibility of a Management Board comprising:

   (1) the Head of the Department of Psychiatry;
   (2) the Clinical Tutor in Psychiatry; and
   (3) one member of the Psychiatry Undergraduate Teaching Committee, selected by the Committee.

5. The Prize shall be open to all medical students of the University in years 4, 5 or 6 of the undergraduate entry course or years 2, 3 or 4 of the graduate entry course.

6. The value of the Prize in each year shall be determined by the University on the basis of the available income of the Fund.

7. A Prize will be made available by the University in any academic year where sufficient funds are available. If the income of the Fund is sufficient, the University may award more than one Prize in any given year.

8. The selection of candidates for a Prize will be the responsibility of the Clinical Tutor in Psychiatry and two persons appointed by the Management Board, at least one of whom shall normally be a specialist in Old Age Psychiatry (the "Judges").

9. The University may pay out of the income of the Fund the costs of a meal for the Judges on the day that they make their decision(s), not to exceed £100.

10. The University may exercise any of its corporate powers in the management and administration of the Fund in so far as those powers are not inconsistent with these regulations.

11. Regulations 1-13 shall be deemed to be Trust Regulations under the provisions of Part D of Statute XVI.

12. Subject to regulation 13, Council may amend, repeal or add to these regulations in accordance with Part D of Statute XVI, but no amendment is valid if it would cause the Fund to:

   (1) cease to be exclusively charitable according to the law of England and Wales; or
   (2) be outside the objects of the University.

13. Any amendment to regulation 3 is an amendment to the main objects of the Fund for the purposes of Part D of Statute XVI and must be approved both by Congregation of the University and subsequently by Her Majesty in Council.

(b) Man Professor in Quantitative Finance

Explanatory Note

These changes, recommended by the Social Sciences Division and the University’s Trusts Management Board, allow the Fund that maintains the Man Professor in Quantitative Finance to accumulate both unspent income and future income flows, to build up its trust fund capital.

Text of Regulations

In Section III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002 (Statutes, 2000, p. 425, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), in §93 delete existing regulation 6 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

’6. The University shall retain the sums paid into the Fund pursuant to Regulation 1 as permanent endowment and shall apply the net income towards the salary and expenses of the holder of the Professorship, and associated overheads. The University may in its absolute discretion, instead of applying the income of the Fund in any year, accumulate all or part of such income by investing it, and holding it as part of the capital of the Fund. Unless the donor agrees otherwise, the University shall retain any further benefactions to the Fund as permanent endowments and shall apply the net income in accordance with the special trust or trusts prescribed pursuant to Regulation 4 or 5 (as appropriate) above.’

Congregation

The further consideration of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13: Topic for Discussion

A Congregation Discussion was held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 10 May, in the Sheldonian Theatre on the topic of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13, in light of the decisions taken by Council on 14 March (see Gazette No. 4948, 17 March 2011, p. 515 for more information).

A transcript of the Discussion¹ will be published in the Gazette on 19 May and available on the Congregation website before then.

¹The transcript may be edited for legal reasons.

Council of the University

Register of Congregation

Mr Vice-Chancellor reports that the following names have been added to the Register of Congregation:

Foster, A.C., Jesus
Hicks, J.E., Lincoln
Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 30 May, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose the legislative proposal below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposal shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute XI: University Discipline

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette Vol. No. 135, p. 1272, 18 June 2009), have been endorsed by the Education Committee of Council. The amendments to Statute XI—

(i) establish that a case cannot be brought by the Proctors to the Student Disciplinary Panel more than six months after the date of the first interview without the permission of the chairman or vice-chairman of the Student Disciplinary Panel; and that it is within the discretion of the chairman or vice-chairman to allow a hearing to proceed where the Proctors establish good reasons for a delay beyond the six months; and

(ii) permit an external senior legally-qualified academic (i.e. from a University Law Faculty other than Oxford) to serve as a chairman of the Student Appeal Panel.

The opportunity has also been taken to remove an incorrect cross-reference.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Statute XI concerning University discipline, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

1 In Statute XI concerning University discipline (approved by Congregation on 16 June 2009 with effect from 1 October 2009, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1272, 18 June 2009), delete section 9 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘9. (1) The function of the Student Disciplinary Panel shall be to hear and determine, in accordance with procedure set out in regulations made under section 20 of this statute, complaints allegations made to it by the Proctors that a student member has committed a breach of the provisions of section 2 or 3 of this statute, and appeals against decisions under sections 23 (2) and 36 (2) and 41 (4) of this statute.

(2) No complaint made by the Proctors shall be heard by the Student Disciplinary Panel more than six months after the date of the first interview unless the Chairman or Vice-Chairman sitting on that occasion decides at his or her discretion to allow the complaint to be heard on the grounds that there is good cause for the delay.’

2 Ibid., delete section 14 (1) and substitute:

‘14. (1) The Student Appeal Panel shall consist of three persons appointed by the High Steward, who shall be external persons who hold a legal qualification and have at least eight years standing or persons who have judicial experience or experience which makes them suitable for appointment and shall not be members of Congregation.’

3 This statute shall be effective from 1 October 2011.

Medical Sciences Board/Education Committee Review of the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology and the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics

The Medical Sciences Board is undertaking a review of the Sir William Dunn School of Pathology, the Department of Pharmacology, and the Department of Physiology, Anatomy and Genetics jointly with the Education Committee of Council, as part of a programme of rolling reviews under joint aegis. The review will be chaired by the Associate Head (Research), Professor Rodney Phillips, and will take place on 4 and 5 July.

The review committee’s terms of reference are:

1. To review the quality of academic activities in the departments, by reference to international standards of excellence; action taken since the last review of the department (where appropriate); planning statements at departmental and divisional level, and in the context of the University’s mission statement and strategic plan. In particular:

   a) the quality of the research of the departments, including their participation in inter-departmental, inter-divisional and inter-disciplinary activities, their research profiles and strategies, and future challenges and opportunities;

   b) the quality of graduate programmes and their delivery and related issues, including:

      - access and graduate recruitment
      - progression and achievement
      - curriculum design and programme structure (taught only)
      - teaching, learning and assessment
      - the relationship between teaching and research
      - academic and pastoral support and guidance

   - the provision and use of learning resources (including staff resources)

   - specific arrangements for the pursuit of graduate studies (including research degrees and research training and provision for part-time study)

   - relationships with colleges

   - quality assurance mechanisms;

   (ii) the organisation of undergraduate teaching and its relationship with graduate provision and research;

   (c) the organisation of the departments, their management structures and the relationship between the departments and the division, the management of operational matters such as:

      - strategic planning (including relationship to the divisional five-year plans and the University’s strategic plan)

      - academic and non-academic staff planning and recruitment

      - student number planning

      - terms of appointment for academic staff, including career development and equal opportunities issues

      - accommodation and future space needs

      - fundraising;

   (d) the relationship (structural and operational) between units within the departments, and between the departments and cognate subject areas and colleges to which they are linked in teaching and research, and between the department and relevant external bodies.

2. To consider the current and long-term financial position of, and funding arrangements for, departments, and their financial strategies.

The review committee would welcome written comments on matters falling within its terms of reference. These should be sent to Mrs Margareta Rorsman (email: margareta.rorsman@medsci.ox.ac.uk), by Thursday, 9 June.

General notices

General notes:

Nominations in writing for the elections on 16 June, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be accepted by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 19 May.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the ‘Forms’ section of the Elections Office website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/elections.shtml).

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out their reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 2 June.

Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 16 June.

For further information, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
Advertisements

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 280548
Fax: 01865 (2)70178
Web: www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising

Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University college staff, and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)

External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit card or debit card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency: If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.

(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.

(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisers, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement. Please note that advertisements form part of the online Gazette as published and cannot be removed or amended after publication.

The following is the text of the Discussion in Congregation on 10 May on the topic of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from 2012/13.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: The business before Congregation is the presentation of a Topic for Discussion, on the subject of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from October 2012. Would you please be seated.

The topic for today’s discussion will be the consideration of issues arising from the new funding and support arrangements for home/EU undergraduates from October 2012, in light of the decisions taken by Council on 14 March.

As noted on the agenda for this meeting in the University Gazette of 24 March, the topic has been cast in deliberately broad terms to allow members of Congregation to express their views on the range of issues that fall under this head. However, Congregation has been invited in particular to consider the following:

• how access and outreach work across the collegiate University might best be coordinated;
• how to reach potential students and their families and explain to them the consequences of the new arrangements;
• the nature of the support to be provided to students on course from 2012;
• how to engage the donor community effectively; and
• what the aims of Oxford’s outreach and access activities beyond 2012 might be.

In accordance with the regulation governing topics for discussion, no vote will be taken at this meeting, but Council will be required to give consideration to the remarks made and will do so at Council’s meeting of 30 May.

A transcript of this meeting will appear as a Gazette supplement as soon as possible, hopefully in the 19 May issue, and on the University website prior to that.

The procedure for today’s discussion will be as follows. I shall ask Dr Sally Mapstone, Pro-VC (Education), to introduce the discussion and give an overview of the matters for consideration. The topic will then be open to the House. At the end of the discussion, I shall ask Dr Mapstone to make any final points.

I intend to close this afternoon’s meeting by about half past four. Please could speakers come forward and speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the House are asked to follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. Some of our speakers will no doubt be familiar with the device positioned to the side of the lectern, but, as a reminder, this anti-loquitor device has green, amber and red lights to help speakers with the timing of their speeches. The amber light shows when there is one minute remaining and should encourage speakers to begin to wind up their remarks. Red means speakers are out of time and must conclude their remarks. I shall have to ask speakers to bring their remarks to an end if they extend beyond the five minutes.

A number of members of Congregation have indicated a wish to speak and I will endeavour to call upon them all, but I cannot guarantee that I will be able to do so. Priority will be given to those who have indicated in advance that they wish to speak and I would ask that additional speakers rise from their seats to indicate their wish to speak only if they have new points to add which have not already been raised by other speakers.

In accordance with health and safety guidelines, the stenographer who is helping us to transcribe today’s proceedings is entitled to a break after an hour and a half. Therefore, if speeches are still being made at 3.30 p.m., I shall call for a five-minute break.

I would be grateful if any speaker who uses a written text would afterward provide a copy of that text to Mrs Benton, the officer who is collecting these speeches, as this will be of assistance in preparing the published record for the Gazette.

I will now ask Dr Sally Mapstone to introduce the discussion.

Dr Sally Mapstone, Pro-VC (Education), St Hilda’s College

As the Vice-Chancellor has outlined, it is proposed that today’s Congregation focus on future aims and arrangements for access and outreach work across the collegiate University; on how we communicate the new funding arrangements for fees and maintenance to potential students, their families and their schools; how we support students while they are here; and how fundraising in the areas of access and student support can most effectively work.

There is one immediate context to this, which I will outline before going on to map out our own university and college context. The immediate scenario is the wider political context in relation to higher education. In a series of public statements, the University has reiterated its deep concern about the government’s reductions in direct public investment in teaching at universities and the transfer of so much of that funding mechanism to the student loan book. The knock-on effects of those government decisions, including the perceived downgrading of areas such as the humanities, and the encouragement of the concept of the student as consumer, are equally subjects for concern.

The full impact of the government’s proposals in relation to funding, student numbers and regulation remains unclear, pending the
Our agreement states that the collegiate contributing to the University’s access aims. Review as well as, over time, the effectiveness as clearly as possible to those thinking of these arrangements in place, we convey them colleges must make sure that, having put spends at present. The University and total package of waivers and bursaries is incomes. at nearly £12 million a year, the backgrounds with the lowest household support for those students who come from Congregation’s support, has put in place an one year will provide the opportunity for statements about outreach and access of subject provision across our academic context, it is essential for this University to give focus to how it can continue to practise and to communicate its key educational principles: to continue to offer a wide range of subject provision across our academic divisions; and to admit students on the basis of their academic excellence and merit. Increasing access to this University to the most talented students, from as wide a range of backgrounds as possible, is a cornerstone of that approach.

My focus today is thus primarily on our immediate and prospective local context. The University’s draft access agreement for 2012/13, with the Office for Fair Access, was submitted to OFFA by the 19 April deadline. OFFA anticipates announcing its decision in relation to the circa 120 agreements it has received from universities by 11 July. After approval has been received from OFFA, the University’s agreement will be published. A summary was published on the Congregation website ahead of this discussion and Tony Monaco and I have an article on it in the most recent issue of the Oxford Magazine. For the foreseeable future, university access agreements with OFFA are for one year at a time. They necessarily involve prospective statements about outreach and access aims, but the fact that they are valid for one year will provide the opportunity for reassessment on the part of the university, as well as on that of OFFA. In advocating a standard undergraduate fee of £9,000 per annum for home/EU students, Council, with Congregation’s support, has put in place an accompanying and generous package of fee waivers and bursaries, with a focus on support for those students who come from backgrounds with the lowest household incomes. At nearly £12 million a year, the total package of waivers and bursaries is nearly double what the collegiate University spends at present. The University and colleges must make sure that, having put these arrangements in place, we convey them as clearly as possible to those thinking of applying to Oxford. We will keep that under review as well as, over time, the effectiveness of these arrangements themselves in contributing to the University’s access aims.

Our agreement states that the collegiate University currently spends an estimated £2.6 million per annum on access and outreach work. It makes a commitment, for 2012/13, to spend up to £750,000 across the collegiate University on additional access and outreach measures. It also gives a commitment for 2012/13 to invest up to £750,000 on a range of additional student support, retention and employability measures across the collegiate University, and I will shortly say more about the kinds of areas in which we anticipate that investment should take place. The agreement also identifies four key targets, against which the outcomes of our access, admissions and support activities can be assessed. In broad terms, the target areas are: increasing the proportion of UK undergraduate students at Oxford; from schools and colleges which historically have had limited progression to Oxford; from disadvantaged social backgrounds; and from neighbourhoods with low participation in higher education. A final target commits us to continue to reach the HEFCE benchmark on disabled students at Oxford. Achieving these targets over time will involve focused work across the collegiate University. The Principal of St Hilda’s College, who chairs the access subcommittee of AdEx, will be speaking about this next and will make reference to the emerging proposals for a common framework on access across both colleges and departments, which have been trailed in the access agreement. Preliminary reference has also been made in the agreement to a recently established Education Committee working group on possible foundation or bridging provision. That group is being chaired by the Master of St Peter’s College, who is also speaking in this discussion.

Existing outreach and access activity across the collegiate University is, of course, extensive and will continue. A flagship activity, involving a full range of colleges and departments, is the UNIQ summer schools that began in 2009/10 with great success and are due to run until 2014. Students on UNIQ come from UK state schools and are selected in a process that involves the use of verifiable contextual information. Forty per cent of the 2009/10 UNIQ participants who applied to Oxford received a conditional offer. The success of UNIQ speaks to several of our targets; it also reinforces the value of informed use of contextual information, which has been used during admissions since the 2008 round. We will want to develop UNIQ further and that will take resource.

As was mentioned in the last Congregation Discussion, work with pre-sixteen students is crucial to promoting the idea of entry into higher education. The loss, through government cuts, of the Aimhigher programme is a real blow here and will also make it harder to get across a consistent message about the value and cost of higher education. It is clear that the provision of extended guidance and advice, particularly on financial matters, to potential applicants, their parents and schools, is an area in which more investment will need to be made. As a result of another government initiative, universities from 2012 will have to provide key information sets—detailed information about each of their courses for prospective applicants. The University has been involved in a pilot for this and it is clear, again, that the resource demands will be considerable.

Now, provision of information and communication may sound prosaic, but they are going to be vital to how we encourage applicants to Oxford and also how we support them while they are here as students. Colleges play a fundamental part in the provision of that environment; the particular nature of student life in Oxford owes so much to the experience of living and often working in the same supportive environment for three to four years. But with the increased fee will come an increased attention to consistency—not uniformity, but consistency—of provision across colleges. The complementary support that the University provides through its disability, counselling, careers and other services is likely to need some strengthening in the years ahead.

Much of the University’s planning on access, outreach and student support over the next few years will thus involve finding a balanced way through the kind of landscape I have sketched out here. The purpose of this discussion is to invite members of Congregation and nominated student representatives to contribute to that process and I look forward to hearing what you all have to say.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. The discussion is now open to the House and I ask Ms Sheila Forbes, Principal of St Hilda’s College, to speak first.

Ms Sheila Forbes, Principal of St Hilda’s College, Deputy Chairman of the Admissions Executive of the Conference of Colleges (AdEx)

I would like to address the question of how access and outreach across the collegiate University might best be coordinated. This is an important question at a moment when we are committing ourselves, through the access agreement, to increase the resources available for access work. As an institution, we need to ensure that we use these resources wisely and that Oxford, as a whole, gains the best possible value.

The collegiate University already undertakes an impressive amount of access work, initiated by colleges, departments and university staff. Collectively in 2010 we organised over 1,500 events in Oxford and across the UK and contacted over 3,000 schools and colleges. Plans are already underway to increase this effort. The regionalisation project, linking all parts of the UK to a designated college, has brought increased focus by each college on a particular region and a rapid expansion of dedicated access staff. The University is increasing its support for the successful UNIQ summer schools to 650 places for 2011, and departments are resourcing another five subject areas. Some, particularly in MPLS, are considering extending pre-entry bridging courses, and the Education Committee has created a working party to look specifically at foundation and bridging provision.

Many of these initiatives need close collaboration and coordination between colleges, departments and University staff. For them to launch smoothly and work well for the participants, each part of the collegiate University needs to be clear about its role: where it is in the lead; where it is playing a vital but supporting role; and what it needs to do. For example, colleges are clearly the first point of contact for schools and sixth form colleges, but University staff play an important supporting role and offer key expertise. We need to set future meeting targets related to outcomes, not just to more activity. So, in that context, monitoring and evaluation become very important skills. It makes sense to concentrate these and to provide advice and support to colleges, not to try to replicate the skill at a high level in every college. Conversely, University staff are the lead organisers of UNIQ, but it could not run without subject expertise from departments, and colleges providing accommodation and an insight for participants into college life as a student.

We already have a good coordinating model in the Common Framework for Undergraduate Admissions, which is the basis for ongoing development of our admissions processes. This framework already makes commitments relating to outreach; attracting applications from the most academically able students, irrespective of socio-economic, ethnic or national origin; maintaining well-targeted programmes to improve access for under-represented groups; and providing contextual information in a common format. The access working group of the Admissions Executive has now started work on a common framework for access, to develop these commitments and to make explicit the responsibilities of different parts of the collegiate University. In many cases, these are already clear; in others there are questions to be resolved. To give two examples, FE colleges are an important source of diverse candidates from under-represented groups and we need to reach them effectively. However, they are more concentrated in some regions, which puts a disproportionate burden on the link colleges; working with FE students also requires a different approach and set of skills. The University has made significant use of the museums and collections for both pre- and post-sixteen outreach work. Their role, and ways to further integrate their activities into the broader access work, needs consideration.

We are also still learning about the effectiveness of our outreach work and which activities have the most impact in widening access to Oxford. It would be helpful to develop a good practice guide, where existing good practice from across the institution can be highlighted and regularly updated. This should help new outreach staff in all parts of the University to get up to speed and help us to disseminate new ideas quickly.

Finally, there are three other areas where we will need to work towards a common goal. To demonstrate our achievements and make sure that we capture them, all parts of the University need to assess and monitor progress systematically. We need to develop clear and transparent criteria, against which we can all monitor ourselves to enable our outreach activity to be targeted and effectively evaluated. Secondly, we need to keep track of the costs and of our total investment in access, and we are currently establishing a baseline for this. And last but not least, clear and transparent information for applicants and those advising them is vital. The messages from Oxford and all the supporting material need to have a consistent core, whichever part of the institution approaches potential applicants first. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Colin Thompson to speak next.

Dr Colin Thompson, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, St Catherine’s College

As a former Dean, Senior Tutor and Proctor, and chaplain to a campus university before that, I have been involved in the pastoral side of student support for a long time and that is the subject I would like to address, because, although we may know these things, many of those we want to attract here will not.

Our model of tutorial teaching provides close individual support for each student and is predicated on the belief that education concerns the whole person. It is in the tutorial relationship that problems may first present themselves: when, for example, poor progress needs to be investigated. All my experience tells me that, in most such cases, the causes are not purely academic. But because tutors should not be expected to handle more complex personal concerns, senior subject tutors and relevant college officers have overall responsibilities for monitoring student progress and, where necessary, referring individuals on for specialist advice. All colleges have extensive networks of support that students can tap into, informal as well as formal. Student peer support groups, parenting schemes, Junior Deans, personal tutors and college advisers, chaplains; these provide a variety of opportunities for students to find a sympathetic local ear and, in many cases, a solution. College officers know how vital it is to have a close working relationship with the college nurse and doctor, especially in cases where professional medical help is most urgently needed. A minimum kit for student support in a college probably includes these elements, however they are described. If each college were asked, for example, perhaps through Conference, to set out as clearly as possible the arrangements it has in place for pastoral care and comment on what has been found to be particularly effective, we could learn from one another’s experience and enhance the quality of our provision.

One of the constants of our life is to work out what is best done by colleges locally and by the University collectively. We need to avoid wasteful duplication and ensure more, less competition. There are also opportunities for collaborative work between the colleges and our central bodies which deal with student services, as indeed between JCRs and MCRs on the one hand and the Student Union on the other. It is clearly right that specialist expertise in areas such as disability, street problems, social work, housing, and mental health is provided centrally. I would like to be more sure than I am that we have sufficient of the right kind of such resources and that the channels of communication from central services to the colleges and vice versa are as open and as mutually supportive as they can be. Rather than acting on an ad hoc basis—should additional resource go to this area or that?—we need to take a more considered approach to ensuring the support services we offer centrally are as appropriately targeted as possible and complement what the colleges are doing. I would therefore like to see greater dialogue between the colleges and central services in the area of pastoral support. One of the places where this could happen, but by no means the only one, is in the termly meetings of Deans with the Proctors and Assessor.

We also need to be more ambitious about imagining student support not just to be about problems. Sport apart, which has already had a serious review, there are all kinds of activities in which students become involved which enhance their experience of Oxford and contribute to our holistic understanding of education. I am thinking principally of drama and music, which should also be the focus of our attention. Large numbers of our students become involved in sport and voluntary work, and that is just as true of the performing arts. We need to be very clear to potential students what an extraordinary range of such possibilities is open to them here. The opportunity to discover in oneself gifts one didn’t know one had is a precious one and may well influence career choices.

Finally, while we are of necessity concentrating on undergraduate support at the moment, I hope we will not forget our graduate community. Graduate life presents a quite different and more difficult series of challenges in terms of how it is best supported and, although good progress has been made, I am not yet convinced that we have risen to all of them.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Mr Alex Bulfin to speak next.
Mr Alex Bullfin, Vice-President (Access and Academic Affairs), Oxford University Student Union, University College

I have realised recently that we have all been labouring under a false apprehension. I, like many of you, believed that the purpose of higher education and, more particularly, this University was to seek out the individuals with the greatest potential, academically, regardless of their background and circumstances, to give them the opportunity to experience a world-class education; but, it seems, we were all wrong. All this time, we have been labouring under false pretences.

Fortunately, I woke up this morning to find that someone has had the clarity and vision to see through our dreamy idealism. Once again, Mr Willetts and his coalition partners have hit upon the truth of the matter. World-class education should not just be for those who are academically gifted, it should also be for those who can afford to pay through the nose for it. We should provide extra places at Oxford to make sure that the privileged few have access to further privilege. It is almost certainly for the best. Opening up privileged education to the disadvantaged will only give them aspirations and, after all, who needs those? This time the government has truly outdone itself. Clearly, we should also accept some of the credit for this discovery, after all it was us and Cambridge who trained Messrs Willetts, Cable and co, and I think we can all agree we did a fine job.

Joking to one side, and if an idea such as this can ever be a joke, I am not sure, the draft proposals that emerged from the Guardian today are nothing short of a slap in the face for everything that we stand for as an institution. It challenges the very notion of our academic integrity; it laughs at our attempts to construct a rigorous and needs-blind admission system. It actually proposed a formal back-door route to the University for students from the wealthiest backgrounds. I have spent the last four years in my life as a student of the University and an OUSU officer telling prospective applicants that those back-door routes don’t exist. It is clear that the coalition has completely lost its grip on higher education, it is all out of ideas and in the process its reckless flailing about for quick fixes is liable to put at risk everything we have built up over recent decades.

Some might argue that these are just draft proposals and may never make it into the final white paper. Already today, it appears that they are going to slip silently into the night. But the fact that the coalition can even consider and publicly air suggestions of this nature shows a complete lack of understanding of the sector and demonstrates that any pretension for caring about social mobility is no more than lip service.

Last time we were in this room there were numerous calls for the University as a whole to stand up to the government and openly state our opposition to what they are seeking to do to the higher education sector, but we were too slow and we were too cautious. We cannot afford to be now. Last month, David Cameron and Nick Clegg took it upon themselves to take another pot shot at Oxford, armed only with ropey figures and, one can only assume, a crippling sense of Oxbridge guilt. When the University spoke out against them though, people listened. If Oxford speaks out now, they will listen again.

We can’t keep relying, though, on access officers and our wonderful press team to speak for us. We all have a responsibility for building and broadcasting Oxford’s access message and, as we all know, actions always speak louder than words. Contextualised needs-blind admissions are the foundation on which our academic integrity is based, and we need to mobilise all our resources towards making sure the best students are able to study here, regardless of their background.

I call upon all members of our academic community—students, academics, and administrative officers—to open up privileged education to the disadvantaged. It is all out of ideas and in the process its reckless flailing about for quick fixes is liable to put at risk everything we have built up over recent decades.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Mr Mike Nicholson to speak next.

Mr Mike Nicholson, University Director of Undergraduate Admissions

My aim this afternoon is to talk about the implications of the access agreement on the access and outreach activity, both here at Oxford and also nationally. We are in a period of significant change. Within the next year, we will lose Aimhigher in England and, with the devolved administrations in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, there is a great deal of uncertainty as to what support might exist for students in these devolved administrations.

We are seeing restructurings of schools and colleges on almost a daily basis because of funding change and we will also see a significant review of the Connexions service, the net result of which will be; there will be less opportunity for students to access high quality information and fewer channels for them to receive information on the increasing complexity of the higher education system and the funding arrangements. We will also be subject, I suspect, to much greater scrutiny of activity and also the spending that we put into outreach activity. Higher education will be somehow expected to fill the gap and also many of the changes that will take place will take place in 2011, before any of the additional income we might receive through the changes to funding in higher education actually arrives. It is all the more important, therefore, that we can effectively coordinate and utilise the resources that we do have at this institution to maximise, from our end, the impact that we have in ensuring that the information that we have is accurately conveyed and disseminated to those who need to know to make key life-changing decisions.

There are a wide range of initiatives across this collegiate University, in colleges, museums, and collections, in the departments, in the faculties, through OUSU and also through the central University. We are already seeing a ramping up of activity with a significant number of new appointments, particularly in the colleges, to engage in access work. It is, therefore, all the more important that this activity is effectively coordinated. It is even more important that we don’t get caught up in whatever the latest idea originating in government or the media is, particularly given the relatively short shelf-life that many such initiatives enjoy.

We have a great deal of internal debate and discussion about the issues around access and we consult regularly across the institution to decide how best to deploy our resources. It is important, therefore, that we continue to give out consistent messages, particularly about the new funding arrangements, and it is noticeable that Oxford is the only university to have published in great detail our proposed funding package. It is important because for the 2012 applicants who are already trying to decide which institution they may wish to apply to, they need the detailed information and we, at the moment, are the only University who is prepared to stand there and tell people what we are considering doing. We are often criticised for our lack of transparency and fairness. Certainly, on this particular issue, we are already ahead of the game. We must stick with activities that have proven success. We have the structures in place to ensure we can deliver very effective access and outreach activity. We have a regional model that is already beginning to reap dividends, we have a very good and comprehensive database to collect information and demonstrate what we do to a disbelieving outside world. We have comprehensive summer school arrangements involving wide areas of the University, and we have very effective volunteering and mentoring networks.

If we are engaging in new initiatives, it is important that they are supported with accurate information to ensure activities are appropriately targeted and that have measurable outcomes and they need to link to the benchmarks that we, as a collegiate University, have established in our access agreement. One-off short-term solutions do not work. We know that from bitter experience. There are no silver bullets. We know that because we have spent so much time looking for solutions. It is, therefore, really, really important for this University to make the most use of all the various resources that we have available and also to ensure that we do end up with a situation where students with real talent and real ability, who have the potential to be successful in the Oxford tutorial system, are effectively supported through the next twelve months and beyond, which is, I assume, the outcome that all of us here today feel is important and necessary. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: I call on Dr Jeff Tseng to speak next.

Dr Jeff Tseng, Department of Physics, St Edmund Hall

I wish to touch briefly on three issues. First, in the last Congregation Discussion, I spoke of changing the national access discourse through work in local primary schools, such as that undertaken by students in my college. I was subsequently contacted by Ms Tara Prayag in the Admissions Office and learned of some of the excellent work also being done in that office by her and Mr James Slattery in presenting the opportunities of higher education in local primaries. Like our students’ work, this effort is not specifically aimed at recruiting such young children to attend Oxford, but instead at making a real difference at a critical time—some people say the most important time—in young lives. It also turns out that work in primaries managed to get a mention in the government’s guidance to the Director of OFFA—partly, I understand, due to efforts by those involved in this work. However, I do worry that the government’s ‘stronger focus on outcomes’, OFFA’s stated desire to concentrate outreach work on those areas where there is evidence of impact, as well as around target areas of exclusive Oxford focus, will actually short-change a worthwhile and important effort. I couldn’t check whether this is actually the case, since the draft agreement has not been seen by Congregation, apparently because, as one quotes, ‘the draft agreement is subject to approval by OFFA’—I was not actually aware that OFFA had to approve our internal drafts. But in any case, I commend the work in primary schools to my colleagues. I hope that we will see more of it, and that it will receive active encouragement, and that it will not be lost among the targets and evidences of impact.

Second, on the topic of student support, since the last Discussion, some of us promoted the idea of full support for the poorer students, starting with students eligible for free school meals. It seems the idea was actually discussed by the committee, as there were specific points in their documents addressing why they didn’t go in that direction—in particular, that there were probably many more eligible than declared of such students. The committee did not address why it had to be all such students or none. However, I still believe full support for some students is a good idea and a worthwhile development goal. If we provide such help, it should be of a kind to make a big difference to its beneficiaries as well as to the University’s message. It was refreshing, I should say, that in the ensuing press coverage we escaped being labelled the worst—in the current media climate, we shouldn’t actually minimise that achievement. On the other hand, I am relieved that the rather complicated bursary scheme didn’t have to share publicity alongside, say, the Oxford Inspires website. This leads me to my third and final point, which is that the argument about public support of higher education is far from over. Support may now have to take different forms, but the case needs to be made. Unfortunately, I didn’t really find some of the arguments advanced to be inspiring at all; for instance, humanities scholars trying to justify their field in terms of relevance to ‘creative industries’. I actually found that almost physically painful to read about. I mean, surely the glory of English literature does not lie in BBC costume drama. But when we ask what have others wanted out of universities, we find a range of answers. The church wanted, for instance, priests; the government wanted administrators; industry wanted trained workers; students wanted an education and lately a discernable career path. More recently, industry has wanted cut-price research, and the government has wanted to boost UK plc. Some kind of scholarship is the common thread in all of this, but I believe that to have actually pandered to these forces, giving them exactly what they wanted, would have been to serve them less well. Instead, it seems to me that universities have been of greatest benefit to others when they have been independent of all of them and pass on that independence to their students.

I suspect that it goes even further than that. We nurture independent, adaptable, informed thought, amongst our students and ourselves with wider views than of self or of one’s friends, indeed I argue the case and value what is not immediately obvious, such as targets. We challenge one another and in turn challenge others and society itself with the integrated experiences of the past and the present—at least, such is our capability. Furthermore, we nurture this intellectual growth in many fields because we acknowledge that the world is simply too vast to be seen, complete, from one perspective, be it that of physics or, to take another example, market and monetisation. I am a little bit less sure about how well we have passed on that lesson, unfortunately. A functioning, sustainable, free society needs not only a vote but also what we could call higher education in the broad sense. I wish we could say that we actually believe so strongly in the benefits of universities and higher education to society at large that we want at least some to partake of it for free, at our own expense. At present the message is too muddled and, I am afraid, it is lost. This is not the end of the conversation, however, and I would urge my colleagues to use all the tools at our disposal to reclaim it, for all our sakes. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Mr Mark Damazer to speak next.

Mr Mark Damazer, Master of St Peter’s College

I appear before you as Chairman of the working group, looking at bridging provision or foundation provision for the University. We have only just begun our work; we will continue to meet throughout the term and hope to reach some sort of provisional conclusion for consideration by the University in the Michaelmas term. The group has on it members of several colleges and, of course, faculties and Continuing Education as well. We have surveyed the current literature, looking at the way foundation and bridging provision works for those universities in the United Kingdom and, indeed, outside the United Kingdom, who are in the position of being able to select their students rather than trying to enrol them.

I shall begin by making the obvious point: that this is not merely being done in order to meet the political exigencies of the age. Anybody who has picked up a newspaper at any point in the last six or nine months will know the degree of interest and, indeed, some might say pressure that exists around this topic, but unless people in the University involved in admissions and those not involved in admissions believe that the current way in which we select students is infallible, then we must start from the position that there is more that we could do, perhaps by offering bridging courses or a foundation year, that would enable us to get the best possible talent that we can, without compromising our ideals of excellence, and to do it in a way that meets the political requirement of the age. And it must be seen to be something that the University tackles that way round. If we are to go down the road of providing a foundation or bridging set of courses, it will be done to sustain and bolster our reputation for excellence, not to undermine it and not to meet the requirements of a particular political master. I would like to give some reassurance to Mr Alex Bulfin from OUSU that any bridging course or foundation course that we provide is not designed for very rich students, who in any other way might not qualify, in order that they can get some help before they arrive. The target is clearly those students who, we believe, have the potential and capacity to benefit from an Oxford education, but who might only reach the level that we think that they are capable of reaching with the extra help of a bridging course or a foundation course of some kind.

The one important thing to add to that is that any such student who is admitted from a disadvantaged background must not be admitted at the expense of somebody who is already admitted, without those involved in the process of deciding upon their candidacy suggesting that they may need any extra help. In other words, these courses would be provided for students extra to those who we already admit from a disadvantaged background and not at the expense of those who are already admitted from a disadvantaged background.

The group, as I say, has only just begun its consideration, but a preliminary set of conclusions has been thought about, and the first is to say that there is no desire to lower the formal entrance requirements for anybody who would be offered such a bridging or foundation course. Too many students already achieve three As at A level, or their equivalent, and do not succeed in getting into the University for us to feel that the right way forward would be formally to lower those standards, as has been the case in other universities. The plan, rather, is to encourage those involved in admissions, who currently are perhaps slightly risk averse at the margins, to take a risk knowing that students will be invited to do a foundation or bridging course.

There are two broad routes that we are considering at this stage, and I should say at the outset that there are no takers for a full foundation year at the moment. We believe that we might be just as effectively served by something shorter and sharper and intensive. We would do this either by helping these students after they have been given their offer but before they finally arrive at the University, up to and including doing their A levels and beyond, or we might offer these bridging courses only after they have achieved their grades.

The second main line of thought that we are exploring is to see whether we could work with other universities, perhaps in the Russell Group, to provide a mixed model of some distance learning, supplemented by some residential and intensive courses, which would help these students gain the maximum from their subsequent experience of Oxford, by learning the value and, indeed, sometimes the techniques, if I may say, of independent thought.

We acknowledge the good work that has been done by Continuing Education and we are not recommending anything that we think would damage that; indeed, we wish to complement it, and there may be other lines of exploration as we talk throughout the term. As I say, we will come back at Michaelmas with what will be a provisional set of findings, which, I hope, the University will consider with considerable interest. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Professor Tony Monaco to speak.

Professor Tony Monaco, Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), Merton College

I would like to speak to you today about funding for teaching and student support. The principles behind Oxford’s response to the Browne Review of higher education funding were threefold. Firstly, that there is a benefit to institutions like Oxford to both the individual and to society. We felt that the government policy and funding mechanism should reflect this. Secondly, we felt that higher education should be free at the point of entry and, at that point, that no additional funding was required from government to finance this system. Lastly, we put forward a series of flexible fees which could be increased over time, simultaneously with financial aid arrangements which would make sure that there was adequate opportunity for students and affordability.

Unfortunately, government policy did not mirror these principles and, as we know, there was a drastic reduction in funding for teaching, as well as funding for capital investment. The University, therefore, was under a process last term where it had to set a fee on one hand and produce a policy and an OFFA agreement which had to be submitted by the end of term. Therefore, many working groups and committees, with college and University representation, put forward policy which was eventually agreed by Council and was the subject of the Congregation Discussion last term. I would like to review some of those principles.

The first principle of the policy was the fee was set at the cap of £9,000. This was due to the fact that we spend, on average, £16,000 to educate a student at Oxford. Therefore, if we were to set the fee lower than £9,000, we would continue the unsustainability of our teaching provision and we would provide a subsidy, undifferentiated, to all students regardless of their financial background.

The second principle was about living costs. We felt that any student studying in Oxford during term time should not have to take paid employment to achieve a living here at Oxford. Therefore, we wanted to continue the generous bursary scheme that the colleges and the University had provided for students from lower income families to help them with their living costs.

On fee waivers, we wanted to make sure we encouraged students from lower income families to apply and, hopefully, get accepted to Oxford. We were worried there were going to be impediments from the government, that debt overhang would make them not apply to Oxford. Therefore, we put into place a partial fee waiver scheme of £5,500 in the first year, so that any student could say it did not cost them any more to come to Oxford than it does at present; then there would be a reduction in years two and three to a fee waiver of £3,000.

Together this joint package between the colleges and the University was £12 million of funding and would include, hopefully, some partial funding from the government’s national scholarship programme. I am confident that this is the most generous package of financial aid support for students in England. I am very proud of the fact that Oxford came to this policy with input from members of Congregation, as well as the colleges and University.

However, the more money we put into financial aid support, the less money from the fee income we can put into teaching provision. As we heard from Sally Mapstone and others, we are increasing the support for access and outreach activities and for student services for students on course. Therefore, if we are going to be this generous in our financial aid package, we have to consider the sustainability of our unique teaching provision here at Oxford. There will be a review going forward of the bursary and fee waiver scheme year on year, to make sure it is fit for purpose, and I would hope that that review would keep the aims in mind, and the guiding principles in mind, when the college and university representatives review this package. It will always be a joint effort between the University and the colleges, but I would hope that there would be the balance of the financial sustainability for our unique teaching provision, as well as the goal of increasing student diversity and access for those from all cultural and socio-economic backgrounds to obtain an education at Oxford. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Graham Vincent-Smith to speak next.
Second, we must set clear and consistent initiatives and in distributing resources, importantly, our effort must be a joint effort. This is very much a work in progress. I am doing so because I think it offers a constructive way forward. In order to become sustainable, we need to start. Once we have catered for the students of last term, and so I am going to focus on those commitments that Council approved, for fees and bursaries just after the end of term, and so I am going to focus on how a concerted effort across the colleges and central University can engage our philanthropic supporters so we can fulfil those commitments that Council approved, meet our students’ needs and, thereby, I hope, help to allay concerns that prospective students and their families might have about signing up to an Oxford education in a world in which government funding for universities has so publicly and radically changed.

This is very much a work in progress. I’m outlining ideas that have so far been generated and discussed only by a small group, made up of college development directors and the central Development Office’s student support team and I hope they will forgive me for presenting some of our thinking at this discussion when we have only just sat it out for wider debate. I am doing so because I think it offers a constructive way forward. In order to become policy, of course, it will need to be further discussed and refined and go through appropriate formal committee approval.

What are the key thoughts? I don’t think that they are complicated. First and most importantly, our effort must be a joint effort. We are all in it together. We need coordination in seeking resources so that we help and complement one another’s development initiatives and in distributing resources, so that we equally support all qualifying students, regardless of their college.

Second, we must set clear and consistent targets. Everyone raising money for bursaries, and by this I mean funding that helps with students’ living expenses, and for fee waivers, which I am using here to represent foregone revenue for the collegiate University, simply needs to work with the same figures. It is not magic but it is important.

Third, we should start where the need is greatest and that is with the roughly ten per cent of our undergraduate students whose residual home income is below £16,000 a year. Our current estimate of the annual steady state support required to meet the cost of providing the student bursaries and the fee waivers that we will provide for this group of students is a little over £7 million a year, and that is equivalent to about £76 million of endowment. This is surely within our potential scope and this is where we should start. Once we have catered for the students in this neediest group, we can move on to the next tier and so on.

What forms might that philanthropic support take? It will surely encompass both spend-down donations—by which I mean things like annual funds—and endowment. Over the long term, building our student support endowment is, I am sure, the best way to give us the flexibility and confidence that will future-proof us and our students against further changes in policy—and we see that can happen more often than one might expect—and the economic climate. We should get there not only through funding leadership gifts—funding leadership gifts that will inspire other donors and leverage further donations—but also by combining gifts from multiple donors at every possible level.

That means from the smallest to the greatest; we have to put them together into meaningful packages.

We are already actively seeking support from individual donors, from trusts and foundations and from corporations. This is, obviously, only a beginning and only a small part of the overall picture. We won’t forget that an Oxford education still costs much more than we levy in fees. We must fill that gap in order to assure the longer-term sustainability of our extraordinary and, in my view, extraordinarily valuable education system. We must not be deflected from the vital importance of assembling a financial support structure for our next generation of graduate students—I think that is absolutely crucial and we need to start as soon as we can—and we are actively underpinning posts through the Teaching Fund.

So our response to the exceptional challenges we face must be one of unprecedented ambition. This is no time for timidity.

Mr Roger Boden, Bursar of Keble College, Chairman of the Estates Bursars’ Committee

Bursars have a motto; in cash we trust, the rest is accounting. In cash terms, the new funding arrangements contribute more for university teaching and more for maintenance. An undergraduate education will still not be free at the point of delivery, but as they pursue their studies, undergraduates will be slightly less out of pocket in cash terms than they would otherwise be, and universities will have slightly more money to teach them well. Of course, the cash has to come from somewhere. The government will borrow it and it will look to graduates to pay a surtax to help service the debt. That will be a significant reduction in take-home pay as graduates begin adult life. We cannot afford to do this. Still, at least the liability to surtax will end after thirty years. That, essentially, is the deal.

There is, however, one complication: the new funding regime is presented as a loan scheme. Graduates on three-year courses will end up owing about £39,000; graduates of a four-year course, more than £50,000. But with a surtax see paid on nine per cent on incomes over £21,000, only about a fifth of graduates will actually pay off the debt over the thirty-year period.

So is it a debt, or is it a liability to a surtax? For the vast majority, the size of the debt is irrelevant; their only concern will be with the surtax burden. That is rather liberating, in its way. Instead of struggling to repay a mountain of debt, the eight per cent can simply resign themselves to thirty years of surtax. Suppose that all graduates faced the surtax liability for the full thirty years, regardless of income. The whole vocabulary of debt would disappear, yet for the sake of a surtax many years hence to an as yet unidentified minority whose earnings will be in the top quintile, here we have all been, anguish about student debt. So anguished has been this University that it have all been, anguishing about student debt. Fee waivers, has actually decided to spend more than £5 million a year on fee remission. Fee waivers, have all been, anguishing about student debt. So anguished has been this University that it have all been, anguishing about student debt. Income that will fund fee remission: cash is cash is cash. Our marginal cash is the E10 a month from the retired teacher, the E20 a month from the civil engineer, the income from the legacy of a clergyman—all of whom gave money to Oxford because they believe in the value of what we do. They don’t give us that money so that we can hand it, gratis, to the government. Still less do they intend that we should use it to reduce the future tax burdens of some of the country’s highest earners who happened, many years previously, to have come to Oxford from a low income household. Mr Vice-Chancellor, we must use the coming months to develop a support package for 2013 that can justify to our donors. That will provide a focus that our Hilary term deliberations, sadly, lacked.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Professor Susan Cooper to speak.

Professor Susan Cooper, Department of Physics, St Catherine’s College

I would like to reflect on the cost of higher education, not only at Oxford but in the whole country. I share the wish that it be publicly funded, available to all without financial constraint, but this no longer seems feasible. Why? In England it is not the cost per student, but the increased number of students. Some increase is probably called for as jobs become more complex, but that raises the question of whether universities should provide an education or vocational training. The government has cloaked the two, creating a muddle. It says it wants differentiation in the higher education sector, but the absorption of the polytechnics and the introduction of the RAE have, in practice, created motivations for uniformity. Annual, or more frequent, letters from the ministry to HEFCE and from HEFCE to us chastise us all to do the government’s bidding, mainly in supporting the economy. Two experiments in encouraging fee differentiation have dramatically failed. So is it time to abandon the ideal of free higher education and go private, with Oxford emulating Harvard?

There are two reasons why I think not. The first is the danger of allowing cost to increase without constraint. This would certainly create a market with different fee levels, but what levels? The US examples suggest they would be significantly more than £9,000. The new English system inserts an additional nine per cent step onto graduates’ income tax rates of twenty per cent and forty per cent—a significant increase but one that sits within the current rates, with the thirty-year payment limit meaning the general taxpayer still subsidises the education of a significant fraction of graduates. Double the fees, and either you double the additional tax rate so that it starts to dominate the graduates’ income tax, or the general taxpayer’s subsidy doubles and dominates. Frankly, I think a higher public contribution is more strongly needed for the schools, the real cause of unequal opportunities. Although I certainly don’t enjoy our current financial constraints, actually we are doing pretty well with our endowments to supplement fee income and grant income. Perhaps it works better to ask our wealthy graduates nicely to donate when they can, rather than to tax them throughout their lives. Yes, Oxford would need to charge much higher fees to compete head-to-head with Harvard rather than, say, Berkeley, but would that bring good value for money? Oxford should have the confidence to define its own role, which is international, but also English.

My second reason for rejecting privatisation is that even if we could free Oxford from government interference, the rest of the country would remain subject to the damage done by the government’s habit of redisorganising things. Particularly Oxford, which educates a significant portion of future government ministers, has a responsibility to expose the damage done by this repeated reorganisation. PPE tutors and Blavatnik School: wake up. Max Weber analysed the perverse motivations that can endanger public service, but more must be done to understand and fight the danger of politicians changing things just for the sake of change, so that they can have accomplished something, hoping the harmful consequences won’t show up until the other party is in power. They silently rely on those of us working in higher education, the schools, the NHS, the city councils, to do our best to keep things running despite their interference, but we can only do so much in reactive mode. Oxford, in its teaching and its research, should attack the core problem of politically-motivated, government-imposed redisorganisation, rather than run away from it into privatisation.

A further concern is the over-importance being given to university education, implying it is the key to success in life. Even the former government’s goal of fifty per cent participation left the other fifty per cent outside. We hear little of what the country does for them. Is sufficient high-quality vocational training available? And is university really the best path for all who are led to believe it is? While I agree that higher education is of public benefit, I do not believe that other people couldn’t and now owns his own machine tool company. I do not want to claim that my contribution to society is more, and I really don’t want to know which of us earns more. The difference I find significant and wrong is that in England my path would have proceeded from the retired teacher, the £20 a month from the civil engineer, the income from the legacy of a clergyman—all of whom gave money to Oxford because they believe in the value of what we do. They don’t give us that money so that we can hand it, gratis, to the government.
The Single Theme I Would Like to Raise in Relation to the Proposed Increase in Fees Is How Divisive It Is for Us Here at Oxford University. A Key Assumption Behind This Increase Is That Higher Education Is No Longer a Common Good Which Is the Possession of Every Citizen, But Rather the Private Concern of the Minority of the Population. This Would Be to Accept the Claim That There Is a Radical Shift in Public Thinking on the Very Purposes of Our Society and Which the University Must Reflect. I Don’t Agree with This Claim by the Current Government: Either That the Country Feels This Way, or That We, at the University of Oxford, Believe It as Well. In What Will Soon Be Another Country, Scotland, the Devolved Government Is Retaining Free Higher Education; They Are the Ones Who Have Got It Right, and Represent Us All More Truly.

So, Many of Us Have Come to Make the Arguments We Believe Are Widely Shared in Two Distinct, But Interrelated Realms: The First About Our Public Welfare and Our Basic Values and Principles As Citizens in This Country; The Second About the Kind of University We Are, and What We Believe It Must Become. But We Have Also Yet Been Able to Have This Very Critical and Basic Discussion, Because We Are Told That It Is Far Too Late to Have It. We Must Accept Our Fate and Get on With It; That Our Institutional Mechanisms Are Insufficient to Respond Adequately to This Government Policy That Is So at Odds with Our Basic Goals and Purposes As Research Teachers and Members of the Academy. Congregation Is the Mechanism of Self-Governance That We Are Privileged to Have Here at Oxford, and Which Permits Us to Have This Discussion and, Indeed, We Must Take the Opportunity to Do So. The Locus of Decisions That Are to Emerge from the University on This Issue Resides Here: The Case Has Just Begun to Be Made, and It Is Certainly Not Too Late.

We Are Also Told That the Effects of the Cuts Will Be Mitigated by the Creation of Bursaries, Which Will Enable Poorer Students to Attend University, and Loans That Will Be Provided As to Allow Everyone Access. However, This Fails to Recognise That These Debts Will Represent Yet Another Source of Stress on Young People, Adding to the Pressure of High Housing, Living, Child-Rearing and Retirement Costs. Everybody Teaching Undergraduates and Graduates Here Has Already Listened to Many of These Concerns Coming From Our Young People. Accordingly—and This Takes Us Back to the Question of Social Division—High Fees Will Expose a Huge Section of Our Society (University Graduates, Their Dependents and Their Families) to Hardship, and It Is Naive to Think That Oxford Graduates Will Be Insulated from This Process. Aside from a Small Minority Who Will Go into Extremely High-Paying Jobs, Those Choosing to Pursue Medium-Paying Professions in Science, Research, Education, Government, Charity, the Arts or Elsewhere Will Be Saddled with a Heavy Burden—Too Heavy a Burden, I Would Argue—to Carry.

One Argument That We Often Hear Is That Fees Are More Progressive Than Funding University Education Through General Taxation, as the Taxes Raised From Lower Income Families Would No Longer Go into Subsidising the Well-Off. Yet This Claim Misses Out on the Fact That Most People in This Country Are Neither Wealthy Enough to be Unaffected by the Increase in Fees, Nor Poor Enough to Be Able to Enjoy the Promised Bursaries and Scholarships. In Fact, the Fee Hikes Will Have a Devastating Economic Consequence on Large Sections of the British Population. TheDisposable Income of Families Will Undoubtedly Shrink As They Are Forced to Divers a Substantial Portion of Their Resources into Subsidising Their Children’s Education. So It Is Instrumental in This Day. However, It Is Also Intrinsically Flawed, For I Believe That Most of Us Who Are British Are Still in Some Way Scottish at Heart and Hold the View That Higher Education Is a Public Good.

Above All, the Arguments Offered in Favour of the Cuts Are Socially Divisive. They Break Up the Citizenship into Competing Groups; the Entire Enterprise of a National Education Becomes a Game, and a Zero-Sum Game at That. Taxpayers Are Asked: Why Should You Pay for the Education of Students? Universities Are Pressed Against Their Students and Members of Faculty; and Attempts Are Made to Draw a Wedge Between the Arts and Humanities People, on the One Hand, and Scientists on the Other—Between Those Who Produce ‘Useful’ Research and Those Who, They Claim, Do Not. The Hierarchies and Conflicts Artificially Created Will Generate Damaging Divisions in This Country, and Amongst Ourselves: Between One University and Another, Between Taxpayer and Student, University Administration and Faculty, the Sciences and the Arts and—If Today’s News in the Guardian Proves Correct—Between Rich People, Who Can Buy Their Place in Oxford, and the Rest of the Population, Who Cannot.

In Conclusion, We Are Gluten to Our Colleagues in These Different Fields of Study, With Our Students Who Are Now Facing This Unfair Burden, With Our University Administrators Who Are Being Pressured to Collude, With Other British Citizens Facing These Same Decisions in Their Universities, Their National Health Services, Our Public Services and Elsewhere: Our Role Here, as Members of Congregation of this University, Means That We Have Not Only the Right, But Also the Duty to Make Clear These Arguments on Higher Education, to Put Forward Our Own Vision—which We Believe Is Shared by the Majority in This Country, and Especially at This University. Silence Implies Consent. I Am Well Aware That Many of My Colleagues Have Been Silent Hitherto, Not Because They Consent, But Because They Think There Is Nothing Left for Us to Do. Yet, in This Too, the Discussion Is Just About to Begin. Thank You.
The point of the parable is that at the time we were developing these methods, we could not have foreseen their eventual widespread adoption by advanced software technology companies; we could not have honestly made unequivocal claims about the timetable for them to have a serious economic impact; and I really don’t know what half truths would have been told if we had been forced to do this. We never dreamed that less than fifteen years later the Lab would have been honoured twice by the government for these efforts, or that thirty years later our techniques would be crucial to the safety of a space station. But, happily, we were working under a more enlightened generation of scientific administrators, and their government masters respected the Haldane principle, and it was enough to promise insight. So we didn’t have to lie. We were able to bootstrap a project into existence on a combination of government and university funding, then we found a very senior manager in IBM capable of understanding the potential of our work and intrepid enough to take the risk of paying us to educate tens, and later hundreds, of his staff in these methods. Not to be left behind, the University eventually allowed us to start an undergraduate degree based on this. Incidentally, this manager had had an undergraduate education in Classics, as had Tony Hoare who had inspired and led the work in Oxford. Please never let it be said here that an education in the humanities leaves one unfit for participation in a modern economy.

This brings me to the ‘marketisation’ agenda of which the Universities Minister is so proud. I really wonder if he quite understands the incentives he is giving to universities to dumb down their curricula, or the long-term consequences of this for our society. Although formal methods are now used ubiquitously in the development of safety-critical systems, the ideas behind them demand a kind of rigorous and abstract thinking that is not always developed by the modern school curriculum; so despite their manifest economic impact, most Computing Science undergraduates have avoided their study when given a choice. But people who weren’t given the choice frequently come back and tell us that it was only when they began practising their craft that they came to realise how important these ideas were. While we were finding ways of teaching people our heretical and difficult methods, we would have failed the market tests of saleability to students and employability of graduates.

I am sure that nearly every academic in the University has analogous stories to tell, but we are faced with incentives to dumb down our curricula; we are faced with incentives to invent spurious tales about short-term economic benefit of our research; and we are faced with Research Councils whose officials seem all too eager to surrender pre-emptively to the short-term political priorities of the governments in power. So how are the universities going to retain sufficient independence and confidence to continue to train critical minds, to continue to celebrate independent voices, and to continue to cherish heresy? Our economy and our society cannot otherwise flourish. Will somebody please explain this to ‘Two Brains’?

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Mr David Barclay to speak next.

Mr David Barclay, President, Oxford University Student Union, Worcester College

This is a message from your customers: the students. At least, that is what Vince Cable called us at the Higher Education Conference last month. This characterisation of universities as places of producers and consumers is the true nature of the beast which our new £9,000 world is designed to unleash. I believe that puts us at a crossroads, and I want to explain why I think the consumer path could do real damage to our community in the realms of teaching and learning, and student representation. Then I want to ask you to join me in plotting an alternative path, one which will secure the future of our University and might just encourage a counter-revolution against the advance of the market into our civil society.

Some people I speak to argue that consumerism is not an issue that Oxford has to worry about, pointing to our tutorial system with a kind of blind faith that because ‘that’s not the way we do things here’, it will all be all right in the end. My answer to them is very simple: wake up, look around and get nervous. We are going to be required to produce a key information set to help benchmark the Oxford experience, alongside a student charter designed to tell students what they get for what they pay. I have just been told today to ‘follow the money’. Let us not be naïve: we face unprecedented pressure to conform to the consumer-producer model and we have never yet stood back and debated as a community how we feel about this and, crucially, what our alternative might be.

A consumerist mindset is one in which knowledge and understanding become quantified and transferable. How many lectures is a tutorial worth? How much more can we charge for a professor’s time than a postgraduate’s? A customer-producer relationship is a time-limited one: once the service is over, the transaction is complete. I don’t go back into a shop, twenty years after I’ve bought my milk, and offer to pay for my name on a new aisle.

So what is the alternative? Many scholars now talk about co-production as another way to see the student-teacher relationship. This kind of model might emphasise undergraduate research, or the co-designing of syllabi between students and tutors. Others reject all market terminology and go for a communities of practice scheme, which views the learning process as one of induction towards belonging in a given field or profession. This might make us think more about how we introduce students to Oxford, particularly those from overseas or on postgraduate taught courses. Whichever model we choose, we must do so, not because how we understand and talk about the learning relationship matters, not just for how we teach and study but for how we manage and govern too.

Just as importantly, consumerism threatens to change the nature of student representation. But whereas the tutorial system shows that we naturally yearn for an alternative to consumerism in teaching and learning, two years as a Common Room and OUSU President have shown me nothing other than the idea that student leaders are essentially involved in decisions because their members pay enough and the QAA tells us it is ‘best practice’. So why should students be involved? Well, I defy you to find a group of people more knowledgeable about this University and more concerned for its welfare than the last two teams of OUSU sabbaticals. Talk to us about John Hood and the governance debates and talk to us about the humanities deficit; we operate on exactly the same level of expertise and commitment as our academic and managerial colleagues. Look at what we bring to the table, when our focus groups on the Teaching Review have both represented students and served the interests of the whole collegiate University. Every day in tutorials and labs, you push students to the limits of their abilities and they thrive. Why then are we so reluctant to make students absolutely central to everything we do in this University, including nominating senior posts, making financial decisions and planning long-term strategies? We already know much more about these decisions than you might imagine, and an age of transparency will only increase this. Will we submit to a world of marketised stand-offs and mutual distrust, or will you harness the truly transformational power of students as an institution’s critical best friend?

The consumer question, then, cuts to the heart of the Oxford community. It is a question we ignore at our peril. But, ultimately, it is a question I believe we are more than equipped to answer. By exploring and articulating our vision for the learning process, we can safeguard our unique intellectual heritage, turn our student charter into an Oxford covenant between all stakeholders of our community, as the first sign that we will march to our own drum beat. By harnessing the increased interest of student leaders in every area of university life, we can make the change to higher fees work for constructive and valuable institutional renewal. And by setting out boldly and publicly our alternative to the knowledge factory that Willetts would have us be, we can become a beacon of hope for a sector—and, ultimately, a civil society—under siege from the market. We have seen again yesterday that this government is intent on giving us a series of almighty problems. Let us do what we do and start solving them. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Kate Tunnstall to speak next.

Dr Kate Tunstall, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, Worcester College

What I have done, Vice-Chancellor, is write a speech for you, one which I thought you could give at an open day to explain to potential students and their families the consequences of the new arrangements. I have taken it that you would wish to be as clear as possible, so your speech goes like this:

‘Welcome, everyone. It is wonderful to see so many of you here. I am going to explain the consequences of what we in Oxford call “the new arrangements”. Now, that phrase is not very clear so I am going to explain what it means and what its consequences are. Students, you are now customers. You are an “income stream”. A “cash cow”, if you like. And as cash cows, you have been given extraordinary powers.

‘These powers—you never asked for them and you certainly don’t want them—whenever you make a choice about which subject to study, you make it possible for some posts to be refilled when lecturers retire and others not to be. You make whole disciplines shrink and fail and others simply vanish. Your student choice, your customer choice, has the power to destroy the study of philosophy and literature. You can make the humanities shrivel and die.

‘You have that gift because, in the balance sheets that are now your lives, you also have a debt and student debt has itself transformative powers. It makes you choose in new ways. Through the lens of your debt, you see learning as a means to maximise your future income. You can’t help it; your debt makes you see it that way. The only people who can see clearly under the new arrangements are the wealthy. They can pay up front and have no debt, and they alone can afford to study the humanities.

‘Now, your debt does not just make you see in new ways, it also makes the government appear in a new light. Because of your debt, you make the government look as though it is telling the truth. In a stunning play of smoke and mirrors, when the government lends you the money to pay the University rather than giving the money straight to the University, hey presto, it looks like a cut in secondary education system, poof, seemingly gone in a flash. Another consequence of the new arrangements: going to Oxford is like going to Hogwarts. Anyone, any questions?’

Vice-Chancellor, I thought I had better imagine a question from a potential student because it is usually in dialogue with our students that we got our ideas straight. So here is the student:

‘Thank you, Vice-Chancellor, that was very clear and helpful. I thought the new arrangements must be along those lines. But why have you gone along with them? I understand that in the short term, until we pay our loans back, the government will, in fact, be investing in higher education, and many of us think that is exactly what the government should be doing, and so it might be tempting to go with the line, “The more the universities charge, the more the government has to invest.” But you have just shown us what the other consequences of the new arrangements are, what the cost—the real cost—to education is. So my question is: why have you put the new arrangements in place?’

At this point, Vice-Chancellor, I am afraid my imagination failed me. I simply could not—not—imagine what an academic could say to explain to potential students and their families why it is that our University is collaborating with a system that is so full of lies and sleights of hand and that is utterly degrading.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor David Norbrook to speak next, please.

Professor David Norbrook, Faculty of English, Merton College

Access to what and for what purpose?

Access has become so urgent because the new funding system seems likely otherwise to heighten social distinctions, not least if universities increasingly open up access to the shunned social category of dictators’ heirs. The more demands are placed on us to produce specific social outcomes, the more the government should be doing, and so it might be tempting to go with the line, “The more the universities charge, the more the government has to invest.” But you have just shown us what the other consequences of the new arrangements are, what the cost—the real cost—to education is. So my question is: why have you put the new arrangements in place?

Now, institutional factors have their place and have always, in different forms, been present in this University. But there is also a non-instrumental role to encourage critical and independent thought, not just asking questions, but asking questions about the institutions within which those questions are posed. Over there in the Bodleian are the books of the seventeenth-century scholar John Selden, signed with his distinctive motto, ‘Freedom above all things.’ He had in mind intellectual freedom: enquiry without external fetters. Professor Hotson, and many of us, have been studying ways in which that ideal, as embodied in the international Republic of Letters, studying topics from astronomy to Arabic manuscripts, worked in earlier periods of this University. It has never been unproblematic. Selden didn’t work in a university, finding more freedom outside it. One reason it is so exciting to study here is the sense of participating in a project that stretches across the centuries, commuting rather than competing, united despite different backgrounds, abilities and academic standing from undergraduates onwards, united by the scale of questions and projects that are all of us. Even though women were on the fringes of the Republic of Letters, they too could feel its attraction. To me, one of the most moving manuscripts in the Bodleian is one presented soon after its foundation by a woman Latin poet, inscribed ‘per amorem Bibliothecae Publicae’, for love of the public library. The Bodleian was public in the sense of opening up the Republic of Letters, even though access was then severely limited and presumably she could not get into it. For Jane Owen, education was very far from being a means to higher income; it was likely to lead to social obloquy, and, indeed, might still cause David Willetts some unease. But that love, unrequited as it may have been, could jump across huge barriers.

No-one will suggest students would attend university only for love without any thought of money, but sharing in a public good is a great motivator. And critical and independent thought should be core values throughout our society, though it seems to be widely assumed that they get in the way of instrumental goals. They are, after all, democratic goals. Too many children in school asking questions off the National Curriculum, too many feminists undermining job structures, too many employees raising unseated questions, too many academic researchers straying off the strategic research goals set by the funding bodies: our society would run better without them, wouldn’t it? As academics, the answer we should be giving is: on the contrary.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: May I ask Professor Robert Gildea to speak next.

Professor Robert Gildea, Faculty of History, Worcester College

The question I want to try to answer this afternoon is: should universities be required to answer for the incoherence of government policies? Incoherence in the sense of a contradiction between, on the one hand, the marketisation of higher education, with public funding slashed, and private income demanded and, on the other, requiring universities to draw up access plans to bring in students from lower income backgrounds. This is incoherent because of three sociological facts. First, social inequality: Britain is one of the most unequal societies in the developed world and this inequality has been increasing since the 1970s. Second, intergenerational social mobility: this has been slowing down as a consequence of social inequality. Third, educational inequality: education ought to be an engine of social mobility, but too often—according to sociologists like Pierre Bourdieu—it merely provides an academic rubber stamp for socio-economic inequality.

Social inequality, social immobility and educational inequality will all increase as a result of the government’s current fiscal and economic policies, with the chopping of schemes designed to facilitate educational ability, such as Sure Start, the Education Maintenance Allowance and Aimhigher, and now with the unbelievable policy of allowing rich students to buy their way into the educational equivalent of rotten boroughs. To ask universities to correct for this is like asking someone at the top of a ladder to help someone up when most of the intervening rungs have been knocked away. Our OFFA submission, as Sally Mapstone has reminded us, boldly claims that increased outreach, bursaries and fee waivers will attract students from ‘disadvantaged socio-economic backgrounds’, ‘neighbourhoods with low participation in higher education’. But even with the breaks promised to low-income families, will students really apply from these backgrounds and, if they do apply, will we give them places?

Let’s face it, our admissions record is not very good. I was happily supplied with figures this week from the Admissions Office and I did a little sum and worked out that since 1970 the success rate of candidates from state schools has always hovered at around eighty per cent of the success rate of candidates from independent schools, whatever changes we have introduced to the admissions system—and I’m old enough to remember the Dover reforms. This reveals a tension, if not a contradiction, in our own admissions policy. We put in place schemes to widen access and we then say, just to quote from the last number of the Oxford Magazine, ‘None of these means that we compromise our admission standards’, and ‘We will select the best candidates on the basis of their achievements and their potential’. What does this mean? Do we take candidates with the greatest potential, or with the highest grades, or those who appear to be the most knowledgeable or confident or those least likely to get a II(ii)? We pride ourselves on penetrating interviews and the vast majority of us are totally professional, but some years ago, a senior colleague of mine terrified me by describing his interview technique as follows: ‘We have a chat and then we take who we like’. At this point, all the access work in the world comes to nothing.

So we have two battles to fight: one with the government and one with ourselves. The first battle is to campaign to get the government to restore direct investment in higher education, as the only way to reduce educational inequality and, as Karma Nabulsi said, to reduce social division and social inequality. The second battle is to look carefully at our admissions practices, not only at outreach, bursaries and fee waivers, and bridging and foundation courses, which I don’t really understand yet, but also at the interview. When we say that we select on the basis of potential, we should have a firm idea of what potential means. In my experience of twenty-seven years of admissions interviewing, it seems to be less about what a candidate knows than about the intellectual and imaginative connections that he or she is able to make.

Michelangelo said, ‘I saw the angel in the marble and carved until I set him free’. We should not expect to find angels ready-made at admissions but use all our skills to carve and set them free. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call on Dr Rowan Tomlinson to speak next.

Dr Rowan Tomlinson, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, New College

My stated topic for today is the incoherence of government policy and the urgent need for alternatives to be proposed. Unfortunately, when the time came to write this speech I found myself stymied: how could I encompass, in the space of a five-minute discourse, the astonishing lack of thought apparent in the government’s reforms for higher education? And in wanting to encourage considerations for alternatives, wouldn’t I risk being dismissed as an idealist, not facing up to the realities of the situation we are in, worrying a carcass, rather than considering how—to borrow a particularly empty but ubiquitous expression beloved by our politicians—we might move forward? Then I was saved by that good old publicly funded institution, Radio 4. Switching on the news last night, I heard the following in the headline story: ‘bad bill’, ‘think again’, ‘unravelled irreversibly’, ‘driven to brink’, ‘private competition at odds with public good’ and, with a very satisfying sense of schadenfreude, ‘Lansley in danger’. So it seems that, perhaps, the government’s onslaught on the NHS is something its critics have convinced them to reconsider by means of the cringingly entitled ‘listening exercise’. Our bodies are possibly going to be saved; might we do the same for the nation’s minds?

I went to sleep with a certain optimism and a conviction that perhaps it’s not so bad being an unrealistic idealist. Perhaps it is worth my while continuing to resist the devastation of higher education that the Browne Review and, presumably, the much-delayed forthcoming white paper will wreak, or convinced at least that it is worthwhile stating explicitly and boldly my opposition, something I continue to be disappointed that the VCs across our country have not chosen to do together with a powerful collective voice: convinced, to return to today’s discussion, that those of us not nitpicking over the intricacies of access and outreach or, using our skills as academics, not to further research and teaching, but to think up ways to wo alumni, should perhaps be listened to, rather than given a right to speak and then pretty much ignored; convinced that, who knows, perhaps if we use our skills as academics to issue, from the highest level, a proper and explicit objection and critique, we might earn our own listening exercise?

Then this morning, listening again to Radio 4, I heard the following terms in the headline story: 'liberalise education', 'off-quotas places for the wealthiest students', 'corporate sponsorship'. And my flicker of optimism turned, once again, to anger and to a certainty that we need now, finally, to act and to speak out; for the government, having apparently, possibly, given a tiny bit of ground in saving our bodies, is now proposing to shift its efforts at privatisation of what should be a public good from the Health Service to that less important, apparently more luxury domain of our intellect, in the shape of the university degree. Willetts spoke of his proposal to sell university places as being a means of helping those from 'tough backgrounds, let down by the school system'. The story goes as follows: the children of the rich, most of whose parents already choose to contribute to this country’s gross social inequities, by paying more than £9,000 a year for a socially and academically exclusive private education, should be able to buy places that are 'off quota'. This purchasing of a university place will, we are told, free up places for the lucky few fetishised working-class kids, who might, against all the odds, make it from that much-maligned comprehensive to a top university and who might, if they are lucky, be poor enough to warrant one of our admittedly substantial scholarships. This, of course, is the argument used by those who want to defend their guilty use of private health care: if I buy my way to better care via the private system, then, surely, there are more resources and shorter waiting lists for the poor. It is, it seems to me, the first step on the path to the system that amounts to privatisation, with a few conscience-sorbing scholarships thrown in—of the kind of system, indeed, we had prior to the welfare state.

I urge you, Mr Vice-Chancellor, and all my colleagues, not to be reassured by Willetts’ claim that this proposal is ‘just an idea’, nor indeed by his apparent u-turn. Rather, we should take him up, strongly and concertedly, perhaps if we use our skills as academics to issue, from the highest level, a proper and explicit objection and critique, we might earn our own listening exercise?

In attempting to speak to my title, ‘A clear and robust response: Oxford and the government, the schools and the media’, I will briefly link two exhortations: the need for clarity on the one hand, and the vigorous and emphatic defence of the public role and value of the universities on the other.

The title does not indicate a timeframe, but let me offer one. We have been here before, or am I simply getting old? Or is it just that we appear to have no collective memory in this institution? Higher education has suffered from the ideologies and policies of governments of the left and the right. Similarly, the press has attacked us from both sides and has declared us wanting, in quite contradictory respects, often in the course of the same week. The 1970s saw the abolition under Labour of the direct grant grammar schools, which had been a means of encouraging children from ordinary backgrounds into top universities, while the 1980s witnessed a series of savage conservative cuts, yet what was our response? Peter Snow in his acute and perceptive book ‘Oxford Observed’, published twenty years ago, records how, when faced with the Thatcherite revolution, some dons felt betrayed and embarrased and simply waited for the passing phase to pass, while dissident dons fought back by writing letters, founding noble organisations and gathering statistics. ‘Their flaw, however, was a fatal lack of passion’, concluded Snow. They were afflicted by an intellectual mildness, a debilitating academic reasonableness, like people trying to hold a seminar with a steamroller as it steadily squashed down on them.’ As a young lecturer, I recall the senior colleagues in tweeds and brogues declaim, in senior common rooms, in the certainty that it was high time that the unions were dealt with. It was, of course, quite unthinkable that anything similar could possibly happen to us. Well, it did. Indeed it already had.

I remember a conversation in the Strangers’ Dining Room at the House of Commons, to which I was invited by a minister of the Conservative government; there were just the two of us. After a bit, he confided to me that the government had fully expected, indeed feared, a well-argued, articulate and forceful response to the cuts to higher education, whereas, to general astonishment and genuine incomprehension, the universities seemed to be taking it lying down. Had I, he asked, any knowledge of why this was the case? A very good question; it could be posed again now. I also recall a memorable episode of ‘Yes, Prime Minister’, again a quarter of a century ago. Sir Humphrey Appleby, in characteristically rhetorical mode, announces to Bernard that: ‘British democracy recognises that you need a system to protect the important things of life and keep them out of the hands of the barbarians. Things like the opera, Radio 3, the countryside, the law, the universities. Both of them.’ One applauds Sir Humphrey’s sentiments, but on the last count, of course, we would have a rather broader inclusion of these days. On the other hand, after all, this is the University of Oxford, and we have more of a voice than most—or so one would have thought. At the very least, the University should protest more publicly about what its elected leadership clearly feels it ought to do.

I make no apology for concentrating on current politics; indeed, the internal politics of the coalition surely account for much of the working out of policy, and this state of affairs is unpredictable, confusing and downright dangerous. We too could be well advised to put principle before expediency. Are we satisfied with the policy regarding tuition fees? The short answer to that is no. Perhaps the Prime Minister may yet give that answer, members of Congregation, but only if we give a spirited and effective performance in defence of public universities as did a remarkable spread of individuals and groups to the forests proposal, the ditching of which prompted Mr Cameron’s pithy answer at the dispatch box. It is also hoped that we might reverse the scandalous policy on the closure of the public libraries; not only are the public vociferous, but the literary heavyweights are also lining up. It is vitally important that we win on the National Health Service; only yesterday were ministers conceding failure with respect to the crucial political test: the securing of support for the reforms from the professional bodies of doctors and nurses.

There are clear lessons to be learnt here. The forests, the libraries and the NHS; it would be utterly disgraceful if higher education had turned out to be the only one of these to be ‘steamrollered’. We have talked about the Universities Minister this morning, so I won’t touch on that, but surely we could be excused for thinking this is the policy of letting the rich kids be admitted by the back door. Yet it has been clear for some time that we are being set up by the government to walk, and not for any perceived lack of fair access, just as one of our perceived functions appears to be that of making up for the deficiencies of school education.

So, my very short conclusion contains a single general but fundamental point. It will be a criminal dereliction of duty if the ethos of public universities, as places of open and unfettered research, learning and teaching—and not as providers of commodities to paying customers, which I surely have reason to hope that all members of the Congregation share—was not saved for posterity. Leaving aside posterity, what about now? Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I call Dr Conrad Leyser.

Dr Conrad Leyser, Faculty of History, Worcester College

Why is there significant under-representation of ethnic minorities as ministerial occupants of 10 Downing Street? Conversely, why is there an African American family in the White House right now? The short answer would be, as I understand it, because of a space race initiated between Harvard and Princeton in the 1970s about who could get their minority person in the White House first. You may think that Harvard won, because of the President, but any Princetonian will tell you that he came aged twenty-four to Harvard. Princeton got hold of Michelle aged seventeen. Go Tigers!

This may or may not be applicable in Oxford, as several colleagues will tell me, but I think there are three reasons for the success of these power houses of access on the East Coast of America. First, the depth of their social reach, the kind of programmes Jeff Tieng is talking about. Second, the level of institutional pride and honour that is at stake in the delivering of successful access. It is more than a duty and it is more than a mission. The whole institution's reputation is on the line, and I am relatively new here. I have not heard that coming from either one of 'both' universities. If there was a blues race about who could get somebody from an ethnic minority background into 10 Downing Street, it would happen within two decades, the resources would be there. The third reason beneath that institutional pride and honour is a narrative of value about what education is for and that, to return to a theme that many speakers have dealt with today, that is what we lack. That is the thing I have found most depressing about the debate we had in February about fees: on the one hand, the technocratic language and, on the other hand, the language of resistance, looking for a different way to talk about value. Yes, people who want to resist should talk about the money, the bottom line. Equally, unless those who speak the language of technocracy can also show they speak the language of value, other than immediate monetary or market value, then we do not have a university, we do not have a community of discourse.

I do urge the Pro-Vice-Chancellors, in their summation, to reflect this, as I urge Council to give tangible evidence that it has considered languages of value other than those of the immediate bottom line. As David Norbrook has said, this is not about today, it is not even about tomorrow. This goes back to the medieval university, medieval school. Men were famous for debating the supposedly recondite question of how many angels can dance on the head of a pin. That is a debate about cosmic values; that is what a universe, a universitas, is. I suggest that, as Martin Harris says, the Treasury will always win. The Treasury will win, unless we can sustain a coherent discussion of what the value of education is.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Dr John Parrington.

Dr John Parrington, Department of Pharmacology, Worcester College

I really wanted to start by trying to pose what I think is the key thing, which is actually understanding where the government is really coming from, where it is actually leading towards in terms of its policies, because I think unless we really understand the true agenda of the government, we are in danger of underestimating the peril that we face and I think one thing that surprised me really, if you want to analogise it with the health debate on the Health Service, is how little real opposition there has been from the leadership of the universities against the government's measures. Yet I think we really do face some incredibly high stakes when you pick apart the government's real agenda.

So I think there is quite a good analogy with what is happening in the Health Service or what the government has been trying to attempt with the Health Service, because that's basically, to use the language of freedom and rights and all these things, you know, freedom to GPs to have more control over their health care and the rest of it and that, when you actually look underneath, you find, actually, the opposite of that. You actually find that here are measures that would take power away from the GPs and give it to private health-care providers: in essence, the privatisation of the Health Service.

I am starting to think that, really, the government's policy is to dress up its real extreme, free-market ideology in this language of freedom and rights and, really, see if anyone's foolish enough to actually take it at face value or, instead, to call their bluff and do something about it. What has been inspirational—maybe 'inspirational' is the wrong word at this stage in the debate—but certainly what has been encouraging about what is happening with the Health Service is that leaders of the GPs have been willing to call the government's bluff and say, 'This is not really on'. So, recently, it was reported that the GP leaders have basically said that this is going to wreck the Health Service and we vigorously oppose it.

I think we really need to be doing something on an equal level because I think that if we accept that this is just about raising fees to a maximum of £9,000, we miss the fact that this really just the start of what the government is trying to foist upon us, which is really privatisation of the university system and it was interesting to see in the article in the Guardian today just how much that really is a part of the government's agenda.

So we really are being told that there will be a different sort of access agreement for people with money. They can bypass all the normal procedures and that is, really, what I think is the first step towards a privatised university system.

Now, there will be some people who will argue, well, maybe we could actually benefit from a privatised system here at Oxford. I know there have been some articles in the Oxford Magazine arguing that if we had private funds, then we could offer these bursaries to poor people and why wouldn't we make richer people pay? Well, I think one of the problems I have with that whole argument is when you actually look at the model for that, the Ivy League universities like Harvard and Duke University and the rest of it, and you look under the surface, you see some potentially really quite murky detail. So, for instance, I was reading an article by Wall Street journal Daniel Golden, where he looked at what was going on at Duke University. His article entitled 'Many colleges bend rules to admit rich applicants': begins: 'Despite her boarding school education and a personal tutor, Maude Bunn’s SAT scores weren't high enough for a typical student to earn admission to Duke University. But Ms Bunn had something else going for her—coffee makers. Her Bunn forebears built a fortune on them and, with Duke hoping to woo her wealthy parents as donors, she was admitted.' Now, I leave it up to you as an audience to decide for yourself about the quality of Mr Golden's investigative journalism—though I assume he did not get his Pulitzer Prize for nothing—and also about his wider claim that such abuses are systematic across the US Ivy League. But to me it just raised questions about what sort of university we might be heading towards if we do allow ourselves to be steamrollered by the government's proposals, because I really do think this is just the start of a process.

One thing that would horrify me, as someone from a comprehensive school who felt I got into Cambridge purely from a merit point of view, would be the thought that they would have a two-tier system, the system where you have to jump through hoops to get into Oxbridge, or then there is another system if you happen to have money, that you can find a place at those institutions, even if despite the best schooling you still don't really make the grade. I think an important point here is—coming back to the point that David Barclay made about corporatism—I think that would radically change our relationship with our students. So there have been also reports about universities like Harvard that there has been what they call grade inflation—basically grades have been creeping upwards. In essence, if you are paying £40,000 a year—I can't remember the exact figure—to go to Harvard, why not insist that you come out of there with a top degree? So there is all this pressure. Again, this is all based on accounts of people who have taught at Harvard.
You might say they are just disgruntled individuals. I don’t know; it is up to you to judge for yourself. But certainly a report I read, I think it was in the Wall Street Journal, said also that there is this pressure for people to, basically, up the grades because you have these rich people who are demanding an education that they paid all this money for.

So that is the reason why I think we have to vigorously oppose these proposals and I think, just on a final point, we are not alone in this; the NHS has been attacked and there are public sectors being attacked. We have allies out there, we should be making our opposition as vigorous as those in the Health Service and any other public institutions are doing.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Now, we have had a request from Mr Andrew Hood who wishes to speak, is that the case? Please come forward. Time is getting short, so please be brief.

Mr Andrew Hood, JCR President, New College

Today I want to speak to you as a recent product of both the state school system in this country, and of your own admissions system. Three Christmases ago I received a letter from New College, letting me know I had won a place to study at Oxford. I am one of the lucky ones. Across this country, every Christmas, thousands of students open that envelope to find they have not got a place. They have A*s at GCSE, they have 5 As at AS level, they have a genuine love for their subject, but Oxford has to turn them away.

It is in many ways a cruel system, one in which you can achieve all that is possible at school and still be rejected from your chosen university. And in the moment, I am still of the belief that it is fundamentally fair. I think that you guys have the intellectual integrity to choose the students you believe are the brightest, those you think would benefit most from the unmatched education this institution provides, and that underpins Oxford’s meritocratic ethos. You can go as far as your intelligence can carry you.

Today that ethos is threatened. The news of government plans to allow the richest students to buy off-quota places at international prices should send shivers down every spine in this theatre. A way into Oxford for those who are not quite good enough, but for whom money is no object; that is what these proposals mean. Asked this morning whether such a policy would result in backdoor entry for the rich, David Willetts’ only defence was that all students would have to reach the same academic standards. In the case of Oxford, we all know that is no defence at all. We know that having an exemplary academic record is a necessary condition of winning a place to study here, but it is far from sufficient. That is evidenced in the multitude of tests, essays and interviews used every year to distinguish between candidates with identical grades. That process stands to be undermined. For those born into wealth, an Oxford interview would be a no-pressure zone, safe in the knowledge that they—unlike the kid from the comprehensive following them—have a back up. Meritocracy would be a thing of the past.

The knock-on effect of such changes hardly bears thinking about. Those critics in the press who decry us as cash-hungry elitists, with no concern for wider society, would feel validated. Those teachers in comprehensives across the country who tell their brightest students that Oxford isn’t for them will feel even more certain in that conviction. Those students put off applying here by images of top hats and fish knives would have supporting evidence for their misconceptions. Above all, any chance Oxford has of rejecting and resisting the consumerist model of higher education urged upon us would be lost. Far from leading the sector in resisting the march with the market, Oxford has passed the point of no return: an Oxford education could be up for sale.

Some of you might be sitting here after so many speakers thinking that such arguments are simply presumptive. The proposals are only a failing possibility, we should wait patiently to see if they become policy before we even start worrying about their impact. I say that Oxford cannot afford to wait. I find it hard to read this morning on the Guardian website. The caption beside read, ‘Universities such as Oxford could offer extra places to students who can pay the fees upfront, rather than taking out state-funded loans.’ Like it or not, we are already associated with this plan. Is this association something we should tolerate? Should we just want and if it damages our reputation, or undoes so much of the hard work we have put into access? This is a time when Oxford must stand up and lead, challenging not just this policy—potentially already confined to the dustbin—but the faltering vision this government has for higher education. David has already spoken of the need to articulate an alternative. I want to follow Alex and others and call for a vote of no confidence in David Willetts, the perfect platform for Oxford to finally seize the initiative in this crucial and once-in-a-lifetime debate. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. Is there anyone else who wishes to speak? Please be brief.

Dr Stuart White, Department of Politics and International Relations Jesus College

A number of my colleagues have spoken very eloquently today about the need for us as an academic community to give a clearer and more robust response to what the government is doing in higher education. I was very struck by the proposal from Alex Bullfin of OUSU of a no-confidence vote in both David Willetts and Vince Cable and I just want to say I think that would be a very good way of indicating a clearer, more robust response, and I hope it is an idea to which Congregation will return in the near future. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Anybody wishing to speak? Yes, again, be brief please.

Mr Dave Legg, Student Member, Worcester College

For the past two years, I have been a member of the Target Schools campaign run by OUSU. As many of you may know, Target Schools’ mission is to dispel the myths that surround access to Oxford. There are many myths out there and newspaper stories like we had this morning just go to put the seed of doubt into students’ minds. It may be the case that this is being withdrawn, we are hearing that from the internet already, but that doesn’t matter: the seed of doubt is now sown. We need to act as a university to ensure that students have the correct information.

My tutor, Bernard Sufrin, once said to me that his policy for admissions was to choose the best students and get out of their way. That is a policy I like, but with stories like this coming out through the press, it is very hard for us to say to students that the admissions process is fair and that it is based purely on their academic potential. It is vital that we, as a university, send a clear message about our admissions policy to all potential students through existing outreach work, the media and any other channel available to us. We need to ensure that anyone who has the potential to study at this University is not put off by the myths. Personally, I have spoken to a lot of students who have come through our Target Schools schemes, such as the shadowing scheme we ran last term. We had over 200 students from state schools that have historically low numbers of applicants coming to Oxford. They spent a day with us, they shadowed students, they went to tutorials, they went to lectures, and we talked to them about the myths and debunked a lot of them. The feedback we had was brilliant: they really loved the day and it definitely changed their opinions on applying to Oxford.

I think it is important that the University Press Office works hard with Target Schools, with other campaigns, to ensure the truth surrounding Oxford access is put out there and everybody understands what life in Oxford is really like. This is an area we need to make a key focus of university access work. Misinformation, in many ways, is worse than no information. Misinformation can lead to students dismissing their chances and not even bothering to research and find out the truth. We can fight this by ensuring that the correct message is conveyed to students. This must be our priority if we don’t wish to see a fall in applications from state school students with the new pressures that are coming on under the new system. We at Target Schools have a database of over 550 students who are committed to supporting us in our aim to get the truth out there, and we can only hope that the University sees this as as vital as we do. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you. I now ask Dr Mapstone to make final points and to conclude the discussion.

Dr Sally Mapstone. Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education), St Hilda’s College

Thank you very much, Vice-Chancellor. May I first of all thank members of Congregation and our student contributors for the constructive discussion that we have had this afternoon. I am just going to work through and pick out a number of points that I would like to emphasise on the back of that.

First of all, taking you right back to the start, I hope all colleagues will want to welcome the idea of the common framework for access, as outlined by the Principal of St Hilda’s College. The Common Framework on Admissions has brought a greater consistency to how we practice admission in colleges and departments in a way that supports academic decision-making. A common framework on access can be similarly meaningful in articulating for colleges and departments a set of principles that don’t constrain, but inform and enable.

It has been very useful to hear what our students have to say, and I would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge in particular OUSU’s contributions throughout the fee-setting debate last term. Their support for the direction of the University’s access work—which, again, we have just heard about—and, although I know this has been difficult for them, for the focus of its fee waiver and bursary scheme is crucial and we will, of course, be looking to them again as we seek to communicate these schemes effectively to prospective applicants, and also to on-course students. Again, just to echo the last speaker, information and communication are crucial and often overlooked things here and we will be thinking very hard about how we communicate to prospective applicants.

Now, we must acknowledge that the dramatically changed funding landscape brings with it a series of uncertainties. We may all think we can guess, but we simply do not yet know what the higher fee and the new funding arrangements will do to student recruitment. We do know that the distinctiveness and the value of the education that Oxford offers—and the student experience its colleges, departments and faculties provide—will continue to be outstanding, but we must be prepared to think thoroughly and flexibly about all aspects of our admissions work, as we seek always to encourage and not to deter.

I would like just to come back to the important point that Professor Gildea raised about looking at what we do and thinking about interviews. I think it may be helpful if I say here that for the past year also, AdEx has had a group working on interviews and they have looked pretty hard at the whole nature of the concept of the interview and how we have been interviewing in Oxford, and they have produced at present a draft report which AdEx has seen and which is getting a bit more work. One of the first questions that that group, I think very sensibly, asked is: what is it, what value is it that interviewing actually adds? I think there will be a range of different views on that, but it was an important question to ask, so I would want to reassure Congregation that AdEx, which is a group that comes under the Conference of Colleges and has representatives of faculties and departments on it, is looking at these questions.

Now, initiatives also like those that are being explored by the foundation and bridging working group are important and are going to go on being so, and you have heard some of the first thinking of that group and, obviously, it will be very interesting to see where it goes. Many members of Congregation have referred to the reports that came out this morning suggesting that universities might be given by government the opportunity to give extra or off-quota places to students who could pay fees upfront and would not be eligible for publicly-funded loans. Now, we wait to see—we do, in one sense, have to wait to see this—if these ideas do, in fact, make it into the white paper, but I would like to put the marker down now that this proposal would run quite counter to the principle of admission on the defining criterion of academic merit which is at the heart of our admissions policy.

Now, as I said at the start, the University will review its fee waiver and bursary schemes. We need to make sure that we attract students with the academic potential to study at Oxford, especially those who are currently underrepresented. We must also support those students who particularly need it while they are at university. That involves bursary support, and it also involves ensuring that we have systems and services that are fit for purpose and better than that. Nick Rawlins laid out how fundraising can intersect with these considerations as the next phase of the Oxford Thinking campaign opens up.

A number of our speakers have drawn attention, as in the previous Discussion, to the intrusion of the language of the market into the sphere of higher education, and I was asked particularly to focus on this and I am happy to do so. The OUSU President has very effectively highlighted the dangers that the consumerist ethos poses, not just to academics, but to the way students conceive of themselves at university. Resistance to this is, of course, not necessarily about finding an alternative discourse. Plain speaking in jargon-free language does perfectly well, as a previous Senior Proctor reminded us in his valedictory oration, and in his civilian guise Dr Thompson eloquently exemplified in his own remarks today. I think these reminders about language and how we express ourselves are very important indeed. I sometimes wonder what kind of world I now live in when a ‘KIS’ is just a key information set.

As I said at the start, we have to wait for a fuller articulation of the government’s position on a range of matters in the higher education white paper. That, and the continuing ongoing nature of access agreements, will continue to keep key questions of academic practice high on the political agenda. Not all of that is necessarily a bad thing if universities can use this opportunity to convey what it is that they do that is so essential to the values and the balance of a fair and civilised society.

Thank you again, students and members of Congregation, for your contributions today.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Thank you very much. That concludes this afternoon’s discussion, thank you all.

Changes in Regulations

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 3 June.

Establishment of Professorships of Genomics and Global Health and of Respiratory Medicine

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Medical Sciences Board, establish new Professorships of Genomics and Global Health and of Respiratory Medicine.

Text of Regulations

1 In SCHEDULE C of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, after ‘Professors (two) of General Practice’ insert:

   ‘Professor of Genomics and Global Health’.

   § 101. Professor of Genomics and Global Health

   1. The Professor of Genomics and Global Health shall lecture and give instruction in genomics and global health.

   2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

      (1) the Vice-Chancellor, or if the head of the college specified in paragraph (2) below is the Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;

      (2) the head of the college to which the Chair may be allocated by Council from time to time; or if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of that college;

      (3) a person appointed by the governing body of the college;

      (4–5) two persons appointed by Council;

      (6)–(9) four persons appointed by the Medical Sciences Board;

      (10) a person holding a clinical appointment appointed by the Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals NHS Trust (or the relevant successor body in the NHS should that Trust cease to exist).

   At least three members of the board, of whom one shall be a professor, shall hold clinical appointments.

   3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations, which are applicable to the Chair.

Congregation

Congregation 7 June 2pm

1 Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 30 May, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose the legislative proposal at 1 or either of the resolutions at 2 or 3 below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposal and the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute XI: University Discipline

Explanatory Note
The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4-8) and the changes in regulations on p. 596 of Gazette No. 4952, 12 May 2011, implement three of seven recommendations made by the Working Group to Review University Disciplinary Procedures, constituted to assess the University’s disciplinary legislation and the operation of its disciplinary procedures following receipt of a report from the Office of the Independent Adjudicator. The recommendations have been endorsed by the Education Committee of Council. The amendments to Statute XI:

(i) establish that a case cannot be brought by the Proctors to the Student Disciplinary Panel more than six months after the date of the first interview without the permission of the chairman or vice-chairman of the Student Disciplinary Panel; and that it is within the discretion of the chairman or vice-chairman to allow a hearing to proceed where the Proctors establish good reasons for a delay beyond the six months; and

(ii) permit an external senior legally-qualified academic (i.e. from a University Law Faculty other than Oxford) to serve as a chairman of the Student Appeal Panel.

The opportunity has also been taken to remove an incorrect cross-reference.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Statute XI concerning University discipline, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

1. In Statute XI concerning University discipline (approved by Congregation on 16 June 2009 with effect from 1 October 2009, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. L272, 18 June 2009), delete section 9 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘9. (1) The function of the Student Disciplinary Panel shall be to hear and determine, in accordance with procedure set out in regulations made under section 20 of this statute, complaints or allegations made to it by the Proctors that a student member has committed a breach of the provisions of section 2 or 3 of this statute, and appeals against decisions under sections 23 (2) and 36 (2) and (4) of this statute.

(2) No complaint made by the Proctors shall be heard by the Student Disciplinary Panel more than six months after the date of the first interview unless the Chairman or Vice-Chairman sitting on that occasion decides at his or her discretion to allow the complaint to be heard on the grounds that there is good cause for the delay’.

2. Ibid., delete section 14 (1) and substitute: ‘14. (1) The Student Appeal Panel shall consist of three persons appointed by the High Steward, who shall be external persons who hold a legal qualification and have a minimum of at least eight years’ standing or persons who have judicial experience or experience which makes them suitable for appointment and shall not be members of Congregation.’

3. This statute shall be effective from 1 October 2011.

2 Voting on Resolution authorising the use of space at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note
On 24 March 2009, Congregation approved: (a) the allocation of the main infirmary building at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter (ROQ) to the University Administration; and (b) the allocation of a site for Phases 1 and 2 of the construction of a new Humanities Centre.

It is now proposed that, in the short term, the main infirmary building be allocated for use by the Humanities Division. This will achieve two key aims: it will bring the main infirmary building into use, establishing an early presence on this prominent frontage of the ROQ, and will enable part of the Humanities Division to be co-located on the ROQ in advance of the completion of Phase 2 of the Humanities Centre.

The Humanities Centre Phase I will house the Faculties of English, History, Philosophy and Theology, as well as providing space for the Divisional Office and shared divisional research space in the planned ‘Institute for Advanced Humanities Research’. It was originally envisaged that this Phase would be complete by 2012. However, in the current financial climate, the project has been delayed and the timetable for completion is now uncertain. This delay puts pressure on the Division’s aspiration to centralise its facilities for research, graduates, and teaching, identified in its latest Five Year Strategic Plan as key to the ongoing improvement of teaching and research in the Humanities.

The main infirmary building is listed and is an important landmark for both the City and the University. The allocation approved on 24 March 2009 was recommended in order to provide an appropriate location for the senior officers of the University, essentially the ‘front door’ of the University. However, this is a medium- to long-term aim and the building is not currently in use. Both the ROQ Project Board and the Estates Directorate have expressed concern at the continued deterioration of the building, which arises in part from the absence of any occupant.

The main infirmary building has a gross internal area of 2,500 sq.m. from which a net usable area of 1,500 sq.m. is likely to be delivered. This will allow accommodation of the Divisional Office and of at least one of its Faculties and associated library facilities, and will free other premises for alternative uses or, in the case of rented buildings, for release. There will also be space in the infirmary building to house a range of graduate activity and some small group teaching. It will also make it possible to launch the Institute for Advanced Humanities Research. The refurbishment of this space for the Humanities Division would facilitate this longer-term use of the premises by the University Administration.

Text of Resolution
That the main infirmary building (approximately 1,500 sq.m. net usable area) be allocated to the Humanities Division from 1 August 2012 until the completion of Phase I of the new Humanities Centre to be constructed on that site, at which time the allocation would revert to the University Administration and Services.

General notes:

Nominations in writing for the elections on 16 June, by four members of Congregation other than the candidate, will be accepted by the Elections Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square, up to 4 p.m. on Thursday, 19 May.

Council has decided that nominations should show for each signatory the name and college or department in block capitals. Any names which are not so shown may not be published.

At least one nomination in respect of each candidate must be made on an official nomination form.

Copies of the form are obtainable from the Elections Office or from the ‘Forms’ section of the Elections Office website (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/elections.shtml).

Candidates are invited to include with their nomination forms a written statement of no more than 250 words, setting out their reasons for standing and qualifications for the office being sought. In the event of a contested election, these statements will be available online at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/elections/ and published in the Gazette dated 2 June.

 Voters may wish to wait until they have read these notes before returning their ballot papers.

Ballot papers will be sent out to members of Congregation as soon as possible after the closing date for nominations. Completed ballot papers must be received by the Elections Office not later than 4 p.m. on 16 June.

For further information, please contact the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Degree ceremonies: July 2013 to May 2014

Degree ceremonies shall be held in the Sheldonian Theatre for the purpose of granting graces and conferring degrees on the days shown in this notice.

The number and type of students emerging with qualifications in 2013, combined with college preferences for specific dates, will determine the number and type of students graduated from each college. College allocations for each ceremony have already been agreed.

For ceremonies from July 2013, the process for booking a candidate on to a degree ceremony will change. For these ceremonies, names of candidates will no longer be entered by the college or other society fifteen days before the ceremony.

Undergraduate and postgraduate taught students will be provisionally allocated to a ceremony at the start of their final year. Once a research student has been given leave to supplicate (an earlier stage may be more appropriate), the student will be informed of the next available graduation dates. The dates issued will depend on the student’s college and the availability of spaces at the next ceremonies. Further details will be provided at a later date.

Each candidate will be permitted three guest tickets.

For candidates for the BMBCh, MA, and research degrees:
Sat., 13 July 2013, a.m. and p.m

Prioritised for candidates for undergraduate degrees, integrated Masters degrees, and nine-month postgraduate taught degrees. Places also for candidates for research degrees:
Mon., 22 July 2013, 11 a.m. and 2.30 p.m.
Wed., 24 July 2013, 11 a.m.
Fri., 26 July 2013, 11 a.m. and 2.30 p.m.
Sat., 27 July 2013, 11 a.m. and 2.30 p.m.
Mon., 29 July 2013, 2.30 p.m.
Fri., 2 August 2013, 11 a.m. and 2.30 p.m.
Sat., 3 August 2013, 11 a.m. and 2.30 p.m.

For candidates from Keble College and Christ Church:
Sat., 10 May 2014, 2.30 p.m.

Congregation

¶ Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 30 May, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose the legislative proposal at 1 or either of the resolutions at 2 and 3 below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposal and the resolutions shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.
1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute XI: University Discipline

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (1) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008 (Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8) and the changes in regulations on p. 596 of Gazette No. 4952, 12 May 2011, implement three of seven recommendations made by the Working Group to Review University Disciplinary Procedures, constituted to assess the University’s disciplinary legislation and the operation of its disciplinary procedures following receipt of a report from the Office of the Independent Adjudicator. The recommendations have been endorsed by the Education Committee of Council. The amendments to Statute XI:

(i) establish that a case cannot be brought by the Proctors to the Student Disciplinary Panel more than six months after the date of the first interview without the permission of the chairman or vice-chairman of the Student Disciplinary Panel; and that it is within the discretion of the chairman or vice-chairman to allow a hearing to proceed where the Proctors establish good reasons for a delay beyond the six months; and

(ii) permit an external senior legally qualified academic (i.e. from a University Law Faculty other than Oxford) to serve as a chairman of the Student Appeal Panel.

The opportunity has also been taken to remove an incorrect cross-reference.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Statute XI concerning University discipline, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

1. In Statute XI concerning University discipline (approved by Congregation on 16 June 2009 with effect from 1 October 2009, Gazette, Vol. 139, p. 1272, 18 June 2009), delete section 9 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

'9. (1) The function of the Student Disciplinary Panel shall be to hear and determine, in accordance with procedure set out in regulations made under section 20 of this statute, complaints allegations made to it by the Proctors that a student member has committed a breach of the provisions of section 2 or 3 of this statute, and appeals against decisions under sections 23 (2) and 36 (2) and 41 (4) of this statute.

(2) No complaint made by the Proctors shall be heard by the Student Disciplinary Panel more than six months after the date of the first interview unless the Chairman or Vice-Chairman sitting on that occasion decides at his or her discretion to allow the complaint to be heard on the grounds that there is good cause for the delay.'

2. Ibid., delete section 14 (1) and substitute:'14. (1) The Student Appeal Panel shall consist of three persons appointed by the High Steward, who shall be external persons who hold a legal qualification and have at least eight years’ standing on or persons who have judicial experience or experience which makes them suitable for appointment and shall not be members of Congregation.’

3. This statute shall be effective from 1 October 2011.

2 Voting on Resolution authorising the use of space at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter

Explanatory Note

On 24 March 2009, Congregation approved:

(a) the allocation of the main infirmary building into use, establishing an early presence on this prominent frontage of the division’s aspiration to centralise its facilities for research, education and services.

The main infirmary building has a gross internal area of 2,500 sq.m. from which a net usable area of 1,500 sq.m. is likely to be delivered. This will allow accommodation of the Divisional Office and of at least one of its Faculties and associated library facilities, and will free other premises for alternative uses or, in the case of rented buildings, for release. There will also be space in the infirmary building to house a range of graduate activity and some small group teaching. It will also make it possible to launch the Institute for Advanced Humanities Research. The refurbishment of this space for the Humanities Division would facilitate this longer-term use of the premises by the University Administration.

Text of Resolution

That the main infirmary building (approximately 1,500 sq.m. net usable area) be allocated to the Humanities Division from 1 August 2012 until the completion of Phase I of the new Humanities Centre to be constructed on that site, at which time the allocation would revert to the University Administration and Services.

3 Voting on Resolution

Text of Resolution

Congregation instructs Council to communicate to Government that the University of Oxford has no confidence in the policies of the Minister for Higher Education.

1 Encaenia

Mr Vice-Chancellor invites Pro-Vice-Chancellors, Heads of Houses, Heads of Division, holders of the Oxford Degrees of Doctor of Divinity, Civil Law, Medicine, Letters, Science, and Music, the Proctors, the Assessor, the Public Orator, the Professor of Poetry, the Registrar, the outgoing President of the Oxford University Student Union, and the Presidents of the Junior and Middle common rooms of Nuffield College, Pembroke College, and Oriel College (as being the colleges of the Proctors and the Assessor) to partake of Lord Crewe’s Benefaction to the University, meeting him in the Fellows’ Garden of Exeter College (entrance on Brasenose Lane), at 10.30 a.m. on Wednesday, 29 June. Thence they will go in procession to the Sheldonian Theatre, where will be spoken the oration in the Commemoration of the Benefactors of the University according to the intention of the Right Honourable Nathaniel, Lord Crewe, Bishop of Durham.

Note. Pro-Vice-Chancellors, Heads of Houses, Heads of Division, and Doctors who propose to accept Mr Vice-Chancellor’s invitation, and to be present in the Sheldonian Theatre, are requested to inform the Events Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square by email (events.office@admin.ox.ac.uk), not later than Wednesday, 22 June. They are reminded that, while academic dress of other universities may (if desired) be worn at the Encaenia Garden Party, the appropriate Oxford academic dress should always be worn at the partaking of Lord Crewe’s Benefaction and at the Encaenia Ceremony.

¶ Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).
Notices

General notices

Encaenia

SHELDonian Theatre

At the Encaenia to be held in the Sheldonian Theatre on Wednesday, 29 June, the Curators of the Theatre propose to allot seats as follows, and subject to availability, to those who apply for tickets:

(a) one visitor’s ticket each to Heads of Houses, Canons of Christ Church, members of Council, and certain other persons holding official positions in the University;

(b) one visitor’s ticket to each Professor;

(c) one ticket to each member of Convocation (i.e. any matriculated member of the University on whom any degree of the University has been conferred, or any member of Congregation who does not hold such a degree).

Applications for tickets in the above categories, stating the name and standing of each person for whom a ticket is requested, should be made not later than Wednesday, 15 June, to the University Card Office, Examination schools (email: university.card@ox.ac.uk). For security reasons, all requests for tickets must state the names of the persons for whom the tickets are intended.

Tickets for all other members of the University (i.e. those who have not been admitted to any degree of the University) will be distributed through college authorities. All applications for tickets in this category should be made to the college authorities and not to the University Card Office.

The gates and entrances to the Theatre will be opened at 10.45 a.m. and the proceedings will begin at 11.30 a.m. Holders of tickets are requested to be in their places inside the Theatre by 11.15 a.m.

All current members of the University are required to wear subfusc and full academic dress. Doctors will wear their robes and other graduates their hoods.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 17 June.

(a) Administration of the University’s Intellectual Property Policy

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Intellectual Property Advisory Group, address a particular revenue distribution scenario and seek to make clearer the Table on net revenue distribution.

Text of Regulations

‘(3) If the intellectual property transferred to the company benefited from a grant by a seed fund administered by the University or Isis under an arrangement which recognised the grant by earmarking some of the University shareholding, revenues generated by those earmarked shares (both capital and income receipts) shall be re-invested in the fund. Other revenues generated by the University’s shareholdings (both capital and income receipts) shall be distributed as follows:-

2 Ibid., delete existing regulations 7(4)–(5)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Total net revenue</th>
<th>Researcher(s)</th>
<th>General Revenue Account</th>
<th>Departments/Faculties</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Up to £50K</td>
<td>87.2%*</td>
<td>12.8%*</td>
<td>0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Band from £50K and up to £500K</td>
<td>45%</td>
<td>30%</td>
<td>25%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Over £500K</td>
<td>22.5%</td>
<td>40%</td>
<td>37.5%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The percentage asterisked above in the General Revenue Account column is intended to put the University in funds to pay the employer’s National Insurance Contributions(s), but otherwise to leave the General Revenue Account out of the allocation of the band in question. The both asterisked percentages shall be adjusted to match this intention, as and when the rates of National Insurance Contribution vary.

(b) Membership of Value for Money Subcommittee of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee

Explanatory Note

The following change, made on the recommendation of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC), provides for a member of the Environment Panel of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee (PRAC) to be a member of the Value for Money Subcommittee of PRAC, in order to increase the effectiveness of the Environment Panel and contribute to the work of the Value for Money Subcommittee.

2 Ibid., renumber existing regulation 3.135(9) as 3.135(10).

(c) Rules Committee

Explanatory Note

As the OUSU Graduate Committee no longer exists, this amendment allows for two graduate student members to be appointed by the OUSU Executive to serve on the Rules Committee.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 42 of 2002 concerning the constitution, duties and powers of the Rules Committee (Supplement 2) to Gazette No. 4630, 24 July 2002, p.1532), delete existing regulation 1(11), (12) and substitute:

‘(11), (12) two graduate student members appointed by the Executive of the Oxford University Student Union not necessarily from among its members.’

2 This change in regulations shall be effective from 1 October 2011.

(d) Committee for the Proctors’ Office

Explanatory Note

This amendment formalises current practice whereby the Director of Estates serves on the Committee for the Proctors’ Office as the member of the Security Panel nominated by the chair of the Buildings and Estates Subcommittee.

Text of Regulations

1 In Council Regulations 2 of 2004 concerning other University bodies (Supplement 2) to Gazette No. 4702, 30 June 2004, p. 1237, as amended) in Part 6 concerning the Committee for the Proctors’ Office delete existing regulation 6.1(5) and substitute:
(5) the Director of Estates;

This change in regulations shall be effective from 1 October 2011.

At its meeting on 30 May, Council considered the resolution first published on 19 May (and as repeated above). Council noted that no notice had been received of opposition or of a proposed amendment. However, notwithstanding the absence of any such notice, Council agreed that the meeting should proceed, and that a vote shall be taken on the resolution.

Arrangements for the meeting

The meeting will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, 7 June, in the Sheldonian Theatre. Attendance at the meeting is open to members of Congregation and to nominated representatives of the Oxford University Student Union (OUSU) as agreed in advance by the Vice-Chancellor. Admittance to the Theatre will be on the production of a valid University card and will be on a first-come, first-served basis (places will be reserved for scheduled speakers). The doors of the Sheldonian Theatre will open at 1.45 p.m.

Those wishing to speak at the meeting will be expected to limit their contributions to five minutes. Following the speeches, a vote will be taken. The Vice-Chancellor and the Proctors have determined that voting during the meeting will take place by paper ballot. Members of Congregation shall be required to identify themselves on their voting slips by name and signature and by college/department or faculty and to deposit their own voting slips in ballot boxes at the doors of the House. Slips will be sorted and counted by the Proctors, and will subsequently be kept in strict confidence by the Proctors for a period of six days, after which they will be destroyed.

The Vice-Chancellor has decided that the wearing of gowns shall be optional on this occasion.

Advance notice by speakers

As the meeting is expected to close by 4.30 p.m., it may not be possible to call all those who wish to speak. If you wish to speak at the meeting, you are asked to indicate this intention in advance by emailing congregation.meeting@admin.ox.ac.uk. It would be helpful if members of Congregation intending to speak would explain briefly (in no more than twenty-five words) what issues they wish to cover. Names of those who have indicated a wish to speak, together with the issues they wish to raise, will be published on the Congregation website (www.ox.ac.uk/congregation-meeting). This sharing of information may be of use both to other speakers and to those considering attending; it will also be used to provide structure to the order in which speakers are attending; it will also be used to provide information as soon as possible, and by 10 a.m. on Monday, 6 June, at the latest, if they wish to be scheduled to speak. If time permits, those who have not indicated in advance an intention to speak will still be free to do so. The Vice-Chancellor will also invite a nominated representative of OUSU to speak.

Congregation 21 June 2 p.m.

Members of Congregation are reminded that any two members may, not later than noon on Monday, 13 June, give notice in writing to the Registrar that they intend to oppose, or propose an amendment to, one or both of the legislative proposals at 1 and 2 below (see the note on the conduct of business in Congregation below). If no such notice has been given, and unless Council has declared otherwise, the legislative proposals shall be carried, and the meeting may be cancelled.

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute XVI concerning Intellectual Property

Explanatory Note

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Statute XVI concerning Property, Contracts, and Trusts, to clarify the Intellectual Property rights of the University, staff and students, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

‘8. For the purpose of sections 6 and 7 of this statute, “commissioned works” are works which the University has specifically employed or requested the person concerned to produce, whether in return for special payment or not.

Commissioned works explicitly exclude (i) lectures delivered by University Lecturers, Departmental Lecturers and the holders of University Chairs in fulfilment of obligations in their contracts of employment and (ii) but, save as may be separately agreed between the University Press and the person concerned, works commissioned by the University Press in the course of its publishing business (save as may be separately agreed between the University Press and the person concerned), shall not be regarded as “works commissioned by the University”.

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: establishment of degree of Master of Public Policy

Explanatory Note

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish the degree of Master of Public Policy, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved

1 In regulation 2.1 of Council Regulations 22 of 2002 concerning academic precedence and standing (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 14 June 2005, 11 October 2005 and 14 October 2010, Gazette Vol. 139, p. 1004, 30 April 2009; Vol. 141, p.110, 14 October 2010), after ‘Master of Fine Art if also a Master of Arts’ insert ‘Master of Public Policy if also a Master of Arts’.

2 Ibid., after ‘Master of Fine Art if also a Master of Arts’ insert ‘Master of Public Policy if not also a Master of Arts’.

Congregation 29 June

1 Encaenia

Mr Vice-Chancellor invites Pro-Vice-Chancellors, Heads of Houses, Heads of Division, holders of the Oxford Degrees of Doctor of Divinity, Civil Law, Medicine, Letters, Science, and Music, the Proctors, the Assessor, the Public Orator, the Professor of Poetry, the Registrar, the outgoing President of the Oxford University Student Union, and the Presidents of the Junior and Middle common rooms of Nuffield College, Pembroke College, and Oriel College (as being the colleges of the Proctors and the Assessor) to partake of Lord Crewe's
Benefaction to the University, meeting him in the Fellows’ Garden of Exeter College (entrance on Brasenose Lane), at 10.30 a.m. on Wednesday, 29 June. Thence they will go in procession to the Sheldonian Theatre, where will be spoken the Oration in Commemoration of the Benefactors of the University according to the intention of the Right Honourable Nathaniel, Lord Crewe, Bishop of Durham.

Note. Pro-Vice-Chancellors, Heads of Houses, Heads of Division, and Doctors who propose to accept Mr Vice-Chancellor’s invitation, and to be present in the Sheldonian Theatre, are requested to inform the Events Office at the University Offices, Wellington Square by email (events.office@admin.ox.ac.uk), not later than Wednesday, 22 June. They are reminded that, while academic dress of other universities may (if desired) be worn at the Encenia Garden Party, the appropriate Oxford academic dress should always be worn at the partaking of Lord Crewe’s Benefaction and at the Encenia Ceremony.

Notices

General notices

Encenia

SHELDONIAN THEATRE

At the Encenia to be held in the Sheldonian Theatre on Wednesday, 29 June, the Curators of the Theatre propose to allot seats as follows, and subject to availability, to those who apply for tickets:

(a) one visitor’s ticket each to Heads of Houses, Canons of Christ Church, members of Council, and certain other persons holding official positions in the University;

(b) one visitor’s ticket to each Professor;

(c) one ticket to each member of Convocation (i.e. any matriculated member of the University on whom any degree of the University has been conferred, or any member of Congregation who does not hold such a degree).

Applications for tickets in the above categories, stating the name and standing of each person for whom a ticket is requested, should be made not later than Wednesday, 15 June, to the University Card Office, Examination Schools (email: university.card@ox.ac.uk). For security reasons, all requests for tickets must state the names of the persons for whom the tickets are intended.

Tickets for all other members of the University (i.e. those who have not been admitted to any degree of the University) will be distributed through college authorities. All applications for tickets in this category should be made to the college authorities and not to the University Card Office.

The gates and entrances to the Theatre will be opened at 10.45 a.m. and the proceedings will begin at 11.30 a.m. Holders of tickets are requested to be in their places inside the Theatre by 11.15 a.m.

All current members of the University are required to wear subfusc and full academic dress. Doctors will wear their robes and other graduates their hoods.
Computing Laboratory

On 1 June 2011, the Oxford University Computing Laboratory changed its name to the Department of Computer Science, University of Oxford. The departmental website will change to www.cs.ox.ac.uk and email addresses will take the format firstname.lastname@cs.ox.ac.uk rather than firstname.lastname@comlab.ox.ac.uk.

COUNCIL

One member of Congregation elected by Congregation from members of the faculties in the Divisions of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and of Medical Sciences:

Current/Retiring Member To hold office until
Professor M.S. Williams, New College MT 2015

The following nominations have been received:

Martin S. Williams, BSc PhD Brist, MA Oxf, Fellow of New College, Faculty of Engineering Science

Nominated by:
Sir Curtis Price, Warden of New College, Faculty of Music
R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine’s, Faculty of Engineering Science
M.J. Burden, New College, Faculty of Music
A.M. Etheridge, Magdalen, Faculty of Mathematics
G.T. Housby, Brasenose, Faculty of Engineering Science
J.B. Muddiman, Mansfield, Faculty of Theology
P.M. Newman, New College, Faculty of Engineering Science
P.J. Robins, St Antony’s, Faculty of Social Sciences

Candidate statement:
I have been a University Lecturer (latterly titular Professor) and Tutorial Fellow since 1989. In my time in post I have served as Senior Tutor of New College (1995–99), Chairman of Examiners on three occasions, Deputy Head of the Engineering Science Department (2004–07) and Senior Proctor (2009–10). These experiences have given me an interesting and varied set of perspectives on how the University runs. Last year I was elected to a one-year vacancy on Council. During the year I also served as a Council-nominated member of PRAC and of several working groups, including the one currently exploring the feasibility of improving access through foundation or bridging courses. I am now standing for re-election to Council in the hope that I can complete a more substantial term of office.

Over the past year Council’s business has, for obvious reasons, been dominated by an agenda of financial cuts, undergraduate fees and access issues. While I think the University has handled these difficult issues well, some other important topics have inevitably received less attention. Looking to the future, an area to which I attach particular importance is graduate study. I believe the University needs to do much more to attract and support the best graduate students if we are to maintain or enhance our international standing. The likely knock-on effects of the new undergraduate funding arrangements can only add to this challenge.

Rodney E. Phillips, MD MBBS Melbourne, MA Oxf, Fellow of Pembroke, Faculty of Clinical Medicine

Nominated by:
J.J. Bell, Christ Church, Faculty of Clinical Medicine
A.M. Buchan, Corpus Christi, Faculty of Clinical Medicine
K.E. Davies, Hertford, Faculties of Biochemistry, of Physiological Sciences, and of Clinical Medicine
A.J. Frater, Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine Experimental Medicine Division
W.S. James, Brasenose, Faculties of Biochemistry and of Physiological Sciences
P. Klenerman, Brasenose, Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine Experimental Medicine Division
A.R. McLean, All Souls, Faculty of Zoology

No statement submitted.

Note: Full details of Council’s remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml. For further information, please contact the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk).

SOCIALLY RESPONSIBLE INVESTMENT REVIEW COMMITTEE

A member of Congregation elected by Congregation from members of the faculties in the Divisions of Humanities and of Social Sciences:

Current/Retiring Member To hold office until
Professor G. Clark, St Peter’s MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

Gordon L. Clark, BEcon MA Monash, MA DSc Oxf, PhD McMaster, Fellow of St Peter’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography

Nominated by:
D.J. Banister, St Anne’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
R.A. Hope, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
P.R. Jepson, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
D. Wojcik, St Peter’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography

Candidate statement:
I was initially elected to serve on the Committee when it was just being established. At the time, my interest in serving on the Committee was both personal and professional. I think it is important that on crucial issues of ethics and public policy, the University should have a clear and well-conceived ‘voice’ reflecting our interests as well as our knowledge and understanding of the issues. Equally, given the significance of issues such as environmental change, globalisation, and human capacity if University investment policies intersect with these issues then we have a responsibility to evaluate those policies in the light of the best available advice. Inevitably, the Committee could consider issues of considerable moral significance involving public controversy as well as irreconcilable beliefs. At the same time, the Committee has a more conventional mandate providing advice to Council based upon the evaluation of the issues, the available evidence, and the skills and knowledge of those that participate in the Committee. The Committee has taken time to consider one important issue which has prompted consideration of the role and status of the Committee, its procedures, and what strategies might be followed by the University in governing its investment policies in the future. As such, serving on the Committee is an opportunity to take the issues forward going beyond single questions to a larger framework consistent with the University’s goals and objectives. I would welcome the opportunity to serve on the Committee a further term.

S. Rippon, BA Ox, AM PhD Harvard, Junior Research Fellow of Somerville, Faculty of Philosophy

Nominated by:
N. Bostrom, St Cross, Faculty of Philosophy
L. Brown, Somerville, Faculty of Philosophy
A. Labir, Somerville, Faculty of Linguistics, Philology and Phonetics
E. Mandelbaum, Faculty of Philosophy

Candidate statement:
I have been working at Oxford since about a year and a half ago, as a post-doctoral researcher at the Oxford Uehiro Centre for Practical Ethics. As a moral philosopher, I have a professional, as well as a personal, interest in issues of ethics and social responsibility. I am keen to use my professional training and experience to provide input into some of the practical workings and policies of the University. Oxford is a social and cultural leader both in the UK and Abroad, and I think it enormously important that the University be—and be seen to be—not just financially successful but also morally responsible in its investment practices.

Note: Further information on the committee can be found at: www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/520-1220.shtml. For further information, please contact the Secretary (adrienne.lingard@admin.ox.ac.uk).

CURATORS OF THE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

Two members of Congregation elected by Congregation:

Current/Retiring Member: To hold office until Professor V.A. Gillespie, Lady Margaret Hall MT 2015
Professor T.P. Soffley, Merton MT 2015

The following nominations have been received:
Kate Blackmon, BSc Clemson, BA Queens (Charlotte, NC), MBA PhD North Carolina, MA Ox, Fellow of Merton, Faculty of Management

Nominated by:
M. Chen-Wishart, Merton, Faculty of Law
G.L. Flegg, Sainsbury Library at the Said Business School
D. Grimley, Merton, Faculty of Music
J.C. Walworth, Merton, Faculty of History

No statement submitted.

Ian J. Finlay, BA Midd, MA Open, PhD Lanc, Oxford Learning Institute

Nominated by:
R. Waller, Principal of Harris Manchester, Faculty of Theology
S.A. Killoran, Harris Manchester
H.W. Marsh, St Cross, Faculty of Social Studies
K.M. Quinlan, Oxford Learning Institute

Candidate statement:
I build my case as a potential Curator of the University Libraries on three pillars. The first is passion. I have been passionate about libraries, both public and academic, since my father first enrolled me in Macdonald Road Public Library, Edinburgh, over 50 years ago. Since that time I would have rather spent my time in a library than almost any other place. Many meals have been missed and appointments unkept because I have been chasing up some interesting line of thought in a library. Now of course such a passion is unexceptional in this university. More is expected of a Curator.

The second pillar is therefore experience. At my previous institution I spent a period of office on the Library Committee and was exposed to the provider rather than the user perspective. Concerns about resources, regulations and service were added to my previous experiences as an enthusiastic learner and researcher. Since coming to Oxford I have drawn on this experience to support the librarians in my college.

The final pillar is expertise in learning theory. My empirical research is in learning in higher education. I examine the factors that improve and hinder the learning of both undergraduate and graduate students. The university libraries in Oxford play a role possibly more important than in most other higher education institutions in supporting student learning given the focus on tutorial teaching. This role needs to be supported.

On these three pillars I present my case for the Committee a further term.

Nominated by:
R.M. Ballaster, Mansfield, Faculty of English
J.D. Bradshaw, Worcester, Faculty of English
L.E. Maguire, Magdalen, Faculty of English
J.K. Marcus, New College, Faculty of English

No statement submitted.

Web: www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising
Post: Gazette Advertisements,
Public Affairs Directorate,
University Offices,
Wellington Square,
Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication).
Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below)
External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.
For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit card or debit card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.

Note: Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.

Note: Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note: When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be stipulated: (i) must be made at the time of submission of an advertisement arranged at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette, to be included in the online Gazette. In such a case the editor will view the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement. Please note that advertisements may be removed or amended after publication.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate. University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement. Please note that advertisements may be removed or amended after publication.

Congregation 21 June 2pm

1 Voting on Legislative Proposal: Statute XVI concerning Intellectual Property

Explanatory Note

135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4-8), proposes changes to Statute XVI on the recommendation of the Intellectual Property Advisory Group, to clarify the definition of ‘commissioned works’ in which the University will not assert any claim to the ownership of copyright.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Statute XVI concerning Property, Contracts, and Trusts, to clarify the Intellectual Property rights of the University, staff and students, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

‘8. For the purpose of sections 6 and 7 of this statute, ‘commissioned works’ are works which the University has specifically employed or requested the person concerned to produce, whether in return for special payment or not. ‘Commissioned works’ explicitly exclude (i) lectures delivered by University Lecturers, Departmental Lecturers and the holders of University Chairs in fulfilment of obligations in their contracts of employment and (ii) but, save as may be separately agreed between the University Press and the person concerned, works commissioned by the University Press in the course of its publishing business (save as may be separately agreed between the University Press and the person concerned) shall not be regarded as ‘works commissioned by the University.’

2 Voting on Legislative Proposal: establishment of degree of Master of Public Policy

Explanatory Note

The following Legislative Proposal, submitted by Council under Part 2 of Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (Supplement (I) to Gazette No. 4633, 9 October 2002, Vol. 133, p. 161, as amended on 12 October 2004, 7 March 2006 and 14 October 2008, Gazette, Vol. 135, p. 214; Vol. 137, p. 669; Vol. 139, pp. 4–8), establishes the new degree of Master of Public Policy. This degree provides a major addition to the range of master's awards offered by the University.

WHEREAS it is expedient to establish the degree of Master of Public Policy, THE UNIVERSITY ENACTS AS FOLLOWS.

Regulations to be made by Council if the Statute is approved

1 In regulation 2.1 of Council Regulations 22 of 2002 concerning academic precedence and standing (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 14 June 2005, 11 October 2005 and 14 October 2010, Gazette Vol. 139, p. 1004, 30 April 2009, Vol. 141, p.110, 14 October 2010), after ‘Master of Fine Art’ if also a Master of Arts’ insert ‘Master of Public Policy if also a Master of Arts’.

2 Ibid., after ‘Master of Fine Art if not also a Master of Arts’ insert ‘Master of Public Policy if not also a Master of Arts’.

Consultative notice

Consultation on proposed arrangements to implement an Employer Justified Retirement Age

During Hilary term 2011, the Personnel Committee conducted a consultation on a proposal to maintain an Employer Justified Retirement Age (EJRA) of 67 for academic and academic-related staff, on the abolition of the statutory default retirement age from 1 October 2011. The responses to the consultation revealed broad support for that proposal: all the academic divisions supported the maintenance of a retirement age, the vast majority of colleges favoured maintaining an EJRA for joint appointments and college-only academic staff, and the Oxford UCU (following consultation with its members) supported the proposal. Nineteen individual responses were received, about half of which were in favour of introducing an EJRA.

In the light of these responses, the Personnel Committee intends in due course to recommend to Council the adoption of an EJRA of 67 for academic and academic-related staff with effect from 1 October 2011; but now seeks the views on a proposed procedure for considering requests from individuals to continue in employment beyond the EJRA. This procedure reflects the comments and suggestions received during the previous consultation, and seeks to provide a fair and inclusive process through which the collegiate University is able to manage the future of academic and academic-related posts by retirement, or retention in the existing role, or through reaching agreement on a new set of duties and associated terms and conditions which are acceptable to the employer(s).

The Personnel Committee believes that the details of the proposed arrangements may clarify the rationale for introducing an EJRA and reassure individuals and appointing bodies about the way in which serious consideration will be given to requests to work beyond the EJRA and the circumstances in which such requests will be approved if this is justified.

It is proposed that the EJRA should operate for an initial period of ten years from 1 October 2011; and that the application and outcomes of these arrangements be reported annually to the Personnel Committee and be subject to an interim review after five years. This will allow account to be taken of experience of implementing the EJRA here and elsewhere, of the direction in which case law on the EJRA might develop, and of wider changes in patterns of employment.

Further details of the proposals and the consultation exercise may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/staff/staff/communications/update_on_major_issues/index.html. Any individuals who wish to comment on the proposals are welcome to do so. The consultation closes on Friday, 8 July 2011.

1 The consultation document may be found on the Staff Gateway at www.ox.ac.uk/document/ed/1848.

General notices

Encaenia

SHELDONIAN THEATRE

At the Encaenia to be held in the Sheldonian Theatre on Wednesday, 29 June, the Curators of the Theatre propose to allot seats as follows, and subject to availability, to those who apply for tickets:

(a) one visitor’s ticket each to Heads of Houses, Canons of Christ Church, members of Council, and certain other persons holding official positions in the University;
(b) one visitor’s ticket to each Professor;
(c) one ticket to each member of Convocation (i.e. any matriculated member of the University on whom any degree of the University has been conferred, or any member of Congregation who does not hold such a degree).

Applications for tickets in the above categories, stating the name and standing of each person for whom a ticket is requested, should be made not later than Wednesday, 15 June, to the University Card Office, Examination Schools (email: university.card@ox.ac.uk). For security reasons, all requests for tickets must state the names of the persons for whom the tickets are intended.

Tickets for all other members of the University (i.e. those who have not been admitted to any degree of the University) will be distributed through college authorities. All applications for tickets in this category should be made to the college authorities and not to the University Card Office.

The gates and entrances to the Theatre will be opened at 10.45 a.m. and the proceedings will begin at 11.30 a.m. Holders of tickets are requested to be in their places inside the Theatre by 11.15 a.m.

All current members of the University are required to wear subfusc and full academic dress. Doctors will wear their robes and other graduates their hoods.

Oxford Institute of Archaeology

The Oxford Institute of Archaeology will celebrate its fiftieth Anniversary on 29 September 2011. Alumni and friends of the Institute are warmly invited to help us mark our Golden Jubilee with an Open Day at the Institute from 2 to 5 p.m., when it will be possible to visit old haunts, catch up with old friends and attend brief presentations on a range of fieldwork and research projects being undertaken by current staff and students. Exhibits relating to the work and history of the Institute will be on display and refreshments will be available.

In the evening, from 5.30 to 8 p.m., there will be a drinks reception in the gardens of St Cross College (or in the Hall, if inclement), to which all are welcome. Spaces for the reception are limited, so please email 50years@arch.ox.ac.uk if you would like to attend.

COUNCIL

One member of Congregation elected by Congregation from members of the faculties in the Divisions of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and of Medical Sciences:

Current/Retiring Member To hold office until

Professor M.S. Williams, New College MT 2015

The following nominations have been received:

Martin S. Williams, BSc PhD Brist, MA Oxf, Fellow of New College, Faculty of Engineering Science

Nominated by:

Sir Curtis Price, Warden of New College, Faculty of Music
R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine’s, Faculty of Engineering Science
M.J. Burden, New College, Faculty of Music
A.M. Etheridge, Magdalen, Faculty of Mathematics
G.T. Houldby, Brasenose, Faculty of Engineering Science
J.B. Maddiman, Mansfield, Faculty of Theology
P.M. Newman, New College, Faculty of Engineering Science
P.J. Robins, St Antony’s, Faculty of Social Sciences

Candidate statement:

I have been a University Lecturer (latterly titular Professor) and Tutorial Fellow since 1989. In my time in post I have served as Senior Tutor of New College (1995–99), Chairman of Examiners on three occasions, Deputy Head of the Engineering Science Department (2004–07) and Senior Proctor (2009–10). These experiences have given me an interesting and varied set of perspectives on how the University runs. Last year I was elected to a one-year vacancy on Council. During the year I also served as a Council-nominated member of PRAC and of several working groups, including the one currently exploring the feasibility of improving access through foundation or bridging courses. I am now standing for re-election to Council in the hope that I can complete a more substantial term of office.

Over the past year Council’s business has, for obvious reasons, been dominated by an agenda of financial cuts, undergraduate fees and access issues. While I think the University has handled these difficult issues well, some other important topics have inevitably received less attention. Looking to the future, an area to which I attach particular importance is graduate study. I believe the University needs to do much more to attract and support the best graduate students if we are to maintain or enhance our international standing. The likely knock-on effects of the new undergraduate funding arrangements can only add to this challenge.

Rodney E. Phillips, MD MBBS Melbourne, MA Oxf, Fellow of Pembroke, Faculty of Clinical Medicine

Nominated by:

J.I. Bell, Christ Church, Faculty of Clinical Medicine
A.M. Buchan, Corpus Christi, Faculty of Clinical Medicine
K.E. Davies, Hertford, Faculties of Biochemistry, of Physiological Sciences, and of Clinical Medicine
A.J. Frater, Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine Experimental Medicine Division
W.S. James, Brasenose, Faculties of Biochemistry and of Physiological Sciences
P. Klenerman, Brasenose, Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine Experimental Medicine Division
A.R. McLean, All Souls, Faculty of Zoology

No statement submitted.

Note: Full details of Council’s remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/783-121.shtml. For further information, please contact the Head of the Council Secretariat (emma.rampton@admin.ox.ac.uk).
SOCIALLY RESPONSIBLE INVESTMENT REVIEW COMMITTEE

A member of Congregation elected by Congregation from members of the faculties in the Divisions of Humanities and of Social Sciences:

Current/Retiring Member To hold office until
Professor G. Clark, St Peter’s MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

Gordon L. Clark, B.Econ MA Monash, MA DSc Oxf, PhD McMaster, Fellow of St Peter’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
Nominated by:
D.J. Banister, St Anne’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
R.A. Hope, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
P.R. Jeppson, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
D. Wojcik, St Peter’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography

Candidate statement:
I was initially elected to serve on the Committee when it was just being established. At the time, my interest in serving on the Committee was both personal and professional. I think it is important that on crucial issues of ethics and public policy, the University should have a clear and well-conceived ‘voice’ reflecting our interests as well as our knowledge and understanding of the issues. Equally, given the significance of issues such as environmental change, globalisation, and human capacity if University investment policies intersect with these issues then we have a responsibility to evaluate those policies in the light of the best available advice. Inevitably, the Committee could consider issues of considerable moral significance involving public controversy as well as irreconcilable beliefs. At the same time, the Committee has a more conventional mandate providing advice to Council based upon the evaluation of the issues, the available evidence, and the skills and knowledge of those that participate in the Committee. The Committee has taken time to consider one important issue which has prompted consideration of the role and status of the Committee, its procedures, and what strategies might be followed by the University in governing its investment policies in the future. As such, serving on the Committee is an opportunity to take the issues forward going beyond single questions to a larger framework consistent with the University’s goals and objectives. I would welcome the opportunity to serve on the Committee a further term.

S. Rippon, MA Oxf, AM PhD Harvard, Fellow of Somerville, Faculty of Philosophy
Nominated by:
N. Bostrum, St Cross, Faculty of Philosophy
L. Brown, Somerville, Faculty of Philosophy
A. Lahiri, Somerville, Faculty of Linguistics, Philology and Phonetics
E. Mandelbaum, Faculty of Philosophy

Candidate statement:
I have been working at Oxford since about a year and a half ago, as a postdoctoral researcher at the Oxford Uehiro Centre for Practical Ethics. As a moral philosopher, I have a professional, as well as a personal, interest in issues of ethics and social responsibility. I am keen to use my professional training and experience to provide input into some of the practical workings and policies of the University.

Oxford is a social and cultural leader both in the UK and abroad, and I think it enormously important that the University be—and be seen to be—not just financially successful but also morally responsible in its investment practices.

Note: Further information on the committee can be found at: www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/308-072.shtml. For further information, please contact the Secretary (adrienne.lingard@admin.ox.ac.uk).

Candidate statement:
I build my case as a potential Curator of the University Libraries on three pillars. The first is passion. I have been passionate about libraries, both public and academic, since my father first enrolled me in Macdonald Road Public Library, Edinburgh, over 50 years ago. Since that time I would have rather spent my time in a library than almost any other place. Many meals have been missed and appointments kept because I have been chasing up some interesting line of thought in a library. Now of course such a passion is exceptional in this university. More is expected of a Curator.

The second pillar is therefore experience. At my previous institution I spent a period of office on the Library Committee and was exposed to the provider rather than the user perspective. Concerns about resources, regulations and service were added to my previous experiences as an enthusiastic learner and researcher. Since coming to Oxford I have drawn on this experience to support the librarians in my college.

The final pillar is expertise in learning theory. My empirical research is in learning in higher education. I examine the factors that improve and hinder the learning of both undergraduate and graduate students. The university libraries in Oxford play a role possibly more important than in most other higher education institutions in supporting student learning given the focus on tutorial teaching. This role needs to be supported.

On these three pillars I present my case for election.

Candidate statement:

I live close to the Parks and walk through them daily, sometimes to work and sometimes with family. I well understand the Parks’ importance to many in the university and city who prize them as a haven in the centre of an increasingly busy town. I have played (college) and watched (university) sport in them, my children have fed the ducks in them, and walked neighbours’ dogs in them. I have pushed my cycle through them when it was experimentally permitted (and stopped when it wasn’t), and I have ruminated on the optimal sitting of the crepe van. I have also discussed the remit and nature of the role with past and present Curators. I therefore have a pretty informed sense of the unusual variety of academic, recreational, sporting, family and commuting purposes which the Parks serve, and the necessity of preserving their harmonious co-existence.

Report of proceedings in Congregation, 7 June 2011

Debate on a resolution

The report of the debate in Congregation on 7 June on the resolution instructing Council to communicate to government that the University of Oxford has no confidence in the policies of the Minister for Higher Education is set out below (see Gazette No. 4955, 2 June 2011, p. 673).

At the close of the debate, the resolution was approved on a division [for: 283; against: 5].

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: The business before Congregation is declaration of approval of a legislative proposal and a resolution, and voting on a resolution instructing Council to communicate to government that the University of Oxford has no confidence in the policies of the Minister for Higher Education. Will you please be seated? Since no opposition has been notified to the legislative proposal concerning changes to Statute XI or to the resolution authorising the use of space at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, I have no confidence in the Minister for Higher Education. Will you please be seated? Since no opposition has been notified to the legislative proposal concerning changes to Statute XI or to the resolution authorising the use of space at the Radcliffe Observatory Quarter, I declare these carried. The resolution which comprises the main business of today’s meeting was placed on the agenda of this meeting in the University, first published on 19 May.

Before outlining the procedural details of the debate, I wanted to report to you something of Council’s thoughts at its regular meeting last week, ahead of this afternoon’s proceedings. In the course of those discussions, it was clearly recognised that the resolution reflected a significant degree of concern in the University community to which this debate would give a further and fuller airing. In the light of that concern, Council agreed that there should be a ballot at the end of the debate, notwithstanding the fact that under Congregation Regulations a vote is not mandatory if, as in current circumstances, there has been no notice of opposition or amendment. In line with Council’s decision, therefore, the proceedings today will conclude with a ballot on the resolution and the results will be published with the transcript of the debate.

The procedure for today’s meeting will be as follows. I shall begin by asking the Registrar to read the resolution. I shall then invite Professor Robert Gildea to move the resolution and Dr Karma Nabulsi to second it. The mover of the resolution has been asked to speak for no more than eight minutes and the seconder to speak for no more than five minutes. After that, the debate on the resolution will be open to the House. I would ask all speakers to come forward and to speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. Speakers from the floor of the House should please follow the usual convention of not speaking for more than five minutes. May I draw the attention of speakers to the device positioned on the side of the lectern. This anti-loquor device has green, amber and red lights to help speakers with the timing of their speeches. The amber light shows with one minute remaining and should encourage speakers to start to wind up their remarks. Red means speakers are out of time and must conclude their remarks. A number of members of Congregation have indicated a wish to speak and I will endeavour to call them all, but I cannot guarantee that I will be able to do so. Priority will be given to those who have indicated in advance that they wish to speak, and I would ask that additional speakers come forward to speak only if they have new points to add which have not already been raised by other speakers. In accordance with health and safety guidelines the stenographer who is helping us to transcribe today’s proceedings is entitled to a break after an hour and a half, therefore if speeches are still being made at 3.30 p.m. and no vote has been taken by then, I shall call for a five-minute break. I would be grateful if any speaker who uses a written text would afterwards provide a copy of that text to Mrs Benton, the officer who is collecting such speeches, as this will be of assistance in preparing the published record of the debate which will appear in a Gazette supplement as soon as possible, I hope in the issue published on 16 June, but it will also be available on the University website.

At the end of the debate, I shall give Professor Gildea a right of reply to the debate. I shall then take a division on the resolution. This will be by written ballot for which members of Congregation should have received voting papers as they entered the theatre. Any members who have not will have an opportunity to collect a paper at the exits as they leave. Under Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002, a vote can only be taken at the close of the debate and I regret that any members unable to stay until I call the vote on the resolution will, therefore, not have an opportunity to register a vote. I should stress that this means that a member may not leave a completed voting paper with another member. The Proctors, Pro-Proctors and Bedels who will be collecting the papers at the close of the debate will accept only each member’s single personal voting paper. I shall explain the detailed voting arrangements when the vote is taken. I now ask the Registrar to read the resolution.
THE REGISTRAR: The following is the text of the resolution:

‘Congregation instructs Council to communicate to government that the University of Oxford has no confidence in the policies of the Minister for Higher Education.’

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: I now call on Professor Robert Gildea to move the resolution.

Professor Robert Gildea, Faculty of History, Worcester College

I would like to formally move the resolution that you have just heard. This is a very weighty business, a step of historic importance, and not a course of action that Congregation is undertaking lightly. A particular minister is named in the resolution, and some colleagues may be unhappy with this. The minister is a member of the coalition government and the higher education policies we are opposing are the work of the government as a whole, but this minister has been central to promoting these policies, he has been outspoken in defending them and he is responsible for delivering them. That is why, in this unprecedented way, we are calling him to account.

The future of higher education as we have known it since the Second World War is under threat. By this, I mean a system based on three principles: one, higher education as a public good, paid for out of general taxation; two, academic scholarship pursued in the spirit of enquiry and not to meet political or economic agendas; and three, access to teaching and learning at university on the basis of intellectual potential. This system, I should add, is also a cost-effective, highly professional and a student-centred way to prepare young people for employment, research and for life in general. The principles and delivery of this system of higher education are now under attack from government policies which are reckless, incoherent and incompetent. First of all, they are reckless: an ideologically driven marketisation of education which, as we have heard again today, is financially incompetent and will save no money for the Treasury or the taxpayer; on the contrary. By massively cutting the arts and humanities teaching budget, the government is forcing universities to triple tuition fees. It is crippling students with debt, or driving them away from higher education for fear of debt. It is threatening with closure courses in universities which will not be able to recruit students at top rates or which will fall victim to further rounds of government cuts. It is opening the way to private for-profit providers of higher education who are already prowling at the gates. Second, government policies are incoherent, because they promise to increase social mobility while doing everything possible in terms of regressive economic, social and fiscal policies to increase social inequality. The story of off-quota university places and the announcement of a niche College for the Humanities at £18,000 per year heralds the arrival of twin-track university admissions: a red-carpet entry for the rich and even more intense competition for everyone else. Students who already fear that the odds of getting into top universities are stacked against them will simply not apply and we will be back to Brideshead. Meanwhile, the government passes the buck of plans to widen access and increase social mobility to the universities to deal with and threatens to penalise them if they fail. Less a buck, Vice-Chancellor, than a poisoned chalice. Third, the incompetence and incoherence of these policies is exposed on a weekly basis, sending the government PR machine into overdrive. It resorts to attempts to disguise these destructive policies which would be laughable if so much were not at stake. There is the ‘calm down, dear’ approach for debt-averse prospective students and their families, saying that they will only pay back loans at £50 per month and not if their salary drops. There are the fairy tales, such as that off-quota places for the rich will actually increase social mobility, by leaving more ‘real’ places for the poorest families. There is the nonsense, such as claiming that the main obstacle to social mobility is feminism.

For these reasons, I am proposing the resolution of no confidence in the minister with responsibility for universities. One final point. The resolution before you engages the name of the University of Oxford. It has been signed by 170 members of Congregation and has the firm support of OUSU and the wider student body. I ask members of Congregation to give resounding support to the motion in order to make our concerns heard in the strongest terms. Congregation is a unique space which allows academics to debate major issues of concern to the University. We have a duty to use this privilege on behalf of our own students, on behalf of colleagues and students at other universities who do not have the same fora or the same freedoms as we do to speak out, and on behalf of hundreds of thousands of prospective students and their families who are seeing the prospects of a university education shivel before them. I will now leave the floor to the eloquence of my colleagues. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: I call on Dr Karma Nabulsi to second the resolution.

Dr Karma Nabulsi, Department of Politics and International Relations, St Edmund Hall

I would like to second the motion ‘Congregation instructs Council to communicate to the government that the University of Oxford has no confidence in the policies of the Minister for Higher Education’. In second week’s Discussion, I raised the issue of how divisive the government’s higher education policies will be on so many levels of public life. Citizens across the country are being asked to abandon a common vision for the direction of the country. These artificially created hierarchies and conflicts generate damaging divisions in all manner of ways, and the speakers to follow will touch upon many of them. Of course, as any of us who are members of a college governing body, department or university committee will be aware, our colleagues can hold very different views to our own, so not all of you will share every idea you hear today in favour of the motion. But what we do share is what brings us together in putting this motion before you: a common attachment to the purpose of higher education which is now under grave threat. So in seconding this motion, I would simply like to draw your attention to the many ideas we have in common, the important things that bring us together. In doing so, I aim to show that voting for this motion is the most unifying, positive and professional gesture we can make as members of this great university, for ourselves, the students, the staff and administration here and, more broadly, for the young people and other academics across the country. What do we stand for? Oxford is committed, above all, to the pursuit of academic excellence in all its forms; to the defence of academic disciplines, without undue regard for their ‘market’ value; and to the ideal of education as a comprehensive, publicly funded activity, accessible to the widest number of young people. These are not just good things in themselves; they are also essential instruments for sustaining a well-ordered society, one in which the individuals think for themselves, but also think of themselves as members of a political community and, ultimately, share a common understanding of what it means to be a citizen. These are the values we believe in and pass on to our students, and it is this vision which is now threatened by the policies of the current government. A vote for this motion is not a negative statement, it is an affirmation of who we are and the traditions we wish to preserve. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: The debate on the resolution is now open to the House. Please could speakers come forward and speak into the microphone, first giving their name and college or department. I now call on Professor Howard Hotson.

Professor Howard Hotson, Faculty of History, St Anne's College

At the heart of current higher education policy is a now familiar notion—allegedly grounded in economic science—the notion that the introduction of market forces in the university sector will simultaneously drive up standards, drive down prices, maximise student choice and save taxpayers money. But evidence is accumulating on an almost daily basis that precisely the opposite is happening. The new funding arrangements won’t save money in the short term. Just this morning, the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons warned that a £100-million-a-year gap is opening up between ministers’ optimistic estimates and the actual cost of this new funding system. Private sector institutions will not drive up standards. During the past few weeks, we have also learned the leading voice of academic colleagues in so many sister institutions has been silenced. If we do not grasp the opportunity we shall have been silent when we should have spoken; and because the collective voice of academic colleagues in so many sister institutions has been silenced. If the resolution passes, I ask that Council members’ optimistic estimates and the actual cost of this new funding system. Private sector institutions will not drive up standards. During the past few weeks, we have also learned the leading voice of academic colleagues in so many sister institutions has been silenced. If we do not grasp the opportunity we shall have been silent when we should have spoken; and because the collective voice of academic colleagues in so many sister institutions has been silenced. If the resolution passes, I ask that Council append a transcript of the debate in its communication to government. I hope it is not too much to ask of those responsible for the sector to give careful thought to the views of a body whose current members embody thousands of years of relevant experience.

Our educational principle may be rooted in centuries of accumulated wisdom, but is always open to developments which enhance it. Teaching is a dialogue, not a monologue—a partnership in which those further along the road guide those nearer the beginning and may in time overtake them, and be overtaken by them. Those who teach listen and learn from their pupils. The partnership is founded on a shared intellectual curiosity. It challenges us to master for ourselves the fundamentals of our discipline rather than simply learning techniques without understanding how they work; it encourages us all to take charge of our thoughts and to develop critical and analytical tools which can be applied to many spheres of life. It is from such partnership and principles that such creative energies emerge and thrive. Society needs people who are prepared to ask the awkward questions and challenge received ideas, or it stagnates. Economic results will follow, but not in a prescribed timescale or in any easily measurable way, but the long-term benefits in terms of contributions to the public good are incalculable.

The loss of public funding for the teaching of the arts and social studies is the logical conclusion of the flawed premises of the short-term economic model successive governments have espoused. Governments should take a long hard look at the contribution such graduates have made, in their professions and as citizens, before they do further damage. Strange that a government which makes so much of the Big Society should seek to encourage future students into higher education with a consumerist ideology which turns it into a private economic transaction between provider and client. This process—let a recent Proctor prophecy—can only lead to a growth in the culture of complaints and litigation, and a consequent loss of the relationship of trust between teachers and learners, which is a necessary precondition for a humane and enlightened education.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor Susan Cooper.

Professor Susan Cooper, Department of Physics, St Catherine's College

I never know what the morning newscast will bring, but I can reassure you that my recent experience on Council gives me confidence that at least Oxford isn't going to latch on to any hare-brained schemes. The battle is not within, but without. Saying no to the government's bad proposals is best accompanied by trying to devise something better. With some trepidation, I attempt this within the thankfully brief scope of five minutes. My aim can't be restricted merely to higher education policies, as their haste, if not their details, certainly arises from the banking crisis. I need the experts to decide how regulation of the banks should be improved, but I do not hesitate to say: it must be done. Given the financial crisis, some combination of cuts and increased taxation was inevitable. I would rather pay more taxes than see the level of decimation across the public services, but too much taxation might suppress economic recovery, just as unemployment caused by public sector cuts may. There is a limit to how many sectors can be protected from cuts and the solution found for higher education, while painful, is less bad for students than cuts to the quality of their education. The solution is really a delayed income tax, which may even be economically clever. The suddenness and severity of the increase in fees may have been necessitated by the suddenness and severity of the financial crisis: the government should give us numbers on the expected savings, if any, so we can judge. Instead, we get calls for further quick fixes. Five years of trying to improve the finances of a deficit department have taught me the importance of staying calm. Some things first get worse and then improve. If you turn and panic at every storm, you will only get dizzy and fall over, squashing things that would have been good. I would not have recommended a second experiment at introducing variable fees by raising the cap to £9,000, but we should either do the experiment or not, and a market in fees will need at least a few years to reach equilibrium, given its once-a-year timescale. Issuing threats after only a few months spoils the experiment, as universities rush to £9,000 in anticipation of further cuts. If the government really thinks it needs to abort the experiment, it should have reacted decisively by reducing the cap. But the difference between £7,500 and £9,000 is not a financial disaster on the scale of the banking crisis and, having embarked on the experiment, I would rather see it through. A true variety in university missions and costs might develop if the government stops pushing all to do everything. 'Impact' should be removed as a requirement in grant applications and from the REF. It should be judged and rewarded separately, allowing some to shine in that area, perhaps developing applications of research done elsewhere.

Where the new policy is simply illogical, like removing the extra HEFCE funding for band C subjects, it should be reversed. The cost of this, and of restoring the AHRC funding, wouldn't be much; it would even make financial sense in our post-industrial economy. But the worst feature of government higher education policy is the rhetoric. Did the authors of the Browne report really believe it, or just think their audience wanted to hear higher education described as a commodity students would buy for its economic payback? When they spend their own money on a concert or a play, I doubt they are doing it for economic gain rather than its contribution to their quality of life. Despite the bad rhetoric, the new system does allow a student to study English literature or physics for the love of a subject that will enrich their lives, whether or not they earn a fortune from it. If they don't, they will only pay part of the cost, and the government will subsidise the rest. Prospective MBA students may particularly value the key statistic of average graduate earnings.

Those with a passion to study English will not choose their university on that basis, but they might find a very low average at a particular university a useful warning that something might be wrong there. It is not the information itself that is harmful, but the words it comes with. We should replace those words. Examples of the range of careers pursued by graduates from each subject may encourage more to dare to follow their passion and, incidentally, show the limited meaning of an average salary. I share the government's desire to get out of the student quota business. Empowering students to choose their subject and university is, in principle, an attractive way. The problem is how to do it without creating chaos. I don't have the answer, but maybe if we all put our minds to it, we can find a way. My message to the government, using the Prime Minister's own words, is 'calm down, dear' and let's talk about it. Thank you.
THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Rowan Tomlinson.

Dr Rowan Tomlinson, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, New College

I have worked my way through quite a few of the minister’s speeches lately and I have been struck by a characteristic they share: a tendency to lean on—and extensively quote—other people’s words. The written equivalent perhaps of a trait the minister showed as an undergraduate, when he was apparently too readily influenced by whosoever he last talked to, and a habit all too visible in the rather more consequential texts the minister is now putting his name to. His recent Ron Dearing lecture, for example, name-checks and quotes from authors of reports on higher education like an undergraduate keen to demonstrate just how many of the items on the reading list he has got through. Regrettably, however, the minister seems to get stuck at the stage of the literature review without proceeding to a coherent argument of his own. The result is a cutting and pasting of ideas and policies, past and present; a bit of the Browne review here—when Browne himself, whatever we might think of his market vision of education, said his recommendations were not to be cherrypicked—some ideas from Robbins or Franks there, a generous smattering of neo-liberal politics, not to mention, to keep the political ragbag that is this government together, a nod to his coalition partners in the shape of a repeatedly stated yet patently empty commitment to social mobility, entirely at odds with the government’s devastating restructuring of the HE funding regime.

This pick-and-mix approach is born of the contingency of coalition politics. It is producing policies that nobody voted for, as neither party now in government is producing policies that nobody voted for, as neither party now in government is producing policies that nobody voted for. I quote: ‘And we are here as on a darkling plain Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight, Where ignorant armies clash by night.’

I have focused in this speech on the minister, but none of this is really about David Willets, whose style and method could be aped by any of the tens of ministers-in-waiting armed with business-led presentational training. It is about the policies he has been delivering for the last much-anticipated paper. Meanwhile, what excuse is the minister giving us for his work being so late? Supposedly, he is delaying because he wants to see how the price-setting he has enforced is working. Of course, what he and the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills are discovering is that it is not working at all. Consequently, their recent interventions bristle with threats, warning us that we set the fee at £9,000 at our peril. ‘If graduate contributions end up higher than £7,500,’ the minister writes, ‘we would reluctantly be forced to find savings from elsewhere in HE.’ But our minister’s most recent speech is not only filled with the language of the market and with menaces. Like an undergraduate rushing to pad out a last-minute essay, he turns to the glib power of uncontextualised quotation and tosses in a literary reference. ‘You are not being left alone on Matthew Arnold’s Dover Beach with only the “long, withdrawing roar” of public financial support; he soothes. Now, the minister read PPE and so perhaps his acquaintance with Arnold was limited to educational and theoretical writings. He certainly does not appear to have considered what resonance the ending of this famous poem might have for those of us left dealing with the disarray of his policies. I quote: ‘And we are here as on a darkling plain Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight, Where ignorant armies clash by night.’

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor Donald Fraser.

Professor Donald Fraser, Department of Earth Sciences, Worcester College

After that, it would be difficult to express confidence in the minister, so what are we going to do? There are somewhere between 133 and 164 universities in the UK. It is difficult to find the number in the BIS website, and UUK and HESA seem to use different metrics. So, like any good researcher, we have to define our terms and look for source data. In 2008/09, there were 164 HEIs receiving recurrent teaching grants from HEFCE in the whole of the UK. These all compete, including with Oxford, for money for teaching. In the same year, there were 145 HEIs receiving recurrent research grants from HEFCE. How many universities, let alone research universities, does the minister seriously think the UK can support? Let us do the work for him. Take physics, for example, or chemistry: how many world-class departments do you think there are in the United States? We can use bibliometrics, if you like: fifteen? Let us use a larger number: twenty? Let us index that for the population ratio; that suggests we might support four world-class departments of physics or chemistry in the whole of the UK. If we adjust that for the GDP-per-head ratio, the number is smaller.

What is sure is that the UK cannot support 145—or 164—universities, each with a vice-chancellor, pro-vice-chancellors and so on. Let us take a different example. University College Birmingham attracts no research recurrent grant, but it gets the largest amount of teaching grant among the non-research universities in England. If we go to the University College Birmingham website, we find out that it offers, and I quote, ‘Weekend top-up courses, an alternative way to gain a BA (Hons) top up, in one year, part-time; short courses, courses that are between six and fourteen weeks in length, are offered in cake decoration, sugar flowers, and wines and spirits appreciation.’ I know some students who do this without a degree or a student loan. This contributes to our skills base, but it is not what a university should be doing. Mr Willetts and his predecessors say they believe in market choices, but is he confident that the market choices of seventeen year olds comparing six-week university courses with full degree level courses in physics, engineering, history or economics are the best way of planning the skills needs of the nation? The admissions policies of his department, too, are in disarray. Within a few hours we went from a numbers quota with capped fees, to allowing parents to buy places outside the quota for their children by paying more, to suggesting that this was a misunderstanding and such extra payments could come from companies—and I will say nothing about pipers and tunes—to advice to apply late for university entrance in the hope that a lastminute- university.com will develop. We were told that Mr Willetts saved our research base hours before the CSR last autumn. It could have been a disaster, but the Council for Science and Technology stepped in, as did the Royal Society and the British Academy in their submissions to Professor Smith in BIS. This was not a Cruyff Turn; this was a U-turn. But full credit to Mr Willetts; when a policy is wrong, a U-turn is the correct solution and he supported it.

Vice-Chancellor, similarly, the minister’s teaching policies are not only confused, they are ill focused and fundamentally wrong on detail. He is failing the mission of his own department. The elephant in the room, if I can push a metaphor for a moment, is the tail. It is the tail of a hundred so-called universities with highly paid vice-chancellors, pro-vice-chancellors and their less highly paid staff, offering university degree courses that are based on skills training. Skills training is important, enabling and not necessarily low grade. Schrödinger, before he arrived in Oxford in 1933—where he became a Fellow of Magdalen and received the Nobel Prize for Physics a month later—had taught for two semesters at a technical college. Okay, I have worked in Germany, I know the Technische Hochschule in Stuttgart has an excellent pedigree, but we need technical colleges in this country too, not a long tail of failing, poorly focused, so-called universities. Universities are not just about skills training. Vice-Chancellor, the minister needs again to show leadership and grasp the nettle, if not the tail. We need to move forward and return to pre-1992. The UK has no need for and cannot afford 164 universities. What it does need are forty or fifty well-funded universities and a hundred or more polytechnics and technical colleges that provide a different product. It is time to stop devaluing the UK’s excellent university brand. Let us turn a hundred universities back into polytechnics and technical colleges. Oxford and other universities could easily work with such colleges by admitting transfers of the best students each year, as Caltech did when I was there, thus genuinely contributing to social mobility. Let us save money by rationalisation, paring overheads, including those for student loans, so as to offer the simple admission product that is needed: free no-fees admission to all HEIs for all qualified home and EC students. This is not rocket science, it is not new, it is not even banking, but it will pay great dividends for the nation.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Paul Coones.

Dr Paul Coones, School of Geography, Hertford College

Having spoken in the Congregation Discussion last month, I hesitate to present myself once again. There is always the danger of first time: tragedy, and second time: farce. But there are times in life when one is obliged to respond to the exhortation: don’t just do something, stand there. I have to be brief with, at my back, time’s winged chariot, controlled this afternoon by a set of traffic lights, but, after all, to quote the Apostles’ Creed out of context, there are only two kinds of famous academic: the quick and the dead. My remarks stem from three initial observations. First, there is no Minister for Higher Education, as the resolution states: Mr Willetts is the Minister of State for Universities and Science. Secondly, I wish to concentrate, as does the resolution, on the politics, the policies, not upon the minister personally. Thirdly, here we are again giving a response. We always seem to be responding, justifying, defending ourselves, the University of Oxford, rather than being proactive, setting the agenda and leading as far as we are able so to do.

I offer three points. My first is suggested by the magnificent defence of civilised values set out by Professor Sir Andrew Motion in this year’s Romanes lecture, ‘The bonfire of the humanities: why the humanities matter’, delivered in this theatre last Thursday. No wonder, Mr Vice-Chancellor, while listening intently to Sir Andrew’s address, you nodded in approval so frequently that you made the eminently practical decision, as the lecture went on, to remove your square. Such a highly articulate, beautifully spoken and compelling case for the humanities could hardly be bettered, and Sir Andrew included some autobiographical reflections. I do not in general enjoy talking about myself, but it’s a very dull man who allows his principles to enslave him, so perhaps you will indulge me in my second point. The debate about the universities is helpfully considered in relation to other government policies, notably those relating to the National Health Service and the public libraries. The subject of the NHS is, quite rightly, so prominent in the national consciousness that I can only agree with the doctors and nurses that whatever modifications are required by changing times and shifting demographics, its public nature simply must be retained, free at the point of delivery. I do not want choice. Mr Cameron, I want a good local hospital. I want the treatment of patients, not a culture of targets. I want health care, not opportunities for profit, and I am emphatically not a customer, Mr Lansley. Finally, on a personal note, if it were not for the NHS, I would not be here to speak to you this afternoon.

The furore over the closure of public libraries has thrown up a cause célèbre in an unlikely place: Kensal Rise in Willesden, inner north-west London. The local council wishes to close this library. Among the prominent literary figures who have sprung to its defence are Philip Pullman and Alan Bennett. The library has an interesting history; the opening ceremony in 1900 was performed, improbably but appropriately, by Mark Twain. The land was owned by All Souls College and, indeed, the road outside is named College Road. My earliest years were spent in the house directly opposite and the library proved to be a formative influence. When I went up to Christ Church, one of my contemporaries was a Mr David Willetts. I remember him well as a very able, interesting, engaging man with a nice sense of humour. It mattered not at all that we were not of the same party political persuasion. We had long and stimulating talks, mainly on politics; he used to ask me what I thought the elements of a Conservative policy on a particular subject should be and we would have a lively, constructive and perfectly friendly discussion about it. I am sure we could do the same today; indeed, I am told the minister might well be prepared to discuss his policies with us and, indeed, may actively wish to do so.

My third and final point is that it would be an utter disgrace if higher education were to prove to be the only sector not to stand up for itself by defending the universities as a public good. It is hard not to conclude that the long game being played here aims to propel universities into the private sector on the American model. The announcement in last Sunday’s papers of the launch of the New College of the Humanities based in Bloomsbury—a for-
I am speaking today because, as will also be the case for most people here, I have sat through too many meetings at Oxford and elsewhere for which the general tenor has been: we don’t like this, we wish it wasn’t happening, but it’s going to happen and we should just make the best job of it that we can. Whether it has been the so-called benchmarking, QAA, RAE, tuition fees, the REf, or more recently ‘impact’, universities collectively have gone along with things they never should have and have contributed to a general decline it is in fact their duty to resist. To put it another way, too many of us have a bad conscience. It is proper that the government should have a role in deciding what its universities should be like, but the universities should not be a sub-function of the state and if the government starts pursuing ideas that are damaging to higher education, forcing it to comply with an ill-credited business model which has little relevance to education, then we should not kowtow and hope for the best. It is actually amazing how far things have gone already; the idea that the business way of doing things applies to all domains of life is now so widely accepted that we scarcely notice it. To adapt a line from a Wim Wenders film: the managers have colonised our unconscious. As you all know, one of the recommendations in the Browne report, implemented without hesitation in the Comprehensive Spending Review, was to withdraw almost all direct funding of teaching in universities and to replace it with a form of lottery. Instead of the block grant, reflecting the idea that education is a public good, there will be personal debt, implying that university education is only of benefit to the person receiving it. How much support subjects get will in the end be determined by how many students sign up for a given course. What this will mean is that the humanities will be left to fend for themselves. Not much argument has been offered for this, but it doesn’t need to be, because the thinking behind it—if it can be called that—is painfully clear: the humanities serve no purpose, by which is meant they are not productive, by which is meant they do not ‘produce economic growth’, to quote Browne. Now, in some cases, it can be shown that this is simply not true, but to seek to do that is to fall into complicity with the economic fundamentalism that characterises the Browne report. In the end, even if humanities can pay their way, that is not why they matter. Of course, there has been a financial crisis, but that is all the more reason to guard against being driven by purely monetary imperatives now. We need to remember what higher education is for, what we are here for, what a university is or should be. Not many of the policies issued from the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills seem to want to remember it. The Browne report has only one thing in mind: the conversion of our university system—still, despite problems, one of the best in the world—into a giant shopping mall. Browne and the spirit in which the coalition has adopted his findings are a stark reminder of what happens when a single principle is allowed to exclude all others. The arts and the humanities can help us think more variously about what a university is for, and that is part of their value. The humanities are usually based in the reading of texts and reading is an activity in which many possibilities co-exist and certainties tend to fall away. Though there can be wrong interpretations, there are never uniquely right ones; some refinement, some reversal, is always possible. In a class, all students are on an equal footing. They learn to think for themselves and to ask questions, to be critical and to use their imaginations. They learn to contradict and the teacher becomes a student too. It is a version of democracy; ideas are not made instrumental, tied to particular purposes, but are explored for their intrinsic interest, pursued in a spirit of curiosity and openness. This experience, in which meaning is created and undone and shared, is vital for understanding how we are what we are, and vital for helping us to realise that things don’t have to be how they seem to be. It goes without saying that this kind of open enquiry will be compromised when students are forced in effect to buy their degrees. It may seem idealistic to talk like this, but it is not; it is realistic, pragmatic. The humanities can help to remind us that enrichment doesn’t just mean getting richer, that empowerment is not just a question of earning power—and our survival as a civil society may depend on knowing this. A vote of no confidence will clearly assert that the current priorities in higher education are wrong and that other solutions are possible. We owe it to ourselves, to this and to many other institutions, to our present and future students, to take this opportunity and send a clear signal. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Laura Kirkley.

Dr Laura Kirkley, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, Queen’s College

‘Upon the education of the people of this country, the fate of this country depends.’ That was Benjamin Disraeli speaking in 1874. Nearly 140 years later, the University of Oxford can be proud that in October 2011 a broader spectrum of those people than ever before will matriculate in this theatre. State school pupils received 58.5 per cent of offers in admissions this year. Amongst those students, there will be those whose innate gifts and love for their discipline will develop exceptionally during their time at Oxford. They will work like Trojans, they will progress to postgraduate study and they will shape the research communities of the future. Or will they? I came to Oxford from a comprehensive school in the North East, the first in my family to attend university. For me, academia was an early and a powerful vocation, but I can testify that the cost of postgraduate study and the fierce competition for even low-paid academic jobs was almost too daunting to contemplate. If the proposed reforms go ahead, postgraduates could incur debts totalling £87,000. A career in academia is neither long enough nor lucrative enough to make that a sensible investment. Any but the most affluent will be forced overseas or out of the profession, but brilliant minds hail from all sectors of society. If we want to nurture world-class research communities, we must be able to select postgraduates on the quality of their intellects and not the content of their bank accounts. We cannot ask less affluent students to saddle themselves with more debt than salaried peers will ever have to repay, or to accept financial insecurity as a long-term fact of life. So, instead, we will draw the tutors and lecturers of the future from a small pool of affluent individuals and risk forming substandard teaching faculties as a result. Even the wealthiest won’t then be willing to pay substantial fees for such a second-rate education. We all know that many postgraduates are not future academics, but driven instead by strategic or vocational goals. Certain university departments rely heavily on postgraduates for funding and for many the appeal of high fees lies in the beguiling vision of a newly moneyed higher education sector, paid for by droves of students jostling for position in a competitive market. In fact, many students will simply be unable or unwilling to pay. Naturally, new graduates are already looking to more financially supportive systems of postgraduate study outside the UK. Even mature students with relative financial security are bound to think twice because in general they also have more financial commitments: mortgages, children. A sudden increase in fees and their numbers will plummet. If the proposed reforms go ahead without challenge or protest from us, we will bring to market debased and devalued universities. The result will be whole sections of our population disenfranchised and frustrated, priced out of personal development, and a lost generation of thinkers, researchers and teachers. There can be no financial compensation for that. I ask you to vote for the resolution.

There have been many excellent points made about the damage that would be done to the humanities and social sciences by government measures. As a biologist and a lecturer and tutor in medicine, I would like to explain why I believe these policies will be an equal disaster for the sciences, including the biomedical sciences and medicine that I teach. The government claims it supports the sciences, yet its actions say otherwise. Science depends on new talent, yet increased fees—and surely £9,000 a year is just the beginning—threaten to choke such talent before it has a chance to develop and we should remember that talent can be found in the most unexpected places. At the age of fourteen I decided I wanted to become a biochemist, but I was unfortunate enough to go to a school where one of the most popular extra-curricular pursuits was shoplifting. Any apparent interest in learning would see you labelled a swot by your peers, and even the teachers tried to sabotage my ambition to read Natural Sciences at Cambridge because it did not fit into their narrow vision of what someone of my background should aspire to. I did however realise my dream of getting to Cambridge because of a sympathetic admissions tutor and a government grant that paid my fees and living expenses at university. I could point to more illustrious examples in which people from a humble background have gone on to become the greatest scientists in their fields. I recently heard from our own Professor Peter Somogyi, an FRS and a world leader in the study of the brain, about his background in a poor, manual-working-class family. I could mention Sydney Brenner, Nobel-Prize-winning biologist and co-discoverer of the genetic code who did a DPhil in Oxford, but who as a child famously taught himself to read from the newspaper used as his family’s tablecloth because they were too poor to afford a proper one and certainly too poor to afford books. Despite their backgrounds, both of these individuals were able to realise their immense potential thanks to government support for their university education, and we as a society have benefited as a consequence. Now, I know that Oxford is developing generous bursaries for students from poorer backgrounds and of course such measures will help to offset some of the damage caused by government policies, but Peter Somogyi agrees with me that the students most in need of such bursaries are those least likely to be aware of them. After all, if my teachers would not even support my application to Cambridge, why would they tell me about such bursaries, even supposing they knew about them? Unfortunately, it is schools such as the one I went to that our outreach schemes still barely reach, yet I fear the government policies will make things far worse in this respect.

If it is going to become increasingly daunting for students from poorer backgrounds and under-performing schools to apply to a top university to read science, how much more so for medicine, the subject I teach, with its extended career track? I received an email yesterday from William Seligman, one of our third-year medics, about the threat the government’s policies pose for access to his subject. Being the Student Finance Officer for the BMA Medical Students’ Committee, William ought to know what he is talking about. He believes that if the government does not reverse its policies, medicine will become even more under-representative of society than it already is. UCAS data shows that twenty-nine per cent of students on all courses come from the lowest socio-economic groups, and in medicine this figure is only thirteen per cent. William is particularly concerned about the future of the graduate entry route. Students on this course are unable to access tuition fee loans to cover their first year of study and so, under the new regulations, these students would have to find £9,000 up front. In addition, students eligible for the NHS bursary that currently covers years five and six of the normal undergraduate course and years two to four of graduate entry may soon have to pay a large portion of these fees themselves.

Graduate study in the sciences is also threatened as funds for DPhils become increasingly difficult to find, not to speak of the cuts in our research grants that fund our postdocs, and even though science funding has been ring-fenced, freezing a grant is a cut in real terms. Yet the squandering of our scientific base, this base that could lead to the next wonder drug or a revolutionary advance in surgery, is being carried out to feed the voracious appetites of the bankers who, having recently brought the world economy to the brink of collapse, far from bringing prosperity and stability to the majority of the population, merely seem to be using the money to plan new speculative ventures, threatening to bring misery through falling incomes and world food shortages, while meanwhile the gap between the super rich and the rest of us grows wider each year. Opposition to attacks of this scale may seem daunting, yet I am proud as a tutor in medicine that vigorous opposition to government health policies by doctors has forced a halt, at least for the time being, to some of the more extreme plans of the government. The doctors saw that, despite the rhetoric, government plans threaten the very future of free quality healthcare for everyone. We ought similarly to be aware of the mortal danger government policies pose to teaching and research in our universities, not just in the humanities but also in the sciences. I hope for that reason you will join me in voting for the resolution, so as to send a strong message not just to the government, but to those in the Labour Party who are in many ways the joint architects of these policies, that enough is enough, and we are not willing to see our country’s future squandered for the interests of super-rich individuals increasingly out of touch with the needs of humanity.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Alexandra da Costa.

Dr Alexandra da Costa, Faculty of English, St Hilda’s College

As an early career academic, I would like to address the impact the minister’s proposals will have on access to academia as a profession and why this should undermine our confidence in him. The government insists that the language of business should be used and applied to higher education. I dispute this, but taking the government on its own terms really represents the incoherence of its policies. The minister’s Department for Business, Innovation and Skills declares that the membership of professions needs to reflect the diversity of modern society and the customers that need to access their services. In response, the Gateways to the Professions initiative was set up ‘to tackle the full range of issues and barriers faced by talented students from low income families seeking to enter the professions through higher education’. I applaud this aim but, despite this, the government seems blind to the fact that they are effectively barring those same talented students from joining the academic profession. Even if, as the government claims, a higher burden of debt will not put students off undergraduate study, the additional burden of postgraduate study must surely be a deterrent. Under the minister’s proposals, aspiring academic professionals could receive their doctorate burdened by more than £40,000 of debt, taking into account only the fees of undergraduate and postgraduate courses. As the Chancellor acknowledged in his letter to the University on 15 March, ‘If many of the potential postgraduates of the future will be carrying substantially increased loans from their years of undergraduate study, then the decision to continue their studies at a graduate level may become more difficult.’ The Sutton Trust has observed in a report already that ‘students from professional families and students who previously attended independent schools are overrepresented at postgraduate level... thirty per cent of postgraduates are from professional families, compared with... thirteen per cent of the population as a whole.’ The Trust goes on to argue that ‘a lack of financial support at the time of postgraduate entry may be starting to deter those from poorer backgrounds from further study.’ This problem will only be increased when the effect of the minister’s proposal hits students from lower-income backgrounds a second time when they begin their job search. A cursory survey of academic jobs currently being advertised suggests that postgraduates might recoup the cost of their education if they secure a lectureship or permanent post. However, aspiring lecturers must undertake at least a year of uncertain temporary work for significantly less remuneration, whether it be filling gaps in lecture provision or covering for those on maternity leave or sabbatical. That is the reality of the current academic job market. One Oxford college is currently advertising an eight-hour stipendiary lectureship with a stipend of £16,000. Another is advertising a three-hour stipendiary lectureship with a stipend of just £7,000. Doctoral students wishing to become lecturers must invest heavily in what amounts to unpaid or poorly paid work experience, as colleges attempt to provide teaching where there is no budget available for a full-time post or full-time cover. The Chancellor admitted in March that the sharp challenge of sustainability in undergraduate teaching has already caused distortions in the complex life of our academy. Coping strategies based on internal cross-subsidies carry negative effects, for instance in our support of postgraduates. This will only worsen, especially in the humanities, as cuts in the government funding take effect. This state of affairs already favours those who have substantial savings or support from their families, husbands or wives. But when the cost of embarking on an academic career increases, many more without such resources will give up prematurely. The narrowing of backgrounds, views and experiences of lecturers and academic professionals will impoverish higher education immensely. In summary, I believe that the government needs to take a wider view of higher education, one that encompasses not only the needs of those taking undergraduate degrees. It also needs to prevent academia from becoming a profession open only to those with professional or wealthy backgrounds, with the existing financial means to bear heavy debt and years of financial instability. The failure to suitably manage this issue will see higher education becoming education by the wealthy for the wealthy. The minister’s reluctance to address this problem before it worsens must bring the competence of his policies into question. For this reason, I will be supporting the motion and beg that you do the same.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Abdel Razzaq Takriti.

Dr Abdel Razzaq Takriti, Department of Politics and International Relations, St Edmund Hall

I am a JRF and a recent DPhil graduate. Speaking to other colleagues in the same position, it became clear that each one of us is asking the same two questions. What does dwindling public support for research mean for us? What does that, in turn, mean for the future of the University in particular, and British universities in general? The answers to these questions are far from positive. The spectre of university closures, departmental cutbacks, externally imposed research agendas and starved funding bodies is a bleak one. Far from being a stark dystopia invented in our minds, this is a genuine threat that is looming over every young scholar, endangering the very basis of our raison d’être: the enterprise of free enquiry and learning. In this distinguished forum, we have a rare opportunity to express our concern at this encroaching scenario and to draw fast our red lines on the purposes of higher education. The ill-articulated and incoherent policy that is currently being advanced by government will have clear negative effects. Reduced funding will lead to fewer positions being available nationwide. This means that a generation of Oxford doctoral graduates is threatened with unemployment. After all, Oxford is an educator of educators, providing advanced training for scholars who staff departments across the country and the world. Even if Oxford manages to maintain the same amount of positions it has at present—which, in light of the current policies, is doubtful at best—its graduates will lose out on the prospect of employment elsewhere in the country. The brain drain that this country has suffered from for so long will not only persist, but will increase rapidly, with Oxonians and others forced to scramble for jobs abroad.
In this atmosphere, fewer of the brightest students will choose to continue graduate study, having to worry about higher fees and fewer employment opportunities.

And what about our image abroad? This image is already damaged by the fact that our graduate programmes are starved of adequate governmental funding. Our main weakness is not displayed at the undergraduate level, but at the graduate one. The majority of the world’s brightest students already choose to continue their studies at institutions that not only provide free tuition, but living allowances as well. So far, Oxford’s household name has carried it through this reality, but will it be enough to allow us to survive another round of funding cuts? Can Oxford’s reputation survive in light of suggested policies hinted at by the current government concerning the selling of places? The news headlines of the past month have already harmed Oxford’s image abroad, but far more damaging would be if these positions were turned into reality. What will come next? Will we be forced to open more short-term programmes, with lower admission standards and far higher fees? The government will surely be responsible for putting us in such a position, unfairly cornering Oxford, along with the entire British higher education establishment, for that matter. Coming here today, I thought of how the journey of every Oxford student begins and ends beneath this lofty ceiling; of how the life of every Oxford scholar, young or old, is shaped by the decisions taken here in the spirit of democratic deliberation and mutual respect. Binding generations of us together is a silent but absolute contract, a shared moral universe whose ultimate secret is revealed in the drawing above us. Each one of these thirty-two panels is carefully painted and scrupulously assembled to produce in their collectivity an illustration of ‘truth descending upon the arts and sciences to expel ignorance from the University’. Remembering this bond, I urge all of you to stand with those of us who are just beginning their academic journey and to strongly support this motion today.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor Margaret MacMillan.

Professor Margaret MacMillan, Warden of St Antony’s College, Faculty of History

Pretty much everything I want to say has already been said but that, of course, never stops an academic. I wondered whether I would speak today, because the last thing I want to do is damage this University and cause any more problems for those in charge of the University as they try and carry out the very difficult negotiations with the government, as they have been doing for the past year since the last election. But I thought it was important to speak. I think it is important that we express the deep concern that is running through this University and is running through the higher education system in the United Kingdom. I think it is important for the government to know that we do not have confidence in the policies it has been following. I would like to leave aside the minister himself because I think he is probably in an impossible position; it should not be personalised, but I think the government policies themselves give a picture of—a word which has been used much today—incoherence. They seem to me to be making policies on the fly, they will try something and when that doesn’t seem to work, they will try something else.

There was a report, a very full and thorough report, commissioned from Lord Browne and the government took that report and cherry-picked pieces out of it, took the things it wanted, changed it and paid no attention, I think, to the report as a whole. There is meant to be a white paper this seems to me a very strange way of making policy. Normally, you have a white paper, as I understand it, and then you make your policy. When the white paper is finally produced, most of the policies will have been made and I suppose that it will be written in the conditional, or perhaps in the past imperfect. The results of this policy have not been to help students. If—and it is a big if—if the government had decided to take the cap off fees totally, then I think we could have done something to have a needs-blind admission. As it is, we give a sort of package which is going to be difficult—and I find it impossible—to understand, with the best will in the world. I think it is going to be incoherent and impossible for students and their parents to try and make their way through it, and it will not be needs blind. Even students from the poorest families will still end up with debt. The results of this, I think, are that the universities have found it extremely difficult to make policy; we don’t know where the government will go next, we don’t know what conditions the government will impose next. When it turned out that a great many universities were going for the higher level of fees, the government suddenly decided it had to limit admissions because they were going to end up with a debt which they had not expected. It is impossible to make plans in such an atmosphere, to do coherent planning.

What we have ended up with, I fear, is a situation in which we have less government money and more government control and that seems to me a very bad combination. I worry also about the message that the government is sending out. It is sending out a message that it does not like the way British universities have been running so far, it does not like the nature of British universities so far. By cutting almost totally the funding for teaching for humanities and the social sciences, and by cutting back really drastically on research for humanities and social sciences, but by ring-fencing what it has deemed to be the more useful subjects, it is sending the message that what we have been doing to date is pretty much the wrong thing: we have been wasting our time and wasting our energies on subjects that are not useful. I think we are also sending an international message. British universities, I think, are enormously important—and I speak as a Canadian from North America—in providing alternative models of education to what has been a very powerful North American one. I think there are many strengths to that North American one, but that is not the only model for education in the world. I think what Oxford has offered is a very different perspective on the world, a different way of doing things; I think it’s offered different things to students, it has certainly offered different things to people who come and teach here, it is a very different sort of institution. I fear that the message the government is sending out is: we don’t like this sort of institution, we don’t think it’s worth saving, it may represent a huge investment on the part of the British people over the centuries, but that investment we no longer think is worth protecting.’ The final thing I fear—I have many things I fear apart from going over my time—the final thing I fear is that we will be tempted, all of us, to bring in more and more high-paying foreign students. I think that is a danger. I don’t think we want to end up as finishing schools for the rich from around the world. We want the best students; we don’t want the ones who are the most affluent. So I will be supporting this motion.
Mr David Barclay, President, Oxford University Student Union, Worcester College

Last Friday, I met with a man who has had a huge impact on my time here in Oxford, the Provost of Worcester. We were talking about the government's plans for higher education and after making a point he said: 'David, if you had studied with me, we would have read together a book that would have shown you exactly what I mean.' I speak for every Oxford student today when I say that there is nothing that compares to the simple but mind-blowing privilege of hearing a great mind tell you that they want to read a book together with you. That is the heart of the tutorial system and it is what changes our lives here as students. Some people find it difficult to understand why students are so angry at a system which, as David Willetts has said, is designed to unleash the force of consumerism, to let universities be shaped by our choices, to put power in our hands. Part of the reason is that sometimes power corrupts and we want no part in the corruption of the syllabus at this or any other university. Under the government's plans, the choices of seventeen-year-old school leavers, with poor information and many different and varying perceptions of financial pressures, will inevitably push some subjects to the brink of extinction and so narrow the scope for genuine intellectual enquiry for generations to come. If we were to bow to student choice and the government's targets on access, we would slash Classics and improve and increase other subjects, but this would be a move that students from every discipline would be horrified by. In my hometown of Glasgow, a great university has already started cutting courses in eastern European languages; a liberal economy endangers liberal arts and, frankly, we never asked for that kind of power.

But the real reason why we fear the market in our University is hidden in the Provost's great phrase about reading together. The market which this government is so desperately trying to create has absolutely nothing to say about students and tutors discovering and rediscovering the world around them in partnership. A consumer-producer relationship cannot and will not enhance the power of what we do here in Oxford, it can only diminish it. The fundamental lack of confidence from the student body stems from this gut sense that the core of the government's plan is rotten and would turn our successors into the Orwellian definition of cynics, who know the price of everything and the value of nothing. Many people get very angry about the government's intellectual and practical contradictions, and rightly so, but it is the people that I speak for who will feel the real cost of the political confusion, the mixed messages and the U-turns. I speak for a generation of humanities students who will never have access to the new facilities they so desperately need because the Capital Fund has dried up, the public support for new buildings has been slashed and all of our fundraising is focused on bursaries and fee waivers. I speak for a generation of brilliant minds who will never become graduate students or academics because the mountain of debt needed to get through undergraduate life creates an unbearable pressure to start paying it off straight away. I speak for a generation of talented but disadvantaged students who will never even come to Oxford because they will be deterred by the unprecedented trebling of fees and by the parents for whom £27,000 is more than their family brings in a year. I speak for all these people and today I need you to speak for them too, because today you have a chance to pass judgment publicly on the damage that is being done to higher education in our country—the chance to say that the language of the market has no place in universities, that proposals of back-door entry for the rich and last-minute bargains for the poor are simply not good enough, that it is not acceptable for a Prime Minister to force us to raise our fees and then slam us with dodgy statistics about our inability to attract the most debt-averse sections of society. But you also have the chance to start building something better—to speak of what higher education really means to the academics and students going through it every day, of how proper public funding should reflect the benefits to the whole of society of Oxford's historic mission, of why we as a sector deserve a minister who speaks the language of intellectual community and challenges us to achieve our highest aspirations. The Provost of Worcester is leaving at the end of this term and so am I, but the experience of a Flourishing Oxford University will stay with us wherever we go. Today, and in the coming weeks and months, we need you to take this chance and make sure that the next generation can say the same. Thank you.

Professor David Norbrook, Faculty of English, Merton College

As you have already been reminded, a few days ago in this building the former Poet Laureate defended this country's rich culture of the humanities and warned that current plans for higher education will endanger it. A very different poet, J.H. Prynne, is making a similar point in Cambridge. Poetry does not seem to belong in the discussion of the arcana of university research funding but it is a central example of the kind of independence of thought that is being eroded in the current trends in educational management. Impact, output, pathway, framework: the sad anti-poetry of academics semi-mutating into CEOs, the language we have been learning to speak over the last few years, a business school language of targets and ticked boxes, a language we all know does not honestly represent what we do and what we believe in, but which we speak because it is the price of funding. This is a process that long predates the present government; heightened top-down pressure on critical and independent thought in the universities, as research is viewed in instrumental terms and placed under a business department. We are exhorted to be world class yet our higher education policies arouse derisive incredulity for their philistinism from leading academics abroad. There has been a steady erosion of the Haldane principle of keeping academic research at a distance from government. We have had increased pressure to study strategic areas of research, now pressure to prove social and economic benefits beyond academia. As Gordon Finlayson has put it, 'Incentivising academics to do high-impact research is like Arsène Wenger's instructing his players to go out and deliver increased revenue to shareholders. The economic success of the club depends on footballers focusing on playing well on the pitch, not on making money off it.' One might add to the analogy that the opposing team, let us say Ivy League United, does not have this handicap; our team is expected to compete on unequal terms. This language of 'impact', evoking an asteroid calamitously colliding with an alien planet, brutally reduces the very complex ways in which academic work interacts with the public, above all through teaching, but also through a range of publicly funded institutions from the BBC to public libraries. The impact agenda enforces a notion of academic research in its own right as somehow outside society, lacking intrinsic benefit. Now, for a time it seemed Mr Willetts might actually call a halt to these increasing turns of the bureaucratic screw. He made noises about abandoning impact, but he has now made a U-turn. The paranoid explanation is that he believes the more intolerable demands he places on academics, the more likely they will be to demand privatisation, and recent headlines may support that view. But on current trends, privatisation could mean an increase in some of the most intrusive forms of control and there is after all an underlying consistency with other aspects of government policy—that the model of education is a product to be delivered to a customer. The customer wants whatever will gratify current needs, which are not themselves subject to any judgments of value, and is not interested in difficulty or dialogue.

But there is a different model of the university’s relationships with society, one of citizenship. We may be elitist in the sense of defending difficult ideas or even obscure poetry against the faux populism of the customer model, but we can help to generate processes of debate, critical thinking and intellectual honesty that can be taken up anywhere. On that model, that vast gulf between universities and social benefit starts to disappear. It is precisely because we accept an obligation to give of our best for the public that we should support this motion. But more and more our governments and research councils seem to be training up clients who will trim their ideas to whatever the customer seems to want at a given moment, as witness the recent debacles over the AHRC and Big Society, or the LSC and Libya. We have seen over the last few years the difficulties that arise when governments commission reports and academics obstinately refuse to come up with the results the customer wants and sometimes even provoke outrage by questioning whether what the customer wants is right.

The customer that is being invoked is really a ventriloquist’s dummy speaking the government’s agenda. The Secretary of State offers a new funding system as giving students what they want, but his proposals unleashed the largest wave of civil unrest this country has seen for many years. Students clearly indicated they want to be citizens, not consumers. As for the customers of academic research, if you compare the universities with the banks, can we really say it is the former the customers are angry with? Is David Willetts really doorstepped by furious taxpayers complaining that Oxford scientists’ papers on quantum mechanics make a dull read, to the extent that would justify the huge amount of bureaucracy and time wasting the impact agenda would create? But better attack them than question so recently after the banking crisis that we should refund our higher education system on debts. This vote today is about government policy, but it is also about ourselves, making our own voice heard without the customary evasions. I ask you to support this motion, not least because you can.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Mr Bernard Sufrin.

Mr Bernard Sufrin, Emeritus Fellow, Worcester College

A spectre is stalkling our university system. It is the spectre of the private for-profit university and the policy of the minister is to encourage it to hunt here. But contrary to his claims, this policy will not strengthen our nation’s higher education system or increase its real efficiency or make universities into the engine of social mobility. It risks providing an obstacle to them all. Last July the minister granted university status to BPP University College, a well-established for-profit, now owned by the largest educational corporation in the world. In recent times this corporation and its peers have extended their powerful lobbying operation from the US to our own shores. Their flagship establishment has been the University of Phoenix. With half a million students, it is the largest university in America. Many of its siblings are guided by the idea that the internet provides the ideal way to deliver course material cheaply. Automation reduces expensive contact time and cuts real-estate costs dramatically. Instructors have little or nothing by way of academic freedom or employment rights. Money saved in this way is spent on marketing. But in 2004 the US Department of Education reported that Phoenix had a high-pressure sales culture which encouraged the enrolment of underqualified students and made exaggerated claims for the quality of its courses. Its six-year finishing rate is nine per cent and those who do finish end up with debts three or four times those of graduates from public universities and twice those of graduates from non-profit privates. The value of their purchase? Why not use Google, then judge for yourself. There are broadcast tales of graduates being handed nursing diplomas without having set foot in a hospital. In explaining the need to regulate this sector, the US National Economic Council recently described its business model as embodying many of the same characteristics as the subprime housing market. Institutions capture the upside of increased volume while shifting the downside risk elsewhere. In this case, the elsewhere is students and taxpayers. Closer to home, we have the New College of the Humanities, a private institution launched on Sunday and intending to charge fees of £18,000 a year. Its professoriate are described as ‘investors’. My twenty-year-old son called it ‘Dotheschaps Hall’.

What a gulf there is between the squalid shenanigans we have just glimpsed and the ethos behind the widespread acceptance that public universities are a public good. But we should consider the impact that even good for-profits will have on the public universities. By creaming off the courses that make financial surpluses, they will undermine the viability of the courses that depend on cross-subsidy. No one can predict just how extensive the destruction will be. But to the market fundamentalist, there can be only one repair. Adam Smith would be gobsmacked if he were watching and, I think, so would Haldane. Yesterday Philip Pullman wrote a piece in the London Review of Books that for me sums up what is at risk here. He said: ‘The first time I set eyes on Oxford was on a day in December 1964, when I came up for interview. It was one of those bright clear days we sometimes get in winter, and it drew the honey colour out of the stone buildings and set it against a brilliant blue sky, and I fell in love with the place. What had made me think I could come here? I was the first member of my family to go to university; I was the first pupil from my school, a local comprehensive in north Wales, to go to Oxford. Simple: I thought I could come because tuition was free, and because Merionethshire County Council gave me a grant for my living expenses. The extraordinary benevolence of those facts now looks like something from a golden age. I am absolutely certain that if things were then as they are now, I would never have done more than dream about coming to Oxford, and the course of my life would have been utterly different.’

Colleagues, our very mission is to help change the course of people’s lives. It has been damaged by the policies that have been imposed in the last year and is further endangered by the policies that have been trailed by the minister in recent weeks. We have to send a clear message to government that we want them to think again and there is only one way to send it. Please vote for the resolution.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Jake Wadham.

I would like briefly to address the central feature of the argument made in favour of the new fees and funding proposals. This is the now repeatedly stated correlation between the possession of a university degree and enhanced earning power. While its underlying assumptions tend to go ignored, the correlation has become rhetorically very powerful, enforcing a perceived opposition between the ‘haves’, those with both the fortune to be in higher education and the prospect of apparently higher salaries, and the ‘have nothes’. It induces the subsequent question of why the latter should have to pay for the former, with the conclusion that they shouldn’t. Whether or not the correlation is accepted or relevant, this divide—essentially between students and the rest of society—is in itself curious and not least because it only really comes into effect by cutting out the graduate taxpayer from the economic picture devised. Here the relationship declared between degree and earnings will of course have to show that as graduates begin to earn good salaries, so their fiscal contributions to the public purse increase. The scale of the total graduate contribution would then form an entirely coherent argument for continued state funding of universities. This logic is no longer followed. Instead, as the social, economic and cultural benefits of education are systematically downgraded, so the focus turns to individual university applicants, encouraged into hyped-up expectations of later employment reward. There is still here a future in studying but it is a private matter.

This shift of thinking then is fundamentally political. It serves to weaken public confidence in the value of higher education as a common good, to justify the withdrawal of government grants and to facilitate the transfer of ultimate financial responsibility for higher learning to the learners. It also means that the issue here is not simply one of fairness, any more than it is simply one of fees. By asking students to think of themselves as private consumers, a set of potent monetary incentives and deterrents are activated which in reality make it increasingly difficult for a university degree to be selected on principally academic grounds. The distortions introduced here into the sector leave universities having to second-guess consumer demand, while at the same time firefighting to save those subjects ill favoured by the market conditions of the moment. Correspondingly, they are tasked with having to maintain existing academic standards and at the same time levels of customer satisfaction set by the promises of individual success. The effects already generated by these proposals have been eye-opening, yet the manner in which ministerial policies have unravelled in recent weeks, as institutions sought to protect themselves from the impact of the reforms, has been entirely foreseeable. Lord Browne himself in his submissions to Commons Business, Innovations and Skills Select Committee on 22 March made clear that universities were bound to rise en masse to the £9,000 ceiling and that this naturally followed on from the rejection of his recommendations not to put any cap on fees. Here though, the government has done no more than to betray its own lack of faith in the marketising initiatives that it is seeking with increasing desperation to implement. Against this backdrop, and as a picture now starts to build of what is to come, it is surely time to call for a halt to haste and to communicate the profound and urgent need to reopen the public debate on future funding provision for higher education. Voting for the motion would be a significant move in this direction.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Stuart White.

Dr Stuart White, Department of Politics and International Relations, Jesus College

According to Tom Paine, there is one very special right that each of us has: the right, as he put it, to ‘begin the world’. The world should be there for young people to launch into, not a weight that they carry on their shoulders. In considering tuition fees, we need to keep this right in mind and we need to add some social context. Between 1997 and 2007, house prices almost trebled, so young adults today have to take out pretty big mortgages to buy a house. They have to save more to get a mortgage, and they have to save more while paying high rents. Increasingly, they start their careers in unpaid internships. They have to work to earn the privilege of a proper job, to earn the money they need to save to be able to owe a large mortgage. This is the context in which the government proposes to significantly increase tuition fees. What is at stake is access to university, and equality of opportunity in its wider sense: the ability of all young people to face their future with confidence and imagination, the right to begin the world. Some people, with family help, will cope but many, from middle- as well as low-income backgrounds, will struggle. Higher tuition fees will deepen their predicament, damaging ambitions such as ambition for graduate study, achievement and social mobility. And we are not necessarily even at the end of this road; the present policy has subsidy elements to offset the full cost of fees, such as writing loans off after thirty years. But we can’t assume that these subsidies will remain. First, they cost the government money it might in future wish to save. But also the subsidy element seems to me at odds with marketisation, the essence of the new regime. The logic of marketisation is this: if the consumer faces the full cost of what she buys, then she will ask if the benefits really outweigh the costs. This is supposed to promote efficiency. But if the consumer does not face the full cost, the whole calculation is distorted. So will we see pressure in future to whittle away at the distorting subsidy element in the present policy, higher fees still, pressure to put loans on a more commercial basis? If so, even greater risks to equal opportunity are in store. Whether this happens depends in part on us. In voting for the resolution today, we do not just express opposition to a policy which carries unacceptable risks to equal opportunity. As our example is taken up by colleagues elsewhere, we start to create a new climate for policy-making in higher education. We help make it that bit more likely that future changes improve rather than threaten equal opportunity. Let us start the work of creating this new climate of policy-making in higher education. Let us reaffirm the right to ‘begin the world’.

Dr Conrad Leyser.

Dr Conrad Leyser, Faculty of History, Worcester College

‘Lest the poor, who have no family wealth to help them, be deprived of the opportunity of studying and making progress, a benefice of suitable size in each cathedral church is to be assigned to be a master, so that he can teach the poor for nothing. The teacher will thus be protected from want and the road to learning lie open to his pupils.’ So the decree of the third Lateran council in 1179, a congregation of some 200 bishops from all over Latin Christendom. One could regard this as a very precocious submission to OFFA, or as a mature response to a question under debate since the fifth century BC: what price learning? Can wisdom be exchanged for money like other commodities—or is it beyond price? It is indeed, argued Plato. His master Socrates received no money for his teaching; this was the key thing that distinguished him from the Sophists, the teachers of philosophy, who in Plato’s view, were no better than verbal tricksters driven by avarice. Socrates’ love of wisdom was not for profit. There were others, however, who disagreed with Plato. From the ninth century, we have a report of two Irish scholars who appeared at the court of the Emperor Charlemagne, highly learned men offering to sell their knowledge. The Emperor decided to extend to them his patronage; he found that while the sons of the nobility squandered the opportunity, the children of the poor were brilliant pupils of these teachers on the imperial payroll. Charlemagne’s findings were taken up by the high medieval Church. The decree of the third Lateran council squared the circle about the price of wisdom and institutionalised a link—no doubt not disinterested—between education and social justice. Teachers would be paid, but not by their pupils, and the poor would pay nothing. On this basis, cathedral schools and universities, including this one, were established by patrons across Latin Europe. This is the charter which current government policy would rewrite. The cut to the teaching of humanities and social sciences combined with the explicit expectation that new private providers will come onto the higher education market, subverts the basis on which wisdom has been exchanged for centuries, if not millennia. As these providers start indeed to appear and the mechanics of franchising out the right to grant degrees are thought out, or not thought out, the very rationale for universities is undermined by the minister responsible for them.

Is the resolution too personal? What we do is personal. We have insisted that it be so. When we give out degrees in this building, the students process forward and we ask them in Latin whether they agree to abide by the statutes of this University. They answer ‘Do fidelis!’ I give my word, I pledge my troth, my allegiance. Mr Vice-Chancellor, you explain very clearly to all present why we should continue to conduct this ceremony in Latin: it sends a public signal about the active participation of students and teachers in the community of learning in this place extending back eight centuries. This is a social memory worth jealously guarding, not least because of the clarity with which medieval educators formulated the social ethics of learning. So now the question of allegiance is on us. Do we have con-fid-ence in the policies of the minister responsible for higher education, a graduate of this University? There is only one answer we can honourably and accurately give. Do fidelis? No, no fides. I ask you to vote for the resolution.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Sharon Achinstein.

Dr Sharon Achinstein, Faculty of English, St Edmund Hall

Today I am going to speak about the concept of student choice that underlies so many of the policies advocated by this government. I am against it. Who could be against student choice? For goodness sake, I am an American: choice is right up there with motherhood and apple pie. But in this case, I think that this student choice is a way to sell a fundamental removal of choice. It’s a customer choice. I have no confidence in the logic of customer choice in the University for three reasons. First, and most obviously, the emphasis on customer choice is not a strong enough defence of value across the University. It is a sleight of hand that allows this government to feel absolved from cutting funding from subjects which are seen as not vital to the national economic interest. The minister has sought to reassure us that because students will continue to choose popular subjects, such as humanities and social sciences, these subjects will stay healthy. I am not reassured. Second, customer choice is harmful to equality. School choice, implemented in the USA in primary and secondary education, has in fact been shown to increase social inequality. Inequality emerges because there is the problem of the quality of information available to students in making their choices, as well as the nefarious influence of advertising by producers in educational markets. Our own experience in the UK has shown that a focus on indicators on which school choices are based, such as league tables, introduces a financial incentive to teach to the test. Will universities across Britain likewise have to compromise academic integrity to improve the metrics of the so-called student experience? Finally, this student choice model lays an emphasis upon the National Student Survey. The NSS threatens to turn academic institutions into a popularity contest. I believe that this customer satisfaction survey should not be allowed to determine the funding and content of the University.

Let us compare to the US. When I was an undergraduate at Harvard, the rumour was that any faculty member who scored well on student feedback—course evaluations—would certainly be turned down for tenure. But tenure bodies understood that popularity ratings were not the same thing as academic value. Indeed, research has shown that course evaluations tend to favour flashy, cosmetic factors and that the overall incentive created by course evaluations will be for the professor to avoid controversy. There has also been shown a big gender issue in course evaluations—to the detriment of women faculty. I recall course evaluations from my early days as an assistant professor at a US research university. One commented on my fashion sense—praise, of course! But another thought I was ‘not feminist enough’. These comments were at times helpful. I had to think: why would someone draw that conclusion? But I am glad that my department could put student evaluations in perspective and did not give them undue weight in my tenure case. Indeed, student feedback can be a good thing and the Oxford Student Union has been promoting academic feedback sessions in colleges, where students are treated as valued members of the intellectual community. I recognise that this informed kind of student feedback is not simply a customer’s right to a specified experience but instead a responsibility. In the US too, student choice is not unfettered choice. Most liberal arts courses in the US universities have a system of distribution requirements, whereby students must take a specified number of courses not of their own choosing. Academics decide what students ought to learn. Student choice, in conclusion, is a slogan which may sound good but is harmful to academic freedom, responsibility and equality, the principles upon which the very notion of choice depends. Our University must retain its freedom to set the values by which we educate our students. I ask you to vote for the resolution.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor Patrick McGuinness.

Professor Patrick McGuinness, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, St Anne's College

This resolution is not a personal one, certainly; it is not even a political one. It is a trans-political one for reasons I will explain in a minute. What it certainly is, is a sign of the healthy debate that we have, that too few other universities have, that allow those of us who teach and learn and research here to express unhappiness with the politicians who seem bent on destroying higher education in such a clumsy and visionless way. It is also, I have to say, a much more edifying debate than the kind of tribalist kindergarten we commonly see that passes for debate in the House of Commons, so I would not be worried about bruising anybody. This is an orderly, civilised discussion, it is passionate and it is humbling and enlightening to hear it. I said it was trans-political and the reason for that is that actually this government might be a coalition government of Liberal Democrats and Conservatives, but no government in the last twenty or thirty years has really been a friend to British higher education and the reason for that is that our sector has been a pushover. We have sold the past a long time ago, and that is depressing enough, but today at least there is one good thing that could come of this. It is precisely by expressing our lack of confidence in this current government—this government that is wobbly, it is directionless, it is divided and it is complicit in our own erosion because we have heard about the threat to humanities, the corrosion of the lecturer-student relationship and the toxic imposition of false models which we have also heard don't even seem to work where they are actually used. These are not ideological or political issues to do with Left or Right, realists versus pragmatists, humanities subjects versus science subjects. It is really just about us, as an institution, as a profession, wanting our politicians to think seriously and hard and consistently about the policies that they are going to implement. We have heard the threat to humanities, the well-off and bargain-basement places during clearing, giving the impression that the unfolding policies are becoming incoherent—yes, that word again—and self-defeating in their aims. David Cameron's coalition government has demonstrated a welcome return to debate and some degree of collective cabinet responsibility and shown a willingness to listen and, indeed, an ability to change their position on various matters as a result of constructive dialogue. I regret that the motion before us today may appear to some to represent an overpersonalisation of the important issues that concern us this afternoon.

However, I think that it would be unfair not to mention the minister's recent but, of late, little-mentioned record on science funding, as he is Minister for Universities and Science, as we were reminded earlier. This is of particular concern to me as a scientist and head of one of this University's science departments. You may remember last autumn that it was feared that there would be swingeing cuts to the UK's science budget. This was not, however, the case. The minister, after earlier. his portfolio and intellectually confident enough to engage with the experts. His clear delight is knowledge for its own sake, and it is also infectious. Any tutor, even at Christ Church, would be impressed by such a report on their own student. I hope that the minister will take stock of the constructive concerns that are being currently aired, including those by Congregation today, and that he engages again with experts and presents us with another virtuoso performance in the days to come.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Dr Kate Tunstall.

Dr Kate Tunstall, Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, Worcester College

This is just about the busiest time of our year. To come to the Sheldonian today, we have all had to move the things we were supposed to be doing. We had to decide not to do the things that we came to university for, be that as students, stipendiary lecturers, early career fellows, professors, tutors, heads of houses, junior research fellows, vice-chancellors and pro-vice-chancellors. We had to close the book, leave the essay or the article, pause the experiment, no doubt just as it was starting to work. We also had to reschedule some things we don't like quite as much—marking, the admin—but which we accept come with the job these days and which we will have to go back to tonight, on the weekend, in our ever-diminishing free time. The government's policies are already disrupting our lives and that is nothing compared to what might be to come. But today, we have heard a new kind of concert in the Sheldonian. Not the clunking anti-poetry of impact, outputs and pathways, but the sound of our own voices, stripped of defensive evasion. A sound like never before, of men and women at Oxford, but from different backgrounds and from all over the world. The sound of our own words rising up to the Sheldonian's ceiling, where the arts and the sciences are equal partners. We have been speaking in a shared language and about common values. Congregation has been in concert. Our verses will go round and round inside the heads of those writing the white paper. We recall: education is incompatible with marketisation. Students are not customers. Teachers are not service providers. The logic of student choice is harmful to equality and to academic freedom. There can be no back-door entrances for the rich and last-minute bargains for the poor. The government's policies are reckless and incoherent. They won't save the Treasury any money. The PR offensive is exactly that. University education is a public good. The government's policies will damage and divide us, they will destroy our collective allegiances and they will prevent us from pursuing our common goal. The minister must have a rethink.

Our democratic self-governance means we can speak out and we must, and we offer our voice to colleagues in other institutions, to the greater congregation. This is a big thing for Oxford to do. It is also not just the right thing to do, but the good thing to do. Let us take a deep breath and in unison hold in this concert a single stirring note, the positive sound of the tradition and values we wish to defend. Non damus fide. Thank you.

THE VICE-CHANCELLOR: Professor Gildea, do you wish to reply to the debate?

PROFESSOR ROBERT GILDEA: I will say a few words. Vice-Chancellor, members of the Congregation. The eloquence of my colleagues and that of the OUSU President, demonstrating analytical acumen, intellectual power, sharp wit and deep wisdom, and encountering no opposition, makes any further words superfluous, except to say that this is a historic moment to make a difference. Let us seize it.

One member of Congregation elected by Congregation from members of the faculties in the Divisions of Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences and of Medical Sciences:

Current/Retiring Member: To hold office until

Professor M.S. Williams, New College

MT 2015

The following nominations have been received:

Martin S. Williams, BSc PhD Brist, MA Oxf, Fellow of New College, Faculty of Engineering Science

Nominated by:

Sir Curtis Price, Warden of New College, Faculty of Music
R.W. Ainsworth, Master of St Catherine's, Faculty of Engineering Science
M.J. Burden, New College, Faculty of Music
A.M. Etheridge, Magdalen, Faculty of Mathematics
G.F. Housby, Brasenose, Faculty of Engineering Science
J.B. Muddiman, Mansfield, Faculty of Theology
P.M. Newman, New College, Faculty of Engineering Science
P.J. Robins, St Antony's, Faculty of Social Sciences

Candidate statement:

I have been a University Lecturer (latterly titular Professor) and Tutorial Fellow since 1989. In my time in post I have served as Senior Tutor of New College (1995–99), Chairman of Examiners on three occasions, Deputy Head of the Engineering Science Department (2004–07) and Senior Proctor (2009–10). These experiences have given me an interesting and varied set of perspectives on how the University runs. Last year I was elected to a one-year vacancy on Council. During the year I also served as a Council-nominated member of PRAC and of several working groups, including the one currently exploring the feasibility of improving access through foundation or bridging courses. I am now standing for re-election to Council in the hope that I can complete a more substantial term of office.

Over the past year Council’s business has, for obvious reasons, been dominated by an agenda of financial cuts, undergraduate fees and access issues. While I think the University has handled these difficult issues well, some other important topics have inevitably received less attention. Looking to the future, an area to which I attach particular importance is graduate study. I believe the University needs to do much more to attract and support the best graduate students if we are to maintain or enhance our international standing. The likely knock-on effects of the new undergraduate funding arrangements can only add to this challenge.

Rodney E. Phillips, MD MBBS Melbourne, MA Oxf, Fellow of Pembroke, Faculty of Clinical Medicine

Nominated by:

J.I. Bell, Christ Church, Faculty of Clinical Medicine
A.M. Buchan, Corpus Christi, Faculty of Clinical Medicine
K.E. Davies, Hertford, Faculties of Biochemistry, of Physiological Sciences, and of Clinical Medicine
A.I. Frater, Nuffield Department of Clinical Medicine Experimental Medicine Division

A member of Congregation elected by Congregation from members of the faculties in the Divisions of Humanities and of Social Sciences:

Current/Retiring Member To hold office until
Professor G. Clark, St Peter’s MT 2014

The following nominations have been received:

Gordon L. Clark, BSc MA Monash, MA DSc Oxf, PhD McMaster, Fellow of St Peter’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
Nomination by:
D.J. Banister, St Anne’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
R.A. Hope, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
P.R. Jepson, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography
D. Wojcik, St Peter’s, Faculty of Anthropology and Geography

Candidate statement:

I was initially elected to serve on the Committee when it was just being established. At the time, my interest in serving on the Committee was both personal and professional. I think it is important that on crucial issues of ethics and public policy, the University should have a clear and well-conceived ‘voice’ reflecting our interests as well as our knowledge and understanding of the issues. Equally, given the significance of issues such as environmental change, globalisation, and human capacity if University investment policies intersect with these issues then we have a responsibility to evaluate those policies in the light of the best available evidence, and the skills and knowledge of those that participate in the Committee. The Committee has taken time to consider one important issue which has prompted consideration of the role and nature of the Committee, its procedures, and what strategies might be followed by the University in governing its investment policies in the future. As such, serving on the Committee is an opportunity to take the issues forward going beyond single questions to a larger framework consistent with the University’s goals and objectives. I would welcome the opportunity to serve on the Committee a further term.

S. Rippon, MA Oxf, AM PhD Harvard, Fellow of Somerville, Faculty of Philosophy

Nominated by:
N. Bosstrom, St Cross, Faculty of Philosophy
L. Brown, Somerville, Faculty of Philosophy
A. Luhiri, Somerville, Faculty of Linguistics, Philology and Phonetics
E. Mandelbaum, Faculty of Philosophy

Candidate statement:

I have been working at Oxford since about a year and a half ago, as a post-doctoral researcher at the Oxford Uehiro Centre for Practical Ethics. As a moral philosopher, I have a professional, as well as a personal, interest in issues of ethics and social responsibility. I am keen to use my professional training and experience to provide input into some of the practical workings and policies of the University. Oxford is a social and cultural leader both in the UK and abroad, and I think it enormously important that the University be—and be seen to be—not just financially successful but also morally responsible in its investment practices.

CURATORS OF THE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

Two members of Congregation elected by Congregation:

Current/Retiring Member To hold office until
Professor V.A. Gillespie, Lady Margaret Hall MT 2015
Professor T.P. Sofley, Merton MT 2015

The following nominations have been received:

Kate Blackman, BSc: Clemson, BA Queens (Charlotte, NC), MBA PhD North Carolina, MA Oxf, Faculty of Management
Nomination by:
M. Chen-Wishart, Merton, Faculty of Law
C.L. Flegg, Sainsbury Library at the Said Business School
D. Grimley, Merton, Faculty of Music
J.C. Walworth, Merton, Faculty of History

Ian J. Finlay, BA Middx, MA Open, PhD
Lanc, Oxford Learning Institute

Nominated by:
R. Waller, Principal of Harris Manchester, Faculty of Theology
S.A. Killoran, Harris Manchester
H. W. Marsh, St Cross, Faculty of Social Studies
K.M. Quinlan, Oxford Learning Institute

Candidate statement:

I build my case as a potential Curator of the University Libraries on three pillars. The first is passion. I have been passionate about libraries, both public and academic, since my father first enrolled me in Macdonald Road Public Library, Edinburgh, over 50 years ago. Since that time I would have rather spent my time in a library than almost any other place. Many meals have been missed and appointments kept because I have been chasing up some interesting line of thought in a library. Now of course such a passion is unexceptional in this university. More is expected of a Curator.

The second pillar is therefore experience. At my previous institution I spent a period of office on the Library Committee and was exposed to the provider rather than the user perspective. Concerns about resources, regulations and service were added to my previous experiences as an enthusiastic learner and researcher. Since coming to Oxford I have drawn on this experience to support the librarians in my college.

The final pillar is expertise in learning theory. My empirical research is in learning in higher education. I examine the factors that improve and hinder the learning of both undergraduate and graduate students. The university libraries in Oxford play a role possibly more important than in most other higher education institutions in supporting student learning given the focus on tutorial teaching. This role needs to be supported.

On these three pillars I present my case for election.

Heather O’Donoghue, BA Lond, MA MPhil Oxford, Fellow of Linacre, Faculties of English Language and Literature and of Medieval and Modern Languages

Nominated by:
R.M. Ballaster, Mansfield, Faculty of English
J.D. Bradshaw, Worcester, Faculty of English
J.E. Maguire, Magdalen, Faculty of English
L.K. Marcus, New College, Faculty of English

No statement submitted.
Note: Full details of the committee’s remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/520-1220.shtml. For further information, please contact the Secretary (charles.shaw@admin.ox.ac.uk).

E.G.W. Keene, Christ Church, Faculty of Social Studies

L. Rumsey, Mansfield, Faculty of English

J.L. Watts, Corpus Christi, Faculty of History

W.H. Whyte, St John’s, Faculty of History

Candidate statement:

I live close to the Parks and walk through them daily, sometimes to work and sometimes with family. I well understand the Parks’ importance to many in the university and city who prize them as a haven in the centre of an increasingly busy town. I have played (college) and watched (university) sport in them, my children have fed the ducks in them, and walked neighbours’ dogs in them. I have pushed my cycle through them when it was experimentally permitted (and stopped when it wasn’t), and I have ruminated on the optimal siting of the crepe van. I have also discussed the remit and nature of the role with past and present Curators. I therefore have a pretty informed sense of the unusual variety of academic, recreational, sporting, family and commuting purposes which the Parks serve, and the necessity of preserving their harmonious co-existence.

Note: Full details of the committee’s remit, composition, functions and powers can be found at: www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/181-084.shtml#_Toc86825839.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 8 July.

Establishment of degree of Master of Public Policy

Explanatory Note
Following approval of the establishment of the degree of Master of Public Policy (see Gazette No. 4953, 19 May 2011, p. 637), some consequential changes to the regulations are made below.

Text of Regulations

2. Ibid., after ‘Master of Fine Art if not also a Master of Arts’, insert ‘Master of Public Policy if not also a Master of Arts’.

General Purposes Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations
The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 8 July.

Burdet-Couts Foundation

Explanatory Note
The following change, made on the recommendation of the committee for the management of the Burdett-Couts Foundation and the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Board, updates the membership of the former committee to reflect the fact that the Professor of Geology and the Head of the Department of Earth Sciences are no longer the same person. It is thought that the Head of Department is the more appropriate person to act in this capacity. The Professor of Geology will be eligible to serve as an elected member.

Text of Regulations

§ 46. Burdett-Couts Foundation
1. The Board of the Faculty of Physical Sciences Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division shall be the board of management of the Burdett-Couts Foundation.
2. The board shall establish a committee to exercise on its behalf the powers conferred by clauses 3 and 4. The committee shall consist of the Head of the Department of Earth Sciences Professor of Geology and three other persons, of whom two shall be elected by the Board of the Faculty of Physical Sciences and one by the Board of the Faculty of Biological Sciences appointed by the Board of the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division (but who does not need to be a member of the Board) and two elected by the Departmental Committee of Earth Sciences. The elected members (who need not necessarily be members of either faculty board) shall hold office for three years and shall be re-eligible. The committee shall report on its activities to the Board of the Faculty of Physical Sciences Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division at least once in each year.
3. The first charge on the foundation shall be the award in each year of a Burdett-Couts Prize, the value of which shall be determined by the committee but shall not be less than £50. The prize money shall be spent on travel or some other purpose connected with the study of Geology and approved by the Professor of Geology, and shall be paid in accordance with his or her instructions. The prize shall be open to members of the university who have not less than twelve terms’ standing. It shall be awarded to the candidate who, after consideration of the candidates’ performance in the Final Honour School and of their proposals for the use of the prize money, is, in the opinion of the committee, best fitted to receive it. If in any year the prize is not awarded because no candidate of sufficient merit has presented himself or herself, the committee shall report accordingly to the board.
4. Income not required for the prize may be kept in hand or used by the committee in one or more of the following ways:
(a) the award of a second prize—the value and conditions to be decided by the committee in each case;
(b) the award of a studentship to a member of the University who has (or will have by the time the studentship is taken up) (i) passed the examinations necessary for the Degree of BA, (ii) not exceeded twenty-seven terms from his or her matriculation, (iii) satisfied the committee that he or she intends to read for the Degree of MSC or DPhil in the Department of Earth Sciences Geology, the value and conditions to be decided by the committee in each case; provided that an award under this sub-clause shall not be made unless the financial state of the fund is such that it can be made without prejudice to the possibility of an award under subclause (b);
(c) the award of a studentship to a member of another university who has been admitted by the Board of the Faculty of Physical Sciences as a student for the Degree of MSC or DPhil in the Department of Earth Sciences Geology, the value and conditions to be decided by the committee in each case; provided that an award under this sub-clause shall not be made unless the financial state of the fund is such that it can be made without prejudice to the possibility of an award under subclause (b); (d) in any way (whether by the making of grants or otherwise) for the promotion of the study of geology, and of other branches of natural science bearing on geology, among members of the University who have not exceeded twenty-seven terms from their matriculation.
5. The board shall, with the consent of Council, have power to alter this decree regulation from time to time, provided always that the main end of the foundation shall be kept in view, namely, the promotion of the study of Geology, and of other branches of natural science bearing on Geology, among the junior students of the University of Oxford.

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 280548
Fax: 01865 270178
Web: www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising
Post: Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication). Advertisements may be submitted online, by post or University messenger, or delivered by hand.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements below.)
External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.
For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements can be submitted and paid for online, using a credit card or debit card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.
Note. Payment can be made by card only when the advertisement is submitted through the website. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or card payments by callers in person at the University Offices.

Payment by cheque
Full payment, less the discount where applicable, must be sent with the copy to the address given above. Cheques should be payable to the Oxford University Chest.
Note. Internal advertisers should provide one of the following: University Card number, or Oxford University Press staff card number.

Payment by cheque in foreign currency. If you are paying by cheque in US dollars or in euro, please add £5 to your payment.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.
Note. When an advertisement is received through the online method, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.
2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.
3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.
4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.
5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.
For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the UOP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.
You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement. Please note that advertisements form part of the online Gazette as published and cannot be removed or amended after publication.
Gazette publication arrangements

Advertisers are asked to note that the remaining Gazettes of Trinity term will be published on 30 June, 7 July and 28 July. Publication for Michaelmas term will begin on 22 September. Please note, however, that the first issue of next term will be limited to University business only; so will not contain classified advertisements; the first issue to publish classified advertisements will be that of 29 September. The usual deadline will continue to apply (see above or www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising).

Congregation

1 Conferment of Honorary Degrees

The Public Orator made the following speeches in presenting the recipients of Honorary Degrees at the Encaenia held in the Sheldonian Theatre on Wednesday, 29 June:

Degree of Doctor of Civil Law

HIS EXCELLENCY GIORGIO NAPOLITANO
Eleventh President of the Italian Republic

CVMque cives suos, gentem animosam ac facundam, consilio et ratione gubernavertis; NOS ERGO, tanti viri prudentiam sapientiam humanitatem admirati, in frequenti Congregationis Domo praedictum Praesidem DOCTOREM in Iure Civili renuntiamus eumque vi ac virtute huius Diplomatis omnibus iuribus et privilegiis adficitius quae ad hunc gradum spectant.

Datum in Domo nostra Congregationis die xxix° mensis Iunii a. S. MMXI.

Admission by the Chancellor

Praeses humanissime, qui cum in cives tuos beneficia maxima contulisti, tum aliarum principibus exemplum fidei atque beneficia maxima contulisti, tum aliarum auctoritate mea et totius Universitatis nec non vi ac virtute huius Diplomatis admitto te ad gradum Doctoris in Iure Civili.

THE CHANCELLOR MASTERS AND SCHOLARS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD
WHOMSOEVER THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME
MAY THE LORD EVER PRESERVE AND KEEP YOU

WHEREAS it has long been our custom to confer such honours as are in our power on the Heads of other nations, and more particularly on those whose achievements have both conferred benefits on their own citizens and advanced goodwill among nations;

AND WHEREAS His Excellency GIORGIO NAPOLITANO, President of the Italian Republic, is head of a state to which we are bound by close ties of friendship;

AND WHEREAS Italy, in Virgil's words the land of Saturn, great mother of crops, great mother of men, excites the admiration of all people;

AND WHEREAS Italian culture and civilisation have illuminated the whole world;

AND WHEREAS we in Oxford have studied ancient Rome—'Italian history and the triumphs of the Romans', to quote Virgil again—continuously for eight centuries;

AND WHEREAS Italian Studies too have long flourished among us, with generous support from citizens of Italy;

AND WHEREAS President Napolitano underwent danger in his youth to struggle against tyranny and champion his country's freedom;

AND WHEREAS he has remained calm, fair and incorruptible, however critical the circumstances;

AND WHEREAS he was elected head of state five years ago to general approbation;

AND WHEREAS he has guided his fellow citizens, a spirited and eloquent people, with a judicious hand;

NOW THEREFORE WE, in admiration of his eminent sagacity, wisdom and culture, do here in this full House of Congregation pronounce the aforesaid President a DOCTOR in our Faculty of Civil Law, and by the virtue and power of this Diploma we invest him with all the rights and privileges which belong to that Degree.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF we have caused to be affixed to this instrument the Seal of the University thereunto pertaining.

Given in our House of Congregation on the 29th day of June in the year of Salvation 2011.

Admission by the Chancellor

Most learned and liberal President, who have conferred great benefits on your own country and provided the leaders of other nations with an example of patriotism and probity, I as Chancellor, acting on my own authority and that of our whole University, and by the power and force of this Diploma, admit you to the degree of Doctor of Civil Law.
Degree of Doctor of Civil Law

JUSTICE EDWIN CAMERON
Justice of the Constitutional Court of South Africa

De mente atque ingenio eius qui prope me nunc adstat longo sermone disserere possim. Etsi infantiam magnae difficultates circumsteterunt (quas in libro de vita sua brevitate eloquenti impi descriptit), apparebat a puero magnis eum rebus esse natum. Et in scholis patriae et Oxoniae excellenti, ut praemio Rhodesiano aliisque rhuminatifalum ornatum est. Iuris consultus ad Africanae regius enum et in foro et in bibliotheca florentam nunc ad honores hau sedignant ascenderit tum novam editionem libri pandectarum magna ex parte perpilolvit quem noster Iuris Civilis Regius primum scripserat. Adde quod misericordiae ad iustitiae studio ardens, pro viri parte contendit ut quodam inique captius damnos vandalice; ita reos e carnifice remplicam ab externarum gentium opzropium liberavist. Quapropter eum puteturis dignitate sine cura sine periculo diu esse fructurum; sed dis aliter visum. Ingravescebat per terram pestilentia, crudelis ipsa, sed eo crudelior quod nonnulli civitatis principes causam eum et naturam pertinacer adnuavant. Praeterea dolem augebat pudor: si quis se illo morbo affici affici concussus est, periculo contemptus atque odii apud homines se commisit; erant etiam qui necarentur. Hic tamen vir, cum illa aegrotatio eum invasisset, nec se nesceret nescam cum carum celavit, sed verum palam est locutus. In libro quem iam memoravi se ut testem obtulit; intellexit enim sicut medicamine corpora ita verbs et fortitudine pavorem animi levandum: ‘Hic morbus,’ inquit, ‘virus est non scelus’. Quare laudatur et prudentia huius in iudicium et in publico audacia; ipse pater patriae adfirmavit eum inter novos Africae Meridionalis heroas esse numerandum, qui exemplum alius imitationem praebat. Praesento virum qui doctrinam atque auctoritatem suam ad miserum iuvandos adhibuit, Edvinum Cameron, in summo collegio reipublicae Africae Meridionalis iudicem, Collegii Keblensii et alumnum et socium honoris causa adscriptum, ut admittere honoris causa ad gradum Doctores in Iure Civili.

Admission by the Chancellor

Index doctissimae et humanissimae, qui testimonio tuo aegros consolatus es metuentes corboravisti, ego auctoritate mea et totius Universitatis admittere te ad gradum Doctoris in Iure Civili honoris causa.

Paraphrase

It would be easy enough to discourse at length about the intellectual qualities of the man standing beside me. In spite of difficult times in his childhood (about which he has written with an eloquent terseness in his memoir), it was already clear when he was a boy that he was marked out for great things. He shone at university both in his native land and at Oxford, to which he came as a Rhodes Scholar and where he won several prizes. On returning to South Africa he flourished as a practical and an academic lawyer alike: he achieved rapid promotion but was also the lead author of a new edition of Honore’s South African Law of Trusts, a work originally written by our own Regius Professor of Civil Law. At the same time his compassion and concern for justice led him to fight vigorously in defence of a group of men wrongly condemned to death; his activity rescued the prisoners from the gallows and his country from an international outcry. One might therefore have predicted for him a long, safe and untroubled enjoyment of his professional success, but destiny had other ideas. The AIDS epidemic was spreading across the land, a disease cruel in itself and made crueler by the obstinate refusal of some of the nation’s leaders to acknowledge its origins and character. Shame added to the sufferers’ misery: anyone who admitted to having caught the contagion risked isolation and public hostility; some were even murdered. But when our honorand was affected, he did not succumb to self-pity or hide the fact, but spoke the truth openly. In the memoir that I have already mentioned he presented himself as a ‘witness to Aids’, realising that it is not only the body that requires attention; panic too needs to be treated, with the language of comfort and courage: in his own words, this disease ‘is a virus, not a crime’. Accordingly, he is admired equally for his wisdom as a judge and for the bravery of the stand that he has taken; Nelson Mandela, no less, has called him ‘one of South Africa’s new heroes’—a man who has provided a pattern for others to follow. I present a man who has brought his expertise and his public standing to the support of the afflicted, Edwin Cameron, judge of the Constitutional Court of South Africa, former student and honorary fellow of Keble College, to be admitted to the honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Law.

Admission by the Chancellor

Learned and compassionate judge, whose witness has consolled the sick and strengthened the fearful. I, on my own authority and that of the whole University admit you to the honorary degree of Doctor of Civil Law.

word for science; that is, the Romans invented the word, but they applied it differently. No one has written better about Greek science (in the modern sense); he has acutely analysed the distinctions between scientific thinking and ‘traditional’ patterns of thought; and he has shown how the Greeks categorised the world through the use of both polarity and analogy. So if he had devoted himself to ancient Greece alone, he would amply have earned this honorary degree: as it is, in mid career he turned to the comparative study of Chinese science, and learnt the language for this purpose. If you go to a Chinese restaurant and find Chinese eating there, you know that you have made a good choice; similarly, when he gave the Berlin Lectures here in Oxford, the number of Chinese faces in the audience bore witness to his authority. It is hard to know whether to call him philosopher, historian or bore witness to his authority. It is hard to know whether to call him philosopher, historian or Hush, please; for here is an author who speaks not in a rushing wind that shakes the rocks and mountains nor in earthquake nor in fire but in a still small voice. If the criterion of an author’s work were mere quantity, you might perhaps wonder why we have chosen to bestow an honorary degree on her; but if you follow Callimachus’ commandment to judge by quality and not by the Persian chain, you will acknowledge an exceptional talent. When she published her first novel, Housekeeping, there was general agreement that a new star had arisen, but in the next quarter of a century, although she published non-fiction, a second novel did not appear. Finally, however, she wrote Gilead, the title denoting an imaginary small town in the Midwest. The narrator is an elderly minister, who tells the tale of his life, and while some other writers splash noisily in the shallows, she makes her way towards the depths.

PROFESSOR DAME LINDA PARTRIDGE
Geneticist

Hanc quam nunc producet volumina observare per totam vitam detectavit; in tirocinio iam famam fortitudinis adepta est quod vel in insulis remotissimis ad aces raras melius videndas imbre et tempestates indefessa sustinerat. Non ignorat igitur perdicem trepidam esse nec procul a terra se tollere; cuisi rei causam Ovidius in Metamorphosis explicavit. Erat Athenus puer nomine Perdix, mente ingeniosa praeditus; qui spinis in pice notatit et in exemplum tractis serrae usum repperit. Sed maxa a Daedalo avunculo invidiae dente morse, ex arce paeceps missus est; quem Minerva suscipit et in aven transfugatur. Quapropter ille casus antiqui memor etiamnunc prope humum volitatis nec inidum in ramis constructus. Cuisi timiditatem quidem haec femina non praebet, idem tamen praebeat ingenium. Laudent enim eam homines docti quia experientia ad nodos solvens a neime anetai laxatos excogitate possit. Hoc exemplum profero: muscis quae drosophilae vocantur perspectus, monstravit quantum saepius inter se coeant, tanto breviores vitas eorum fieri; quod num ad genus humanum attineat, nec sci occultae quaestivi. Causam probavit esse non simplicem sed geminam: mares ipsa colitae laedii, feminas vi pepticae semine latentis. Praeterea, modus quibus senescant et muscae et mures scrutata, ostendit animalia, etiam vetera, si minorem cibum esse coagutur, diutius tempus esse victura. Ita cum voluptatem de nobis detraxisse fortasse videatur, sper potius auxit; namque nos repertis eius et corpus saniores senescere et senectutem ipsam feliciter producere docemur. Vita quamquam longissima cito conditur; beneficia quae haec laboribus suas attulit dia manebunt.

Praesento feminam quae e parvorum scrutatone magna invenit, Lindam Partridge, Excellentissimam Ordinis Imperii Britannici dominam commendatricem, Societati Regali adscriptam, et Collegii Sanctae Annae et Collegii Wolfsoniani alumnam, in Collegio Universitatis apud Londinenses Biomotraciae Professorum, ut admiratror honoris causa ad gradum Doctoris in Scientia.

Paraphrase

The lady whom I now present has been an enthusiastic bird-watcher throughout her life; as a student she acquired quite a reputation for her indomitable endurance of rain and storm on remote islands in pursuit of rare species. She must therefore be aware that the partridge is a timid bird which likes to fly low, and Ovid in his Metamorphoses tells a Just So Story to explain why. Once upon a time there was at Athens a clever and inventive boy called Partridge. Observing the serrated spines on a fish, he took it as a pattern, and invented the saw. His uncle Daedalus, consumed with jealousy, threw him from the Acropolis, but the goddess Athena caught him up and transformed him into a bird. And that is why the partridge, remembering his unpleasant experience, still flies near to the ground and does not build its nest in trees. The present honouror does not share his nervousness, but she does match him in creativity. Her colleagues praise her for an ability to devise the decisive experiments that nobody else had thought of. For example, her work on fruit flies has demonstrated that their lives are shortened in proportion to the amount of sexual intercourse in which they engage; whether the same applies to human beings, I do not know, and I have not pursued enquiries. She has proved that there is no one cause: it is the act itself that affects the male flies, whereas the females are affected by peptide components of the seminal fluid. She has also investigated the ageing process in both flies and mice, and shown that if the diet of animals is reduced, even when they are already old, their lives will be prolonged. This sounds like bad news for us, but in fact it is good, for her researches are helping to make old age healthier and to extend its period enjoyably. Even the longest life soon comes to an and, but the benefits of her work will endure for a great time.

I present a scientist who has made big discoveries from the scrutiny of little things, Dame Linda Partridge, DBE, Fellow of the Royal Society, former student of St Anne's and Wolfson Colleges, Weldon Professor of Biometry at University College London, to be admitted to the honorary degree of Doctor of Science.

Paraphrase

Virgil counted the ‘tiny mouse’ among the pests that make mock of the farmers’ labours, and Horace laughed at poetic pomposity in the well-known line, ‘Mountains shall labour and a silly mouse be born.’ Today, however, we honour a man whose work has turned mice from being a nuisance into a source of benefit to humankind, and built a whole mountain of useful knowledge. Back in the 1950s he developed a method of separating the proteins in bodily fluids; later he invented the technique that has been nicknamed the ‘knockout mouse.’ You may think that it is not all that hard to knock out a mouse, but in fact this was a very difficult achievement: he had discovered a means of disrupting each gene individually.

Thanks to him, biologists can now examine every mouse gene, amounting to some twenty thousand, one by one, and since most of these genes are shared with human beings, his work has led to a better understanding of our own bodies. He is himself continuing to study the structure of mice as a model for understanding human disease and curing it.

Although he has lived for many years in America, he was born in Yorkshire and has always shown the warmth that proverbially characterises the natives of that county; he was educated at Oxford, where his study of proteins began, and he has not forgotten the old place. He has generously set up a visiting fellowship scheme which enables people to come to Balliol and share their wisdom with us. The passing of the years has not dimmed his youthfulness of spirit; he is in his laboratory daily, and he still likes to spend his free time flying his glider; like Ovid’s Icarus, he is ‘touched with desire for heaven’, and like Daedalus, whom he rivals in power of invention, he slips calmly through the skies.

I present a great natural scientist and a great friend of Oxford, Oliver Smithies, graduate and honorary fellow of Balliol College, Weatherspoon Eminent Distinguished Professor of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, Nobel Laureate, to be admitted to the honorary degree of Doctor of Science.

Degree of Doctor of Music

SIR GEORGE HENRY MARTIN

Record Producer

Vates noster, cum insulam sonis iucundis et inoxinis mirabiliter repletam descripsisset, sane significare voluit illum locum vi quadam magica esse suffusum. Nostro tamen tempore cantus ubique in domibus nostris in tabernis in ambulacione per vicos percipere solemus. Ei igitur qui modos musicos vel requirunt vel canunt vel orbis sonoros mantand magnam partem mundi nostri figurant; inter quos vir agmen hominum hodie honorandorum nunc concludens praecipuum locum diu occupavit. Cum iuvenis esset, arti musicae antiquae studiuit atque et tibia et clavicymbalo canere didicit, sed numeros vi vividae vibrantes et volentibus non minus dilexit. Anno MCMLXIII, ut cecinit poeta Oxoniensis, omnia mutata sunt: sum primum mares et feminae inter se coitse; tume de amore Constantiae tandem legere licuisse; tum hic quem produco camina Scarabaearum primus orbis phonoagnosticor maioris latitudinis commissit. Quamvis cantatores maximam laudem partem occupare solet, opus est etiam eis qui organa dexterae eligere et sonos bene servare sciant; quas res hic optime gessit. Huius sine laboribus num vitam Eleonorae tam intente audiremus, num de hesterno die tum maesta meditaremus, num symphonia et solitudine Piperis adeo excitarerem?

Postea hic magnum illum Shakespeareanum quodam modo imitatus insulam Montis Serrati sonis mirabilibus repelevit; officinam ibi ad orbis phonographicos faciendo instituit; cum quam tempes tas delevisset, iterum in Britannia condidit. Proper liberalitatem suam adhuc in illa terra honestatur. Constat inter omnes eum, licet inter cantores musicae populares, homines impotentia ac petulancia famosi, multa per lustra versatus sit, mentem eam animum lenem habitum generosum semper praebuisse, ita ut si illi eum non imimentur, tamen revereri soletant.

Praesentio musicum in quo ars et ingenium coniuunguntur, Georgium Henricum Martin, euiet umaturum, Excellentissimi Ordinis Britannici commendatorem, ut admissurus honoris causa ad gradum Doctoris in Musica.

Admission by the Chancellor

Artifex ingeniosissime, cuius opera omnes fere in orbe terrarum homines audirevunt, ego auctoritate mea et totius Universitatis admitto te ad gradum Doctoris in Musica honoris causa.

Paraphrase

When Shakespeare imagines an isle ‘full of noises, Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not’, he tries to make us mean that the power of magic pervades the place. In modern life, however, we hear music everywhere, in our own homes, in shops, and as we walk the streets. So those who compose, perform or record it shape a great part of our world, and the man who now completes the sequence of this year’s honours has long held a special place among them. In his youth he studied classical music, learning both the oboe and the piano, but he enjoyed rock and roll as well. In 1963 the world changed: according to our own Philip Larkin, this was when sexual intercourse began, between the end of the Charterley ban and the moment when the present honand recorded the Beatles’ first LP. Although it is the singers who usually get the star billing, arrangers and recording managers are also essential, and he has shown a masterly command of these skills. Without his interventions the life of Ms Rigby would not be so compelling, and we should not muse so wistfully upon yesterday or be so keenly concerned with loneliness and Sergeant Pepper’s band.

Later, as a kind of latter-day Prospero, he filled another island, Montserrat, with wondrous noises, building there a recording studio; after a hurricane destroyed it, he reconstructed it another island, Montserrat, with wondrous noises, building there a recording studio; after a hurricane destroyed it, he reconstructed it later, as a kind of latter-day Prospero, he filled another island, Montserrat, with wondrous noises, building there a recording studio; after a hurricane destroyed it, he reconstructed it

2 Encaenia

The Public Orator delivered the following introduction to the Creweian Oration:

Orator: Honoratissime Domine Cancellarie, licetne anglice loqui

Chancellor: Licet.

Orator: Each year, as I enter the Sheldonian Theatre, I am reminded of the fly on the chariot wheel: ‘Behold how mighty I am! What a great noise I make, what a cloud of dust I raise!’ As when the Queen entered Westminster Abbey on 29 April, the moment I step inside the building, I am greeted by a glorious blaze of trumpets, and tempted to feel, ‘See how they honour me! Hear how magnificently I am celebrated.’ And in a way that sentiment is not altogether mistaken, for at Encaenia we do celebrate ourselves. We commemorate and celebrate our benefactors, past and present, we rejoice in the faith that they have put in us, and more soberly, we reflect on the responsibility of showing ourselves worthy of that trust. These days we are constantly being asked to clothe our purposes in the language of bureaucracy, but in reality the truth is very simple: we learn, teach, study and write, and we try to do each of these things as well as we can.

Among the most splendid gifts that we have received is one from Eni, the Italian oil giant. Oil in this case is not the stuff that we see in dappled olive groves, but the stuff that comes out of the ground. It is fitting that we should acknowledge this benefaction on the day when we have the privilege of bestowing a degree on Italy’s head of state. He will have noticed that the entire ceremony was conducted in Italian—of an old-fashioned kind—but we can assure him that we do this every year. As it happens, my very first duty as Public Orator was to prepare the citation for President Napolitano’s predecessor, President Ciampi. On that occasion the president gave me a medal. I just thought I would mention it. The medal showed the Quirinal Palace on one side, and on the other a very satisfactory map of England with only two places marked: London and Oxford.

Heads of State receive a degree by diploma; the legalistic form and much of the wording are traditional. The most remarkable of such ceremonies occurred in 1814, when in the presence of the Prince Regent the degree of Doctor of Civil Law was conferred on the King of Prussia and the Tsar of Russia, both of whom immediately exercised their new rights by voting for the conferment of the same degree on the Duke of Wellington. Cheered by this show of confidence, he went on to defeat Napoleon a year later almost to the day: so perhaps the Battle of Waterloo was won in the Theatre at Oxford. It is a very remarkable fact that now one of us. I hope that he has read the small print. He may be summoned from the Quirinal on a Tuesday afternoon to give his opinion about Mr David Willetts—or perhaps to issue a presidential pardon.

Among the changes of the past year has been the appearance of this building. Restored to what are believed to be its original colours it now looks more sober and yet, curiously, more splendid. It has been given a state-of-the-art sound system and I am told that I am now for the first time audible throughout the theatre. This is described as an improvement. The University would not of course dream of changing the experience of the historic seating which you are so much enjoying at this moment. I have heard much great music in this building, and I remember especially a performance of The Dream of Gerontius. Near the end, the tenor soloist describes the state of Purgatory—‘Take me away...’ There let me lie Motionless and happy in my pain’. That seemed to sum it up.

If you have been thinking that the theatre feels more airy and spacious and wondering why, the answer lies in the removal of the brass chandeliers that hung from the ceiling. It is a vast improvement, and Robert Streater’s painting can now be seen much better. Two of the allegorical figures represent Arithmetic and Astronomy; they will be looking down with especial pleasure on the Beecroft Charitable Trust’s large gift for the Programme on Computational Cosmology. Arithmetic will delight too in the magnificent gifts from Mr George Soros through the Open Society Foundations for the Institute for Economic Modelling at the Oxford Martin School and from the Skoll Foundation for the Skoll Centre for Social Entrepreneurship at the Said Business School. Meanwhile, the Orator can confirm that his workplace conditions are satisfactory. It was recently reported that Miss Mariah Carey has named her son Moroccan after a room in her New York apartment block. My son shall be named Sheldonian.

Newspapers and think tanks continue to publish university league tables, and we go up a place or two in one, and down a place or two in the next. With that care in the selection of evidence that marks the truly creative scholar, I pick out our top place in the Times Good University Guide for the tenth year running, and the QS World Rankings’ judgement that Oxford is the best in the world for humanities. At a time when the study of humanities faces especial difficulties that is a welcome tribute. We can hope to be even better now that the Stanley and Zea Lewis Family Foundation has endowed the Stanley Lewis Chair in Israel Studies. Two months ago the BBC revealed that Magdalen College Oxford had won University Challenge for the fourth time, breaking the record previously held by Magdalen College Oxford. Overall, an Oxford team has won fifteen times, more than twice as many as any other university. Meanwhile, Mr Ian Bayley of Balliol, who won the Brain of Britain title last year, has now been appointed the Mastermind Champion. And there is even more good news: after exhaustive investigation The Times has declared Oxford to be the brainiest town in Britain. Bath was in second place, and Cambridge third. It must be admitted that the paper’s criteria were idiosyncratic: their researchers checked the bookshops and detected works that they had sold too many of the works of Miss Katie Price. So if the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge is spotted in Blackwell’s buying Jordan: Pushed to the Limit by the dozen, we shall know that they are fighting back.

To sustain these successes we must be able to attract the best students, and that means that we must be able to fund them. That will be helped by a generous gift from the Victor and William Fung Foundation to establish the Li and Fung Scholarships and from the Islamic Development Bank for the IDB-Oxford University Clarendon Scholarship. Dr Andrew Yuen has also given generously to the Oxford Thinking campaign. In turn, the University delights to recognise its students’ achievements, and this year it has invited two faculties or departments in each of the divisions to nominate an outstanding prize-winner. Their details are in your programmes: they are Benjamin Edeyson of Oriel and Javier Tamm of St Catherine’s in Humanities, Andrew Roocroft of Christ Church and Tim Hele of Exeter in Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences, Katherine Wright of St Edmund Hall and Sarah Wheelond of Lincoln in Medical Sciences, and Henning Tamm of St Antony’s and Charles Brendon of Exeter in Social Sciences. Surely during the strictly limited period they are on show in a theatre very near you; I now ask them to fight back the modesty common to all Oxford men and women and stand to receive your applause.

An American friend once told me that she had finally worked out why Limeys are so over-represented in The New York Review of Books, and Oxionians in particular: it was the weekly tutorial essay that had honed those skills. Now that the Thomson Reuters Foundation has made a grand benefaction for the Reuters Institute for the Study of Journalism we shall perhaps find out if she was right. Scientists need a particle accelerator or two, but everyone needs books; two especially munificent gifts have come from Dr Charles and Mr George David for the Bodleian Libraries and from Dr Chung Kin Kwok for the Chung Kin Kwok Chinese Studies Librarian. Our museums are equally a vital part of our teaching and study. Here I record two very substantial benefactions from bodies to which we already owe an obligation: Dr Chung Kin Kwok for the Chung Kin Kwok Islamic Development Bank for the IDB-Li and Fung Scholarships and from the Fung Foundation to establish the Li and Fung Scholarships and from the Islamic Development Bank for the IDB-Oxford University Clarendon Scholarship. Dr Andrew Yuen has also given generously to the Oxford Thinking campaign. In turn, the University delights to recognise its students’ achievements, and this year it has invited two faculties or departments in each of the divisions to nominate an outstanding prize-winner. Their details are in your programmes: they are Benjamin Edeyson of Oriel and Javier Tamm of St Catherine’s in Humanities, Andrew Roocroft of Christ Church and Tim Hele of Exeter in Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences, Katherine Wright of St Edmund Hall and Sarah Wheelond of Lincoln in Medical Sciences, and Henning Tamm of St Antony’s and Charles Brendon of Exeter in Social Sciences. Foundations for the University Museum of Natural History, and also for Wolfson, Jesus, Somerville and Regent's Park Colleges. The Ashmolean is currently showing a stunning exhibition of treasures from Macedonia. It has been described as the finest loan exhibition ever to have come to this country from Greece, and it is not to be missed.

The fascinating science blog on the University's website keeps us up to date with some of the extraordinarily varied enquiries that our researchers are pursuing. It also wins this year's prize for least successful appeal for public sympathy; the prize goes to its headline 'Malaria parasites get jetlag too.' We have received splendid gifts from the George Institute for Global Health for the George Centre for Healthcare Innovation and from the Barclay Foundation for research in the Department of Psychiatry into the effects of craniofacial abnormalities on the relationship between parents and children in infancy. Scientific research indeed helps to make the world a better place. Professor Tim Key of the Cancer Epidemiology Unit has brought hope to children everywhere by showing that there is no evidence that eating more vegetables reduces the likelihood of getting the disease. But I have spoken too soon: Dr Peter Scarborough, of the University's BHF Health Promotion Research Group, has been insisting on the difference that 'getting your five a day' makes. Promotion Research Group, has been insisting on the difference that 'getting your five a day' makes. The number of Oxonians in politics makes it annoyingly hard for us to criticise governments of any stripe without criticising ourselves, but Congregation has skilfully found a Cambridge man to pick on. Now that's called bullying; he can't help it, and it's very unkind.

Across the Atlantic, Ms Kagan of Worcester was confirmed as a justice of the Supreme Court, as anticipated in last year's oration, and it is now indeed the case that the Supreme Court contains more Oxonians than Protestants. Meanwhile Mr Russell Feingold of Magdalen represented Oxford and Wisconsin in the Senate until the start of this year, while Ms Susan Rice represents Oxford and the US at the United Nations. Last autumn we celebrated in appropriately grand style Mr Leonid Blavatnik's gift to found the Blavatnik School of Government, one of the largest donations that the University has ever received. He will have noticed that our alumni have been doing quite a lot of government already; so he must suppose that it is possible for the world to be governed even better than it is now. What a strange notion. There is a moral aspect to politics, and Mr Alonzo McDonald has given a very substantial donation to the already established McDonald Centre for Theology, Ethics and Public Life. According to the University's press release it will allow Oxford's experts to pursue, among other things, the morality of the financial crisis and the principles behind bankers' activities. We hope that they will be able to develop some very small cansels and some very big needles.

In their most recent elections the Royal Society and the British Academy have each chosen eight of us fellows. The new Fellows of the Royal Society are Professors Hagan Bayley, Frank Grafen, Simon Hoare, Alex Kacelnik, Steffen Lauritzen, David Manolopoulos, Fiona Powrie and Angela Vincent. The new Academicians are Professors Eric Clarke, Robert Gildea, Cecilia Heyes, Terence Irwin, Aditi Lahiri, Emilie Savage-Smith, Michael Sheringham and Roland Smith. We congratulate them all. There have been 31 elections from this University to the British Academy in the past four years; it is a remarkable figure. There are the usual comings and goings among Heads of House; it is so hard to keep the staff. But Mr Richard Smethurst at least, at Worcester man and boy, and Provost since 1991, can claim a length of service to rival a Wodehousian butler; Professor Jonathan Bate will take his place. Even Mr Smethurst cannot challenge some of the figures from earlier centuries – Theophilus Leigh, for example, who was Master of Balliol for 59 years in the eighteenth century. According to a history of that college, 'For the next sixty years the Senior Common-room simmered with discontent.'

The best excuse for the Fellows was the character of Dr Leigh himself. Habitually and as a matter of course he sided with the more wrong-headed reactionaries – as distinct, of course, from the right-headed reactionaries – and excited in the College a prejudice against the harmless and industrious Scotsmen of the Snell Foundation.' One of those industrious Scotsmen, Sir Drummond Bone, will become Master of Balliol this autumn (harmless! I do hope not), succeeding Mr Andrew Graham. Professor Roger Cashmore retires from Brasenose to be followed by Professor Alan Bowman. Mr Kenneth will follow Dr Diana Walford at Mansfield, Sir Mark Jones will succeed Professor Andrew Goudie at St Cross, and Mr Will Hutton will take over from Dr John Landers at Hertford.

The New Year Honours List brought knighthoods to Professors Rory Collins and David Butler; Professor Charles Godfray, Dr Christopher Brown and Mr Mark Damazer received CBES and Professor David Mant an OBE. In this month's Birthday Honours Professors Christopher Hood and Wendy James were made CBE and Professors Richard Darton and Jeremy Thomas OBE. Again, congratulations all round. Another don has received a more unusual recognition. In September Mr Newman of Oriel was beatified by the Pope. I understand that one more miracle is required for full canonisation, and so I direct His Eminence's attention to the funding gap.

As ever, I end by calling to our minds those friends and colleagues who have died in the past year, among whom were John Barnett, research lecturer in physics, Keith Batey, Student of Christ Church, Lord Bingham of Cornhill, Visitor of Balliol and High Steward, Baruch Blumberg, Master of Balliol, Alison Brading, Fellow of Lady Margaret Hall, David Cockaigne, Fellow of Linacre, Anthony Crowle, Fellow of Linacre, Philippa Foot, Fellow of Somerville, Paul Foot, Fellow of Queen's, Sir Marrack Goulding, Warden of St Antony's, Margaret Hubbard, Fellow of St Anne's, Margaret Jacobs, Fellow of St Hugh's, Richard Kindersley, Fellow of St Antony's, Wilfrid Knapp, Fellow of St Catherine's, Brian Lloyd, Fellow of Magdalen, Gudrun Loisht, Lecturer at St John's, Gilbert McKay, Fellow of St Peter's, Patrick Martinez, Fellow of Wadham, Elaine Matthews, Fellow of St Hilda's, Robin Matthews, Fellow of All Souls, Basil Mitchell, Fellow of Oriel, Eric Newsholme, Fellow of Merton, Simon Price, Fellow of Lady Margaret Hall, Daniel Quillon, Fellow of Magdalen, Julian

Oration, 'in commemoration of the Benefactors
the voice of the bard. '

I know, he will speak in prose, but undoubtedly the spirit of a poet. So I conclude with the words of William Blake, and invite you to 'Hear the voice of the bard.'

CREWEIAN ORATION 2011

The Professor of Poetry delivered the Creweian Oration, 'in commemoration of the Benefactors of the University according to the intention of the Right Honourable Nathaniel, Lord Crewe, Bishop of Durham'.

MY LORD and Chancellor:
To the extent that I can be said to understand the agenda, I am to be brief, cheerful, to praise benefactors and benefactions, and above all to avoid any suggestion that some benefactors may be more equal than others. The University has established its own picturesque ceremony of recognition, one to which nothing that I say would sufficiently add; nonetheless let it be said that 'a wealth of benefactors' is a noble location, only a little below a 'convocation of eagles' and far above a 'murmuration of starlings.' Art and scholarship have for many centuries been fostered by wealth. Thomas More's friend John Colet founded St Paul's School with the fortune left him by his father; with part of the residue he settled an annuity on Erasmus. The Wedgwoods settled an annuity on Coleridge. Osbert, Sacheverell, and Edith Sitwell adopted the impecunious William Walton.

Allow me, in this my first venture upon the Creweian exercise, to speak of a period, some sixty years ago, when I was the beneficiary of this University's plenitude of benefactions. In 1950 I came up as a commoner to read English, funded by a Worcestershire County Major Scholarship which in those days was awarded on the results of a written examination. I lacked the brilliance of my near-contemporary Christopher Ricks but I worked hard and did well in Finals.

In exigua patria natus sum. My father, a Worcestershire village boy, had left school in 1912, aged thirteen, without any kind of academic qualification. He shared with my mother, a school-leaver at the same age, a profound respect for education, particularly higher education; and my graduation ceremony, held in Latin in this building, through which they sat in raptly grateful bewilderment, moves me in recollection. You will readily comprehend the commingling of incredulity and indignation with which I endure the braggart promises of ministers, and of those who would push them from their stools, that henceforth, under their jurisdiction, places of higher learning such as this University will no longer be preserves of the rich. In the early 1950s undergraduates from working-class homes such as mine may have been in a minority; but it was a substantial and significant minority in a community that was smaller than it is now.

It is of course more than likely that in the articles of admission to the Chair of Poetry, and the even more stringent deeds of foundation for the Creweian Oration (deeds and articles that, for whatever reason, have not come my way) there is to be found a clause forbidding the speaker to broach any matter of politics while in his cups. I am not in my cups, I am, I believe, compos mentis. Moreover, with all due respect, I remind the assembly that we are seated here at the end of a month which began with the University's vote of no confidence in the Minister of State for Universities and Science.

It was a bold step and I applaud it. But could it not be said, by some nagging bounder, that the protests of the English universities as a whole smashed somewhat of the 'aged party' of dfolklore, en route to the Lord Mayor's Banquet, crying 'stop thief!' after the ragged scuff (an old Etonian in disguise) who is racing off with his wallet? It would perhaps have been nobler in the corporate mind (continues the nagging bounder) if some protest, some recollection in the style of the old grand renoncement, had been uttered from the hearts of our universities
some years before the collapse of the world economy. A repentateur would have been a fine model of elan and gravitas for such a protest against the increasing degradation of national learning; for instance:

And perhaps this is the doom which Adam fell into of knowing good and evil, that is to say of knowing good by evil. As therefore the state of man now is; what wisdom can there be to choose, what continence to forbear, without the knowledge of evil?1

Some present may be asking: what does this crown of a poet mean, or intend when he alludes to that archaic debate about good and evil? Let me respond with two words,
'consumer' and 'punter.' Some thirty years ago, when I used regularly to drive up the old
A1 en route from Cambridge to the north of England, I would pass a large roadside service area dominated by a huge set of mechanical teeth, inviting weary pilgrims to dine. I always thought of it as the castle of Giant Despair, and to it I have often returned, in the thought of ho! ho! ho!

But by a happy chance, we gave an honorary degree to Professor Hill last year, shortly after his election to the Chair of Poetry. as far as I believe, \textit{compos mentis}. Moreover, with all due respect, I remind the assembly that we are seated here at the end of a month which began with the University's vote of no confidence in the Minister of State for Universities and Science.

It was a bold step and I applaud it. But could it not be said, by some nagging bounder, that the protests of the English universities as a crying 'stop thief!' after the ragged scuff (an old Etonian in disguise) who is racing off with his wallet? It would perhaps have been nobler

in the corporate mind (continues the nagging

the style of the old grand renoncement, had been uttered from the hearts of our universities
some years before the collapse of the world
economy. A repentateur would have been a fine against the increasing degradation of national

Some present may be asking: what does this crown of a poet mean, or intend when he alludes to that archaic debate about good
and evil? Let me respond with two words,
'consumer' and 'punter.' Some thirty years ago, when I used regularly to drive up the old
A1 en route from Cambridge to the north of England, I would pass a large roadside service area dominated by a huge set of mechanical teeth, inviting weary pilgrims to dine. I always thought of it as the castle of Giant Despair, and memory recalls the jaws uttering hot hot hot!, but I think memory misrecollects at that point.
A month or so ago I heard the Prime Minister in interview refer to the public as 'consumers of the media.' I have heard people who visit art galleries described as 'consumers of culture' and theatre-goers referred to as 'punters.'
Whenever I hear such phrases I recall those mechanical choppers on the Great North Road.

Those in this audience who are expert in mediaeval law will protest that my grotesque swipe at this monstrous figure of the Consumer shows no awareness of fourteenth-century distinctions concerning res consumptibles:1
there is just and proportionate consumption.
Quite so. My concern is not with proportionate consumption but with a monstrous, insatiable consumption such as Veblen prophesied.
The Oxford English Dictionary, that great beacon of our national soul and our native intelligence, tells me that 'punter,' which it traces to 1706 as a term used in card games for money, and to 1873 as referring to 'one who gambles in shares and stocks, or on football pools;' has, since 1934, also applied to 'the victim of a swindler or confidence trickster,' and, since 1970 to (a) the client of a prostitute,
(b), 1977, someone attending a pop concert which the performer herself or himself described as 'crap,' (c) to a Lourdes pilgrim (1980).

What this clown poet wishes to emphasize is that, coming up from an underprivileged background, although out of his depth for the greater part of his freshman year, he yet knew, at first instinctively, subsequently by daily experience, that none of his instructors regarded him as a consumer or a punter.

If there is today even one university in Britain which would see nothing amiss in regarding its students as consumers or punters, then we are condemned, in Milton's terms, to knowing good by evil, and the future of our institutions of learning is indeed desperate.

I see our long-term salvation not only in the young resident teachers and researchers but also in a new generation of wandering scholars, created by force of economic circumstance, numbers of them first-class graduates of this University, who, without security of tenure, move from place to place, serving each temporary lodging with total commitment, total integrity. In ways that will not be evident for a generation, they are destined to be our civilisation's benefactors. I end, therefore, as I began, by praising this University's grand inheritance of benefaction.

My Lord and Chancellor, I beg leave to hold my peace.

Council and Main Committees

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 15 July.

Health and Safety Management Committee

Explanatory Note

Council considers that the regulations of the Health and Safety Management Committee shall make clear that the committee has authority to take enforcement action in certain circumstances in relation to health and safety matters. Council is also of the view that the committee should formally delegate that authority to the Director of the Safety Office. Whilst responsibility for implementing the University’s Safety Policy remains with Heads of Department and Chairs of Faculty Boards, Council recognises that provision must be made should a Head of Department be unwilling or unable to enforce health and safety policy. The revised regulations therefore: (i) prescribe the authority of the committee; (ii) establish that the committee may delegate that authority and the associated decision-making to its chair and to the Director of the Safety Office; and (iii) provide the relevant Head of Department with a right of appeal to the committee against the exercise of that delegated authority.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 15 of 2002, concerning committees reporting directly to Council (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended), insert new regulations 3.61–3.62 as follows and renumber existing regulations 3.61–3.140 as 3.63–3.142.

3.61. (i) The committee shall have the authority to take whatever action it deems necessary in relation to matters of health and safety where the committee considers practices to pose imminent potential danger or there to be a significant risk of enforcement action from appropriate authorities.

(2) The committee may delegate the authority in paragraph (1) above, together with the associated decision-making, to its chair and/or to the Director of the Safety Office as it considers appropriate.

3.62. The committee shall establish, implement and keep under review a procedure by which it will consider appeals from the relevant Head of Department against the exercise of the delegated authority under regulation 3.61(2) above.

Regulations for Degrees, Diplomas and Certificates

Explanatory Note

This amendment permits students who have taken two different courses but with the same degree title (e.g. two MScs, or two Msts) to attend more than one degree ceremony and to receive separate certificates for each course, with a conferral date that reflects the date of attendance at each ceremony.

Text of Regulations

In Council Regulations 22 of 2002 concerning Degrees, Diplomas and Certificates (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4628, 26 June 2002, as amended on 14 June 2005, 11 October 2005 and 14 October 2010; Vol. 135, p. 1174, 16 June 2005; Vol. 139, p. 1004, 30 April 2009; Vol. 141, p. 110, 14 October 2010) delete existing § 1.2 (1) and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

‘1.2. (1) Notwithstanding the provisions of the Regulations for Examinations or any other relevant regulation, no person may supplicate more than once for the same degree provided that each subsequent supplication relates to a different subject for which they have fulfilled the relevant examination requirements.’

Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 15 July.

(a) Establishment of Professorship of Forest Science

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council, establish the Professorship of Forest Science held in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division and make provision for the post to be called the Wood Professorship of Forest Science for the tenure of the first incumbent. The professor will teach and undertake research in Tree Physiology and Genetics and will be on the establishment of the Department of Plant Sciences in the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Division.

Text of Regulations

1 In SCHEDULE A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, after ‘Man Professor in Quantitative Finance’ insert:

‘Wood Professor of Forest Science’.

2 In Sect III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 423, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), insert new § 94 as follows and renumber existing § 94 as § 92:

’S 94. Wood Professor of Forest Science

1. There shall be a Wood Professor of Forest Science, who shall undertake research in and shall lecture and give instruction in that subject and generally promote its study in the University.

2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(i) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in (2) of this regulation is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;

(ii) the head of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf, or if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college;

(iii) a person appointed by the governing body of the college specified in (2) of this regulation;

(iv) (4)–(5) two persons appointed by Council;

(v) (6)–(9) four persons appointed by the Mathematical, Physical and Life Sciences Board.

4. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.

(b) Establishment of Nuffield Professorship of Economics

Explanatory Note

These changes, made on the recommendation of the Planning and Resources Allocation Committee of Council, establish the Nuffield Professorship of Economics held in the Social Sciences Division. The Professor will teach and undertake research in Economics and will be on the establishment of the Department of Economics in the Social Sciences Division.

Text of Regulations

1 In Schedule A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, after 'James Meade Professor of Economics' insert:

'nuffield Professor of Economics'.

2 In Sect. III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 415, redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol.132, p. 1461) insert new § 71 as follows and renumber existing § 71–165 as § 72–166:

§ 71. Nuffield Professor of Economics

1. There shall be a Nuffield Professor of Economics who shall undertake research in and shall lecture and give instruction in that subject and generally promote its study in the University.

2. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

(1) the Vice-Chancellor, or if the Warden of Nuffield College is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;

(2) the Warden of Nuffield College;

(3) a person appointed by the governing body of Nuffield College;

(4)- (5) two persons appointed by Council;

(6) a person appointed by the Social Sciences Board;

(7)-(9) three persons appointed by the Department of Economics.

3. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.'

(c) Re-naming of the Professorships of General Practice

Explanatory Note

This change, made on the recommendation of the Medical Sciences Board, re-names the Professorships of General Practice.

Bodleian Libraries

TRANSITION TO A NEW INTEGRATED LIBRARY SYSTEM 8–18 JULY

Over the last year and a half, the Bodleian Libraries have been preparing to move to a new library system which will provide enhanced catalogue, circulation and acquisitions functionality for readers and staff. I am pleased to say that the transition to the new system will take place in the next few weeks and this notice provides details of the temporary impact the transition will have on our services, the measures we are putting in place to support you at this time, and the longer-term advantages of the new system for the collegiate University.

During the transition, all Bodleian Libraries will remain open for the usual vacation hours. Books and journals on open shelves in libraries and reading rooms will be available, the resource discovery system SOLO will be live and electronic resources will be available as usual.

It will be possible to order most Special Collections materials currently held in the Radcliffe Science Library and those in the Bodleian Library of Commonwealth and African Studies at Rhodes House stack manually, for consultation locally. Readers planning a visit to view Special Collections during this period in July are advised to contact Special Collections at scrr@bodleian.ox.ac.uk.

Service alterations during the transition

From 5 p.m. on Thursday, 7 July to 9 a.m. on Monday, 18 July, while the new system is being installed, we will be operating a limited ordering service from all other closed stacks and, although it will be possible to search for materials using SOLO, the catalogue will not be updated. Readers planning a visit to the Bodleian Libraries during this period are advised to order material held in closed stacks before Friday, 1 July.

Supplementary services during the transition

In order to support readers and provide the most comprehensive service we can during this transition, the following have been put in place:

- The Gladstone Link (previously the Underground Bookstore in Radcliffe Square) will be open to readers from noon on Tuesday, 5 July. This allows open access to a large number of items that were formerly kept in closed stacks.

- A dedicated support team is available to find alternative copies of materials unavailable during the transition. Readers with immediate needs during this period are encouraged to contact it directly using the request form located at www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/just-in-time. Alternatively, readers should seek assistance from reading room staff who will refer on queries where necessary. We will make every effort to source an alternative for consultation. Contact reader.services@bodleian.ox.ac.uk for more details about the downtime or how to order in advance, or visit www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk.

We would be grateful if you could pass this information to any visiting academics and students or those who may be planning a research visit to Oxford during the Long Vacation.

About the new system

We undertook an intensive evaluation process and selected the Aleph product from Ex Libris because of its ability to deliver the robust functionality that we required, in conjunction with the sophistication to deal with the devolved federal structure of our collegiate library system. The Bodleian Libraries and Ex Libris have worked closely for several years: SOLO currently uses an Ex Libris product to provide a single discovery and delivery interface for collections throughout the collegiate University. The implementation of the new system will result in a more robust ‘back-end’ for use by library staff while reader access to our collections will also be enhanced. Further improvements to the system are scheduled following this implementation.

We believe the installation of the new system will be another major step forward in our development as we work to improve speed of access to our collections in print and online and to undertake projects which will equip Oxford with a University library system fit for the twenty-first century.

Council and Main Committees

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations
Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 22 July.

Income grants from the College Contributions Fund

Explanatory Note
This Regulation authorises the income grants which Council, on the recommendation of the College Contributions Committee, has decided to make out of the accumulated balance of the College Contributions Fund. The sums listed are maxima; the payment of the grant, and the precise sum payable, in each subsequent year are dependent on the success with which each college has met certain conditions laid down by Council on the recommendation of the College Contributions Committee.

Text of Regulation
The following amounts shall be paid as income grants to the college named in each case under the provisions of section 6 of Statute XV (approved with effect from 8 April 2009, Gazette, p. 932, 23 April 2009), for application in the year shown:

General Purposes Committee of Council

Changes in Regulations
The General Purposes Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 22 July.

(a) Oxford Graduate Scholarship Fund

Explanatory Note
These changes reflect the fact that, further to Council’s agreement on 6 December 2010, the Oxford Graduate Scholarship Fund has become a broad purpose trust within the University of Oxford Development Trust Fund (OUDT) and will be administered as part of OUDT.

Text of Regulations
In Part 2 of Council Regulations 25 of 2002, concerning trusts (Statutes, 2000, p. 644, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), in § 268 insert new regulation 5 and amend regulation 11 as follows, and renumber existing regulations 5 to 11 as 6 to 12 (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

5. The Fund shall be held and administered by the University as the Oxford Graduate Scholarship Fund within the Oxford University Development Trust Fund (OUDT). The Fund shall be held and administered on the terms of these Regulations and, in so far as it is not inconsistent with these Regulations, the terms of the trust deed governing OUDT as varied from time to time.

42. Regulations 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 119 above may be amended by Council.

(b) Bodleian Bequests Fund

Explanatory Note
These changes reflect the fact that, further to Council’s agreement on 6 December 2010, the Bodleian Bequests Fund has become a broad purpose trust within the University of Oxford Development Trust Fund (OUDT) and will be administered as part of OUDT.

Text of Regulations

Consultation on the government White Paper: invitation for comments

The government’s White Paper on higher education, entitled Students at the Heart of the System, was published on the website of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills on 28 June. It may be accessed at http://discuss.bis.gov.uk/hereform. The government invites comments on the overall policy direction set out in the White Paper and the impact that this will have on the higher education sector through a consultation period which opened on 28 June and will close on 20 September 2011. This notice sets out the process for submitting comments to a small group established by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee to formulate the University’s response to the White Paper (see further below).

The government’s consultation period clearly poses problems for the collegiate University given that it falls directly over the long vacation when the usual decision-making committee structure will not be operating. The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee has therefore agreed to establish a small group to draft the formal response. This group will be chaired by the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education), with the other members being the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Research), the Junior or Senior Proctor, two members of Council directly elected by Congregation, one representative from each division, one Conference representative and an OUSU representative. The membership of the group will be posted on the PRAS website at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/pras/oxonly/ whitepaper once finalised.

Recognising the constraints imposed by the government’s timetable, divisions, colleges and individual members of Congregation are invited to provide their comments to the group. Comments should be sent to whitepaper@admin.ox.ac.uk, preferably by 31 July and at the latest by 15 August. Comments will not be published but will be taken into account by the group when drafting the University’s response. The Vice-Chancellor will approve the response by the deadline of 20 September, following which it will be shared with the collegiate University in the usual way.

Regent’s Park Charity Scheme

CHARITY: REGENT’S PARK BAPTIST COLLEGE (REGENT’S PARK COLLEGE) REGISTERED CHARITY 309710.

The Charity Commission proposes to make a Scheme (a legal document) for this charity. The Scheme will amend the objects and provide for the trusteeship and administration of the charity. A copy of the Scheme can be seen at www.charitycommission.gov.uk/schemesdefault.aspx (if you cannot access this please call the Charity Commission on 0845 300 0218 or textphone 0845 300 0219).

Comments or representations on these proposals can be made to the Commission not later than 28 July 2011 by completing the form on the website above quoting reference C-291772-5GWG.

Bribery and Fraud Policy

Approved by Council on 27 June 2011

The following Bribery and Fraud Policy supersedes the Anti-Fraud Policy (Supplement (2) to Gazette No. 4796, 7 February 2007).

Bribery and Fraud Policy
A. Introduction
1. The University is committed to conducting its business fairly, honestly and openly and in accordance with relevant legislation, and to the highest standards of integrity. The University has no tolerance of bribery and fraud, and believes that action against bribery and fraud is in the broader interests of society.

B. Definitions
3. Bribery and fraud are complex legal concepts and the definitions section in schedule 1 provides more detail about what they mean. For the purposes of this Policy, bribery and fraud have been treated as separate offences, but it should be recognised that there are circumstances in which they overlap.

C. The University’s approach to bribery and fraud
4. The University will take appropriate action to prevent bribery and all forms of fraud in the University.

5. No University employee or associated person shall seek a financial or other advantage for the University through bribery.

No University employee or associated person shall offer, promise, give, request, agree to receive or accept a bribe for any purpose.

6. The payment or acceptance of facilitation payments or any other ‘kickback’ by University employees and associated persons is unacceptable. The only exceptions are where the employee or associated person is in a vulnerable position arising from the circumstances in which the payment was demanded (for example where he or she is in personal danger) or the relevant territory specifically permits such payments in its local written law. In such exceptional cases, the payment should be reported in advance, or if that is not possible, as soon as reasonably practicable afterwards, in accordance with the procedure set out in schedule 2.

7. The University has no tolerance of fraud within its operations, and University employees and associated persons must not engage in any form of fraud with regard to activity carried out on behalf of the University.

8. University employees who suspect that bribery or fraud have occurred are required to report such instances internally, through the channels described in schedule 2. The University will appropriately investigate, record, and report all suspected instances of bribery and fraud in accordance with the procedures set out in schedule 2.

9. Bribery and fraud by University employees will be treated as a serious disciplinary offence resulting, potentially, in dismissal and legal action.

10. Excessive or lavish gifts or hospitality in relation to business transactions or arrangements with donors might constitute bribery. No University employee or associated person shall give or receive gifts or hospitality otherwise than in accordance with the Financial Regulations. Gifts and hospitality must not exceed normal business courtesy; all gifts or hospitality given by the University shall be for the purpose of better presenting the University or establishing cordial relations with business partners and supporters and will be for proper charitable and/or business purposes, reasonable, appropriate and in accordance with the Financial Regulations of the University and any other policy approved by Council or made under its delegated authority.

11. The University does not make political donations, and only makes and receives charitable donations in accordance with the Financial Regulations of the University. Any charitable donations received by the University must be requested and received for exclusively charitable purposes and shall not improperly influence any decisions made by or on behalf of the University.

12. This Policy should be read together with the University’s Policy on Conflict of Interest, Financial Regulations, Public Interest Disclosure Code of Practice and Procedure, Guidelines on the Acceptance of Donations and any other relevant policies and procedures approved by Council or made under its delegated authority and identified to readers of this Policy by the Registrar, who shall be entitled to amend or add to the list of policies and procedures set out in this clause from time to time.

13. The University takes measures to prevent bribery and fraud by agents or other third parties performing services for or on behalf of the University, and will take appropriate action should it discover that they are engaging in bribery and fraud on behalf of the University.

D. Implementation

14. Responsibility for implementation of this Policy lies with the Registrar.

15. The commitment by the University to preventing bribery and fraud shall be clearly and regularly communicated to staff and associated persons by the Registrar or others nominated by the Registrar. For this purpose Council has approved the Standards expected of University employees and associated persons. These are set out in schedule 3.

16. The nature and extent of the risks relating to bribery and fraud to which the University is exposed shall be regularly and appropriately assessed and appropriate procedures to prevent bribery and fraud, including proportionate preventative and detective internal controls, and effective reporting procedures shall be implemented to reflect the outcomes of the risk assessments.

17. Where risk assessments indicate a significant risk that bribery and/or fraud might occur in relation to a particular transaction, third party or territory, appropriate due diligence shall be conducted prior to proceeding with the relevant transaction.

18. This Policy shall be available to every University employee and the University shall arrange specific training for those deemed most likely to encounter bribery and fraud.

19. The University’s procedures to prevent bribery and fraud shall be monitored and reviewed and, where appropriate, amended to reflect legal requirements and in the light of any instances of bribery and fraud.

E. Responsibilities of the Registrar

20. The Registrar shall have the following responsibilities:

20.1. to maintain a register of the incidents of bribery and fraud that are reported to him or her and to investigate further and to report such incidents in accordance with the procedures set out in schedule 2;

20.2. to compile an annual report for the Audit and Scrutiny Committee on the implementation of this Policy including the outcomes of any relevant risk assessments and due diligence and any incidents of reported bribery and fraud, thereby contributing to the monitoring and review of this Policy; and to recommend any changes to this Policy which may, from time to time, become appropriate;

20.3. to ensure that any standard University documents and procedures (including procurement terms and procedures, fundraising documentation, and terms and conditions of employment) reflect the requirements of this Policy;

20.4. to coordinate the University’s response to any investigation or charge under anti-bribery or fraud legislation;

20.5. to ensure that procedures are in place to communicate the Standards to all staff and any relevant associated persons and to deliver appropriate training to them;

20.6. to oversee the compilation of specific bribery and fraud risk assessments and the conduct of appropriate due diligence into significant transactions with a view to assessing bribery and fraud risks and taking appropriate action to mitigate them; and 20.7. to monitor the effectiveness and review the implementation of this Policy, regularly considering its suitability, adequacy and effectiveness.

The Registrar may delegate these responsibilities to named individuals as he or she sees fit.

Schedule 1: Interpretation

Associated person—a person, company or other legal entity that performs services for or on behalf of the University and which may include for example agents, subsidiaries and sub-contractors of the University, recipients of grants from the University, partners in joint ventures or collaborative working arrangements of any kind and suppliers of fundraising, professional or other services to the University.

Bribery—(a) offering, promising, giving, requesting or accepting a financial or other advantage in circumstances occurring inside or outside the UK which are intended to induce or reward improper performance of a function or activity that:

- is of a public nature, performed in the course of a person’s employment, connected with a business or trade, or performed on behalf of a body of people; and
- a reasonable person in the UK would expect to be performed in good faith, impartially or in accordance with a position of trust;

(b) offering, promising or giving a financial or other advantage to a public official outside the UK (or somebody else nominated by that official) intending to influence the official in the performance of their official functions in order to obtain or retain business or a business advantage.

Facilitation payments—payments intended to secure or expedite routine or necessary Government action by a public official. A facilitation payment includes a payment to a public official to do their job properly as well as payment to do their job improperly.

Fraud—an act or omission, made with the intent of making a financial gain, or causing a financial loss, or exposing another to the risk of a financial loss, in which a person:

- dishonestly makes a false representation; or
- dishonestly fails to disclose information which he or she is under a legal duty to disclose; or
- occupies a position in which he or she is expected to safeguard, or not act against, the interests of another person; and
- dishonestly abuses that position; and
- intends, by means of that abuse of that position, to make a gain for himself or herself or another, or to cause loss to another or to expose another to the risk of loss.

Improper—(a) a failure to perform a function or activity in good faith, impartially or in accordance with a position of trust; or (b) not performs the function at all. In deciding whether a function or activity has been performed improperly outside the UK, any local custom or practice must be disregarded unless it is permitted or required by the written law of the country in which it is performed.

Public official — someone who holds a legislative, administrative or judicial position of any kind, whether appointed or elected, someone who exercises a ‘public function’ for any country or territory (or any subdivision of such a country or territory); or an official or agent of a public international organisation (eg UN, EU, World Bank).

Standards — the document attached as schedule 3.

Schedule 2: Investigation, recording and reporting of bribery and fraud

Making a disclosure

1. Members of staff, or students or other individuals who reasonably suspect bribery or fraud in the University, should report their concerns as soon as possible to the Director of Finance or the Registrar, providing a brief description of the alleged irregularity, the loss or potential loss involved, and any evidence supporting the allegations or irregularity or identifying the individual or individuals responsible.

2. Any report will be treated as a disclosure under the University’s Policy and Procedure on Public Interest Disclosure (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/pis/staff/codes/pid.shtml) and as such will be brought to the attention of the Registrar, who will decide on the procedure to be adopted.

3. Although bribery and fraud can overlap, for clarity references to both offences have been included within this procedure.

Bribery and Fraud Review Group

4. Where concerns are to be taken forward under this Policy, they will be considered by a Bribery and Fraud Review Group (BFRG) comprising:

4.1. the Registrar;
4.2. the Director of Finance;
4.3. the Director of Legal Services; and 4.4. the Internal Auditor.

5. In cases which involve or may involve students, the Proctors will be informed by the Director of Finance at the outset of the investigation. If a student is the subject of an allegation of bribery or fraud, this will be dealt with by the Proctors under the disciplinary procedures applicable to students.

6. Bribery and fraud may include behaviour which would also be an offence under the provisions of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, or the Terrorism Act 2006 and related anti-terror legislation. If at any point there is a suspicion that the conduct complained of includes unlawful conduct of this nature, the BFRG will take immediate steps to secure appropriate professional advice as to the steps required to fulfill the University’s obligations under the relevant legislation before proceeding further.

7. The BFRG will decide on such further steps as are necessary including:
7.1. investigating the concerns;
7.2. notifying the police and other relevant authorities;
7.3. minimising further loss;
7.4. complying with any requirements of the University’s insurance cover;
7.5. establishing and securing evidence necessary for criminal and disciplinary action;
7.6. recovering losses;
7.7. ensuring that appropriate action is taken against those responsible; and
7.8. communicating with internal personnel and outside organisations with a need to know and in particular consider:
7.8.1. whether there are issues that should be referred to the appropriate funding body under the terms of any grant to which the allegations relate;
7.8.2. whether the incident should be reported to HEFCE under the terms of the Financial Memorandum; and 7.8.3. whether it should be reported to HMRC; and will take steps to ensure that the relevant actions are undertaken as soon as is reasonably practicable.

8. In any case where immediate action is required, the Registrar or Director of Finance may take the necessary steps and in that case will report to the BFRG on the actions taken and the reasons for them as soon as possible thereafter.

9. In any case where an individual with responsibility under this Policy is the subject of an investigation under the Policy, the Vice-Chancellor, or if he or she is the subject of complaint, a Pro-Vice Chancellor unconnected with the matter in question, will appoint an alternate or alternates to fulfil the role or roles specified under the Policy.

10. Investigations will normally be carried out by the Internal Auditor, taking account of appropriate professional practice, and any relevant guidance issued from time to time by HEFCE, the Charity Commission or any other relevant regulatory body.

11. The investigator will keep the BFRG informed as to the progress of the investigation and will complete the investigation in as timely a manner as is reasonably possible.

Suspension

12. Personnel Services must be consulted before any staff member is suspended, and must be consulted throughout on the conduct of the investigation. No one person, acting on his or her own volition, may move to suspend a member of staff suspected of bribery or fraud.

13. Any individual who is suspected of bribery or fraud may be suspended immediately (without deduction of pay) pending a full investigation. In some cases it may also be necessary to suspend other staff in order to conduct a proper investigation. The suspension of a member of staff does not constitute a finding of misconduct against him or her. Any staff suspended as a result of suspected bribery or fraud will be informed of the reason for the suspension.

14. Individuals suspended for suspected bribery or fraud, and individuals suspended to enable a proper investigation to be carried out, will normally be required to leave University premises immediately and/or will be denied access to the University’s IT facilities. During the period of any suspension they will not be permitted to return to the premises, to make contact with staff or witnesses, or to act on behalf of the University, unless given express permission to do so by the relevant University authorities. Any infringement of this requirement may be treated as a disciplinary offence.

Confidentiality

15. All persons concerned with the investigation must treat the information in strict confidence. Where necessary, information will be transmitted in confidence to relevant regulatory bodies.

16. An unwarranted breach of confidence may be the subject of disciplinary action.

Police involvement

17. In all cases where the police are involved, the University reserves the right, where it would be reasonable to do so, to proceed with its own disciplinary procedures or with civil proceedings.

Insurance

18. In the case of insured claims, the BFRG will ensure that any requirements of the insurance cover are observed.

Interim reporting

19. The BFRG will notify the Vice-Chancellor and the Chairman of the Audit and Scrutiny Committee that a matter has been reported under this Policy and will provide such further and confidential interim reports as to the progress of the investigation as are deemed necessary. Such reports may be oral or written as appropriate.

Notifying HEFCE of serious incidents

20. HEFCE’S Financial Memorandum requires a report to it of any theft, fraud, loss of charity assets or other irregularity where:

20.1. the sums of money involved are, or potentially are, in excess of £25,000; or 20.2. the particulars of the fraud, theft, loss of charity assets or other irregularity may reveal a systemic weakness of concern beyond the institution, or are novel, unusual or complex; or 20.3. there is likely to be public interest because of the nature of the fraud, theft, loss of charity assets or other irregularity, or the people involved.

Recovery of losses

21. The Internal Auditor will endeavour to quantify the amount of any loss. The Director of Finance will take advice from Legal Services and the Insurance Office and may recommend civil action to recover outstanding losses in those cases where there is a reasonable prospect of success. In cases of substantial loss, consideration may also be given to an application for an order to freeze the suspect’s assets pending completion of the investigation.

Final report

22. The Internal Auditor will prepare an investigative report for submission to the BFRG, which will be responsible for considering the findings and making recommendations to the Vice-Chancellor.

23. The final report, which will be provided in strict confidence to the Vice-Chancellor and to the Chairman of the Audit and Scrutiny Committee, will contain:

23.1. a description of the allegations and the steps taken to investigate them;
23.2. a conclusion as to whether the allegations made had substance and if so the extent of any loss and any other adverse impact on the University;
23.3. a description of any steps taken in relation to the individual or individuals concerned together with recommendations as to any disciplinary action;
23.4. the steps taken to mitigate any losses to the University;
23.5. the measures taken to minimise a recurrence; and
23.6. any action needed to strengthen future responses bribery or fraud, which may include provision for a follow-up report within a specified time frame.

Records

24. The Registrar shall maintain a register (the ‘Register’) of all cases of bribery or fraud which are reported within the University (except Oxford University Press, which maintains its own records), including those where there was found to be no case to answer.

25. The Register will be maintained and will be available for inspection, subject to the requirements of the Data Protection Act 1998, and the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

26. The Registrar shall specify the following, in an anonymised form, in relation to each case of bribery or fraud:

26.1. what the suspected or actual incident was;
26.2. whether the incident was suspected or actual;
26.3. when the suspected or actual incident occurred and if actual who was (allegedly) involved;
26.4. what the actual and potential impact of the incident on the University might be;
26.5. what inquiries were made and/or action was taken, including any reports to other regulators or the police;
26.6. how any decision to terminate the investigation of the incident was made, and why;
26.7. what policies and procedures were in place that apply to the incident, whether they were followed, and if not, why; and 26.8. whether policies and procedures need to be introduced or revised, and if so, how and by when.

Communication to the complainant

27. The complainant will be informed in broad terms of the outcome of the investigation, having due regard to the confidentiality of information relating to the individual or individuals accused and others identified in the report.

References for employees or students disciplined or prosecuted for fraud

28. All requests for references for members of staff known to have been disciplined or dismissed for bribery or fraud must be referred to Personnel Services for advice on how to respond in accordance with employment law. In no circumstances must any person provide a reference for a member of staff whom they know to have been dismissed for bribery or fraud without first consulting Personnel Services.

29. References for Student Members, who have been the subject of disciplinary sanction, must be referred to the Proctors.

Council of the University

Changes in Regulations

Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 12 August.

(a) Regulations relating to the use of the facilities of the Bodleian Libraries

Explanatory Note

These changes in regulations (i) will allow readers in the central Bodleian to consume food and drink in selected, designated areas and (ii) revise the regulations regarding the use of IT equipment in the libraries. The opportunity has also been taken to remove an outdated reference.

Text of Regulations

1 In the Libraries Curators Regulations 1 of 2006 concerning regulations relating to the use of the facilities of the Bodleian Libraries (made by Council on 10 July 2006 and amended on 12 July 2007, 11 June 2009 and 18 February 2010, Gazette, Vol. 136, p. 1391; Vol. 137, pp. 1359–60; Vol. 140, p. 610) amend regulation II as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through): '11. Readers must not eat or chew anything (including sweets or gum) or drink anything (including water) in any part of a library, unless allowed by a local library regulation. Readers may eat or drink in a library only as and where indicated by library notices and signs.'

2 Ibid., amend regulation 25 as follows: '25. Readers must not hold conversations or engage in other conduct in a library which causes or is likely to cause inconvenience, annoyance, or offence to other readers or members of staff.'

3 Ibid., amend regulations 26 and 27 as follows: '26. When using a computer, electronic mobile devices or other equipment, readers must do so as quietly as possible so as to avoid causing disturbance to others and should not use applications or play media so as to produce sounds audible to other readers, unless this is required in order to overcome a disclosed disability.

27. Readers must not use computer or other equipment in a way which requires them to speak into the device mobile telephones, radios, cassette recorders, cameras, or similar equipment in a library, even with headphones, unless this is required in order to overcome a disclosed disability specific provision has been made for such use.'

4 Ibid., insert new regulations 34 and 35 as follows and re-number existing regulations 34–35 as 36–37: '34. Where breach or attempted breach of these regulations results in the Bodleian Libraries incurring costs or charges, readers will be liable for reimbursing them and any associated administrative costs. 35. Where breaches of regulations involve misuse of the Bodleian Libraries’ IT networks, equipment or services, readers may be barred from using or connecting their computers or peripherals to such facilities temporarily or permanently.'

5 Ibid., in regulation 4 delete 'OULS libraries' and substitute 'the Bodleian Libraries'.

(b) Disciplinary Regulations for Candidates in Examinations

Explanatory Note

The following changes, made by the Proctors with the approval of Council in accordance with section 20 of Statute IX: (i) confirm the application of the regulations to Transfer of Status and Confirmation of Status materials and ‘auto-plagiarism’; (ii) revise the provisions concerning mobile devices; and (iii) remove outdated references.

Text of Regulations

1 Delete regulation 2 of Proctors’ Regulations 1 of 2003 (Gazette, Vol. 134, p. 237, 30 October 2003) and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through): '2. In these regulations: (1) “examination room” means any room designated by the Academic Registrar and Secretary of Faculties or his or her deputy, University’s Clerk of the Schools or approved by the Proctors as a place for one or more candidates to take an examination.’

2 Ibid., after existing regulation 5 insert the following new regulation 6: '6. Unless specifically permitted by the Special Subject Regulations for the examination concerned, no candidate shall submit to the examiners any work which he or she has previously submitted partially or in full for examination at this University or elsewhere. Where earlier work by the candidate is citable, he or she shall reference it clearly.'

3 Ibid., delete existing regulation 7 and substitute: '7. No candidate shall take, or attempt to take, into an examination any unauthorised material (including revision notes), item or equipment relevant to the examination device (including a mobile telephone or any other device capable of receiving or communicating information), nor use or attempt to use such material, item or device.'

4 Ibid., delete existing regulation 15 and substitute: '15. At the end of each examination candidates must hand back to an invigilator all the paper provided for writing their answers, including paper used for rough drafts and paper which has not been used. No paper may be removed from the examination room other than the question-paper for the examination that has just been completed.'

5 Ibid., delete existing regulation 18 and renumber existing regulations 6 as 7 and 7–17 as 8–18.

6 These changes in regulations shall be effective from 1 October 2011.
Changes in Regulations
The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council has made the following changes in regulations, to come into effect on 12 August.

(a) Andreas Idreos Professor of Science and Religion
Explanatory Note
The following change amends the composition of the electoral board of the Andreas Idreos Professor of Science and Religion to comply with the general provisions for electoral boards laid down in Council Regulations 3 of 2004. It also replaces reference to ‘decrees’ with reference to ‘regulations’ and removes reference to the General Board.

Text of Regulations
1 In sect. III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 432, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461), in § 296 delete existing regulations 3 and 4 and substitute:

‘3. The professor shall be elected by an electoral board consisting of:

  (1) the Vice-Chancellor, or, if the head of the college specified in (2) of this regulation is Vice-Chancellor, a person appointed by Council;
  (2) the head of the college to which the professorship shall be for the time being allocated by Council under any regulation in that behalf, or, if the head is unable or unwilling to act, a person appointed by the governing body of the college;
  (3) a person appointed by the governing body of the college specified in (2) of this regulation;
  (4), (5) two persons appointed by Council;
  (6) the Head of the Humanities Division, or his or her nominee;
  (7)–(9) Board of the Faculty of Theology.

4. The professor shall be subject to the General Provisions of the regulations concerning the duties of professors and to those Particular Provisions of the same regulations which are applicable to this chair.’

(b) Professorships (two) of Biomedical Engineering
Explanatory Note
These changes, made on the recommendation of the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee of Council, amend the name of one of the two recently established Professorships of Biomedical Engineering to the Technikos Professorship of Biomedical Engineering, in appreciation of the funding received from Technikos towards the cost of one of the two Professorships for the first five years.

Text of Regulations
1 In SCHEDULE A of Council Regulations 3 of 2004, concerning statutory professorships, delete ‘Professors (two) of Biomedical Engineering’ and substitute:

‘Professor of Biomedical Engineering
Technikos Professor of Biomedical Engineering’.

2 In sect. III of Council Regulations 24 of 2002, concerning individual professorships (Statutes, 2000, p. 416, as redesignated as regulations by Decree (5) of 11 July 2002, Gazette, Vol. 132, p. 1461) delete the title and regulation 1 of § 73 and substitute (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

§ 73. Professorships (two) of Biomedical Engineering and Technikos Professor of Biomedical Engineering

1. There shall be two Professors of Biomedical Engineering, one of the posts shall be named Technikos Professor of Biomedical Engineering for the first five years from the appointment of the first incumbent, both of whom shall undertake research in and shall lecture and give instruction in that subject and generally promote its study in the University.

3 The changes in regulations concerning the naming of the post of Professor of Biomedical Engineering as the Technikos Professor of Biomedical Engineering shall be effective for the duration of funding from Technikos.
Oration by the Vice-Chancellor
Mr Vice-Chancellor will address the House.
† The Oration will be given in Convocation House.

Note on procedures in Congregation
† Business in Congregation is conducted in accordance with Congregation Regulations 2 of 2002 (www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/529-122.shtml). A printout of these regulations, or of any statute or other regulations, is available from the Council Secretariat on request. A member of Congregation seeking advice on questions relating to its procedures, other than elections, should contact Miss S. Cowburn at the University Offices, Wellington Square (telephone: (2)70193; email: sarah.cowburn@admin.ox.ac.uk); questions relating to elections should be directed to the Elections Officer, Ms S.L. Stacey (telephone: (2)80463, email: elections.office@ox.ac.uk).

Consultative notices
Consultation on the government White Paper: invitation for comments
The government’s White Paper on higher education, entitled Students at the Heart of the System, was published on the website of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills on 28 June. It may be accessed at http://discuss.bis.gov.uk/hereform. The government invites comments on the overall policy direction set out in the White Paper and the impact that this will have on the higher education sector through a consultation period which opened on 28 June and will close on 20 September 2011. This notice sets out the process for submitting comments to a small group established by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee to formulate the University’s response to the White Paper (see further below).

The government’s consultation period clearly poses problems for the collegiate University given that it falls directly over the long vacation when the usual decision-making committee structure will not be operating. The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee has therefore agreed to establish a small group to draft the formal response. This group will be chaired by the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education), with the other members being the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Planning and Resources), the Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Research), the Junior or Senior Proctor, two members of Council directly elected by Congregation, one representative from each division, one Conference representative and an OUSU representative. The membership of the group will be posted on the PRAS website at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/pras/oxonly/whitepaper once finalised.

Recognising the constraints imposed by the government’s timetable, divisions, colleges and individual members of Congregation are invited to provide their comments to the group. Comments should be sent to whitepaper@admin.ox.ac.uk preferably by 31 July and at the latest by 15 August. Comments will not be published but will be taken into account by the group when drafting the University’s response. The Vice-Chancellor will approve the response on behalf of Council by the deadline of 20 September, following which it will be shared with the collegiate University in the usual way.

Jesus College: revised statutes
The Committee on Statutes before the Privy Council, acting under authority delegated to it by Council, is minded to give consent on behalf of the University to the amendment to Statute II of Jesus College, approved by the Governing Body on 4 May 2011, in so far as such consent is required by Section 7 (2) of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1923. The consent of the committee to the amendments to the Statutes will be effective eleven days after publication of this notice unless written notice of a resolution, signed by at least twenty members of Congregation and calling upon Council to withhold that consent, has been given to the Registrar by noon on Monday, 8 August.

The effect of the amendment is to revise objects clauses.

Gazette notices
Gazette publication arrangements
This is the final Gazette of 2010–11. The first Gazette of 2011–12 will be published on 22 September, but will be limited to Council and Congregation business and changes to Examination Regulations. The first full issue of 2011–12 will be published on 29 September and the normal deadline will apply.

Changes to the online Gazette
From the start of the 2011-12 academic year, the online Gazette will contain all of the same content as the printed Gazette. This will include items currently omitted from the online version: notices of degrees by resolution; details of forthcoming examinations for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and grants of leave to supplicate for higher degrees; and graduate prizes. Access to these items, which have until now been omitted from the online Gazette in order to comply with data protection rules regarding the publication of personal data outside the EU, will, in order to comply... with the same rules, be restricted to those readers with a University username enabling them to use the Single Sign-On service (see www.oucs.ox.ac.uk/webauth/oxfordusername.xml for details of the Single Sign-On service).

SUBSCRIPTION ARRANGEMENTS 2011-12

The cost of a subscription to the Gazette for the academic year 2011-12 is as follows:

- United Kingdom, first-class post: £81
- United Kingdom, second-class post: £68
- Elsewhere in Europe: £85
- Outside Europe: £170

Subscription to the Gazette includes, at no further cost, all issues of Blueprint, the University’s official newsletter, and the Oxford Magazine (twelve issues per year: see below concerning separate subscription to the Magazine).

How to pay

We prefer payment via the University’s online shop. Please see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/postalsubscriptioninformation for further details.

Payment by cheque: please send your name and full postal address, plus a cheque for the appropriate amount as detailed above, to: Gazette Subscriptions, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Oxford Magazine

Subscriptions to the Oxford Magazine only are also available. The charges for 2011-12 are:

- United Kingdom: £28
- Elsewhere in Europe: £35
- Outside Europe: £70

If you wish to subscribe to the Oxford Magazine only, please send your name and full postal address, plus a cheque for the appropriate amount as detailed above, to: Gazette Subscriptions, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD. Please note that payment by cheque is the only method available for Magazine-only subscriptions.

Deferred term of office of external member of Council

The proposal to appoint Ms Jayne Almond as a member of Council for four years from Michaelmas term 2011 was approved by Congregation on 19 August 2010. However, Council has agreed (with Ms Almond’s consent) that the start of Ms Almond’s four-year term of office on Council should be deferred from the beginning of Michaelmas term 2011 to the beginning of Hilary term 2012 (1 January 2012), in order to align it with her Chairmanship of the Audit and Scrutiny Committee.

Renumbering of regulations

Council Regulations 15 of 2002 is a large set of regulations governing 35 committees reporting directly to Council or one of its main committees. It is currently organised in three parts, each numbered separately. Part 3 alone has 140 regulations; when a change is made to insert a new regulation, all subsequent regulations need to be renumbered. As this is administratively cumbersome and presents difficulties for the implementation of a content management system for the online University legislation, Council has endorsed a revised numbering system, whereby each committee has its own numbered part. The regulations with the revised numbering will be available online from 28 July (at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/statutes/regulations/s20-122.shtml).

Oxford Learning Institute

TRAINING FOR ADMISSIONS INTERVIEWING

The Oxford Learning Institute will offer the following training opportunities to those responsible for leading or assisting with undergraduate admissions interviewing in 2011:

- A tutored online course, for those who expect to take a leading role in admissions interviewing, will be available from 3 August to 2 December (with new enrolments accepted until 25 November);
- A non-tutored online course, for those assisting with admissions (e.g. graduate student ‘helpers’ or note takers) and experienced tutors who need an update, will be available from 3 August to 16 December.

  N.B. A module on remote interviewing using Skype is now included in both the tutored and non-tutored courses.

- Admissions interviewing practice sessions, for new interviewers who have completed the tutored online course, will take place on two half days (28 September and 18 November).

The collegiate University expects all those involved in interviewing candidates for admission to receive appropriate briefings on the process. The compulsory element of these briefings for new staff takes the form of an online course which takes about six hours to complete. New appointees may complete this online course before arriving in Oxford, if they wish to do so. The aim of the course is to show interviewers good practice in order to help them both to make better selections and to avoid claims of unfair treatment from disappointed candidates.

Practice interviews are also offered as an optional extra learning opportunity. To qualify to take part in practice interviews, participants must complete the online course by a deadline approximately three weeks beforehand.

We advise all teaching staff in colleges who have not been involved in interviewing, or have not previously taken this course, to ask senior colleagues whether they will be expected to interview this year and therefore enrol. Departmental teaching staff may also wish to seek advice from line-managers or mentors on whether they are likely to be invited to become involved in admissions this year. Many who do not have a formal college association are nonetheless frequently invited to take part in college admissions processes because of their specific disciplinary expertise.

To book onto any of the above courses please go to the Learning Institute website at www.learning.ox.ac.uk/admissions and follow the links to the course you want. This page provides further information but if more is required, please telephone Kathryn Black on (2)86825.

Changes in regulations

(a) Fees payable in relation to examinations and related matters

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee has made the following change in regulations, to come into effect from 1 October 2011.

Explanatory Note

The purpose of this change is to update the level of fees payable in 2011/12 for certain purposes, including entry and re-entry for examinations, leave to supplicate and resubmission of a thesis, and registration for a programme of study validated by the University. The opportunity has been taken to delete certain charges that are in practice no longer collected, including matriculation fees and fees for entry of the name of a non-member of the University on the Register of Diploma and Certificate Students, to simplify the wording of the section on transcripts and to revise the name of the Certificate/Diploma in Diplomatic Studies.

Text of Regulations

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 1095, l. 4 to p. 1100, l. 26, amend section 1 as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

Section I. Fees and Dues payable to the University

§1. Fees payable at Matriculation

The matriculation fee shall be £191, provided that no fee shall be payable by any person who is certificated by his or her college as being liable to pay in the term of his or her matriculation a composition fee under the provisions of §6 of this Section or by any person on whom a degree is to be conferred by special resolution, or by a clinical student who has already paid an admission fee of £10 under the provisions of §5, cl. 1 of this Section, or by any other person who is permitted by regulation to be matriculated without the payment of a matriculation fee.

§12. Fees payable by candidates on registration, entry for an examination, application for leave to supplicate, or resubmission of a thesis for certain degrees

(a) On entering or replacing the name of a non-member of the University on the Register of Diploma and Certificate Students £95

(b) On admission to the status of Student for the Degree of DM and for each subsequent year that the name of the student remains on the register of students for the degree £2308296

(c) On applying for leave to supplicate for the degree of BD £180

(d) On re-entering the examination: £124

(e) On resubmission for the degree of DM £416433

(f) On resubmission of a thesis for the degree of MLitt, MTh, MSc, or DPhil, or on reinstatement on the Register of Students for the degree of MLitt, MSc (by research), or DPhil, or before £119 a revised or new dissertation is examined for the degree of MSc in Education or Educational Research Methodology £124

(g) On resubmission for the degree of DM £416433
§34. Fees payable in respect of degrees

1. Every person shall pay £10 on supplicating for admission to the degree of MA, provided that:

(i) no fee shall be payable by any person on whom a degree has been conferred by special resolution or who incorporates in virtue of having obtained an educational position in the University;
(ii) no fee shall be payable by a Master of Surgery on supplicating for admission to the Degree of Master of Arts.

2. The following fees shall be paid by every person:

(a) accumulating the Degrees of Bachelor and Doctor of Civil Law £490 [until 1 October 2013 (b) whose name shall have been given in to the Registrar after the hour prescribed. £20]

§35. In respect of certificates, transcripts and personal data

1. Every person shall pay the fee prescribed below in each case for certificates issued, on request, to Degree Conferences Office, Examination Schools, Oxford OX1 4BG:

(a) for the first certificate attesting admission to any degree, which shall include a statement of the class obtained in the case of the BCL or BFA or the BA, or the M.A. or the M.Eng., or the M.Chem. or the M. Comp. Sci.: From 1 October 2013, or the M.Comp.Phil., or the M. Earth. Sci. or the M. Eng., or the M. Math., or the M. Math. Comp. Sci., or the M. Phys., or the M. Phys. Phil., or the M. Math. Phil.: no change

(b) for each replacement certificate attesting admission to any degree (the request must be accompanied by a written statement declaring the original lost, stolen or damaged): £30

2. Every person shall pay the fee prescribed below in each case for transcripts issued, online or by request to University of Oxford, c/o Examination Schools, High Street, Oxford OX1 4BG:

(a) for the first transcript provided upon successful completion: no charge

(b) for each transcript provided during the course and any subsequent transcripts upon completion: £5

3. Every person making a request to be supplied with personal data under Section 7 of the Data Protection Act 1998 shall pay the fee determined from time to time by Council.

§56. Composition fees payable by members of the University

1. Every member of the University shall pay a composition fee as specified in cl. 14 below for each academic year in which he or she is working in Oxford:

2. Every person making a request to be supplied with personal data under section 7 of the Data Protection Act 1998 shall pay the fee determined from time to time by Council.

The fee shall be paid as follows:

(a) in the case of those whose fees are paid under the terms of the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations (or under corresponding arrangements approved by the Scottish Education Department, the Northern Ireland Ministry of Education, or the Education Departments in the Channel Islands or Isle of Man) the fees shall be paid in accordance with the arrangements laid down in those regulations;

(b) in the case of those working for an undergraduate degree and able to payment in full or part of the University composition fee as specified in clause 14 below, the fee shall be collected in accordance with the provisions of clause 12 below;

(c) in all other cases the fee shall be paid at the end of Michaelmas Term by all those who have been working in Oxford in that term. Those who begin working in Oxford in Hilary or Trinity Term shall pay the fee at the end of that term. On application by the society of the member of the University concerned, and subject to the approval of Council’s Education Committee, some part of the fee may be remitted. On application by their society, and subject to the approval of Council’s Education Committee, some part of the fee for an academic year may subsequently be returned to those who do not work in Oxford for the whole of that year;

(b) in all other cases, the fee shall be collected in accordance with the provisions of cl. 13 below:

Explanatory Note

The purpose of this change is to bring the deadline for payment of University tuition fees by graduates in line with that for undergraduates. As a result of this change undergraduates and graduates will be expected to pay their fees by the same point in the academic year, namely on or before the seventh day of Michaelmas Full Term or of the term in which the student commences his/her studies; colleges will retain the ability to approve payment in instalments if appropriate. This formalises common practice across the institution.

Text of Regulations

In Examination Regulations, 2010, l. 1097, 1. 33 to p. 1101, l. 50, amend section 1 as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

1. Every member of the University shall pay a composition fee as specified in cl. 14 below for each academic year in which he or she is working in Oxford:

[list of undergraduate and certain graduate qualifications].
(a) in the event that any fee, or the relevant installment towards the fee, remains unpaid after the due date of payment, the student shall be subject to the provisions in cl. 12 (b) (i) below.

(b) The fee shall be collected in accordance with the provisions of cl. 13 below.

12. (a) Not later than the fourteenth day after the last day of every Full Term the Head or Bursar of every society, or the Head of the student’s department for programmes where fees are usually paid directly to the department, shall send to the Secretary of the Chest a schedule signed by himself or herself containing the names of all members of the society who were liable to pay the composition fees referred to in cl. 1-3 and cl. 6 above, in respect of that term. The Head or Bursar of every society shall also:

(i) in respect of composition fees payable under cl. 1-3 above, send to the Secretary of the Chest within five working days of the end of every month of the academic year (the first month of the academic year being taken as October) the sum collected by the society in that month;

(ii) in respect of composition fees payable under cl. 3, 4, and 6 above, send to the Secretary of the Chest within fourteen days of the last day of every Full Term the sum of such fees, provided that in the case of such fees payable for Michaelmas Term, if at that date a society shall not have received payment in full by the fee-paying bodies, the society may transmit by that date either 80 per cent of the amount required to be transmitted, or the total amount of fees received by that date, whichever is the greater, and shall transmit the outstanding balance within one month of the stated date.

(b) The Head or Bursar of every society shall pay to the Secretary of the Chest such University composition fees as were due for that term in accordance with the mechanisms agreed between the colleges and the University from time to time. Where University composition fees are collected by a department these shall be paid to the Secretary of the Chest in accordance with the mechanisms that are agreed from time to time.

13. (a) The annual university composition fee shall be paid on or before the seventh day of Michaelmas Full Term (or of the term in which the student commences his or her course, as the case may be) unless the Bursar of the student’s college or the Head of the student’s department for programmes where fees are usually paid directly to the department certifies in writing that:

(i) the college has approved the student’s application to pay by instalments, the first such instalment having been paid; and/or

(ii) the student has applied for, and is prima facie eligible for, a contribution to his or her fee from his or her local education authority or equivalent body, local authority or other fee-paying body, and the college is of the opinion that no contribution will be required from the student;

(iii) the student’s programme did not commence on the first day of the relevant term, and payment is due on the seventh day after the actual commencement of the student’s programme.

(b) In the event that any fee payable by the student, or the relevant instalment towards such a fee, remains unpaid after the due date of payment it shall be the duty of the Bursar of the student’s college or the Head of the student’s department for programmes where fees are usually paid directly to the department, to notify the student concerned that, in the event that the fees due have not been paid in full within four weeks from the date of such notification, the student shall be liable for suspension from access to the premises and facilities of the University (including the Examination Schools and other places of examination) from the end of such four-week period until such time as outstanding fees have been paid. The Bursar or Head shall also inform the Registrar that he or she has so notified the student concerned; and if the fees due have not been paid in full within the specified four-week period, the Bursar shall inform the Registrar of the position, whereupon, subject to the other provisions of this clause, the University shall have the right forthwith to suspend the student concerned from access to the premises and facilities of the University.

(c) Classification of students for fees purposes

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee has made the following change in regulations, to come into effect immediately.

Explanatory Note

The purpose of this change is to make necessary amendments to the Examination Regulations which relate to the classification of students for fees purposes as either ‘home’ or ‘overseas’ following changes to government legislation. The government changes redefine who is to be considered... a ‘parent’, increase the family members of EEA migrant workers who qualify as ‘home’, and clarify and restrict those who qualify as ‘home’ following a failed application for asylum. This change also provides for an amendment to the Examination Regulations following the change in treatment of students spending a year abroad as required by the relevant honour school.

Text of Regulations

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 1114, 1. 25 to p. 1116, 1. 44, delete existing text and insert:

Special Appendix

Definition of persons entitled to be charged university composition fees at the appropriate home rate

The University currently applies the following definition of persons entitled to be charged University composition fees at the appropriate ‘home’ (and EU) rate.

1. A person who on the relevant date
   - (a) is settled in the United Kingdom within the meaning of the Immigration Act 1971, and
   - (b) meets the residence conditions referred to in paragraph 8.

2. A person who on the first day of an academic year of the course
   - (a) is a refugee; and
   - (b) is or was ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom and Islands on the relevant date and has not ceased to be so resident since recognition as a refugee.

(d) For the purposes of this paragraph ‘child’ has the meaning given in paragraph 9(a).

3. A person who on the first day of an academic year of the course
   - (a) has been granted Humanitarian Protection as a result of an application for asylum, and
   - (b) has been granted leave to enter or remain accordingly, and
   - (c) is or was ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom and Islands on the relevant date and has not ceased to be so ordinarily resident since being granted Humanitarian Protection; or
   - (d) who is the spouse, civil partner or child of such a person and who were such at the time of the principal’s asylum application to the Home Office and who were ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom and Islands on the relevant date and have not ceased to be so resident since being granted Humanitarian Protection.

(e) For the purpose of paragraph 3 ‘child’ has the meaning given in paragraph 9(a).

4. A person who on the relevant date
   - (a) is a national of a member State of the European Community, or
   - (b) who is the family member of such a national, and
   - (c) who meets the residence conditions referred to in paragraph 8.

(d) For the purposes of paragraph 4, ‘family member’ has the definition given in paragraph 9(b).

5. A person who on the relevant date
   - (a) is
     - (i) an EEA* migrant worker or an EEA* self-employed person; or
     - (ii) a Swiss employed person or a Swiss self-employed person; or
     - (iii) a family member of a person mentioned in paragraph (i) or (ii); or
     - (iv) an EEA* frontier worker or an EEA* frontier self-employed person; or
     - (v) a Swiss frontier employed person or a Swiss frontier self-employed person; or
     - (vi) a family member of a person mentioned in paragraph (iv) or (v); and
   - (b) is ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom and Islands on the first day of the first academic year of the course; and
   - (c) meets the residence conditions referred to in paragraph 8.

(d) Paragraph 6(b) does not apply where the person falls within paragraph 6(a) (iv), (v) or (vi).

(e) For the purposes of paragraph 6 ‘family member’ has the definition given in paragraph 9(c).

6. A person who on the relevant date
   - (a) is the child of a Swiss national that is entitled to support in the United Kingdom by virtue of article 3(6) of Annex 1 to the Switzerland Agreement; and
   - (b) is or was ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom and Islands on the first day of the first academic year of the course; and
   - (c) meets the residence conditions referred to in paragraph 8.

7. A person who on the relevant date
   - (a) is the child of a Turkish worker in the UK; and
   - (b) is or was ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom with the Turkish worker on the first day of the first academic year of the course; and
   - (c) meets the residence conditions referred to in paragraph 8.

8. The residence conditions referred to above are that:
   - (a) the person has been ordinarily resident throughout the three-year period preceding the relevant date, in the case of a person mentioned in paragraph 1, in the United Kingdom and Islands, or, in the case of a person mentioned in paragraphs 4 to 6, in the EEA*, Switzerland or EU overseas territories, or, in the case of a person mentioned in paragraph 7, in the EEA*, Switzerland, EU overseas territories or Turkey; and
   - (b) in the case of a person mentioned in paragraph 1, 4 or 6 his or her residence in the United Kingdom and Islands, or in the EEA*, Switzerland, or EU overseas territories, as the case may be, has not during any part of the period referred to in paragraph 8(a) been wholly or mainly for the purpose of receiving full-time education.

(c) A person shall be treated as ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom or the EEA*, Switzerland, EU overseas territories, or Turkey as the case may be if he or she would have been so resident at the relevant time but for the fact that a spouse or civil partner, parent, guardian, or any other person having parental responsibility for him or her, is or was temporarily employed outside the area in question. For these purposes, temporary employment includes:
   - (i) in the case of members of the regular navy, military or air forces of the Crown, any period which they serve outside the United Kingdom as members of such forces; and
   - (ii) in the case of members of the regular armed forces of a Member State of the EEA* or Switzerland, any period which they serve outside of the territory comprising the EEA* and Switzerland as members of such forces.

9. (a) For the purposes of paragraphs 2 and 3, ‘child’ refers to a person who was under 18 at the time of the principal’s asylum application to the Home Office and includes a person adopted in pursuance of adoption proceedings and a stepchild.

(b) For the purposes of paragraph 4, ‘family member’ includes the spouse or civil partner of such a national, and the direct descendants of his or her spouse or civil partner who are under 21 or who are dependants of his or her spouse or civil partner.

(c) For the purposes of paragraph 5, ‘family member’ includes
(i) in relation to EEA* nationals, the spouse or civil partner of such a national, the direct descendants of his or her spouse or civil partner who are under 21 or who are dependants of his or her spouse or civil partner, and dependants in the ascending line of the EEA* national or their spouse or civil partner;
(ii) in relation to Swiss nationals, the spouse or civil partner or his child or the child of his spouse or civil partner.

10. A reference in this Appendix to the relevant date in paragraphs 1 to 3 or 8, or to the first day of the first academic year of the course is a reference to 1 September, 1 January, 1 April, 1 July closest to the beginning of the first term of the first year of the person’s course. A reference in this Appendix to the relevant date in paragraphs 4 to 7 is a reference to 1 September, 1 January, 1 April, 1 July closest to the beginning of the first term of an academic year of the person’s course.

11. A person who was admitted to his or her course in pursuance of arrangements with an institution outside the United Kingdom for the exchange of students on a fully reciprocal basis.

12. A person who commenced a programme of undergraduate study before 1 September 2011 who is spending a year abroad on an approved course required by the honour school for which he or she is working.

13. Any student who does not meet the criteria outlined above is charged University composition fees at the appropriate ‘overseas’ rate. In determining whether students are liable for University composition fees at ‘home’ or ‘overseas’ rates, the University applies the above criteria. It should however be noted that these are liable to be changed from time to time to conform to national legislation.

The European Economic Area (EEA) is made up of the countries of the EU plus Iceland, Norway and Liechtenstein.

(d) Continuation charge for postgraduate research students

The Planning and Resource Allocation Committee has made the following change in regulations, to come into effect immediately.

Explanatory Note

The purpose of this change is to specify the level of the University continuation charge. This charge was established by regulation in January 2011, and will be paid by research students who start their programme of study in or after September 2011, and who exceed the standard period of University fee liability. The University continuation charge will first become payable in 2013-14, and after consultation with divisions and with the Education Committee, PRAC has set the charge for that year at £400 per term. Bursary schemes are being developed to which students may apply for support towards this charge.

Text of Regulations

In Examination Regulations, 2010, p. 1116, after l. 44, amend section § 7 (as inserted by Gazette, Vol. 141, No. 4939, 13 January 2011) as follows (new text underlined, deleted text scored through):

§ 7 Continuation charge

A candidate admitted to graduate research study (that is, a student for the DPhil, EngD, MLitt, MSc (Res), or any other programme of study designated as a research programme) who commenced their current programme of study in or after September 2011 and who has reached the end of the period of fee liability, as defined at § 6, cl. 4, and who thereafter remains registered as a graduate research student, shall pay a continuation charge for each subsequent term up to and including the term in which the thesis is submitted. Candidates whose thesis has been referred back shall pay no further composition fee or continuation charge, but shall pay the fee prescribed in § 2 above when they apply for re-examination.

A student who is paying composition fees in respect of any given term shall not be liable for a continuation charge in the same term.

The continuation charge will first become payable in 2013-14, and the level of the charge in that year will be £400 per term set by the Planning and Resource Allocation Committee in due course.

Advertisements

Advertising enquiries
Email: gazette.ads@admin.ox.ac.uk
Telephone: 01865 280548

To submit an advertisement
Web: www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising

Deadline
Advertisements are to be received by 12 noon on Wednesday of the week before publication (i.e. eight days before publication).

Advertisements must be submitted online.

Charges
Internal advertisers (chiefly University/college staff and students, and staff of OUP): £22.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement. (For full details of those entitled to this rate, see cl. 6 in ‘Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements’ below.)

External advertisers: £27.50 (inc. VAT) per insertion of one advertisement.

For both categories, placings of four or more insertions of one advertisement are allowed a discount of 25 per cent.

Length
The charges given above are for an advertisement of 70 words or fewer in length. Advertisements of between 71 and 150 words are charged at double rate. Advertisements of over 150 words are not accepted.

Online submission and payment
Advertisements must be submitted and paid for online, using a credit card or debit card, through a secure website. For details, see www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.

Note. We are unable to accept advertisements by telephone, or by callers in person at the University Offices.

Extracts from the terms and conditions of acceptance of advertisements

General
1. Advertisements are accepted for publication at the discretion of the editor of the Gazette.

Note. When an advertisement is received online, an acknowledgement will be emailed automatically to the email address provided by the advertiser. The sending of this acknowledgement does not constitute an acceptance of the advertisement or an undertaking to publish the advertisement in the Gazette.

2. The right of the Gazette to edit an advertisement, in particular to abridge when necessary, is reserved.

3. Advertisements must be accompanied by the correct payment, and must be received by the deadline stated above. No refund can be made for cancellation after the acceptance of advertisements.

4. Once an advertisement has been submitted for publication, no change to the text can be accepted.

5. Voucher copies or cuttings cannot be supplied.

Charges
6. Two separate charging arrangements will apply, for internal and external advertisers. The rates applicable at any time will be published regularly in the Gazette, and may be obtained upon enquiry. The rates are also available online at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising.

For the internal rate to apply, the advertisement must be supplied for publication by a person who can demonstrate membership of one of the following categories: current or retired members of Congregation; employees of the University; fellows and employees of colleges; employees of the OUP; undergraduate members of any college, hall, or other society of the University, as listed in Statute V; those on any of the following registers: Graduate Students, Recognised Students, Visiting Students; students of the Department for Continuing Education following a course of study for any degree, diploma, or certificate of the University for which regulations are published in the current edition of the Examination Regulations.

Disclaimer
7. The University of Oxford and Oxford University Press accept no responsibility for the content of any advertisement published in the Gazette. Readers should note that the inclusion of any advertisement in no way implies approval or recommendation of either the terms of any offer contained in it or of the advertiser by the University of Oxford or Oxford University Press.

Advertisers’ Warranty and Indemnity
13. The advertiser warrants:
(i) Not to discriminate against any respondents to an advertisement published in the Gazette on the basis of their gender, sexual orientation, marital or civil partner status, gender reassignment, race, religion or belief, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, disability or age, or pregnancy.
(ii) That the advertisement does not contravene any current legislation, rules, regulations or applicable codes of practice.
(iii) That it is not in any way illegal or defamatory or a breach of copyright or an infringement of any other person’s intellectual property or other rights.

You are advised to view our full Terms and Conditions of acceptance of advertisements. Submission of an advertisement implies acceptance of our terms and conditions, which may be found at www.ox.ac.uk/gazette/classifiedadvertising, and may also be obtained on application to Gazette Advertisements, Public Affairs Directorate, University Offices, Wellington Square, Oxford OX1 2JD.

Publication in online Gazette
16. Unless the advertiser stipulates otherwise, all advertisements will be published in the online Gazette in addition to the printed Gazette. At the time of submission of an advertisement, the advertiser may stipulate that he or she does not wish the advertisement to be included in the online Gazette. This stipulation: (i) must be made at the time of submission of the advertisement; (ii) cannot later be altered; (iii) will apply to all instances of publication of an advertisement arranged at the time of submission of that advertisement.

Please note that advertisements form part of the online Gazette as published and cannot be removed or amended after publication.
Gazette publication arrangements

Advertisers are asked to note that this is the final Gazette of Trinity term. Publication for Michaelmas term will begin on 22 September. Please note, however, that the first issue of next term will be limited to University business only, so will not contain classified advertisements; the first issue to publish classified advertisements will be that of 29 September. The usual deadline will continue to apply (see above).

Please note that from September 2011, all advertisements must be submitted and paid for online. Advertisements submitted and paid for in any other way will not be accepted.
